By H. Lee Durban

Does Jack Frost Really Cause Fall Leaf Color? Have you ever wondered why leaves turn color in the fall of the year? The old story that Jack Frost has been there peeling the tree is usually sufficient explanation for those people who wish only to enjoy the beauty of the fall colors. But for most gardeners this explanation is inadequate because it doesn't tell what is taking place.

Actually, the development of color is the result of a series of nature's chemical reactions; and frost really plays little part in the process. In fact, in many instances frost can actually reduce the amount and brilliance of the color produced.

In an attempt to better understand what is happening, it is necessary to know that there are four broad groups of chemicals in leaves which are responsible for the colors we see. Chlorophylls are the green color; carotenoids and xanthophylls produce the yellows through reds; and anthocyanins, the blues, purples and reds.

At the end of summer leaves are green because they have large quantities of chlorophylls. The other colors are also present in the leaves at this time but, because of the large amounts of the chlorophylls, the leaves look green to us. During the bright, clear days of fall, large amounts of sugar are produced in the leaves. However, the nights are often quite cool. These cool night temperatures slow down all the living processes of the tree. Movement of the sugars out of the leaf and down to the roots for storage is greatly reduced, leaving large quantities of sugar "trapped" in the leaves. This high concentration of sugars in the leaves results in an increase in the production of anthocyanins. Also, because of the general slow up of living processes in the plant, chlorophyll is not produced as rapidly as it is destroyed. Therefore, as the cool weather continues, there is less and less chlorophyll in the leaf to hide the other colors, and the countryside begins to take on a whole new look.

Plants vary in their ability to store sugars. Some plants, such as the citrus, store practically none, while others, such as the sumac, maples and black gum, produce large amounts. For this reason, the leaves on plants will range from clear yellow to clear, bright red.

A heavy frost will actually interfere with fall leaf color by killing leaf tissue, which then turns brown and drops to the ground. For this reason, a dry fall with bright, clear days and cool, crisp nights without heavy frost or serious cold weather produces the best fall color.

Fall Is The Ideal Time To Prepare Tobacco Plant Beds Fall is an ideal time to prepare plant beds for next year's tobacco crop. That is pointed out by George Everett, Extension tobacco specialist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Everette notes that while plant bed preparation in the fall competes with other farm tasks, the advantages far outweigh this disadvantage.

Soil conditions for plant bed preparation are usually better in the fall. Also, there is usually more open weather. If you wait until spring and then heavy rains arrive, as happened last spring, it may be very difficult to prepare a good plant bed.

The best way to control weeds is to use the methyl bromide treatment, says the UK specialist. For this treatment, the soil temperature should be moist but not wet, and in good working condition. Neither heat nor gas will penetrate wet soil, Everett points out. Some areas are extremely dry at the moment, and growers in these areas should wait until after a good rain to treat with methyl bromide.

Fall burning also gives satisfactory weed control. If you have materials to burn and adequate labor, you should consider this choice in the fall. More and more growers are leaving the polyethylene covers in place over the beds through the winter to protect the soil from winter rains and at the same time conserve soil moisture. If you follow this practice, you can seed the beds in the spring at almost any time you wish.

The UK Specialists says good plant bed preparation plays an important role in producing strong, healthy plants - and he adds, "The past growing season gave us a good indication that starting with good plants lays the foundation for a good tobacco crop."

department that is on constant call and continuously working for the betterment of both fish and wildlife are the conservation officers.

Conservation officers work to protect fish and wildlife resources for the sportsmen.

Unfortunately, there are people who poach game, take over their limits of both fish and wildlife and pollute streams. In effect, they are stealing from each and every sportsman and conservationist in the state.

Come to the aid of the conservation officers and let them know where poaching is taking place.

Bicentennial License Plates To Go On Sale By December 1

Kentucky 1974 Bicentennial commemorative license plates are slated for delivery throughout the state by December 1.

The specialty tags, which will sell for $2, are being made by the Kentucky Correctional Industries Silk Screen Shop at LaGrange. The Bicentennial Committee of each county will receive $1.50 from each sale to help fund their 1974-76 projects.

The 102,000 plates being produced are the handwork of three men at the LaGrange shop. After working a regular eight-hour day, the men voluntarily return to the shop for another four-hour shift.

The commemorative plates are produced by the same process as other license tags manufactured at LaGrange. A large roll of steel sheeting is run through a press and the plates are punched out.

The tags are then placed on a conveyor rack where they are processed chemically and spray-painted by hand. The plates are then ready for the work of the three-silk screen specialists.

When the tags are dry they are packaged in plastic bags and boxed for delivery to the proper county. KCI trucks will begin delivery of the special plates by December 1.

Brock Bags 10th Deer

Carl Douglas Brock, Sr. of Brodhead had good luck last Saturday when he killed an eight-point buck with a bow-and-arrow while hunting in Area 3 at the Bluegrass Ordinance in Richmond. This makes the fifth deer Mr. Brock has killed with a bow and arrow and the tenth deer in all.

According to Mr. Brock, good sportsmanship was shown Saturday when he killed his deer. He said it was about 10 a.m. and he was sitting behind a big tree when two deer came strolling by and stopped about thirty yards away. Mr. Brock said he turned to the right and pulled his bow back and noticed that the doe was looking back at the way they had just come. He surmised from this that there must be a buck behind them somewhere and one of the corner of his eye, he saw an eight-point buck coming along. Brock said he already had his bow pulled back and the buck who didn't notice Brock stopped behind a bush. However, Brock said that he had been holding the bow back for so long his hand began shaking and the buck noticed the movement and jumped. Brock let go of the bow string and he thought the arrow went on past the deer.

