Be Healthier, Wealthier, And Wiser - Grow A Home Garden

It has often been said that a home garden is worth about $600 to the average family of four. Generally speaking, a good vegetable garden will supply enough vegetables for eating fresh and for preservation for the winter months. Fresh, nutritious vegetables contain all the necessary vitamins and minerals for good health.

Home gardens come in many shapes, sizes, and places. They may range in size from mini gardens such as window boxes, patios, or flower beds - or in areas up to an acre. Enough vegetables to supply the needs of an individual can be produced on an area of 1,000 square feet.

Gardens should be located in the most convenient place for ease of gathering and preparation of vegetables for eating and preserving.

With proper management, the garden should provide vegetables throughout the growing season. Gardening should start with cool season crops for early spring and advance to warm season crops for late spring into summer, and then back to cool season crops for the fall months.

It may be a wise decision to grow a vegetable garden this year to help cut down on the cost of food for your family.

If you decide to grow a garden, may we suggest that you contact your local County Extension Agent and discuss your plans with him. He will have a supply of good garden information which he will gladly share with you.

Most Farmers Must File Income Tax Returns By March 1st -

As has been the case in past years, most Kentucky farmers will be filing their income tax returns on or before March 1. Although April 15, 1974 is the date by which most individuals are required to file their returns, there are special rules which apply to farmers. That is pointed out by Stephen Q. Allen, Extension Farm Management Specialist with the University of Kentucky.

Who is a farmer under the income tax laws? "You are a farmer for tax purposes if at least two-thirds of your gross income is from the business of farming," Allen explains. "The UK Specialist says gross income from farming includes income received in the form of crop shares from land which was rented. Total gains from the sales of draft, dairy, breeding or sporting livestock are considered farm income, but not the gains from sales of farm land and depreciable farm equipment."

Allen points out that if you file a joint return with your wife, her gross income must be added to yours to determine if at least two-thirds of the total gross is from the business of farming.

Those who qualify as farmers should file their returns starting January 1, 1973 must file their 1973 tax return and pay any tax due on or before March 1, 1974. The only exceptions are for those who filed an estimate on their total tax and paid that amount by January 15. Those who filed the estimate must file their returns by April 15.

If your farm business year started at a date other than January 1, 1973, the same general rules apply, but the filing dates are different. You may either file your return and pay any tax due on or before the first day of the third month following the end of your business year; or you may file an estimate and pay that amount by the fifteenth day of the first month after the end of your business year. If you file the estimate, you must then file your tax return by the fifteenth day of the fourth month after the end of your business year.

Your best chance to save energy and money is through improved insulation.

Insulation keeps your home warmer in winter and cooler in summer. So insulation cuts down on the amount of energy used, the cost of heating and cooling, and probably the cost of repairs since your equipment doesn't have to work as hard or as long.

When you put your money in insulation, you are investing... not spending!

In pioneer days an important consideration for locating a new settlement was the availability of good drinking water and preference was always given to a site which contained an everlasting spring easy of access. Locations along flowing streams big enough to turn a grist mill or saw mill, or larger streams suitable for navigation, were of prime importance for many, but good drinking water was a necessity for all, regardless of their commercial interest. Sometimes the springs were important enough to give the place a name. An early history of landmarks and settlements in Kentucky names thirty seven early locations bearing the name of the spring around which they were built.

It has been said that one of the principal attractions causing early pioneers to settle around what is now Mt. Vernon was the never-failing stream of clear cold water gushing forth in what was later named Spout Springs. Many years later, in my own boyhood, Spout Springs was a principal gathering place for farmers making their weekly Saturday visit to town. We hitched our horses under the big trees shading the surrounding community and ate our snack of cheese, crackers and bologna on the big flat rock under which the spring gushed forth.

