Eggs can also help mothers get accustomed to the new school schedule. They're so quick and easy to prepare. And with recipes like Fluffy Eggs 'n Bacon you can save eggs every morning without turning breakfast into the "same old same old."

- INSULATION. Proper insulation will keep your home cooler and keep down the cost of cooling.
- OUTDOORS. This part of your unit should be free of obstructions that interfere with air flow.

Feeder Calf Sales
Approximately 60,000 head of cows are expected to be sold at a series of special graded feeder calf sales which will take place in Kentucky from August through November.

The sales are conducted by farmer-members of feeder calf association. The sales help farmers get better prices for their calves by using a group selling system.

At the special sales, calves brought in by many different farmers, are sold in large groups which are uniform in size, sex, color and quality. Marketing studies have shown that calves sold in large lots bring higher prices; a calf sold in a lot of twenty or more, averages $3-4 per hundred weight more than a similar calf sold in a lot of five or less.

The special sales are also beneficial to buyers giving them an opportunity to buy large uniform groups of calves. These sales attract many buyers from states where large numbers of cattle are finished for slaughter.

A list of sale dates and location is available from local County Extension Agents. They also have detailed information on the number, grade, breed and sex of calves at each sale. A parcel list of sale dates.

Full Treatment on Lawns Will Help Control Weeds
Treatments on lawns this fall (September or October) can help control broadleaf weeds next year.

Some of the weeds are dandelion, plantain, mustard, wild garlic and the like.

Recommended materials (one of the following are): (a) 2,4-D; (b) 2,4-D and Silvex; (c) 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T; or (d) 2,4-D and Banvel. These are sold under various trade names as single materials (2,4-D for instance) or combinations (2,4-D and Silvex).

They should be applied as sprays according to directions on the labels. Care should be taken to avoid drift, particularly if properly applied.

Crabgrass and foxtail are in evidence now but good control can't be easily obtained now because of lateness of the season. Hold off treatment for these until next spring, fertilize and get a good stand of bluegrass, so they can compete better next spring.

Random Sampling Will Check DDT-TDE Tobacco Residues

Random sampling of tobacco at the marketplace is being continued this year to check on possible residues of DDT or TDE pesticides, reports Homer Hale, Chairman of the Rockcastle County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee.

Tobacco growers who have used DDT or TDE are not eligible for Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) support loans on their crops.

Before the county ASCS Office issues a tobacco marketing card, the producer is asked to certify whether or not DDT or TDE was used on the tobacco after it was field-planted. False certification is a violation of federal law.

The random samples of tobacco, taken at time of marketing, are chemically analyzed to determine DDT or TDE residues, if any. In the last few years tobacco buyers, both domestic and foreign, have been concerned about the level of DDT and TDE pesticides in their purchases.

The ASC Committee Chairman pointed out that cooperation is vitally needed to eliminate the use of these pesticides on tobacco, commenting that even a small amount of tobacco with DDT or TDE content can adversely affect the marketing situation, as tobacco from a number of farms is commingled by grade prior to being packed into hogsheads.

"Buyers are quite concerned because of large quantities of tobacco can be affected during the redrying and packing process.

We Care

Death is the eternal inevitability, the most real of all realities. Yet, it is, perhaps, the hardest of all realities to face. The funeral director, more than most people, has a sympathetic understanding of the nature of grief. He is there, a comforting support, when a bereaved family needs someone to be there. Someone who cares.

Rockcastle Recollections

© John Lair

As previously reported in this column, I am having small success in recruiting members of the congregations of the oldest country churches to send in information on the date of their founding and other facts concerning them. As a background for the churches in Rockcastle County, I have been delving into the history of churches in general in pioneer Kentucky, making such references to the movement in Rockcastle AS seems justified by known facts.

