use of computers for storage and retrieval of the large amount of information being handled. But few of these agencies use computers to the extent that the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection's Div. of Air Pollution does. A system for handling information and technical data generated by this division was developed initially under a contract with Spindeltop Research in 1970. The original system has been modified on several occasions to meet changing federal requirements. Currently the system is being used not only for storage and retrieval of information relating to air contaminant sources, but also in management of personnel, setting division priorities and judging agency progress. Not all information gathered by the air pollution office is stored in the computer files. Some information such as plans, memorandums, and large amounts of technical data are stored in manual files, with an index stored in the system to allow for ease in manual retrieval. Here are some of the ways that computers are indirectly aiding in providing a clean environment: -Continuous monitoring of 2,300 air pollution permit applications, which have been received by the Agency. -The listings of facilities which are required to meet certain criteria in the burning of fuel oil and especially the impact of their reliance on secondary fuels made necessary because of the energy crisis. -A schedule of facilities to be inspected by field personnel each month. -Mailing labels and records of mass mailings to selected groups of air contaminant sources. -Periodic reports on air quality based on readings from the air monitoring network. -A monthly, quarterly, and annual report of engineering staff activities including the tons per year of emissions reduced and associated control costs as a result of the air pollution permit system.

Most state agencies make

In summary, the use of computers in the Division of Air Pollution is a vital and necessary process. Many times we overlook the importance of these silent partners, with their whirring tapes and blinking lights. But our agency is very dependent on this—highly technological machinery and we are proud to be able to attribute some of our environmental accomplishments to these automated miracles. ***** Prevention is the best medicine. ## THE TERRIBLE HARPESES...

The infamous brothers, Micajah and Wiley Harpe, whose inhuman acts of violence spread throughout Kentucky during 1798 and 1799 were in what is now Rockcastle County for only a short time, yet long enough to commit one known murder and hide the body of their victim behind a log only a few steps from the Wilderness Trail, partly covering it with brush and leaves.

On the night of December twelfth, 1798, John Farris, who kept a tavern along the road near the crossing of Rockcastle River, alerted by the furious barking of his watchful pack of bear dogs, cautiously opened his door to a party of travellers seeking shelter or refreshment. In the dim light from the open doorway a well-dressed man on a good horse was discernible in the forefront of the group, while in the shadows behind him appeared two men and three women, on foot and leading two indifferent looking pack horses carrying their few possessions.

The man on horseback engaged lodgings for the night and Farris' pack boy led his way to a log stable back of the tavern. Whether or not the party of five slept on the tavern floor or camped out in the woods, as was their custom, is not known, but when breakfast was on the table next morning they declined sitting down to eat, stating that they had no money. This seems unlikely, as only a few days before they had killed and robbed, near the Cumberland River, a peddler named Peyton, and later two travellers, named Peca and Bayes, from Maryland, who had been carrying some money. Furthermore, Jane Farris, wife of John Farris' son, William, testified at the examining trial at Stanford that they had paid for a bottle of whiskey while at the tavern.

At any rate, their mounted companion had offered to pay for their breakfast himself, an offer of which they were quick to take advantage. At the completion of the meal he paid the bill from a well-filled purse and carelessly - or boastfully - stated in their presence that the contents of the saddlebags he carried were worth five hundred pounds.

Around a blazing log fire the night previous, Farris had followed a custom common with tavern keepers in isolated spots and had eagerly questioned his guest for news of what went on "beyond the mountains." Early in the conversation he had learned that the young man's name was Thomas Langford and recalled having been acquainted with him as a boy back in Pittsylvania County, Virginia. Langford further stated that he was making the trip from Pittsylvania to Kentucky for the purpose of visiting relatives (no doubt including the Stephen Langford who was then keeping tavern within the present confines of this county) and intended going on to the Crab Orchard, where he had some idea of settling down. He added that for the first five days out of Pittsylvania he had been accompanied by a companion by the name of David Irby to the neighborhood of the Wolf Trap, where they had parted company after arranging to meet later at Frankfort, Kentucky. Again according to the testimony of Jane Farris, young Langford showed some signs of intoxication and had talked freely.