My grandfather Lair, who arrived at Mt. Vernon in 1840, told me that the only business then being conducted in town was the tannery operated by Reverend James McCall. It was located in the valley between our present cemetery and old Spout Springs and it was so placed in order that the water could be used to fill and refill the tanning vats, which were large shallow ponds, evidence of which were still discernable many years later. Remembering this in recent years has solved a perplexing mystery for me. I had always known that tannic acid developed in tanning leather would eat away and destroy wooden containers, and had understood that tanning vats had been made by hollowing out big stone troughs. I had visited the site of some of the old tanneries in the county and had never found such stone troughs. I couldn't understand what had become of them. Certainly they had not worn out or been carried away, so where were they? The fact of the matter, as I later learned, was that ponds had been dug, filled with water to which tanbark had been added and the hides treated in them. This may not have produced the finest grade of tanned leather, but it apparently served the needs of local tanners and certainly at less expense than the laborous process of hollowing out big stone troughs.

Although Old Spout Springs has lost all its glory and about all its usefulness, it still goes mostly unnoticed. The whole town could depend on it as it once did. The last notable use to which it was put was in the early nineteen hundreds when it furnished water for Mt. Vernon's first public swimming pool. Millwheels which it might once have turned to set in motion grist mills and carding mills of earlier industry, have long since gone back to dust but the power that turned them is still there, ready for use again if our economy retrogrades to the point where we once again need to become independent of artificial sources of energy.

Of course, there are other big springs in Rockcastle County of more than local interest, but unfortunately I have never visited some of them or learned much of their history. I am familiar with Boone Cave Springs, near Great Saltpetre Cave, and have often been told by some of the older residents of the community that they had been told by their parents, or grandparents, that the name D. Boone and the date 1769 had once been visible on the face of the limestone cliff above them, but that time and weather had eroded them away. Boone's name here, as is true of his signature inside Great Saltpetre Cave itself, had apparently been scratched on with the point of a hunting knife, as he probably did not carry tools with which the name could have been cut in solid rock.

I remember the big spring on the old Sigmon place, near Green Hill, that formerly turned the big wheel of a water grist mill erected by Solomon Griffin, and which in my time was of much interest to the many of us who used to try to figure out how the ram which Sigmon had installed could force water up to the house which stood on a hill some distance from the cave from which this stream issued. I also knew about the Jim Moore Spring, which also furnished power to an old grist mill and in more recent years furnished water to the town of Brodhead by the force of simple gravity. I am also familiar with the spring on Cove Branch which the D.A.R. marked in 1916 as a camping place of the Boone road cutters while laying out Boone's path to the Kentucky River, the site, in 1775, of Boonesborough, in the opinion of many historians the first permanent settlement in Kentucky, rather than Harrodsburg where a cluster of cabins had been erected the year previous, but soon abandoned on account of danger from the Indians and not re-occupied until some months later.

One spring, located somewhere between Mt. Vernon and Somerset, I believe, is of special interest and I would like to locate it and learn more about it. I do not know its local name but learned about it several years ago from Howard Hardaway, whom some of you will remember as The Walking Reporter. His articles, describing places of interest in Kentucky which had visited, presumably afoot, were then a regular feature of the Louisville Courier-Journal. He often visited Renfro Valley and frequently told me of his discoveries. He told me of a spring, or sort of well, somewhere in the area above referred to, where the water ebbed and flowed with the ocean tides. He said that he had first been doubtful of reports he heard concerning this phenomenon and had, in company with a group of Boy Scouts from Louisville, camped on the spot for several days and conducted around-the-clock tests which verified the claims made for this spring. He said they had obtained a time schedule of tidal movements from a government source located on the seacoast with which to compare the rise and fall of the water in this spring with the ebb and flow of the ocean tides and that there could be no doubt but that they coincided. Has some reader of the Signal heard this story and can they tell me the location of this spring? It would certainly be worth noticing in the history of Rockcastle County which I am trying to write.