Rev. John Lythe, of the Church of England, is supposed to have conducted in Booneboro, May 28, 1775, the first religious services ever held in Kentucky, but there is nothing to indicate that he ever made any attempt to establish any branch congregation of his faith in the Wilderness. The first denomination to proselyte in Rockcastle was that of the Baptist faith. Their Rev. William Hickman was travelling over the settled portions of Kentucky in 1776. A valuable advance in religious work came with the coming of the Travelling Church, composed of the congregation of the Rev. Lewis Craig and known as The Upper Spottsylvania Branch of Baptists in culpepper and Orange Counties, Virginia.

Having suffered many persecutions, including imprisonment for long periods of time of its ministers, the church became dissatisfied and decided to move to the fertile lands of Kentucky, then so much talked about in the lower settlements. They sent Captain William Ellis and pastor Lewis Craig to find a location in the "Promised Land" of the new frontier where they could worship without molestation. With the help of Benjamin Logan, from his station near what is now Stanford, Kentucky, they selected a site on Gilbert's Creek, not far from present-day Lancaster.

Returning to Virginia, they spent two years in preparation for the move and in the Fall of 1781 set out on the great adventure, reaching their destination at Gilbert's Creek around the middle of December. On the journey they transacted business as a regular church, with Sunday services wherever the Sabbath found them. The regular congregation was probably not more than two hundred, but other settlers had attached themselves to the party until the number totaled around five hundred. At Gilbert's Creek they were welcomed by the inmates of a small fort already established there. With them many brought several slaves, which were under the leadership of "Old Captain," who became the first Negro preacher of record in Kentucky. The Travelling Church did not erect a church building at Gilbertsville, later spreading out and moving to other parts of the state.

The history of the Travelling Church, gathered from many sources but mostly from Forrest Calico's excellent History of Garrard County and its Churches, probably the most dependable source of all, is related to Rockcastle County history only in that the party travelled across this county to reach its destination, crossing the Rockcastle River and turning down it to Skaggs Creek Trail and its continuation through the area of the headwaters of Dick's River, where they were again attacked by Indians, but without loss. In a previous attack back on the trail, one man had been killed and scalped. Although the church, as a congregation, did not remain long at Gilbert's Creek, that place did serve as a distributing point for the many Baptist ministers who came early to Kentucky and no doubt the oldest churches in Rockcastle were founded by some of them.

The Christian Church was late in getting established in Kentucky and in Rockcastle County as well. It was an offshoot of other churches, principally the Baptist. Alexander Campbell led the first revolt from the established church, preaching that there was too much form and man-made rules and regulations observed in congregational worship. Those who followed him in his beliefs were called "Cambellites" as they are known in some sections to this day. Barton W. Stone, who had been educated for the ministry in the Presbyterian Church, although working independently of Alexander Campbell, so nearly agreed with him in principle that both were leaders in forming what has since been known as The Christian Church. Another great leader in the reform movement was Raccoon John Smith, a preacher in the Baptist Church from 1808 to 1828, but who spent the next forty years of his life in the work of the Christian Church, during which time he occasionally exhorted in Rockcastle County.

During the early days there were few organized congregations and still fewer church buildings anywhere in Kentucky. In fact, many writers agree that probably the first church house in the state was built near Booneborough in 1787. The ministry, especially in the more sparsely settled areas, was largely carried on by itinerants, or Circuit Riders, who rode horseback on predetermined circuits and preached in the larger homes of each community.

This was especially true of the Methodists, representatives of which first came to Kentucky in 1786. Their ministers labored mightily among the settlers and their Bishop Asbury, coming to Kentucky in 1790, was one of the most famous exhortors of his day. He crossed Rockcastle County on more than one occasion, as will be noted elsewhere in this volume and certainly had not a kind word for our roads, or trails, particularly Skaggs Trace, which he thought was one of the worst in America. Another Methodist of equal, and later greater, fame was Peter Cartwright, who in his boyhood crossed Rockcastle County just behind a massacre of travellers by the Indians, which he never forgot. He was one of the most vigorous of travelling ministers and when local roughs became noisy and belligerent during one of his sermons would make short work of them by knocking their heads together and tossing them out, almost without interrupting his discourse. A valued item in my Pioneer Museum is a little stone jug which Peter Cartwright used to carry tied to his saddle on long journeys through the Wilderness. After refreshing himself at a good spring he would fill the jug and carry it along so that the next time he became thirsty he would not have to stop and look for another spring. At least, that is the story as given to me by one of his descendants from whom I acquired the jug.