There may have been some speculation among the Farris family as to why Langford might have been travelling with such a disreputable looking group; but since the dangers of the trail were still many in spite of the recent cessation of Indian troubles, any travelling companions through the Wilderness were preferable to none. As they watched them disappear in the direction of the river they could not have imagined under what circumstances they would again be meeting with them.

Several days later a party of drovers were taking a herd of cattle from the interior of Kentucky to the Virginia Market, when near the Rockcastle River the leaders suddenly became frightened and left the road, stampeding the whole herd. While scouring through the woods to bring them together again, one of the drovers started investigating the cause of their fright and came upon the corpse previously mentioned. Since they concluded that the scent of blood had thrown the cattle into a panic they hurriedly gathered them up and pushed them on to get them out of the vicinity as quickly as possible, stopping at Farris' tavern to report their gruesome find.

Somehow word was gotten to Stanford and the Lincoln County coroner held an inquest over the body and it was buried near where it was found.

News of the finding of the body soon spread and young Irby, suspecting that the murdered man might have been Thomas Langford, who had failed to keep his appointment to meet him in Frankfort, secured from the coroner of Lincoln County an order to disinter the body and in company with Abraham Anthony, who had buried it, and John Farris, who had also suspected that the slain man might have been Thomas Langford, they opened the shallow grave and made positive identification of the body as that of young Langford.

In the meantime a great hue and cry had been raised after the five suspects and on the twentieth of December a posse headed by Joseph Ballenger, a merchant of Stanford, Kentucky, captured the Harpes and placed them in the Stanford jail to await examining trial, after which they were transferred to the Danville jail to await action by the Courts.

After the escape of the two men from the Danville jail, under somewhat suspicious circumstances, the women were released and, each with a new-born baby, soon rejoined the men, after which the Harpes went on a rampage of senseless killings that threw the whole state into turmoil. Lynch parties were formed, posses organized and Governor Garrard authorized Ballenger to pursue them even across state lines if necessary. Henry Stagg, famous among Kentucky "Long Hunters," urged that his hunting dogs be used in the chase and visited a log rolling and tried to organize a hunting party from the men assembled there, but without success. He went later to the home of Colonel Daniel Trabue, who lived near what is now Columbia, Kentucky, and while they were discussing plans for capturing the Harpes Colonel Trabue's son, John, was being butchered by these fiends incarnate who cut his body to pieces and threw them into a sinkhole, having met him returning from the home of a nearby neighbor by a pathway through the woods.

The Harpes continued constantly on the move and during 1799 and before the death of Micajah, or "Big Harpe" in August of that year had covered considerable territory, including a short stay at Cave-in-Rock, a famous rendezvous of desperate outlaws of the day, but even these dissolute characters could not quite stomach their acts of depravity and drove them away. Much of their activity was confined to western Kentucky and, although they are known to have killed thirty-four people, including one of their own children, there were undoubtedly more victims whose names were never known and they were preparing to kill a man named Smith when they were overtaken by the posse searching for them. This man, by the way, was a brother of Raceoon John Smith, famous early frontier preacher who once held services, as mentioned elsewhere, in Boone's Fork church house at what is now Brodhead, Kentucky.

The Harpe Brothers, posing as Methodist ministers, took supper one night in the home of James Thompson; and during the meal, Thompson happened to mention that his supply of gunpowder had been exhausted. Micajah Harpe poured out a quantity from his own powder horn and gave it to him. A few days later a bullet sped by this same powder was the one that wounded Harpe and made possible his capture and death.

After leaving the Thompson home the Harpes went on until they came to the home of Moses Sigall, who happened to be absent for the night. Major William Love, a surveyor who had come to see Sigall on business was spending the night there awaiting his return. The Harpes killed him, together with Sigall's wife and baby, then set fire to the house and rode on.