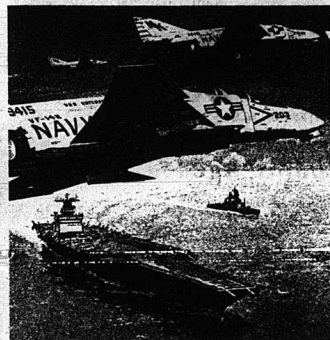

What do you know about other big or noted springs in the county? Their names, location, history, etc?

Down On The Farm

By: Roy G. Brown
Assistant Vice President
Cumberland PCA

During the next five years, farming will become more and more specialized. We will need to do a better job of management and to know what every acre is capable of producing, taking notice of the lime and fertilizer needed according to the crop to be produced.

The highest producing beef, swine, and dairy animal is a must. No longer can we afford to feed a low producing animal. We cannot increase our income by the number of livestock alone, but by above average production. We must be ready to get the job done at the right time in the right way.

There are many things farmers can do during bad weather. Checking over farm machinery for needed repairs, buying or contracting suppliers about seed, fertilizer, and any other needed items. These things are very important to the farmer, but are often "put-off" until they are needed and then it is a mad rush to get them done. The way the fertilizer program looks, people waiting until the last minute, may be left "holding the bag."

Keeping good accurate records is a must for the farmer. This lets him compare one year with another; and by doing this, he is able to tell from one year to the next if he has had a profit or a loss.

Farmer friend, how about a closer look at the job we are doing "Down on the Farm."

Ramblings

by: perlina m. anderkin

"Decided to ramble a little this week since I took a small vacation last week. Actually, I was so caught up in the effect the truckers' strike was having locally, that I couldn't seem to realize there was anything else going on or to do until it seemed to be all over Wednesday. It's kind of frightening to realize what one industry such as the truckers' can do to remember the sanitary (?) facilities used once upon a time and the mail-order catalogues that were put to use then - toilet paper isn't all that essential, right?.....

One of the most popular television shows around our house these days is "Happy Days," a series concerning teenagers of the 50's. Of course, I enjoy the show because the songs that are played in it bring back fond memories of my own teenage years of the 50's (the latter 50's of course). But, I was thoroughly amazed at the reaction of all my children. They really enjoy it and make a concentrated effort not to miss an episode! Of course, the snide remarks still sneak out once in a while. My ten-year-old daughter wanted to know one night why I didn't like mid-dresses of her size, if I were a teen-ager in the 50's, that was all we wore with bobby socks even. The child doesn't understand, of course, that as teen-agers of that era, we had to yet been seized upon and brainwashed when if we didn't begin dating at 12, we were social failures, and I think our parents were a little more concerned that the girls act as much like ladies as possible. I can very well recall my first attempt at wearing make-up when I was 14 or so and my mother ordering me back to the bathroom to clean my face - Of course, I gave battle but the fight was won abruptly when my dad, whom I never recall laying a hand on me or even raising his voice to me, suggested that he would prefer make-up when I was 14 or so and pancake make-up yet. At least I didn't have the same problem an older sister did. Margaret was ten years my senior and when she began dating around 16, my parents decided that she and her date couldn't possibly mind taking me (age 6) and mean as a rattle) with them. The standard procedure on one of these trips was for us to leave the house and walk to the movies at the door of which my sister's date would hand me my ticket and about 50 cents and say "See you after the show, kid." I didn't argue and I didn't tell on them, either, after all with the 30 cents my parents had given me to get in and buy popcorn and coke with I came out way ahead in the deal. After my sister married and had her first child (who was ten years my junior) she often threatened to make me take Patty with me on my dates, but Thank Heavens, it was always an idle threat.....

We have been bitten by the camping bug and will probably try it out for the first time this Spring. Now, mind you, I do this somewhat reluctantly since my husband and I have completely different ideas as to what you do with children around water or in the woods. I think the most practical thing in the woods is to hand them a compass and turn them loose and around water, I think an investment in a good life jacket ought to be trusted. We will probably make one of the islands on Cherokee Lake in Tennessee our first objective (if we can afford to buy the equipment and pay our taxes, too, that is).