Needless to say, Mr. Brock was quite disappointed with himself for missing a 32-yard shot so he turned to look for the doe which had heard the shot and ran about thirty or forty yards up the hill. About fifteen minutes later, Brock said he saw the doe jump up from where they had bedded down and run off over the hill. He looked up and saw why - a hunter was approaching from the way the buck he had shot at had gone. Brock said this irritated him a little since the hunter had run off the deer he (Brock) had wanted so badly. The hunter came up to Brock and told him that the buck almost came up under his tree but had turned and ran back down towards Brock. The hunter said the buck was really tearing up the trees at this time and introduced himself to Brock as James Boone of Mayville, a descendant of Daniel Boone. Boone told Brock they should try to get the buck that Brock had shot at but Brock, who prefers to hunt by himself, told Boone to go with out him and wished him luck.

Brock then went to find the arrow he had shot at the buck and when he found it, he noticed that about five inches of it was gone and there was blood on it. Brock then holiered at Boone and told him that he was going with him because he had hit the deer after all and it was probably lying dead somewhere.

The two men walked about 75 yards from where Brock had shot the deer and there found the buck dead.

Mr. Brock commented on the fact that Mr. Boone could have kept the buck for himself instead of telling Brock about hearing the deer.

"BRITISH MUSEUM"

The remainder went to the fund raisers and to the luck holders of the winning tickets. Several unhappy ticket buyers sued, and at least one judgement went against the library, further depleting its gains.

Librarian Towne thought big in four years he spent some $400,000 on the building and on accessories which included a large number of books purchased in Europe, the Gerard Troost mineral collection ($20,500), and an Anton Cuvier statue of Hebe, a Greek princess of Olympus ($10,000).

Within five weeks of the last benefit performance, which alone brought in a total of $19 million, Louisville's "British Museum" was down to a few thousand dollars in the bank.

Finally, on June 19, 1875, the treasurer of the board reported a balance of only $2,671. The staff was summarily dismissed and followed in a short while by the resignation of Towne himself.

The Polytechnic Society, with its debts, and in 1903, this group passed the Public Library assets on to the Louisville Free Public Library. It had been established by a Carnegie Grant and the promise of annual support from the city fathers. This year marks the near fruition of the British Museum try of a century ago. Thanks to local revenue shaming, the book holdings of the Louisville Public Library approximate Librarian Towne's magic figure of one million volumes.

Local Farm Income Up To Six Million

Although farming and ranching have not been the most lucrative of occupations in recent years, Rockcastle County's agricultural community has been making out better than most, it appears.

The majority of local farmers held their own last year and a number of them, especially those with well-equipped, commercial-size setups, ended up well ahead of the previous year.

One credit for it is attributed to record output, made possible by generally favorable weather conditions, by greater mechanization and by more intensive use of fertilizers and pesticides.

Gains were made in nearly every section of the county. The Northeast, which was hit by heavy and continuous rains, was an exception.

The facts and figures, showing how local growers fared in relation to others, are contained in a survey released by the Standard Rate and Data Service.

It reports total receipts in Rockcastle County from farm operations in the past year at $6,127,000, a two year ago.

When it made a similar survey, it listed the total as $5,735,000. That was the gross amount,

The 1973 Rockcastle County High School Homecoming Queen will be selected from the above candidates. The girls were nominated by members of the Football Team and the winners will be selected on the basis of the number of votes each girl has at one o'clock vote. Candidates are, front row, from left: Freshman Class - Rita Cook, Anna Lee Rigby, Jan Cassinella and Jennifer Hamad. Second row, Sophomore Class - Patty Taylor, Denise Gargaud, Joy Ballinger, Marita Stewart. Third row, Junior Class - Lisa Lewis, Leona Holbrook, Regina Taylor, and Lori Stewart. Back row, Senior Class - Elizabeth Allen, Kathy Russell, Bonnie Jones, Debbie Brown, and Carol Coats. The queen and her court will be crowned Friday night October 20th during half-time of the football game.

Interest in November Gen. Election is Light

There will be very little of local interest on the ballot in the November General Election. Other than a race for County Judge between Republican Hubert Thacker and Democrat Ernie Tolle and a contest for the office of Mt. Vernon Police Superintendent between Mrs. Virgie Sowder and Jesse L. Baker.

Constitutional Amendment No. 1, three amendments are actually included. The first part calls for abolishing the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction and provides for the election of a State Board of Education, consisting of seven members whose terms of office shall be four years and whose duties and qualifications shall be prescribed by law. One member shall be elected on a non-partisan ballot from each of the seven districts established by law. The terms of the members shall be staggered as provided by law. Beginning the first Monday in January, 1976, the State Board shall appoint a Superintendent of Public Instruction to act as executive officer and serve at the pleasure of the Board, at such salary and allowance as may be fixed by the Board. The Board may remove the Superintendent, for causes prescribed by law.

The second section of Constitutional Amendment No. 1 would permit sheriffs to succeed themselves or act as deputies for succeeding terms and the third section would abolish the elective office of Railroad Commissioner and provide that the General Assembly shall provide, by general law, for the necessary regulation and supervision of railroads operating within the Commonwealth and on the expiration of the terms of the Commissioners elected in November, 1971, for the exercise of any authority granted in this Constitution to "The Railroad Commission."

