

Paul Travis, far right, brings down the Russell County Lakers quarterback behind the Lakers offensive line. Travis, Mayfield and Bray combined several times to throw the Lakers for losses.

ALMOST THERE - But not quite. John Clontz, lying on the ground in front of No. 82 for Rockcastle County, ran the ball back to Russell County's four-yard line, after a beautiful interception, before being brought down by a Laker Defender. The Rockets were tagged with a 15-yard holding penalty on the next play and were unable to get on the scoreboard.

Rockets - Lakers Battle To Scoreless Tie

The Rockcastle Rockets battled the Russell County Lakers to a scoreless tie in the first outing for the Rockets this season.

Lakers to a scoreless tie in the first outing for the Rockets this season.

Junior Quarterback John Clontz played an excellent game, leading the Rockets to a total of 18 first downs. The Rockets gained 197 yards on the ground, had two passes intercepted and lost the ball on fumbles twice.

Several really good defensive plays were turned in by Paul Travis, Tim Mayfield and Mark Bray. Bray also got off several good punts during the game.

Penalties hurt the Rockets - they were assessed for over 60 yards. However, several long runs by Clontz, Smith and Burton kept the Lakers defense under pressure throughout the game.

It was the consensus of the fans that the Rockets will be giving someone a rough go of it this season. The Rockets need to polish up their passing game and pass defense also needs working on since, it seemed that the Lakers couldn't successfully move the ball on the ground but completed several passes for good yardage.

This week, the Rockets open their home season with a game against MMI.

High school and college girls are coming up with beauty ideas that are winning the approval, and sometimes even emulation, of their mothers.

Now setting the pace for faces is a soft look that's alive, natural, vital, but refined and pretty.

Eyes sparkle in a muted aura of creamy eye polish, subtly defined. A transparent gel glides over cheeks for a deep, healthy glow and lips light up with gleamers and glosses, gilded with gold or shimmered with silver. Nails are gently pearled for a soft sheen look.

School Board Approves Athletic Program

Elementary Athletic Director Preston Farrett met with the Rockcastle County Board of Education Monday night and presented them with a plan, for their approval, for a different set-up for the elementary basketball program.

Mr. Farrett told the Board that he would like to organize the program into four segments: (1) Eighth grade boys' team, (2) Seventh grade boys' team, (3) Girls' basketball, and (4) Midget basketball.

Under the program for seventh and eighth grade boys, there would be two separate teams in each elementary school made up of each grade. Mr. Farrett said it was he felt more boys would get to participate in the actual playing of the game.

Both teams would play on the same night with the eighth graders playing six minute quarters and the seventh graders playing four minute quarters. During this season, which will run from November 6 through January 19, the two teams would play 14 games each (three of which would be played in the afternoon).

Details have not yet been worked out on the girls' basketball team, but the Midget team would consist of fifth and sixth graders playing four-minute quarters. Their season would begin January 21 and end February 23 and they would be limited to six or eight games per season.

The Board approved the program as set up by Mr. Farrett.

In other action, the Board approved three substitute teachers, subject to certification: Eva Mullins, Barbara Jo Bracken and Nancy Bussell.

The Rockcastle County Board of Education today announced a free and reduced price meal policy for school children unable to pay the full price of meals served in schools under the National School Lunch and School Breakfast Programs.

Local school officials have adopted the following family size-income criteria for use in determining eligibility.

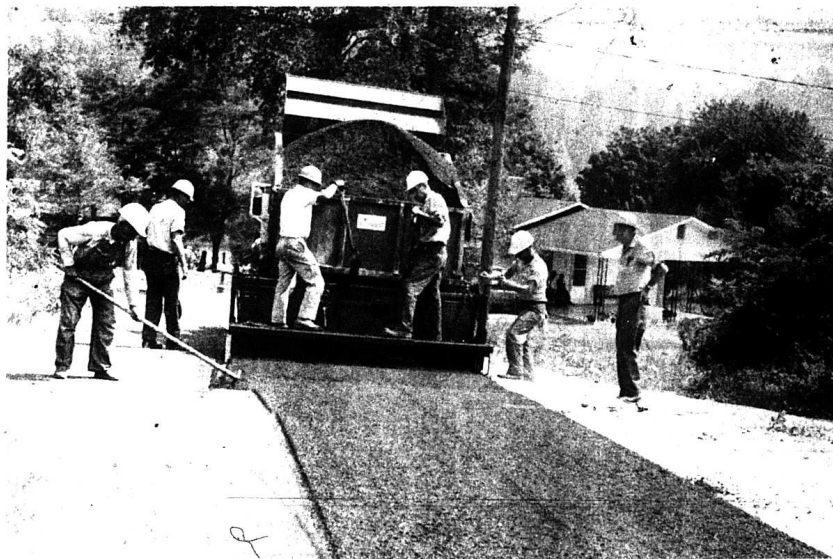

Children from families whose income is at or below those shown are eligible for meals free or at reduced prices. The information provided on the application will be confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted any time during the school year.