Now, I can remember my Dad always putting up an argument against my going swimming because he didn't think I could swim - but it was a mild argument to what I have heard my husband put to our children getting their toes wet with an expensive life jacket belted securely around them. Furthermore, he usually manages to make mine and the children's lives miserable because he constantly eagle eyes them to be sure they stray no further than four feet from him at any given time. Of course, he usually manipulates me to where I have to back him up in keeping them in line but, one of these days I might decide not to cooperate and he wouldn't have a chance against the five of them. There must be a happy medium somewhere between my "They can take care of themselves" attitude and Jim's - but in 14 years we have never found it. I do look forward to trying it, though, except I realize right now that I am probably not the type to "rough" it at all. Don't worry, I'll let you know what happens, if and when.....

After long and tedious research, in which I have had a helping hand from Charles C. Carter, Jimmy Lambert, Money Ed Cummins and others, I can now, with a single exception - list the names of every county judge, sheriff, county attorney, jailor, circuit court and county clerk who has served this county from 1872 until the present, covering a period of 102 years. This single exception is the name of the man who was jailor under Judge L. W. Bethurum from 1910 to 1914. T. J. Nicely was sheriff, S. D. Lewis was county attorney, Jas. F. Griffin was circuit court clerk, S. F. Bowman was county court clerk. Who was jailor????

It has been called to my attention that in this series of articles, under date of February third, I mentioned finding the grave of Jesse Williams who was born in 1850 and asked if anyone knew of a gravestone bearing an earlier birthdate. Actually, Williams was born in 1750 instead of 1850, as stated in the Signal. Somebody made a mistake and it might well have been me.

Incidentally, in listing county officers I have included only the county judge, sheriff, county attorney, jailor and clerks of both circuit and county courts. I have been unable to find and prepare a list of Tax Commissioners and Surveyors. Naturally, I could not include the names of all magistrates and deputy clerks, sheriffs, jailors, etc. as the list would be far too long for the space allotted to County Officials.

SCHOOLS TO RELY ON COAL IN CRISIS
 By Mary Huntwork
 Two state agencies are urging Kentucky schools to convert to coal-fired heating systems.

Both the Kentucky Department for Education and the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection have recommended that all schools now using natural gas or oil consider building standby coal furnaces.

The main reason behind the push for coal use is the abundance of this fuel in the state.

According to Birney Fish, executive assistant to Thomas O. Harris of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, Kentucky is the nation's number one coal producer.

Fish termed Kentucky's supply of coal "secure for the present."

In contrast, several fuel oil and natural gas companies have already warned that they may have to discontinue service to certain schools.

Arnold Guess, of the Department of Education, stated that these warnings are
 "typical of the difficulties which will arise with increasing frequency throughout the state."

Schools are low on the priority list for allocation of scarce fuels, following agriculture, manufacturing, heating in homes and hospitals and production and transport of fuel.

 Conversion to coal "seems the short-term, or even the long-term solution to the school heating problem," Guess said.
 Ironically, Kentucky schools have made a concerted effort over the past four or five years to get rid of all coal-burning equipment.
 Buildings and Grounds Director T.O. Thompson said that "relatively few schools among the worst offenders schools that burned coal were pollution-control officials had to deal with." Fish said "inefficient burning was really Fish termed the rejection of coal as a "dirty" fuel "narrowness of thinking."

Coaching Girls' Basketball....

By: Preston Parrett
Elementary Athletic Director

Coaching girls' basketball is probably one of the most satisfying, yet frustrating, tasks ever encountered by the elementary coaches. The coaches, having dealt with boys who over a period of playing years have picked up the terminology of the sport, have been confronted by blank stares from the girls when such terms as offense, defense, screen, block, pick and roll, rebound, player position, set-up, one-on-one, and other such terms are used.