Mighty ministers of the Presbyterian faith in the early settlement of Kentucky were James McGready, who early settled in Logan County, and David Rice, who came in 1783, as "The third preacher to cross the mountains." The early history of his church is filled with accounts of his accomplishments and the great debates in which he often participated with ministers of other faiths. The "New Lights" - a name interchangeable with "Cambellites" as a designation for members of the Christian Church - was given to dissidents of the Presbyterian Church under the leadership of Barton W. Stone and others. Another famous exhorter of their faith was Rev. James Crawford, who came to Kentucky from Virginia in 1784 and who has descendants living in Rockcastle County today.

Thus, it will be seen that many religious faiths were represented in the missionary field of early Kentucky and were firmly established before the advent of Campbell and Stone and the beginning of the Christian Church. Also, that a longer period of time is involved than would at first seem possible. When we realize that Alexander Campbell, born in Ireland in 1787, was not even living when the other denominations mentioned were established here, we can more fully understand how late the revolt came about that was to form dissident members of all faiths in to the denomination now known as the Christian Church and its branches.

In view of these findings it will not come as a surprise to learn in the study of the churches of Rockcastle County, which we will undertake presently, that practically all of the older churches were first Baptist, later changing to Christian. It is hoped that by the time such study begins, we will have had reports from more of our rural churches, especially the older ones, so that their histories may be preserved in this work on Rockcastle County, which cannot be corrected or added to once it is in print.

Half Million Goes For Soda Pop Locally

Residents of Rockcastle County are going in for bubbly beverages - the non-alcoholic kind - in a big way. They are also spending a lot of money in that direction.

According to the latest figures, consumption of these soft drinks is breaking all records in the regional area.

It is estimated from the reports that local people are downing the fizzy beverages at the annual rate of 478 eight-ounce bottles and cans per person.

Which is a lot of pop. It is about thirteen more than in 1970, when the average in the area was 465.

By way of comparison, the average throughout the United States was nearly 400 bottles per person in the past year, an increase of twelve in the two-year period.

As for the Rockcastle County population as a whole, it consumed approximately 5,975,000 eight-ounce containers or the equivalent in the year.

The estimates are based upon figures for each regional area of the country, obtained from the National Soft Drink Association and other industry sources.

They show that different areas of the country vary greatly in their addiction to soda pop. People in the Southern part of the country, where it is generally warmer than elsewhere, drink more than those in other sections. They put away three bottles for every two in the Northeastern states.

Flavor preferences are also quite different. In the East, for example, cola drinks represent less than fifty per cent of the market as compared with more than seventy-five per cent in the South. On the other hand, more people go for fruit drinks and ginger ale in the East.

What soft drink consumption in Rockcastle County amounts to in dollars and cents is to be seen from the figures. They indicate that local residents spent an estimated $68,000 for such beverages in the year, a big increase over former years. In part, the rise reflected higher prices.

Nationally, also, there has been a sharp upswing. During 1972 the American public consumed over 80 billion (yes, billion) eight-ounce containers of soda pop and paid in the neighborhood of $4 billion for them.

Residential Garbage Pick-Up Is Available

Door-to-door garbage pick-up in Mt. Vernon and Brodhead is now available through Rockcastle Sanitation.

Rockcastle Sanitation has, for several months, been picking up garbage at various locations throughout the county under a contract with the Fiscal Court. They have now decided to offer door-to-door service to customers in the Mt. Vernon-Brodhead area.