JOHN NICHOLS'

Frankfort Watchline

The prose was red punchy, but the reorganization announcement by Gov. Wendell Ford the other day somehow does seem to rate all those flowery words. At least not yet.

"The most important day in terms of service delivery by state government since I assumed office," Ford said.

What it's all about is that the Departments of Economic Security, Child Welfare, Health and Mental Health are now merged into something called the Department for Human Resources.

"We don't want to play cynic all the time, but we're going to have to wait to see how this one turns out. —It's merely one phase, albeit a significant phase, of statewide government re-grouping which Ford promised and is delivering.

We doubt that it's the "greatest" of anything, and if the governor's office doesn't slow down its barrage of adjectives, the credibility gap is going to widen.

There were some things, of course, that the governor did not mention and it's just as well. For instance, deep rumbling in these bureaucratic caverns about his choice of former Mental Health Commissioner Dale Farabee to be Health Services Commissioner in the new cabinet.

Farabee was lucky to escape a vindictive attempt to run him out of state government during the last legislative session through a change in the law which would have disqualified him as mental health boss.

Now we're told that it was the governor who scuttled that legislative attempt on Farabee's public service life. That doesn't quite jibe with word we had that "there was resistance within the Ford inner sanctum to Farabee being named the new Commissioner of Health Services.

Well, who can you believe these days? Anyway, the favorite of some was former Health Commissioner William McElwain, who takes a post somewhere down the line?

How far down the line? Nobody's saying, including the honcho of this new ten-thousand employee bureaucracy maze, Human Resources Secretary Laurel True. Bet you didn't know that True once worked for McElwain as a Health Department employee, did you?

Goes to show you that you'd better be nice to those around you on your way up because you may be passing them again on your way down.

I cannot overemphasize the importance of this occasion.

by perlina m. anderkin...

You know, there has been a rash of bicycle thefts particularly in Mt. Vernon recently. My own new bike fell victim to thieves two weeks ago when my ten-year old, who obviously has a memory for her father's bike, it up town, parked it in front of the Signal office and then proceeded to walk home with friends, forgetting all about the bike. Needless to say, when it was missed, it was too late! It kind of made me mad, but in that kind of situation, you just kind of have to expect it to happen. Attention to the problem. As far as I am concerned, it just seems to be one more step along the road to the Government taking care of it all, whether we want to be taken care of or not.

Try to get out and see the ROCKETS this Friday night. They are a talented team with good coaching and with a little more experience should give anyone on their schedule a good game.

Bowlers, don't forget — If you are interested in bowling this year with the Rockcastle Mixed League at Maroon Lanes in Richmond, be at the Lanes at 7:30 p.m. Thursday night (which is tonight) when the League will be organized and the first games will be bowled.

NEWS SUMMARY

State Government's Week of Activity in Brief

Reorganization — Gov. Wendell Ford predicted that reorganization of the state Departments of Mental Health, Health, Economic Security and Child Welfare into the Human Resources Cabinet, will save the state $5 million. The new department, headed by Laurel True, will contain Bureau for Social Insurance, Social Services, Administration and Operations, Health Services, Manpower Services, and a newly created Office of Ombudsman.

Budget Presentation Changes — For the first time in history, Kentucky's governmental budget is being prepared on a program basis instead of the traditional organizational basis. The executive branch feels that the program budget concept can significantly improve the decision making of state government.

Highway Opening — The stretch of Interstate-64 between Frankfort and Lexington was officially opened in a double ceremony by Gov. Wendell Ford last week. The 17.8 mile long stretch of highway has been termed the safest section in the state's system of interstate highways.

Decreasing Death Rate — Traffic deaths reached record numbers on the state's highways last year, according to the 1972 Annual Report of the Department of Public Safety.

We Care

Death is the eternal inevitability, the most real of all realities. Yet, it is, perhaps, the hardest of all realities to face. The funeral director, more than most people, has a sympathetic understanding of the nature of grief. He is there, a comforting support, when a bereaved family needs someone to be there. Someone who cares.