Soon a posse of determined citizens were on the trail of the murderers and they came up with them just as they were preparing to kill Smith as stated. They immediately took to flight. Wiley Harpe escaped but the vengeance pursued Micajah. After a long chase a member of the posse by name of Leiper, using the loaded rifle loaned him by Thompson, fired the shot which paralyzed Harpe, after which he was dragged from his horse and laid on the ground awaiting for other members of the pursuing party, who had been outdistanced, to arrive. Among them was Moses Sigall, who proceeded immediately to end the outlaw's career, severing his head from his body with a butcher knife. Upon the arrival of the rest of the party the head was taken to the cross-roads, near Robertson's Lick, and deposited in the forks of a tree, where it remained for many years, the spot being still known as Harpe's head. According to a history of Muhlenberg County, Harpe was killed two miles west of Unity Baptist Church, his head later being carried several miles and deposited in the tree as noted.

According to Tom O'Mara of Mt. Vernon, it was a tradition in the Sigall family, with which he was connected, that Moses Sigall was with a party of hunters the night his family was murdered and during the night awoke from a dream that something was wrong at home. So real was the dream that he proposed getting up and going home, but was talked out of it by his companions. Upon going back to sleep he had the same dream again and this time did set out on the return journey, arriving to find his house in ashes and his wife and baby murdered. Members of the Sigall family, by the way, at some time or other took up a vast tract of land in the vicinity of Brodhead, which was first called Sigall's Station until the coming of the railroad brought about the change to its present name.

Down On The Farm

DOWN ON THE FARM! TOP the past few years and more than ever now, we as farmers have had to combat a few small groups of Environmentalists, Ecologists, and so called Conservationists.

Many members in Congress and persons in high government places have done what they wished and have hindered the progress of America. Part of the "Energy Crisis" today is due to a lack of foresight on their part. A few things stand out. For instance, the Alaskan Oil Pipe Line and the conserving of water by constructing lakes for electric power, recreation and water use.

They have taken off the market many insecticides which are essential in the production of food and clothing for the millions of people.

I believe in conservation and protecting our natural resources and have worked hard for that cause many years, and I will continue to work to conserve and improve our land, forests and other resources.

Equipment Savings - The Kentucky Department of Transportation has reported savings of approximately $75,000 during the past year on major equipment repairs. Jim Claxton, assistant director of the Division of Equipment, said the savings resulted from a change in warranty procedures. The division now stipulates the terms of warranties - usually two years or 2,000 hours of operation - before buying the equipment. The previous policy had been to accept manufacturers' standard warranties.

Several Break-Ins Reported During Past Week

A rash of break-ins during the past week in and near Mt. Vernon are under investigation by Sheriff Manuel Sheard and State Police detectives.

Early Thursday morning, February 21, thieves entered Young's Pharmacy on U.S. 25 in Mt. Vernon and made off with a large quantity of drugs and damaged a refrigerator and drug cabinet. About one-half of the stolen drugs were later recovered near Sparks Quarry on Burr Hill after a motorist spied them lying alongside the road. Entry was gained to the Pharmacy by breaking out the glass front door.

The same morning, several banjos and guitars were also taken from Sanitary Cleaners in Mt. Vernon and thieves also attempted to gain entry to Maggard Drug Store on Main Street.

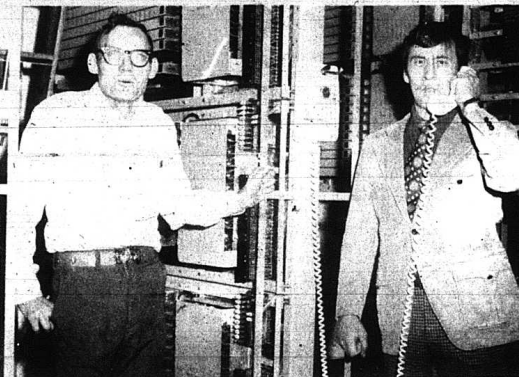

Vanant Service Station at Burr was entered twice in five days when thieves gained entry to the station, through a rear door both times. Early last Wednesday morning, February 20th, and early Sunday morning, February 24th, thieves entered the station and made off with cigarettes, stereo tapes, gloves, etc.

Then, early Tuesday morning, merchandise valued at between $800 and $1,000 was taken from Clayton Hammond's Supermarket on Highway 461 when thieves entered the store by prying open a back door and knocking over a watchdog on the premises. Mr. Hammond told Sheriff Shepherd that several items were taken including hams, toilet articles, cigarettes, and men and women's wearing apparel.