Constitutional Amendment No. 2 mainly concerns itself strictly with the question of annual meetings for the State Legislature. The amendment reads as follows: Shall Sections 22, 26 and 42 of the Constitution be amended so as to: (1) Provide that no person shall be a Representative of Senator who has not resided in the district from which he may be chosen for two years next preceding his election; (2) Provide that the General Assembly shall convene each year on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January, except in the year following a general election, it shall convene on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in March; (3) Provide that no session of the General Assembly shall continue beyond forty-five legislative days, which need not be consecutive; nor shall a session extend longer than four months after convening, provided, however, upon approval of two-thirds of the members of the House and of the Senate, a special session may be extended for a total period of not longer than six months after convening; (4) Provide that Committees of the General Assembly may meet on any day which is not a Sunday or a legal holiday from the time a session is convened.

ASCS Helps Report Supply Problems

The Rockcastle County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) Office is continuing to monitor area farmers' supply needs to help alleviate serious problems this fall.

Harold Ballinger, Executive Director, said farmers should report any critical shortages of fuels for crop harvesting and drying and fertilizers for fall application to the county ASCS office. Some problems can be resolved locally, or through ASCS or state government.

Ballinger said, if not, we will immediately report serious shortage problems to Washington where they will be referred to the regulatory agency involved, and to others concerned with helping assure adequate farm supplies.

ASCS, through ASCS has no direct authority under the fuel allocation program, attempts to resolve critical fuel shortages will continue to be made. Ballinger said. He stressed that farmers should make every effort to obtain supplies before requesting assistance and encourage farmers not to buy more fuel than they need to help assure equitable distribution to all farmers.

With regard to fertilizers, Ballinger said farmers should consider early delivery, on-farm storage and fall application where possible. With more crop acreage expected in 1974, farmers should add now to fill their farm's fertilizer needs, Ballinger said, because problems could develop in replenishing local supplies. He added that farmers should also make every effort to continue to be made more efficient use of plant nutrients, using soil tests for accurate determination of requirements.

Bige Towery, principal at Brodhead Grade School, has announced that the following students were named for the first six weeks' period honor roll:

Unidentified Objects, Sightings Reported

Not only have there been several reported Unidentified Flying Object (UFO) sightings in the southeastern United States, there have now been several right here in Rockcastle County.

Several residents of the Roundstone, Scaffold Cane area of the county reported seeing a spinning craft with varied colored lights on it which brightened and dimmed at intervals.

One youth said that he sighted the craft and shone a flashlight on it. He reported that when he did this, the lights on the craft went out and when he turned the flashlight off, the lights came back on.

Mr. Bullen said that he sighted an object near his home. She got some binoculars and said the craft was spinning like a top and had streamers of varied colored lights running out from the element and secondary levels, in addition to special education, vocational education, and kindergartens.

The proposal, which will be presented to the State Legislature in January, will cost an estimated $120-million. The money would come from state funds and would not affect local school taxes.

The speaker at the October 22 meeting will be Tom Hagner of the Kentucky Department of Education, who will discuss the effects of the proposal, and answer questions.

The meeting will be open to the public, and all interested persons are being urged to attend.

A. Brock said today that twenty-two counties in Kentucky will receive a total of $120,784.91 as their share of receipts from activities on the Daniel Boone National Forest during the past fiscal year.

Ranger Brock stated that Rockcastle County's share of this total will amount to $2,422.67. Other surrounding counties and the amounts they will receive are Jackson County, $10,821.04; Lee - $1,862.85; Estill - $931.12; and Owsley County, $1,032.19.

These payments are being made in accordance with Federal law which specifies that 25 percent of the receipts be turned to the counties containing National Forest land for use on schools and roads. The amount going to each county is based on the number of acres of went away from him. All reports said there was no noise emitted by the craft.

Meeting on Proposed Changes in State Aid to School Districts

Parents, educators, legislators, and members of the general public from Rockcastle and surrounding counties will gather at the Berea Community School on Monday, October 22, at 7:30 p.m. for a meeting on proposed changes in state financial aid to local school districts.

A Citizens Advisory Committee to the Kentucky Department of Education has recommended massive increases in the state's Minimum Foundation program which would mean an additional $462,754.49 annually to the Rockcastle County school district.

The increase would provide for substantial improvements in educational programs at the elementary and secondary levels, in addition to special education, vocational education, and kindergartens.

The proposal, which will be presented to the State Legislature in January, will cost an estimated $120-million. The money would come from state funds and would not affect local school taxes.

The speaker at the October 22 meeting will be Tom Hagner of the Kentucky Department of Education, who will discuss the effects of the proposal, and answer questions.

The meeting will be open to the public, and all interested persons are being urged to attend.

Rockcastle To Receive Share of Forest Funds

National Forest land within the county.

During the past year, receipts from the sale of timber to private operators accounted for the largest single amount of the total forest revenue. Receipts from minerals were a close second to timber.

In addition, the water, recreation, and wildlife resources of the National Forest contributed significantly to the well-being and enjoyment of the people of Kentucky and those lands more from all over the country.

Ranger Brock said that the Forest Service system of land management makes certain there will always be a supply of timber for the Nation. It also provides for the protection of wildlife, recreation and aesthetic values of the Forest.

Frankfort Watchline

The problems of overweight trucks and coal mine pollution have a judicial relationship that goes beyond their obvious connection with a major Kentucky industry. It turns out that in both areas, to put it bluntly, the law has not been enforced.