The rules of the game, fundamental skills, and terminology have to be taught from scratch. It's a whole new ball game for coaches as well as the girls. Yet, the county girls, through boundless enthusiasm, have progressed tremendously in a very short time. Personally, I have found that girls are very hard and willing workers and want to improve their knowledge and playing skills. In our Saturday practice, the girls are asked to be at the gym at 12:00; yet many arrive by 11:30 to practice their shooting and when their practice session ends at 2:00, they're still going strong. In fact, I sometimes have to threaten to cancel their games to get them off the floor so another group can have their turn.

Some of the problems encountered have been temporary flare-ups, lack of teamwork (due to inexperience), pierced ears with dangling ear rings, and slippery gym shoes. Gym shoes for girls are not designed for quick stops. So far, I have made little progress in getting the girls to cut their hair like mine, but they are trying it back out of their eyes.

Taking everything into consideration, it has been a very rewarding and satisfying experience to coach and see the girls get an opportunity to play, and I wish to thank the principals, coaches, fans, and the Signal for their support of the program.

I would like to personally and publicly thank the members of the school board, Dr. Burdette, Mr. Adams, Mrs. Mason, Mr. Taylor, Mr. Burdine, and Superintendent Parsons for their far-sighted and wholehearted approval of girls' basketball. So many times we are prone to criticize our public officials; yet never take the time to thank or praise them for many worthwhile accomplishments. So on behalf of the girls and myself, a hearty thanks to each of you.

GARY EARL KIDWELL has been named a regional winner in the 1973 Future Farmers of America Contest sponsored by The Courier-Journal and The Louisville Times. Kidwell, 17, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Kidwell, Route 3, Crab Orchard, and is a senior at Rockcastle County High School.

District Highway Engineer E. V. Hilton today announced that on February 11, the Bureau of Highways started placing the new 55 Miles Per Hour speed limit signs on Interstate Highways and Parkways.

The 55 M.P.H. speed limit signs will be placed on other state maintained highways before March 1, 1974. This is in conformity with the new state statute signed by Governor

Ambulance Service Prompts Special Meeting of Fiscal Court

The controversy over financial assistance for the ambulance service in the county was brought to a Wednesday meeting in County Judge Hubert Thacker's office with John Grider, Captain of the Ambulance Service; Larry Burtis, City Defense Director for Rockcastle County and other representatives of the ambulance service.

Mr. Burdette and Mr. Grider told the Signal after the meeting that Judge Thacker had been informed that, if financial assistance from Fiscal Court were not forthcoming within the next week, ambulance service to residents of the county would be terminated effective next Wednesday, February 20.

Mr. Burdette, Mr. Grider, Floyd Caldwell, CD Deputy Director and Wayne Berry, Burtis CD Co-ordinator met with Fiscal Court at their meeting Tuesday, February 5 and asked to be aided financially to the sum of $2,000 monthly at least

CRRC STOCKHOLDERS TO MEET FEBRUARY 16TH

Stockholders of the Cedar Rapids Recreation Center will meet this Saturday night at the clubhouse for their annual meeting.

A potluck supper will begin at 6:30 p.m., followed by the meeting at 7:00.

At a recent meeting of governing representatives of government agencies including FHA and members of the Board of Directors of the Club, the Club was commended for its management of the past year which enabled it to meet its financial obligations for the year almost one hundred percent.

All members are urged to attend Saturday night's meeting at which time there will be an election of four new directors to the Board.

SAVE YOUR NEWSPAPERS.

Save your old newspapers, say the Royal Ambassadors of Northside Baptist Church. The R.A.'s are collecting old newspapers to resell to raise money to buy uniforms and, besides raising money, the newspapers are recycled and used again to help keep the cost of paper down.

The R.A.'s have set Friday, March 1st, as the first "collection day" and ask anyone who can save their newspapers and call Harvey Pender, pastor, or the R.A. leaders, Phil Singleton, Robb Kendrick, Jerry Penn, Steve Weaver or Floyd Owens.