No arrests have been made in connection with the burglaries. *****

Rockcastle Residents Figure In Rehabilitation Budget

"Ability, not disability, counts," expresses the philosophy of the Bureau of Rehabilitation Services in the Department of Education. The Bureau provides a combination of services that are needed to develop or improve the skills and abilities of the handicapped to become self-supporting workers.

Approximately $1.7 million has been recommended by the Governor in his budget to continue the program for the 1974-75 fiscal year.

So far a total of 309 handicapped individuals in Rockcastle County benefited from the services rendered by the Vocational Rehabilitation program. Eighty-two of the 309 disabled individuals in the county completed the rehabilitation program in 1973. The remaining 227 are presently in various stages of the program.

The Bureau of Rehabilitation Services provides diagnostic and evaluative services to each handicapped individual in order to determine eligibility for services under vocational rehabilitation.

Training and education services, including prevocational, vocational, academic training, personal adjustment, work adjustment, use of artificial appliances, speech and hearing ability training, and the purchase of books and supplies are furnished to students.

Training and education reviews are obtained through approved rehabilitation centers, workshops, colleges and universities, and on-the-job training experiences.

Vocational Rehabilitation services are provided through 21 hospitals and rehabilitation centers scattered throughout the state. District offices located in Ashland, Bowling Green, Covington, Harlan, Lexington, Louisville, Madisonville, Owensboro, Paducah, Paintsville and Somerset act as information centers for services offered by the Bureau.

A total of 9,645 disabled persons were restored to useful employment in 1973 through the programs offered by the Bureau of Rehabilitation Services.

Altogether 24,340 individuals in all the counties received rehabilitation services during that year through the Bureau.

Currently, over thirty-three hundred handicapped individuals are receiving training in college and universities while 2,489 students are in vocational (Cont. to Page 6)

10 Year Tax Bite On Rockcastle Residents

How often has the average worker in Rockcastle County thought, as he picked up his weekly paycheck: "Boy, oh boy, if only I had the money that Uncle Sam took out of it."

Just how much "is being taken out these days? How much would the average local family have accumulated in the past ten years if there had been no deductions for Federal income and Social Security taxes?"

Some calculations along this line have been made by the Tax Foundation, the non-profit research organization.

It finds that these two taxes, combined, have grown so fast that they now take 80 percent more per family than they did in 1963.

With state and local taxes also on the rise, the net result is that the average American has to put in two hours and thirty-nine minutes of each working day to pay his tax bills.

During the past year, the first 121 days went for that purpose. Not until May 26th had he earned enough for his 1973 taxes.

On the other hand, most Rockcastle County residents have seen their earnings rise sharply in recent years.

Much of that added money never reached them, however, because the larger incomes, coupled with mounting taxes, resulted in bigger payroll deductions.

In the ten-year period the average family in the local area had total earnings, before taxes, of approximately $48,700, according to the annual reports.

Some $6,700 of this total went for Federal income and social insurance taxes. This was only part of the tax burden, however. It was the visible part. In addition, there were the so-called hidden taxes, such as the excise levies on cars, gas, liquor, tobacco, telephones and the like.

The Tax Foundation estimates that if these other levies passed on to consumers were added up, it would be found that the government collects over $74 in that manner for every $100 it receives via the visible taxes.

Applied to Rockcastle County, the figures indicate that the local population paid an estimated $4,960 per family in the ten years in these hidden taxes.

Burley Referendum Voted On By Growers

By: Bob Meeker

Burley tobacco farmers in Kentucky and the other seven states in the Burley Belt give five days of balloting this week on a burley pouidage control referendum.

It marks the second pouidage control referendum since the first one was approved by over 70 per cent of those voting three years ago.

State Agriculture Commissioner Wendell Butler said of the upcoming balloting, "I consider it essential to Kentucky burley farmers and urge that all growers give an affirmative vote in the 1974 referendum."

Butler also noted, "The pouidage system is working and it is vital that we retain it in burley."

Butler also noted, "The pouidage system is working and it is vital that we retain it in burley."