Now, in the matter of overweight trucks the Court of Appeals recently settled the issue - saying that the state cannot routinely issue permits for such vehicles because the state provides for only special emergency occasions, and those only when safety and highway preservation is considered.

For years, the coal industry - either the truckers or the mine operators - have been tearing up the roads. There have been several attempts at arrangements to keep a vital industry going and yet keep the highways in decent shape. The state thought it had the answer with a bonding procedure under which the roads would have to be fixed before overweight trucks could roll on them.

Well, that's been shelved legally by the state's high court and the attorney general's office has indicated it will continue to go to court in counties where the overweight truck practice hangs on. But we know of counties where this simply has not been done yet and we believe the overweight trucks will continue to rumble across parts of eastern Kentucky.

So, what we have here, for better or worse, is a law that has not been enforced and, even in the future, may not be enforced too rigidly or quickly.

Yes, we're aware of all the arguments in favor of attention to the fine points.

Next, coal mine pollution. The attorney general's office recently cited more than three hundred cases where a group of mines consistently polluted waters elsewhere without being fined.

The answer of Thomas Harris, commissioner of the State Environmental Protection Agency, is that the same mines are spending several million dollars on their own hook to clean up the problem and that this certainly is more expensive and effective than an aggregate few thousand dollars in fines would be.

We don't doubt Harris' logic. We feel that his attitude on this and other pollution problems is that of a sincere, dedicated public servant. We think that he believes his way is best in the long run.

But again, we must point to the law under which every pollution violation should have resulted in a fine. We're taking a while getting to the point, however, which is that the law is the law.

If you pass a law that's unpopular or unworkable, it can be changed, quite easily in Kentucky at least. Just wait until the next legislative session - or even call a special session such as the one in 1965 summoned to deal with the impact of 100 percent property assessment.

But while the law is in effect, we believe it should be obeyed, not violated, not winked at and not enforced with a lackadaisical attitude.

Any other way and the people lose respect for the law. And Kentucky, just like the nation, is a government of laws, not a government of men who can enforce or not enforce laws at their whim.

If the coal industry can make a case before the public, let the 1974 Kentucky General Assembly ease the industry's very real burdens. Meantime... but we said all that already, didn't we? *****

Bad News Everywhere - There's a spot or two on Lake Cumberland that are favorite get-away-from-it hideaways for Greenup House Democrat Terry McBrayer. The man who may well be our next Lt. Governor.

Recently, McBrayer headed for his fishing paradise, and took with him a buddy, a rural mail carrier from Dover, Ky. There they were, each with his own canoe, each trying out favorite spots on the lake, the only contact with the outside world a small transistor radio McBrayer's pal had brought along.

As they came within bailing distance on this latest outing McBrayer saw the fellow, his head bent, his ear glued to the radio, obviously having forsaken his angling.

To McBrayer's salute of "What's new?" came this dejected response: "Well, Ag new's just quit, and the fish have quit bitin'". *****

Consumer Legislation Favored - A labor and industry legislative subcommittee has recommended nine consumer protection proposals formulated by the Consumer Advisory Council. Included is legislation making a dealer liable for defective car sales if the malfunction was known at the time of purchase. Certain telephone and charity solicitations would also be restricted if the proposals are passed by the 1974 General Assembly. The subcommittee also recommended that restrictions be placed on pyramid sales organizations which often "get rich quick" and then "lose" the state before prosecution.

Health Board Tables Abortion Issue - At a recent meeting of the State Board of Health, members tabled a resolution on abortion and delayed action until the abortion subcommittee meets with representatives of the Kentucky Medical Association (KMA).

CONSUMER COMMENTS

Need to borrow money or shopping on installment? Buy for that money may be as important as shopping for the goods. Information required under the Federal Truth in Lending Act helps you compare available credit terms.

Federal law now requires that the lender reveal both the amount of the finance charge and the simple annual interest rate.

The finance charge is the total number of dollars the consumer pays to borrow money. The statement of the finance charges tells how many total dollars it is costing you to borrow, but it does not tell who is charging the least for the use of money. This must be determined by looking at the simple annual interest rate.

At one time interest rates were stated so obscurely that no valid comparison could be made between alternative sources of credits. The new federal requirements have taken care of that problem and now institutions lending money must state their rates in true annual percentage rate.

No longer can institutions legally advertise a 5 percent "discount rate" on auto loans, when the actual rate is really 11 percent on the average amount of money owed. Service charges on revolving charge accounts, which seem small at 1 1/2 percent a month, must now be stated at the larger and more accurate 18 percent per year.

When a dealer adds the carrying charges to the cash price of an appliance at $12 per $100 per year, the contract must now show the annual interest rate is actually 21.5 percent.

HISTORIC HIGHWAY-Kentucky's portion of the Old National Turnpike was a major mail and travel route during the mid-1800's. Extending from Zanesville, Ohio, down through the Bluegrass region and eventually to Florence, Ala., this road was a busy thoroughfare for the stagecoaches carrying congressmen and merchants to the East and mail to the South.

END OF DRAFT RESULTS IN SUPERIOR GUARD

By Pauls Alexander
State News Bureau

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) Gen. Richard L. Fyrmire, head of the Kentucky National Guard, has stated that the abolition of the draft has improved the quality of the Guard.

"It is probably the best thing that has ever happened to the Guard," he added.

During the peak years of the Vietnam War the application list was so lengthy that recruiters were inclined to accept those names at the top, with less allowance made for proper screening, he said.