If you are interested in further information concerning this service, please call 256-4546.

A wrecker crew is shown removing the car of Raymond Tarter, 38, of Route 3, Waynesburg, who received Class A injuries last Thursday afternoon when, according to State Police reports, he turned left in front of a car driven by Johnny Cromer, 19, of Route 3, Mt. Vernon. Cromer, who was traveling east on U. S. 70, and a passenger, James Mink, 20, of Mt. Vernon, both received Class A injuries. All three were transferred to Central Baptist Hospital in Lexington. Three other passengers in the Cromer vehicle, Milton Swinney, Glenn Swinney and Jimmy Pruitt, all of Mt. ## Frankfort Watchline

Although we ventured to predict recently that there's simply no way the next Legislature is going to give Kentucky's public schools $120 million a year extra - as suggested in a consultant's report on state aid to school districts - there is one aspect of the recommendations that may be enacted.

It is the formula under which minimum Foundation funds from Frankfort are administered.

The formulas are complicated enough, and even interested legislators get to blank look in committees meetings when state education experts start explaining in detail.

We'll oversimplify. Under the basic formula, the state allocates so much per year for a classroom unit - ideally 27 pupils and a teacher. The study says that system is too rigid and makes no allowance for the varied costs of different kinds of classroom units.

For example, the lowest expense is for teachers and children in the third to eighth grades. The highest is for teaching exceptional children - and many of those units aren't even covered by the Foundation program.

So, why not base state aid on cost per pupil or classroom rather than fix a set amount for a theoretically "normal" class? That is what the report in effect suggests - and one side effect would be to bring in the mentally and physically handicapped under the Foundation umbrella, not just leave them to the mercy of whatever state funds happen to be available each biennium.

Now, someone once said that the mark of how civilized we are is how much provision we make to help those less fortunate than ourselves.

This is the moral side of the new educational proposals - the plan to care for the handicapped, the extremely slow learners and, yes, the really bright ones, too, who are also part of the "exceptional" child categories.

If this plan is adopted by the next Legislature, we'll begin widening our responsibilities to every child, no matter what his disabilities.

Ah yes, the cost? No one knows yet, and, of course, it's a part of the estimated $120 million more than the school people would like to get. But if nothing more than the Foundation formula were changed, there would not be nearly that much money involved.

And we should not hear, too, that all of the proposals with which the school people have come up in recent weeks, this is the only one which seems to have immediate appeal to Gov. Wendell Ford, the fellow with the firmest grip on the state's purse strings.

But there's something about even formula-change funds which the governor may find distasteful. They would amount to "recurring" expenses - one spent, the state would be obligated every two years. That's something Ford said he'd not spend any of his recently-disclosed surplus money on.

The state administration is going to have plenty of money, however, if we may spill a secret, and we're not just talking about the $140 million in surpluses and revenue sharing dough to be available next January.

But, back for a minute to the whole educational package, which will be laid out chapter and verse by the educational lobby sometime in October.

The $120 million may be fantasy, but the teachers probably will get a decent pay raise - though what constitutes decent may depend on the view of course.

Furthermore, the schools can look forward to a lot of the government's $140 million for non-recurring projects - one-time expenditures.

So, we foresee a great deal of construction of vocational schools, creation of special education units and perhaps special benefits for teachers. There should not be many unhappy faces in the school ranks by next spring.

Lotta Traffic - Seems the Department of Education gets the brunt of many of the cute stories making the rounds on Capitol Hill, here.

One passed on by veteran Panhandle Democrat House member Fred Morgan the other day during an education subcommittee meeting goes like this:

"They used to say that the State Department of Education's work force in Frankfort was broken down into three categories. One group would be working, one group would be going to the bathroom, and one group would be coming back from the bathroom."