Rockcastle Recollections

© John Lair

No one at this late date can name the first white man to set foot on Kentucky soil but Dr. Thomas Walker of Virginia is recorded in history as the first to establish trails in Kentucky, with the exception of his journey. He was thus the first to visit the area which later became Rockcastle County, the date of his visit being May 9, 1750.

Thirteen years later a group of Long Hunters from the South were in Rockcastle where one of their number, Henry Skaggs, discovered and named Skaggs Creek and the game trail along it which later became Skaggs Trace, one of the first - if not the first - named and established trails in Kentucky, with the exception of the age-old Warriors Path through Cumberland Gap and across the eastern mountains to Ohio. Nineteen years after Dr. Walker's visit came Daniel Boone, with a hunting party, including John Finley, John Stewart (Boone's brother-in-law), Joseph Holden, James Mooney and William Cook. Boone and Stewart stayed on after the others had gone back to the settlements. Squire Boone, Daniel's brother, later joined them. That they spent some time in Rockcastle County is borne out by the fact that Stewart was killed by the Indians while about five miles from Great Saltpetre Cave, while Boone left evidence, as was his custom, by carving his name at different places in the neighborhood, including the inside of the cave.

Prior to this time Boone had crossed Rockcastle County when sent by Lord Dunmore to warn early surveyors in the Kentucky Wilderness of the danger of Indian attacks. Incidentally, it has been estimated that at the time Boone effected his settlement at Boonesborough in 1775, there were at least three hundred white men in Kentucky, most of whom had come in by way of Rockcastle County.

Thus, it is seen that we have a fairly good idea of the first to visit our county, naming the first to actually settle here is a more difficult matter. Collins' History says "One of the first settlers was Stephen Langford," which was undoubtedly correct, but was he the first? The Census Report for 1790 shows him living in Lincoln County, no doubt, in that portion of the county later included in Rockcastle, which entitles him to be known as a settler in Rockcastle as of that date. First land office records in his name were for four hundred acres on Little Olley Creek in 1791. First holdings in Rockcastle County and near Mt. Vernon were two thousand acres on Skaggs Creek, entered in 1797. From that date and up to 1873 several thousand acres are registered under the name of Stephen Langford, which seems to bear out the contention of one branch of the family that there were two Stephen Langfords, cousins, living in Rockcastle County, one on Rockcastle River and the other in the vicinity of Mt. Vernon. The original Stephen, if old enough to be the head of a family and registered in the Census Report for 1790, could not possibly have been living in 1873. However, there is only one Stephen Langford listed in the Census Report for 1810 and none at all in the 1820 and 1830 Census. I have had no opportunity to consult Census records for 1840 or 1850 to see if the second Stephen came in at a later date.

Another strong claimant for early settler records may be a Henderson. Incomplete research indicates that a William Henderson stated in an old letter in the possession of a descendant, Susan Henderson, that after the capture of Vincennes by George Rogers Clark in 1779, Henderson, who served under him in that expedition, passed through what is now Mt. Vernon on his way back to the lower settlements and on a hunt in this vicinity killed a buffalo. In 1794, he, with Frederick Akes and James Graves, came back to Kentucky to settle. Incidentally, all three were still here when the Census of 1810 was taken. In a grant signed by Governor Isaac Shelby in 1785, he took up one thousand acres of land on part of which Mt. Vernon was located. His descendants have claimed that he was the one who suggested the name of Mt. Vernon for the new settlement and it was he who originally erected the house known for our time as the Old McFerron Place, which was at first meant for a fort but soon sold by him to Stephen Langford, who by the time the county was formed had altered it somewhat and changed it into a residence. Also in 1795, land office records show Stephen Langford taking up a grant of two thousand acres on Skaggs Creek, his nearest holdings to Mt. Vernon at that time. Thus, we see that there were conflicting claims as to who first owned the land on which Mt. Vernon was located, although it is a matter of record that Stephen Langford owned first the site of the formation of Rockcastle County, of which Mt. Vernon was made the county seat. There is a lot of research involved here, but it would be most interesting to be able to establish definitely the question in point. It seems that there have been two or three branches of the Henderson family in Rockcastle County and present citizens of that name have no definite idea of their involvement.