Gen. Fyrmire pointed out that the roster was so extensive few recent high school graduates were selected. By the time their turn came, they were a few years older.

The general said his men have taken an unobjective look at their organization since the draft was abolished—an inspection which has caused the present Guard to be the "best ever."

Because the primary role of the men is to be combat ready, Gen. Fyrmire said the concentration is on "dynamic training." He noted that the tougher the program is, the less likely the men are to leave.

After a Guardsman has completed his basic and advanced training he is placed in a special unit, such as an artillery or armor. He then works at his local armory Saturday and Sunday of each month in addition to 15 days of an intensive summer program each year.

The bride-elect, a 1971 graduate of Mt. Vernon High School, will receive an Associate Degree in Corrections from Eastern Kentucky University in May. Mr. Howard, also a 1971 graduate of Mt. Vernon High School, is employed at the Lexington-Birmingham Army Depot. The vows will be solemnized at 3 p.m. December 16 at the First Christian Church in Mt. Vernon. # Beautiful!

But imagine what the oven looks like!

Take another hint - for saving electricity and money. Always use the exact degree of heat a recipe calls for. And read your instruction manual every important word!

What an appetizing sight...as long as no one peeks in the oven to see the awful mess of splatterings and drippings that just naturally result from preparing a noble feast. But no worry for you if you own an electric range with a self-cleaning oven. Set the special controls - come back to an oven that's clean as new. With the holidays coming, take the hint - get a self-cleaning electric range!

OLD TURNPIKE WAS STAGECOACH ROUTE

A colorful stretch in Kentucky's history is the southern branch of the Old National Turnpike—a major mail and travel route during the stagecoach era of the mid 1800's.

Kentucky's branch of the turnpike extended 500 miles—beginning at Zanesville, Ohio, entering Kentucky at Limestone (which is now Maysville) and running through the Bluegrass region, and eventually on to Florence, Ala.

It followed the route of present-day U.S. 68 and brought life to such small towns as Paris, Washington, and Harrodsburg.

The main street of Shakerown is the only restored portion of the road, but a stretch near Harrodsburg is still intact as a narrow, rocky path winding up the ridges that border the Kentucky River.

State Historian Col. George Chinn, whose home is near this path, said it is still used by wagons and jeeps. "It's amazing the road wasn't washed out long ago," he said. "But the original rock is still there."

The road originated as a buffalo trace and Indian trail. "Buffaloes were the first engineers," Col. Chinn said. "They carved this road out of the wilderness while looking for salt."

The trail led the way for settlers coming down the Ohio River and entering Kentucky Packtrains, consisting of six-to-eight horses pulled high with pioneers' belongings, wove their way over the steep ridges into the central part of the state.

As the area settled, residents became aware of the poor conditions of the road. Stagecoach travel was introduced around 1800, but the roads were nearly impassable.

The first state-authorized lottery for the purpose of road improvement was held in 1811 to repair the road from Maysville to Washington in Mason County.

Between 1820 and 1830 the citizens of Maysville appealed to Congress several times for national aid in building the road into a major mail route. In 1830, President Andrew Jackson vetoed a bill to provide federal funds, giving the road nationwide attention but no help in completion.

The citizens in Maysville, Lexington, Millersburg and Paris subscribed large sums to the highway, and helped by the state, eventually completed the road through Central Kentucky and

It was the state's first macadamized road, which was laid with broken stones according to a process invented by a Scotsman, John MacAdam.

Toll gates, which were then called turnpikes, were built to collect money from travelers for the road upkeep, and iron markers labeled "Zanesville, Maysville, Lexington, Nashville and Florence, Ala." were erected at every mile.

The route was busy with stagecoaches carrying mail, merchants, peddlers, wealthy travelers and great statesmen to and from the East. The stages brought excitement to the towns along the way, and the residents anxiously awaited each arrival.

Inns and taverns sprang up at every stop and hosted such famous guests as Andrew Jackson and Henry Clay who frequently traveled the road enroute to Washington, D.C. Perhaps the best known and most popular stop was Postlethwait's Tavern in Lexington.

Competition among the many stage lines was intense, and the proprietors decorated their large coaches with bright landscapes, portraits and fancy names to attract attention

Rockcastle Recollections

© John Lair

Since the appearance of last week's article on country schools in the county, I have been reliably informed that the county school records were destroyed by fire at an earlier date than 1928, as I had formerly been told. As frequently stated, the purpose of running these historical notes in the Signal before printing them in the contemplated book is to enable corrections to be made, where necessary, before the final printing. If anything appears in these articles that is contrary to fact, I will sincerely appreciate any correction that is made. Also, in reading over the first paragraph of last week's Recollections, I notice that it reads that all county school were destroyed by fire instead of all county school records, as originally written. I have also been told of certain records not destroyed which I may be able to check for additional information at some future date.

Since we now take up the discussion of county school teachers of an earlier day, I would like to be able to give the names of the first teachers employed in the county free school system, but am unable to do so. Until someone with more information comes to my rescue, I can only discuss here some of the older and better known instructors. Last week I mentioned a man named Dollins who either taught a term or two at Oak Hill, but nothing further is known of him or his immediate successor.