News and Views from your Rockcastle County Library

Each year the President of the United States issues a proclamation designating the first full week of October as National Employ the Handicapped Week. This year the week will be observed October 7-13. Again, this year, the Division for the Blind and Physically Handicapped of the Library of Congress will provide a talking book machine recorded materials for display and demonstrations. A talking machine is now in the library for anyone wishing to see it demonstrated, or to apply for one to use in their home. The following books are available in the Library for use: Challenged by Handicap, by Richard Lyttle. What is courage? How does one find it? What makes it work? This book can answer none of these questions; it simply tells eleven stories that show what courage can do. Recreation Activities for the Handicapped, by Frederick Chapman. This practical book contains a well-rounded program of activities for the handicapped. It will be of special aid to those studying in the fields of hospital, recreation, medicine, nursing, occu-paternal therapy, recreational therapy, social group work and special education. Employment For The Handicapped, by Julietta Arthur. Nearly eight million disabled persons are now part of the national labor force. More than three and a half million others considered by experts to be employable. And almost half a million are being added to the ranks of the handicapped each year through illness or injury.

Anyone wishing to register to vote, don't forget that you can now register on the Bookmobile. So, be sure and look for your Bookmobile when it visits in your area!

The following books have been donated from the State Department of Libraries in Frankfort.

The Long Hungry Night, by Elizabeth Foster. Young Nukruk earns a place in his tribe when he acts the part of a man in a time of crisis. 46.

The Lost Doll, by Peggy Mann. Based on an incident involving the author's daughter, this contemporary story concerns Emily and her rag doll.

Agnes. 3-5.

Minnie, by Annetta M. Onslow. Minnie flees from imagined danger to the woods where she finds many adventures. Pre-S-3.

Mr. Lincoln's Inaugural Journey, by Mary K. Phelan. A finely researched historical drama about a man who stands larger than life in American history.

Muffin, by Judith Gwyn. Maggie dearly loves her new puppy but Muffin doesn't respond until Maggie needs her in a very special way. Pre-S-1.

Mysteries of the Mind, by Margaret Hyde. The reader will learn about modern dream laboratories, rapid eye movements in sleep, tests for ESP, the uses and abuses of hypnosis, electrical control of the brain and many other developments now being probed by scientists. 7-9.

Nancy's Backyard, by Eros Keith. Nancy's backyard was special because there dreams had a way of coming magically true. Pre-S-1.

No Ducks In Our Backtab, by Martha Alexander. David's mother has laid down certain rules about pets but he manages to get around them in an unusual way. Pre-S-2.

Phantom Bill, by Joe Archibald. A rock and sock football story of a team and a man fighting against seemingly overwhelming odds. 5-up.

The Poison Factory, by John Branfield. A young girl finds herself in opposition to those in power as she attempts to find out about her father's death. 7-Up.

Ralph Proves The Pudding, by Winifred Rosen. Ralph is asked to do a television commercial with unexpected results. Pre-S-3.

Read About the Sanitation Men, by Francine Klagebrun. A concise account of the varied services performed by workers in a modern city sanitation department. 4-6.

Supersitell, by Willard Heaps. Anyone who ever has knocked on wood or worried when he broke a mirror, will find he is not alone in clinging to old beliefs. He will also find a wealth of new material to intrigue and entertain him. 6-Up.

Smallest Brownie and the Flying Squirrel, by Gladys L. Adeshad. A new edition to the ever popular Brownie Series in which the smallest Brownie finds a good friend in Flying Squirrel. Pre-S-2.

The Thief-Catcher, by Marie Winn. A charming conceptual explanation of the physics and wherefore of taxation and its place in society. Pre-S-2.

The Thief Who Hugged A Moonbeam, by Harold Berson. A brisk and delightful tale about a thief and the trick his victim plays on him. Pre-S-1.

The Train, by Robert Wilber. Elizabeth awakes before the rest of her family and sets out on an early morning adventure. 2-4.