State Dept. of Agriculture officials predict renewed approval of the pouidage-only controls by more than 90 per cent of tobacco farmers in the eight-state Burley Belt. A two-thirds majority is required to approve the referendum.

The U.S. Dept. of Agriculture has already announced a support price of 85.5 cents per pound for the 1974 crop if the pouidage controls are approved by tobacco raisers.

Should an upset occur in the voting, there would be no controls and no price supports for the 1974 crop.

The pouidage quota for the 1974 crop has been set at 608 million pounds of burley, an eight per cent increase over the 1973 quota, which fell short of its allotted 495 million pounds by 70 million pounds.

That shortage, combined with record levels of tobacco consumption, triggered all-time high burley prices of about 93 cents a pound. Kentucky produces 70 per cent of all burley grown, with the remainder coming from North and South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Missouri and Indiana.

Following last week's cleanup sales, the Kentucky average for the state's chief cash crop was $2.22 cents per pound, producing an income to state farmers of more than $322 million. Beltwide, the average was 92.85 cents per pound on (Cont. to Page 6)

REMINDER: Burley Tobacco Referendum...

Burley tobacco referendum ballots have to be postmarked by midnight, March 1, 1974, to be eligible in the burley tobacco election. Remember, you are voting for a burley program or none.

Frankfort Watchline

We've full of admiration for a young man who's worn himself out battling the windmills of the Ford Administration in the name of legislative independence.

Democrat Joe Clarke of Danville, chairman of the House Appropriations and Revenue Committee has worked hard enough for three lawmakers this session, not to mention the time he's put in during the interim, trying to see to it that he and his colleagues got a little extra look at what was going on in the first floor budget writers convention.

Well, his big job's done now. The joint committee from both legislative houses has finished a six-week hearing into the budget, stretching the inquiry to allow as much investigation as possible into this most ambitious spending program in Kentucky history.

All this to the obvious chagrin and discomfort of the budget's authors, willing for some probing, but upset with this new display of interest by the committee and, frankly, quite anxious to get the budget behind them and proceed with other vital things ... like mounting a U-S Senate campaign.

Not without his unparliamentary-like questions, too, was Democratic Senate money committee chairman Mike Moloney of Lexington. He and Clarke mounted a commendable attack, though futile for the most part, on some of the spending recommendations in the $4.4 billion package for the next two years.

We admit that on the surface, maybe all of this trouble hasn't accomplished much. Far out of touch with reality in the Frankfort onlooker who believes that a single lawmaker or two or even a committee can persuade Gov. Wendell Ford to make any basic changes in his budget.

Sure, it'll survive intact, even with the Republican leadership coming up on the other flank and charging misspending in the name of education and hiding surpluses.

But this sets a precedent. Each inch of headway the legislature makes into becoming a true part of the budgetary machinery around this Capitol City means more for succeeding general assemblies.

Remember, the Legislature was downgraded in our 1891 constitution by well-meaning people who did not trust it at the time because of railroad domination ... laughable, of course, today.

But it's been a long, slow climb back and people like Clarke and Moloney are giving some meaning to such high-blown phrases as "legislative independence" and "winds of change."

OUCH!!! - And perhaps the sharpest words yet spoken on the House floor this session came from Rep. Clarke the other day when he failed an effort to rewrite the Ford energy research bill to include legislative approval of contracts the administration enters into.

He told a suddenly quiet House that he wonders about the role of the legislature as a co-equal branch of state government.

"Sometimes I wonder," he seethed, "if we're more than just an honorary debating society with three basketball passes to the University of Kentucky." And in voting against the $50 million deal the governor will be signing with some of the state's commercial energy makers, Clarke said he was unable to make himself a party to allowing his credit and his children's credit to be extended in this way without the slightest glance from the General Assembly. Of course, right. But the vote was 85-10 for no legislative review.

SO LONG - Sorry to say it, but because of something they did here the other day, some of our friends in the Legislature won't be coming back.

What was it? Well, just a simple little 51-39 vote for an increase by more than a hundred per cent of the legislative pension. There are some who have been in the General Assembly long enough that this move gives them retirement exceeding that of many who voted for them.

