Scenes from the 13TH Regional Tournament

Paul Travis, reported also as being below par physically, goes for two against Whitley. Travis, a senior, had a good season for the Rockets and will be hard to replace.

Ryan Riddle, who pushed through 12 points in the Rockets' semi-final Regional game with Whitley County, goes high for a lay-up in last Friday night's game.

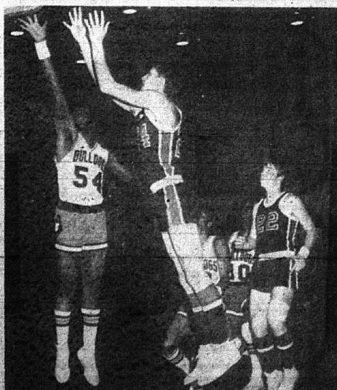

John Clontz, an All-Regional Selection, drives for the goal. Clontz also garnered 12 points in the semi-final against Whitley.

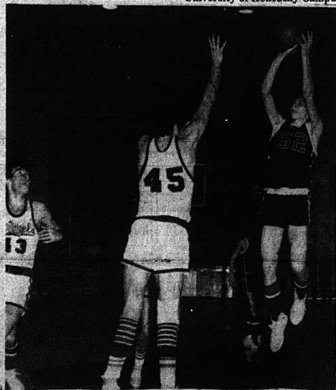

Fans will be glad to know that Dale Whitaker will be back next year. Whitaker is one of the Rockets' best outside shots.

IT LOOKS FUNNY...but worked for Casey Carroll as he made two for the Rockets last Wednesday night against Lynch which the Rockets won 61-57 to advance to the semi-finals.

Eddie Hammonds, who was held scoreless in the Whitley County game, but played well defensively, goes for two here in the Lynch game.

Garlan Vanhook tries his favorite shot against Whitley County. Vanhook was reportedly not up to par physically in the tournament games which could have been a deciding factor against the Rockets.

ramblings.....

by perlina m. anderska

I took a vacation from this column last week and regretted it Saturday. It seems that my husband's father, who lives in Ohio and gets the Signal, read of Jane's illness week before last and then when my column didn't appear with word of how everyone was - he immediately made my husband's sister get on the phone to see if we had all come down with Hepatitis. I didn't mean to worry him, and felt a little silly when I could report that she had returned to school last Wednesday and everyone was fine - I just got lazy....

I'm ahead of most of you gardeners - I have already supervised the planting of peas and onions and the sowing of our lettuce bed. You notice I said supervised since my husband actually did the work - but it was my suggestion.....

I have been reading quite a bit about the "Streakers" and have formed a very definite opinion - I don't like it. While we all realize that college kids are sent there to have a good time primarily and to acquire knowledge secondly - I wonder what kind of rearing a child has that would enable him or her to take off all their clothes and go dashing across campus. I hope I have made it crystal clear to my youngsters that when and if they attend college on my funds and they should get a bright idea such as this - they would most assuredly streak on their own funds or leave college and go to work - then see how much time they would have to entertain their fellow students. My husband said that Streaking was a new name for it - it used to be called Indecent Exposure and there was a fine for it....

Would you believe that the fruit trees have probably been killed by the cold snap Tuesday night which followed the exceptionally warm days of last week? Weatherman Bill Cox tells us that the Temperature Tuesday night dropped to a chilly 25 degrees.

I suppose it was too much to hope that we would have a very early Spring but I did anyway. It has been such a mild winter that we should all count our blessings but it was winter and Spring will be as welcome as usual, by me anyway.... This is a good time and place to thank everyone who took the time to send in a contribution to the March of Dimes from the mallers that were sent out. At this point, I am not sure of the amount which has been collected this way, although it will probably reach around $800 but just the fact that so many people in the county took the time to sit down and make out a check or put cash in the envelope was amazing to me. I don't normally contribute to a charity unless I am caught dead or rights, face-to-face and the fact that so many people do really amazes me. Any way thank you so much for your response....

Don't forget that this Friday, March 15 is the first Open House at the Cedar Rapids Recreation Center. On this day, anyone, member or not, can use any facility of the club by paying the usage fee only....

tually was at the first of the game by getting the first eight out of twelve Rocket points. Eddie Hammonds, who was held scoreless in the game, nevertheless turned some beautiful defensive plays and Casey Carroll, another all-region choice, played his usual consistently good game. One factor which also probably hurt the Rockets was that Paul Travis and Garlan Vanhook were both reportedly "under the weather" and, of course, unable to turn in their usual fine game, although Vanhook did tie Clinton Riddle for scoring honors with 12 points.

Others scoring were most assuredly Travis with 5 and Whitaker with 4. We take this opportunity to congratulate the Rockets on a tournament and the fans for the sportsmanship shown at the Regionals.

experience which will help them develop poise and self-confidence, learn to use their voices effectively, and develop skill in organizing, presenting and evaluating a spoken message. Talks for ages 9-13 youth are to be 3-5 minutes long, ages 14-19 years are to be 5-7 minutes long. Any topic which is of interest and suitable may be used in the talk. The talk will be divided into boys' division and girls' division and then into eight age groups. Giving a demonstration gives a young person practical experience in organizing and presenting information to others. It helps youth develop poise and self-confidence and in giving a demonstration, a 4-Her shows how to do something. Demonstrations can be given in agriculture, agronomy, animal sciences, clothing, crafts, entomology, health, home environment, management, horticulture, photography, safety, general boy/girl electric, engines, foods and nutrition, talk, breads, dairy foods and girls' electric.