Both my parents, as well as neighbors of their own age who had attended school with them, talked often of their early school days and of a favorite teacher they referred to as "old man Storrs" who seems to have taught in many districts of the county. When I got to enquiring about him, I learned through a great granddaughter, Mrs. Thelma Robinson Van Winkle, that his name was actually Sylvester Freeman Storrs and that he came from New York State to Rockcastle County at a date not now remembered. He had two daughters, Clara and Hannah. Clara died after they came to Rockcastle and is buried near her father and mother on a farm near Conway, owned by Carl Williams. Hannah married Ephram Shockley and three of their granddaughters are still in the county. Sallie Campbell, Lesley Shockley and Annie Robinson. Mrs. Van Winkle thinks Professor Storrs died in 1901. I hope someone living in the vicinity of their burial plot will check his tombstone for birth and death dates and send the information along to me.

Professor Storrs, according to all accounts of his scholars, was a well-educated man and an excellent instructor. That he must have been a person of high standing in the East where he comes from is attested to by the fact of a close friendship between himself and the famous poet, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

In those days young men and women of marriageable age frequently attend school for brief terms and Professor Storrs seems to have been considered something of a matchmaker, interested in bringing together compatible couples who might make a good match for each other.

During the Civil War he had been too old to be a soldier, so he volunteered as a nurse; and in his old age, some of the soldiers he had nursed came to see him, some of them travelling many miles to do so.

Professor Storrs is said to have taught 49 free and private schools in Rockcastle. He is also credited with school exhibitions, generally held on Friday afternoons or at night, so as not to interfere with general school work. Actually, these exhibitions were not confined to students. Anybody in the neighborhood who could fiddle, pick a banjo or sing - or even recite - was a welcome addition to the show, which was attended by all the neighbors, young and old alike. From this beginning developed the custom of using the schoolhouse for shows and entertainment of all kinds. When a group of two or more straggling musicians came through a neighborhood they were apt to hire the school building for the purpose of their show, selling tickets for ten and fifteen cents and dividing the take among the members of the act. More than thirty years ago when I found Flora Williams (I named her Granny Harper) she was playing with such a group and bragged that they all sometimes made as much as a dollar to a dollar and a half apiece.

Many of the better county school teachers went on to become School Superintendents for their county, sometimes appointed, sometimes elected by popular vote. W.A.B. Davis was one of these, as was his wife, Alice. His brother, Dr. S.C. Davis was appointed Superintendent by his grandfather while County Judge of Rockcastle. In the office of the present Superintendent, Mr. Parsons is a collection of photographs of about all the Superintendents Rockcastle County has had. We could not possibly find room in the book for such a number of photographs, but sometime soon I will try to get all their names and the dates on which they took office.

Among the better known of the old county school teachers of earlier days must be included, in addition to those already named, Theo Figg, J. C. B. Meyers, Jess Reynolds, R. H. Swimney, S. O. Sowder, W. C. Bruce, and H.S., R.S. Martin, James Roberts, J. W. Brown, Rosa Nesbitt, and Ida May Adams. These are a few of the older ones. It was impossible to name all of those who have taught in the county, because for many years anybody who could acquire a certificate started teaching school, which was about the only job open to them in those days. All, of course, were not really teacher material. The girls aimed to teach until they could get enough money to buy some clothes and get married; the men, until a better paying job presented itself. This is understandable when the salaries that were then being paid teachers are taken into consideration.

Many of those who taught school did not have much education and none of them were furnished with much equipment. The state, through the trustees, furnished a waterbucket and tin dipper, a broom and a box of chalk. This chalk box, by the way, was a much-prized item. When the school was opened up, it was seen by the students that a new box would soon be due, many requests were filed for the present box when it became empty. A lot of politics was involved. Any student hoping to obtain the coveted prize was apt to be very studious and obliging, doing the teacher many favors in hopes of the high award. I still have an empty chalk box, along with the old brass school bell, from my school days. I wonder if anybody else has like mementos of the old days, which were good days, no matter how far they fell below present-day standards?

Thanks to the old teachers of our little one room school houses, the folks who made up the present older generation managed to get the training and the education that made them perhaps more successful in life than many of today's children, with all their so-called advantages, may become.

Students in the little one-room schools were not taught a great many things considered so essential in the schoolrooms of the present, but they could read and write and spell, fundamental accomplishments to which little attention is paid nowadays. I cannot recall a single instance in which a special teacher had to be hired to teach a boy or girl to read after they had already gone half way through school. Children had less of the mob spirit in the little schools where attendance was such that the teacher could devote more time to individuals who had more responsibility for their own conduct. There were jobs to be shared, such as going to the spring for fresh drinking water, building fires in the stove on cold mornings, sweeping the floor, and so forth. There was some work along with play.

I especially remember when Felix Bowman was teaching school at Redub and going off into the woods during each noon hour for a squirrel hunt. On one of these absences some of the students (and girls, at that) set a nearby sassafras field on fire while smoking grapevine cigarettes and burned many panels of rail fence surrounding the field, which was owned by Uncle Jim Purcell. The replacing of this fence, our wholesale punishment for the fire, took up most of the recess time for all of us for many weeks and by the time the job was completed, it was time to make up clay mud and plaster the spaces between the logs of the old school house before winter weather set in. So we were cheated out of practically all our play time for that term of school.

So much for my own remembered school day experiences. You had some, too, of course, and I hope you'll write me about them - enough letters to fill all the space in next week's article. We already have one to start with, in a letter from Mr. J. B. Proctor about the old Cove School. Let's have yours as soon as you read this, so they'll get in in time to be printed in a future issue.

State Government's Week of Activity In Brief

Governor Honored - Gov. Wendell Ford was named "Conservation Man of the Year" at a recent convention of the Kentucky Association of Conservation Districts held at Kentucky Dam Village State Resort Park. In accepting the award, the governor said it really belongs to those "who carry out the responsibilities of conservancy in the conservation districts."