Wendell H. Ford on February 6th. This measure brings Kentucky into compliance with Federal Law.

The new Law creating a 55 M.P.H. speed limit becomes effective March 1, 1974.

District Engineer Hilton stated that the work is being accomplished by the local traffic crews of the Bureau of Highways in various counties of District Eight.

Midget Tourney Is Set For February 19-21

The Annual Midget Tournament sponsored by the Livingston Lions Club will be held in the Livingston Gym on Tuesday, February 19, and Thursday, February 21. The midgets are fifth and sixth graders from the four elementary schools.

In Tuesday night action, Livingston will play Roundhead and Mt. Vernon about 8:00. On Thursday night, the consolation game will be at 6:30 followed by the championship game at 8:00. Four trophies shall be awarded.

participate. Preceding each main game, the fifth grade teams will play four two-minute quarters; however, no trophies will be awarded. This opportunity gives our fifth graders valuable game experience before a large crowd.

The admission price is $4.75 for students and $1.00 for adults.

until the end of the current Fiscal Year (which ends June 30, 1974) at which time Fiscal Court could set up funds for the service in the county budget.

The men were given no definite answer by the Court other than the promise that they (Fiscal Court) would try and work something out within the next week, although the county actually had no funds with which to help the service.

Wednesday, Mr. Burdette said that Judge Thacker reported that nothing definite had been done toward finding funds for the ambulance service but that there would be a special meeting of the Fiscal Court called for Friday morning, February 16, to discuss the situation further.

Mr. Burdette also said that since the February 5th meeting of Fiscal Court when members were told that it would take at least $2,000 a month to finance the service, further investigation into expenses and receipts now indicate that no less than $2,300 per month will be needed from now until June 30th and $3,000 per month set up in the new budget for fiscal year 1974-75.

A financial report for the month of January was submitted to Judge Thacker by Mr. Burdette which showed total income to the ambulance service of $1,938.00 and disbursements of $3,401.45. Mr. Burdette said that the difference of $1,463.45 was paid from funds which had originally been allocated to another County Civil Defense program.

A breakdown of the financial report is as follows: Income, $1,938.00; Expenses Equipment, parts, etc. $644.63; First aid supplies, $19.23; Gasoline, $181.10; Insurance Expense, $1,399.00 (the major portion of the year premium of around $1,500.00); License and the fees, $216.00; Miscellaneous, $123.07; Telephone, $41.07; Ambulance payments, $757.15; Bookkeeping and Office Supplies, $12.00 and Advertising, $5.60. Mr. Burdette said that this report did not include approximately $1,200.00 in expenses on which payment was not paid because of lack of funds.

Mr. Burdette also mentioned that he had been informed that in nearby Boyle County (Danville), the Rescue Squad is allotted $6,900 quarterly by their Fiscal Court for an independent ambulance service; the fee to those using

Frankfort Watchline

There's been a little-noticed pattern developing this session of the General Assembly. It's the formulation of a new role for the diminished Republican minority in both houses.

With but twenty of the one hundred House members and just nine of thirty-eight senators what does a lonely GOP lawmaker do to get their attention or at least keep from being run over by the majority stampede?

Well, he continues to protest and rail against the establishment... that would be the Democratic administration and his majority colleagues. But there's something else, too.

That new element could be labeled the Republican battle plan for '74 as GOP lawmakers appear to be taking the public's side against the special interests. Some would raise their eyebrows and indeed agree that's new.

Normally, the GOP is associated with the conservatives, usually the business element, rock-ribbed and steadfast against change.

But hold on there. Who's introducing the bill that would undo the infamous "broader" deed under which stripmining has flourished for so many years? Why, Casey County Republican Ray Overstreet, of course.

Who denounced the deep-well drilling bill as an affront to the independence of the little property owner and tagged it the broad form deed of the oil industry? None other than House Minority Leader Harold DeMarcus of Stanford.