Any young person giving a talk or speech should call the County Extension Office at 258-2403 to register. Come out and support the young people of Rockcastle County on Saturday as they learn "To Make The Best Better"....

PRODUCTIVE LAND - Steve Bullen, Rockcastle County Forest Fire Ranger, looks over a Pine plantation in Rockcastle County. This stand was established in order to put an otherwise unproductive site back into forest. It is now producing and growing a worthwhile crop of trees. They are providing food and cover for wildlife as well as furnishing cover for the site that prevents erosion. Bullen says "An acre of ground can be planted to trees for the price of one thousand trees will plant one acre of ground and the seedling of tree seedlings averages about $15.00 per thousand."

Seedlings are now available for the spring tree planting season. Special available are Loblolly Pine, Shortleaf Pine, White Pine and Black Locust, and Yellow Poplar. PUT YOUR CARROTS ON A STICK....

If your family is mule-itch about eating vegetables, tempt them with the versatile carrot. Carrots are good when served alone or in combination with meats or other vegetables. Fresh carrots are available year round and are a very good source of Vitamin A.

Packaged carrots are often labeled U.S. No. 1. This U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) grade means good quality. U.S. No. 1 carrots are firm and fairly well formed, and few carrots in the package have defects. Their color is orange or orange-red, not pale orange or yellow. Most of the carrots in a package must be at least five inches long and between 3/4 and

1-1/2 inches in diameter, unless the package is marked otherwise.

If the grade name is shown within the USDA Shield, the carrots have been packed under continuous inspection of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service.

When you buy carrots in bulk or when the grade is not shown on the package, look for well-formed, smooth, orange to orange-red carrots. Carrots should be firm with well-trimmed tops. Avoid carrots that are flabby or shriveled or those with large green areas (sunburn) at the top.

Also avoid topped carrots that have new top growth (green shoots on the top) and bunched carrots that have yellow tops.

Carrots can be stored in the vegetable bin of your refrigerator for three to four weeks. Large carrots are best for cooking or shredding. Smaller, younger carrots are good for eating raw. For variety, try baking carrots, particularly when you are planning an oven meal. Cut the carrots in half and place them in a casserole with 1/4 cup water, 2 or 3 tablespoon butter or margarine and a sprinkle of salt and pepper. Cover the casserole and bake at 375° for 45 minutes or until carrots are tender.

Whole carrots also may be baked with roasted meats, adding them in the last 45 minutes before the meat is done. Here are some good carrot combinations.

Carrot strips and whole green snap beans cooked with a little dill seed, sugar and salt in the cooking water and served with Italian dressing.

Braised carrots and celery cooked in margarine and a little water.

Carrots and onions, cut finely and cooked in bacon fat or margarine in a tightly covered frying pan.

Carrots diced and creamed with peas and new potatoes.

Carrots and apples shredded and moistened with mayonnaise.

ASCORBIC ACID - And You! Don't lose it before you use it! Vitamin C - or its less popular term, ascorbic acid, long recognized as an important nutrient, is also one of the most sensitive to destruction when the commodity is subjected to adverse handling and storage conditions.

Plant tissues contain oxidase systems that are capable of oxidizing ascorbic acid. Unfavorable conditions involving high or low (nonfreezing but chilling) temperatures, physical damage and wilting will produce stress conditions in the tissues. This accelerates the oxidation of ascorbic acid.

Leafy vegetables usually keep best when stored just above their freezing temperatures - which also is the most effective way to maintain the Vitamin C content in vegetables. Kale - which wilts easily - loses its ascorbic acid at relatively high (above 30 degrees) temperatures. Spinach, turnip greens, and collards do, too. Cabbage loses ascorbic acid more slowly. - the reasons for this have not been determined. Low temperatures are not the answer for all fruits and vegetables, in fact, some are injured at temperatures well above their freezing temperatures. "Chill susceptible" items might be sweet potatoes, cucumbers, squash, tomatoes, bananas, and some others.

The loss of ascorbic acid in peas and beans may be slowed by storing these vegetables in the pods.

THE FRIES HAVE IT Whether it be french fries, crinkle cuts, shoestring, potato puffs or potato patties, Americans are eating, more frozen potato products than ever before.

For instance, in 1964 we ate less than half a pound of frozen potato products per person. Today, the average American eats over ten pounds a year. In fact, more potatoes are frozen than any other vegetable.

Some of the new types of potato products - such as preformed patties and puffs - are increasingly popular; but the traditional fries are still by far the favorite.

When buying frozen french fries, look for the grade name on the package. "U.S. Grade A" or "U.S. Fancy" fries are the very best in color, size, shape, and texture.