Coal Pollution Curbed - Tom Harris, commissioner of Natural Resources, announced in a recent news conference that nine of the state's coal companies will soon have spent more than 4.2 million dollars to correct their discharge problems. Harris added that negotiations with coal companies are more practical than fines because solutions are reached without risking an economic and social crisis.

Cut Household Noise Pollution with an Electric Water Heater

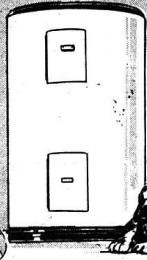

If you're about to buy an electric water heater so you can say "Good bye" to the noises of pilot lights, combustion chambers and burner units, take time to find the heater that's best suited to your family's needs.

- A GOOD WATER HEATER has both pressure and temperature relief valves. Be sure you understand the safety devices.
  - SAVE on piping and operating costs by placing the heater close to the point of greatest hot water use. Hot water left in pipes is wasted.
  - THINK about surface space. Table top models can be a real help in kitchen or laundry areas.
- Your Rural Electric system can give you several ideas on saving money and electricity, so talk to them. Remember, electricity is too good to waste.

The electric way is clean.

Restoration of Death Penalty To Be Decided

The recent murders of six Kentuckians has once again raised the long-debated question of whether any crime is so heinous that only the death penalty is sufficient punishment.

The 1974 General Assembly will be faced with the controversial issue of capital punishment as a result of recommendations made by the state Penal Code Study Commission.

The commission, created by the 1972 Legislature to review and update Kentucky's Penal Code, has suggested that a mandatory death sentence be restored for certain crimes.

Norman Lawson, a member of the study group and the Legislative Research Commission, listed the recommended capital offenses punishable only by death as follows:

- Intentional murder for profit or hire.
- Intentional murder resulting in multiple deaths.
- Intentional murder committed during an act of either arson in the first degree, armed robbery, or burglary.
- Intentional murder with the use of a destructive device, such as a bomb.
- Intentional murder of a prison guard or employee by a prisoner.
- Kidnapping, unless the victim is voluntarily released alive and substantially unharmed.
- Another offense still under consideration by the group is intentional murder in the course of forcible rape.

Although the Supreme Court ruled capital punishment unconstitutional in June, 1972, State Senator Michael R. Moloney, Lexington, chairman of the study commission, contends that the recommendations are within the law.

"The ruling that the death penalty is 'cruel and unusual punishment' refers to the discriminatory manner in which it was applied in the past," Moloney said.

The commission's proposals will not leave the choice of sentence (life imprisonment or death) up to the jury as in the past. There will be only the death sentence for those convicted of these crimes he added.

Moloney said he thinks capital punishment will be restored and that it will serve as a deterrent to serious crime.

Vice chairman of the commission, Rep. William Kenton, Lexington, asserts that "The legislature will reflect the needs of the people who are crying out for this change. Society demands a punishment with the termination of life for these heinous acts."

The death penalty has not been carried out in Kentucky since 1962, when Kelly Moss was electrocuted at the State Penitentiary at Eddyville.

There have been 162 executions in the state since the electric chair was installed at Eddyville in 1911. Of this number, 144 were given the death penalty for murder, seven for rape, six for criminal assault, and five for armed robbery. All 162 were men.

At the time of the Supreme Court ruling against capital punishment, 24 Kentucky prisoners were awaiting execution. Sixteen of the men, who had no appeals pending, were on Eddyville's Death Row.

A Corrections Department official said the men have been incorporated into the general inmate population at Eddyville, and most have had their sentences commuted to life imprisonment.

Lawson pointed out that none of the men will be affected by the new penal code if it is approved. And, no other person convicted of a capital crime will be affected if the crime was committed before July 1, 1974, the effective date of the proposed code.

Regardless of any proposals made by the states and in spite of the public outcry to the recent slayings in Kentucky, it is unlikely that anyone will be executed until the Supreme Court once again rebashes the moral and legal issues involved in the ultimate punishment.

How To Buy A Sewing Machine - A new sewing machine - deluxe with all the attachments - may cost as much as $500. This may or may not be a good investment. It depends on if you really use the machine and how often. It also depends on the type of purchase you originally made and if it suits your sewing needs. Over 500 million people are doing home sewing and this figure will probably soon increase. Selecting a sewing machine that will be useful as a long-time family investment is the most important consideration.

Some people just think that they are going to "save by sewing" so they spend "any amount" on their machine. Complicated machines with features that you may never use can prove to be a poor purchase. Of course, if you plan to learn to use the attachments (with instructions usually from the purchasing outlet) you will benefit by using all the extra knowledge and accessories.

For the novice it is important to know the four main categories of sewing machines from which to choose: straight stitch, basic zigzag, more versatile zig-zag, and most versatile zigzag. And it depends on what use you intend to make of the machine - fine tailoring, just hemstitching or whatever.

What should you consider in purchasing a machine? Perhaps you should look at an "open arm machine," which allows you to slip tubular parts of a garment - such as a sleeve, pant leg or cuff - over the arm in order to sew them more easily. A "sewing bed extension" can be provided to enlarge the sewing surface.

Test the Machine Yourself

You should investigate at least three makes of machines in order to have a basis for comparison. You will want to choose a machine at which you can sit comfortably when operating the control - one which is easy to handle and operate, and is not too noisy. The person who will use the machine should be the one to select it, even if it is intended as a gift! A well-written instruction book with many illustrations should accompany every sewing machine.