There's Lexington House Republican Larry Hopkins and his campaign-raising over the deposits of state money in banks where state officials have interests. And what about Lexington Senator Joe Graves pushing for various financial disclosure and election reforms.

Now, we can't put labels on the motives of these new Republican "radicals" can we? Are they generally sincere about public interest causes? We think so. Are they making political hay? Why not? Are they trying to be obstructionists? Maybe.

But we're sure their reasons are neither ideologically pure nor, at the other end of the spectrum, totally self-serving.

One thing that is being accomplished is that the few Republicans there are in the 1974 Kentucky Legislature are being noticed. And that's important, not only for them, but for Kentucky.

We can't forget they're outnumbered four-to-one in one house and three-to-one in the other. What does that say to you about the two-party system.

We think a healthy situation has arisen that shows the flexibility of the Republicans and might help to change an image that's hurt them in these dog days of Watergate and whatnot.

No-Show - At a legislative session on state government reorganization the other day, there was some whispering among the lawmakers that they'd like to hear from some of the affected state workers.

"Fun chance," said Old Spring Republican Art Schmidt, doubting that even one of the thirty thousand state workers would show to criticize the master plan.

He was right, although anyone stumbling through the state office complexes in even a semi-conscious state is aware of a good deal of apprehension by state employees about their job status.

OOPS - In a prepared statement, a lawmaker the other day, defending Finance Secretary Charles Fryor against legislation aimed at his interest in banks where state money is lodged, made a boo-boo.

We're sure he meant to say that the Number Two man on the Wendell Ford team is "conscientious." But here's what he wrote:

"The man to which this bill is aimed is safe, conscientious and dedicated. To which we're sure Secretary Fryor would murmur 'Thanks a lot.'"

OOPS Again - A lawmaker recently reacted negatively to the House anti-busing resolution and while reading a statement referred to "white school districts" although the text read "ily white school districts."

Asked why the omission, the legislator replied, "Oh, I didn't want to appear to be a bigamist."

One More Time - That malaprop reminds us of this one: One of our TV news colleagues on a station seen here in Frankfort was kept busy sometime ago preparing bulletins on a rash of horse barn fires in the Lexington area.

One night the harried newsman broke into regular programming with something like this: "Another Fayette County barn is burning. Police suspect arsenic."

REP. HAROLD DeMARCUS, R-Stanford, shown here during a quiet moment of the Kentucky General Assembly, recently criticized Gov. Ford's proposed $4.4 budget. DeMarcus, who is House minority floor leader, said he would prefer tax relief and more money for public education to the proposed capital construction projects.

REP. DeMARCUS WOULD PREFER TAX RELIEF IN BUDGET.....

Rep. Harold DeMarcus, R-Stanford, would prefer to see some tax relief in Gov. Ford's proposed budget, he said in a recent interview.

The Governor has submitted to the General Assembly a $4.4 billion spending plan for the next two years, using $200 million in surplus revenue-sharing funds and an $80 million state surplus, DeMarcus noted. And the veteran legislator, who is currently serving as House Republican floor leader, said he disagrees with the Governor's priorities on the spending of this money.

The people of Kentucky pay the highest gasoline tax and one of the highest sales taxes in the nation," he said.

And if taxes couldn't be lowered, he added, the extra money should go to elementary and secondary education programs.

DeMarcus said the greatest bulk of the budget goes to capital construction projects. "He has proposed most of the construction in three urban areas (Louisville, Lexington and Northern Kentucky) which have the most wealth already.

And he added, "I cannot see the point of building buildings when the people are crying out for education and roads."

DeMarcus said the merits of the new budget format - listed by programs rather than agencies - remain to be seen. "We won't know its effectiveness for two years. We'll look at it then and see what it's accomplished."

The representative is a member of the House Appropriations and Revenue Committee which, in joint hearings with the comparable Senate committee, is currently studying the proposals listed in the executive budget. DeMarcus said he expects a completion of the budget review within the next couple of weeks.