Could be they don't intend to come back. But if the election mortality rate among the rest of those 51 is what we think it's going to be, then wonder if it was worth it. Didn't they know what the pension was when they ran for the job? Couldn't they have at least increased it, not for themselves, but for the next legislature?

Ramblings.....

by: perlina m. anderson

Well, our luck ran out and Jane, our middle child, is ill with Hepatitis. We have been fortunate with five children to keep our communicable illnesses at a minimum but you can't win them all.

She entered the hospital Saturday and for a couple of days was too ill to be a problem but by Monday, she was feeling quite a bit better and since that time I must have set a new world's record for raising and lowering the bed to her specifications, reading numerous children's books to her, searching grocery shelves for exotic foods to tempt her appetite (much to the displeasure of the doctor at times), and, of course, playing endless games of fish and crazy eights.

A local wag, and I won't mention any names but he is the county attorney, mentioned Tuesday that when he read the article in the paper about the Atlanta newspaper editor who was ransomed for $700,000, the

Of course, I'm really not complaining. Because the difference in your spirits, in seeing a child be able to demand a few things and seeing one lie listlessly, is well worth all the little chores they can find for you to do for them. Now, please keep your fingers crossed with me that the vaccine the whole family had to take works and we don't all come down with it.....

Running as the Democratic candidate in Republican Boyd County, she ousted the incumbent by 250 votes in the 1961 election for the House of Representatives.

She served the one term and in 1964, Mrs. Flannery was appointed as a delegate from Kentucky to the Democratic National Convention which selected John W. Davis as the standard bearer against Calvin Coolidge.

Probably no one was more surprised than Mrs. Flannery when she drew first blood!

The Human Side Of The Library

By: Charles F. Hinds
State Librarian

Mrs. Flannery, Kentucky's First Woman Legislator -

Five women are currently serving in the Kentucky Legislature.

All reside in Jefferson County. They are Mae Street Kidd, Charlotte McGill, and Bob Priddle in the House of Representatives and Georgia Davis Powers and Daisy Thaler in the Senate.

Files in the State Government Reference Service Division of the State Library show that the first woman legislator was Mrs. Mary Elliott Flannery of Ashland, who served in the House from 1922 to 1924.

While feminist movements were not unknown prior to the Civil War, it was in the post Civil War period that women slowly gained equal rights with men.

The leaders of the women's suffrage movement on the national scene were Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton. In Kentucky, its champions were Miss Laura Clay and Mrs. Madeline McDowell Breckinridge.

Miss Clay was elected president of the Kentucky Equal Rights Association in 1887 despite the opposition of her father, old "Cash" Clay of White Hall.

He later predicted the fall of women, like Icarus of old, contending that the road to women's suffrage led to atheism.

Mrs. Breckinridge, a great-granddaughter of Henry Clay, was an indefatigable leader in the movement. Among her many friends and captains was Mrs. Flannery, an editorial thought crossed his mind of what would happen if I were to be kidnapped. He said he didn't quite think I would bring $700,000 on the open market - that $7.00 might be more the going price. I let him know that if anything like that were to happen I would appreciate it if any donations forthcoming would just be sent to Jim to help him raise the children and I would stay wherever I was, especially if it were in sunny Florida. I don't seriously think I have anything to worry about since I doubt if the Signal is of enough national significance to warrant the kidnaping of its editor - don't you!.....

County 5th & 6th Graders To See "Mulligan Stew" TV Series

Rockcastle County's fifth and sixth graders will get "Mulligan Stew" at school next week - not in the lunchroom but as part of their health studies for "Mulligan Stew" is a new 4-H television series designed to turn kids on to good nutrition.

Starting March 4th at 1:35 p.m. and continuing through the five following Mondays at the same time, fifth graders throughout the state will watch the "Mulligan Stew" programs on Kentucky Educational Television. The six thirty-minute TV shows combine cartoon animation, fast action, puppets that come alive, and a kid rock band called "Mulligan Stew."

The band members - Mulligan, Mike, Manny, Maggie, and Micklestick, dance and entertain their way through "Mission Impossible" type adventures concerning the four food groups, breakfast, snacks, calories, and food fats. Adding to the fun are a "Sesame Street" atmosphere and one-line humor in the "Laugh-In" style.