In searching out the first settlers in Rockcastle, a definite claim can be established for James Proctor, who came from Pennsylvania, married a Miss Branaman and settled in the Cove area in a pole cabin with no window or door shutters. At the time of their arrival (actual date not known) the closest store was at Logan's Fort, which is present-day Stanford. When he went there for supplies, it involved a three-day round trip. During the nights when he was gone, bears and panthers would come sniffing at the cracks between the logs of his cabin, in which his wife and two babies would be cowering with nothing but an axe for their protection in case of an actual attack. When the county government was set up he was Rockcastle's first jailer, which office he was again holding at the time of his death in the 1860's.

D. N. Williams, for many years an honored citizen of Rockcastle and Mt. Vernon, left many notes on his recollection of the early days of Mt. Vernon. He stated that Robert Langford, father of Stephen Langford, came into the county in 1790, in which he was apparently incorrect, as Census Records show Robert still living in Woodford County in 1800. He is credited with building one of the first houses in the county, the old log house known as the Old Devault Place until its destruction by fire only a few years ago. Incidentally, one of D. N. Williams' own ancestors might possibly lay claim to being among the early comers. An old gravestone erected to the memory of Jesse Williams in the Phillips Cemetery at Wildie, shows him to have been born in 1750. The Williams family, who came to Mt. Vernon from Wildie, seems to have originated in Tennessee, where Rebecca Williams, known as the prettiest girl on New River" was married to Enus Dalton. Their daughter, Matilda, born 1799, was my great grandmother.

Wildie had another important entry in the list of early settlers. Thomas Fish, who came with his wife and family through Cumberland Gap in 1791 and settled at Paint Lick, Garrard County. In 1800 he moved to Clear Creek near Wildie, where he built a large hewed log house which stood until recent years. The Fish family was one of the most important in the early annals of Rockcastle County and its members held many positions of trust within the gift of the voters. They were among the very first to settle in Renfro Valley and at one time owned two thousand acres of its best land. Three Fish brothers built three houses which, next to John Renfro's cabin, were the first built in the Valley. One of them, known as the Old Polly Hiatt Place, I am presently restoring to its original condition to be maintained as a reminder of the traditional past of Rockcastle County, it now being the oldest house in the county.

Three of the Long Hunters who were here before Boone liked the county so well that they eventually came back and settled in Rockcastle and are buried somewhere within our boundaries. Of these, John Baker was living somewhere in the Brush Creek or Crooked Creek section when he explored Great Saltpetre Cave in 1788 when, accompanied by his wife and three children he was lost in the cave for two days and two nights. Col. James Dysart, early hunter and veteran of the Revolutionary War, settled at an early date on Skaggs Creek and was long considered the most important man in the county and the owner of an extensive library. Valentine Harmon was the third Long Hunter known to have settled in Rockcastle, where he died in 1815. He was at both Boonesborough and Harrodsburg before coming here.

The 1810 Census, furnished me by Judge Charles Carter some time ago will be run in an early issue of the Signal, maybe the next issue, if space is available. It will show the names of heads of families living in Rockcastle when it was organized into a county in 1810. It should prove invaluable for those who want to know whether or not their ancestors were living here at that time.

generally find a hunting area within comfortable driving distance of home. There are over 40 public hunting areas throughout the state with a total area of nearly one million acres. The majority of these are wildlife management areas maintained by the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and owned either by the department or by other governmental or private agencies.

Although the majority of these public areas are under state-wide regulations, several have special rules for hunting deer or waterfowl. Hunters should check with their local conservation officer, the area manager, or the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Frankfort, Ky. 40601, to become acquainted with these special regulations.

There are approximately 20 shooting preserves in Kentucky which are open to the public on a fee basis. These are usually listed in the yellow pages, or hunters can contact the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources for additional information.

One of the biggest problems facing today's hunters is finding a place to hunt. This problem is particularly acute for city and suburban dwellers who may have no relatives or acquaintances in the country.

The hunter has two alternatives - he can visit the public hunting lands in Kentucky or seek permission to hunt on private lands. Generally speaking, farmlands provide better hunting because of the heavy pressure on the public areas, so hunters seeking to broaden their hunting horizons should look first to privately-held lands but should always remember to conduct themselves so that they will be welcomed back. Unfortunately, an inconsiderate few can turn landowners against all hunters. A farmer who has had his crops trampled, his land littered, his gates left open or his stock shot cannot be blamed for posting his land. The farmer who comes in contact with considerate hunters who respect his property will not mind hunters using his land.

The hunter should always ask permission before hunting on private land, and check with the landowner about the location of crops and livestock or areas the farmer doesn't want hunted. Abiding by the farmer's wishes shows that the hunter recognizes and respects the rights of the landowner.

Hunters who wish to try their luck on public lands can