How Does It Operate?

1. Is the machine quiet, free from objectionable noise and vibration at all speeds?

2. Does it change readily from one speed to another? Does it start easily? Will it operate slowly?

3. Try the machine on some of your fabrics, stitching both straight and curved seams.

4. Do the individual stitches form a straight line?

5. Does the fabric have a tendency to drift to right or left?

6. Is the fabric easy to guide when stitching curved seams?

7. Do unlike fabrics feed under the needle at the same rate? (Sew together two pieces of fabric of different weights such as lining and a heavy outer fabric.)

8. Stitch together two pieces of like fabrics of the same length. Do they feed under the needle at the same rate?

9. Try sewing with a variety of the fabrics you'll be apt to work with - thick and thin, loosely woven, and tightly woven, leather or leather-like, fabrics, knits, a combination of fabrics.

10. Can the presser foot be easily adjusted to adapt to various weights of fabrics?

11. Is the knee or foot control comfortable to use?

12. When the bobbin is being wound, does it fill evenly?

Tips On Buying:

1. Understand the total cost. Understand all costs in addition to the retail price.

*Nothing is free. Do not be misled by proposals that you are paying only for a cabin or service charge. The machine is included in the price.

*A machine should last for a number of years. Buying from a well established manufacturer will more likely provide a continuing source of parts.

*Test the machine yourself before you buy it.

*After you have made your purchase, take time to study your instruction book and learn the proper use, otherwise you might damage the machine.

Attendance At Air Pollution Hearing Urged

A new regulation for air pollution control will be considered at a public hearing at 10 a.m., October 23, in the auditorium of the State Health Department, Frankfort.

The new proposal concerns evaluating the impact of vehicles around traffic attracting facilities such as large apartment complexes, shopping centers and sports areas.

According to the proposal, the Division of Air Pollution will evaluate the impact on the air, primarily in terms of carbon monoxide from motor vehicles.

The primary purpose of the proposal is to insure that future facilities are designed and located in a manner consistent with air quality requirements.

If a proposed facility would interfere with attainment or maintenance of ambient air quality standards, changes in the design of the project will have to be submitted to the Division of Air Pollution before construction of the facility will be permitted.

If the project cannot be made compatible with air quality requirements, it will be necessary to prevent construction of the facility.

This regulation came about as a result of a January court decision in "Natural Resources Defense Council, et al. vs. Environmental Protection Agency."

Based on this decision, EPA was required to disapprove all state air pollution control implementation plans if they did not insure the maintenance of primary air quality standards over an indefinite period of time. This proposed regulation will assure the maintenance of those air quality standards.

I urge participation at this hearing in the form of written or oral testimony.

BRITISH MUSEUM SUCCESSFUL LATER
 In an issue Nov 8, 1873, "Harper's Weekly" called the recently founded Public Library of Kentucky, "the gem of one of the great libraries of the world."
 The quarters acquired on Fourth Street in Louisville, later known as the Kaufman Straus building, permitted, according to its supporters, a library which could house one million volumes and a large museum collection of antiquities and memorabilia of the sciences. The newly employed librarian, Paul Allen Towne, after surveying the four floors containing a total of 160,000 square feet of space, boasted

The Human Side of the Library

Charles F. Hinds, State Librarian

Vernon Cooper, Hazard banker, went all out, as anyone in Perry County can tell you, to build one of the finest of the new community library centers.

But when Vernon Cooper got to the children's special area, or the second floor, many local citizens and even the librarians thought he had gone too far. The painters received instructions to mix freely, bright yellows, purples, oranges, and reds, the results of which were garish enough to give an interior decorator stomach cramps.

But, Hazel Ward, chief librarian, and the librarians discovered that when the multi-colored library shelves were installed the total effect was lively and in acceptable taste. Later, Cooper and the librarians installed a "library boat" in the middle of the reading area, and set up attractive displays of animals and dolls.

As one might expect, the heaviest use by children of the Perry County Library is in the summer. Advertised as the "Coolest Place in Town," on summer afternoons, which are often hot and humid in Eastern Kentucky, the children often relax over a brisk game of checkers. Later they can view a children's film and, perhaps, a favorite color cartoon, as well as read and check out books.

Special attention is provided for pre-schoolers, who never fail to be thrilled when Mother Goose arrives dressed in her tall, peaked hat, wire specs, and gown, to tell stories and play children's games.

A little boy named, who had read enough to feel the need for specialization, approached Mrs. Ward recently with the request for a book on the earliest Americans. Upon being shown the shelving which contained books on Indians and pilgrim fathers, he doggedly shook his head. "No," he demanded, "I don't want anything that old. I want something about people back to 1920."

Not many months before, an old man came to the Perry County Library for the first time. It happened to be one of the busiest, summer afternoons of the year and both floors were packed with children of all ages involved in both quiet and noisy activities.

The new patron was silent upon being shown around the library, but upon leaving to the librarian's relief, the old man summed up what appears to be the feelings of Perry Countians toward the new library community center.

"Mrs. Ward, this is the happiest building I have ever seen in my entire life."

abound throughout the state, with some one million acres of public land now available for hunting the various species of native and migratory birds and animals.

Kentucky's fishing is rated as good as the best. Rainbow Trout have been added to the anglers' creel. Today, through the new hatchery located below the dam at Cave Run Lake near Morehead, Walleye, Rockfish, Black Bass and Muskie are being reared and stocked in suitable waters in the state.