The five boys and girls who star in the series, along with their bumbling friends Wilbur Doornight, make learning about food and nutrition an exciting experience. And for Livingston Roundtable's fifth and sixth graders, colorful learning materials including a manual with games, puzzles and other "fun activities" and do-it-yourself projects related to people and the food they eat - supplement the TV series.

The overall purpose of the TV series is to influence boys and girls to eat better, understand the function of food in the body, and learn about the four basic foods - milk products, meats, breads and cereals, and fruits and vegetables. The series has received high praise in the states where it has already been shown and is said to be the most successful educational series 4-H has ever sponsored for TV.

The state-wide showing of the series is a cooperative effort involving KET, local and state Departments of Education, and the Cooperative Extension Service of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. Locally, the Rockcastle County Extension Agents and County Administrators and teachers of the School System are working together to make the programs a success. The Extension agents also plan to offer the fifth graders a chance to take part in other fun-and-learning 4-H activities in addition to this classroom experience.

This unique way of teaching, good nutrition represents a new educational approach in 4-H. Parents may want to tune in on the Educational Channel and watch some of the programs at home. ....

sales of 495,058,228 pounds for a money total of $469,638,361.
The 1973 crop shortage was mainly caused by inclement weather, but the soaring cost of fertilizer also was a factor, according to agriculture officials.
Since the allowable poundage for the 1973 crop was short by 70 million pounds, growers can add the difference to 1974 poundage allotments, assuming extension of the poundage controls is approved in the upcoming referendum.

"The 1973 crop shows just how important it is that we have a program which would allow for shortages to be carried over to another crop year," Butler explained. "I also feel it is not only important for our farmers to approve the referendum but to do so overwhelmingly in order to show federal officials in Washington our support of poundage controls," he added.

Poundage controls first approved in 1971 replaced the existing acreage-only controls under which a farmer could grow as much burley as possible on a rigidly fixed amount of acreage. Under poundage-only controls, the farmer may use as much land as he needs to fill his poundage allotment, which is set by the USDA.

Referendum ballots are to be mailed Friday, February 22, and the voting will be held throughout the belt from February 25 to Midnight, March 1. All ballots must be postmarked no later than midnight March 1 in order to be tabulated.

According to Ben Coffman, assistant Superintendent, the Rehabilitation Program is a program that more than pays for itself. The cost of rehabilitation for each person in 1973 was $1,485. When the disabled rehabilitated individual joined the working force, his average earning increased 6.6 times.

Ben Coffman added that the 9,654 rehabilitants will pay back in State and Federal taxes the full cost of their rehabilitation in 5.4 years.

CONSUMER COMMENTS
By Ed W. Hancock
Attorney General Kentucky

BASIC AUTO INSURANCE COVERAGE.....

Basic auto coverage starts with adequate liability insurance. Liability insurance protects consumers against claims resulting from someone else suffering bodily injury or property damage where consumers are judged to be at fault.
Price the type of coverage needed; this need only be the essential protection. Insurance costs vary with different companies. Ask about discounts and see if the discount actually offers a savings. Some discounts include: second car, compact car, safe driver, good student, and driver training.

After some research into various companies, the final price is still the one consumers need to be concerned about. Some discounts are only available for rates that are unusually high.

Consumers concerned with service should only insure with a company that gives a feeling of security and growth. Some companies offer low-cost package deals that sound great, but which do not have a nationwide system of agents or claim adjusters.

Briefly, uninsured motorists' coverage insures the driver against bodily injury losses only, and not auto damages resulting from an accident with a motorist who doesn't have liability insurance. When purchasing a new auto, collision insurance is usually demanded of the borrower by the lender. This insurance pays no matter who is at fault.

Deductibles help bring the cost of collision insurance within reach of most consumers. Consumers usually pay $50 or $100 deductibles. The company pays the balance when an accident occurs which involves more than the deductible amount, and aids consumers who have accidents which are very costly.

Collision coverage is valuable when a consumer is not at fault because the company goes ahead and pays for the damage done to the auto and then tries to collect from the party at fault.
The older the auto, the less the need for collision insurance. Comprehensive insurance pays for such things as damage by fire, lightning, flood, windstorm, falling objects, vandalism and covers theft. Deductibles are required by some companies for comprehensive insurance.
For answers or suggestions to aid in consumer problems, Kentucky residents may call on the Attorney General's toll-free consumer hotline, Monday thru Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 1-800-572-2897.

DeMarcus Chosen By Kentucky Jaycees

John P. DeMarcus, Vice President of Northern Kentucky State College and a native of Stanford, is among five persons chosen by the Kentucky Jaycees as the state's outstanding young men for 1973-74.

Mr. DeMarcus, son of State Representative and Republican Floor Leader W. J. Hreold, DeMarcus and Mrs. DeMarcus, was selected along with Dr. C.

W. Curris, president of Murray State University; Jefferson County Judge Todd Hollenbach; Hopkinsville Mayor George L. Atkins, Jr.; and Wilson W. Wyatt, Jr., executive director of the Louisville Central Area, Inc.

DeMarcus, 35, was nominated by the Campbell County Jaycees.

Considered an expert in the field of modern German history, the Lincoln County native was awarded a full professorship at age 33 for "contributions of exemplary merit" to Northern Kentucky State College.

As Vice President for Administrative Affairs for Kentucky's newest four-year college, DeMarcus is responsible for administration of the school's $15 million budget as well as all fiscal and building planning.

Prior to his appointment at NKSC, DeMarcus served as administrative and legislative assistant to Gov. Louie B. Nunn from 1967-71.

In that position, he also served as original consultant to the Board of Regents of NKSC and was instrumental in the organization, founding and development of the new college.

Mr. DeMarcus is author of several published reports and articles, including "Kentucky Government," a textbook on state government which has been adopted as the standard textbook in Kentucky high schools and several state colleges.

John and wife, Patricia, who teaches home economics at Campbell County High School, have two children, Preston, 8, and Jackie, 6.

The five recipients honored by the Jaycees were chosen from 69 nominees.

Mr. Mary Sowder, Mrs. Sybil Bradley, Irene Taylor, Mrs. E. T. L. Durham and Della Mraz Wilcott attended the Book Study Friday evening at the Mt. Vernon Baptist Church. Mrs. O. D. Miller and Della Mraz Wilcott were evangelists.

Mr. and Mrs. Clancy Denny of Trowood, Ohio attended the late E. T. L. Durham's sale Saturday and were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Hamm.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Chaney and family and Mrs. Susie Chaney of Blue Ash, Ohio spent last weekend in Ottawa visiting relatives. Mrs. Chaney attended church at Ottawa.

The Quail Homemakers met last week at the home of Mrs. Flora Mae Brown with several members present. Delicious refreshments were served and several business matters of the Club were discussed.

are medium in size and its dark, crinkled leaves are especially attractive. This one should be staked; plants will grow 24-30 inches tall. When fruits begin to ripen, have your salt shaker ready and pick for snacks, individual salads, lunch boxes.

Small Fry - One of the larger cherry types. You'll want this one to use whole in your salads, as a garnish, or for nibbling. Just 65 days from planting out, you'll be harvesting bright red, round, cherry-type fruits about an inch around, in clusters of seven or eight. A great companion for Patio - but

"HOME GROWN" TOMATOES

What could be better tasting than juicy, red ripe tomatoes picked fresh from your own vines? The flavor is hard to match with brought on tomatoes.

Old time gardeners are familiar with many of the tomato varieties normally grown in the garden and have selected favorites. But if you will be growing a garden for the first time you will be interested in some of the newer varieties developed by plant breeders in recent years.

Here's a roundup on some of the newer FI hybrids. I think all gardeners will want to try a couple of them this year.

Early Girl - The earliest yet, just as the name implies - You'll be picking 5-ounce fruits about 46 days after planting out, depending on weather. Its mild flavor and rich, waxy, interior will win you over, sturdy plants have large leaves to protect fruits from the sun. Heavy production from early in the season until frost.

Better Boy - All-around favorite - always in demand. One-pound, globe-shaped fruits, juicy and meaty - 70 days from planting out. Sturdy plants have large leaves to protect fruits from sun scald. Tolerant