If there is no grade designation on the label and the french fries are in see-through packages - you can check the quality yourself. The best fries are a uniform, light color. The pieces are uniform in width - but not necessarily in length - and have few, if any, dark spots or other defects.

Texture can only be checked by heating the product. Federal graders make this check and you can, too. When the french fries are heated, they should be moderately crisp on the surface, cooked throughout, tender and not soggy.

When heating frozen french fries, it is important to follow the directions on the package. Time and temperature are very important. If frozen french fries are not prepared properly, the results are likely to be unsatisfactory - even if they are top quality to begin with.

This is particularly true when you are using a deep fat fryer. If you have a small deep fat fryer, be sure to cook only a small batch of frozen french fries at a time. And let the oil heat up between batches. Low oil temperature will cause the french fries to become soggy and cook improperly.

The oven method, however, is the simplest and most used method of cooking french fries at home. But once again, be sure the oven has reached the proper temperature before putting the french fries in it. Overcooking - either in the oven or in a deep fat fryer - makes the french fries too crisp. Also, serve the product promptly after preparation.

For those who prefer deep-fat-fried french fries but do not want to be bothered with a deep fat fryer, there is an alternative heating method. Just put the frozen french fries in a skillet with enough oil to cover the bottom of the pan. Keep shaking the frying pan - as you would for popcorn - until the frozen french fries reach the desired color.

FRED WOODALL

Fred Woodall, 72, of Broaddus passed away Thursday, March 7, 1974 at the Rockcastle County Hospital after an illness of several weeks. He was born in Rockcastle County on February 15, 1902, the son of the late Henry and Emiline Deaton Woodall.

Survivors are: three brothers, Leigh of Mt. Vernon and Benny and Cecil, both of Broaddus.

Services were held at 2 p.m. Saturday, March 10th at the Watson Funeral Home Chapel with Rev. R. C. Flynn officiating.

More than 75 residents of Broaddus and Rockcastle County toured the offices of Kentucky Telephone Company on February 23, 1974 at the opening of the Company's Broaddus open house program. Guests at the open house were given a behind-the-scenes tour of the local communications center. Attendants explained each step of telephone operation while visitors saw what happened when local or long distance call was placed. P. Collins, District Manager; Joe Adams, Plant Supervisor; and Clyde Boyd, Area Central Office Engineer, were on hand to meet and talk with visitors during the open house. In the above photo are, from left: Mrs. Bill Nicksel, Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Frecker and Mr. Boyd.

The driver of a tractor-trailer escaped injury late Tuesday afternoon when a right-front tire on his truck blew, while he was traveling South on Interstate 75, causing him to lose control, cross the median and overturn in the North bound lanes, blocking both lanes near Conway. The truck was loaded with transmissions which broke through the roof of the trailer upon impact.

What Are Energy Costs To Rockcastle Residents Annually?

How much does the average family in Rockcastle County spend for the electricity, gas, heating oil and other kinds of energy it consumes in the course of a year?

How much fuel does it consume annually for cooking, air conditioning, car operation, home heating, lighting and for its various electrical gadgets and appliances?

Time was when a family could estimate fairly closely what its energy costs would be for the ensuing year and could budget accordingly.

Not any more. What with the fuel shortage, the price changes these days are frequent and unpredictable.

A government study, conducted by the Citizens' Advisory Committee on Environmental Quality, offers some guidelines. It shows how much was spent in the past fiscal year by the average family for its energy supplies.

Applying its overall findings to Rockcastle County, the energy cost per household came to about $743 in the year. Some had larger bills than this and some had smaller ones.

The biggest part of it was for the family car, which consumed $345 worth of gasoline per household, according to the report. It added up to a total of $1,335,000 for the local area.

The next largest expense was for space heating and water heating, a total of $214. Air conditioning, for households so equipped, came to $46 and major electrical appliances to $76. The remaining expenditures were for cooking and for miscellaneous operations.

For the 3,870 households in Rockcastle County at this rate, the total energy bill for the year comes to an estimated $2,875,000.

The study shows that the average American family's consumption of energy is equivalent to about 2,270 gallons of gasoline per year. The total used in local homes, on that basis, amounts to 8,785,000 gallons a year. Despite the fact that local people are voluntarily adjusting to the present shortages by cutting down on their car travel, on their consumption of heating fuel and in other ways, their energy bills will run considerably higher this year, in line with zooming prices.

Horticulture Crops Add To Farm Income

Farmers in Rockcastle County can add to their income again this year by growing bell peppers, pimientos and cucumbers for processing.

Representatives of the Extension Service, Moody Dunbar, Jr., and Hirsch Brothers Co. will be in Rockcastle County Tuesday, March 19, to meet with those interested in producing commercial bell peppers, pimientos or cucumber cucumbers in 1974.

The meeting will be held at 1:30 p.m. in the Vocational Agriculture Room of Rockcastle County High School.

NEW UTILITY SUPER

Matt Powell, Jr., an employee of the City Water Department for several years, has been hired as Utility Superintendent replacing Jack Craig, who resigned that position as of February 26 to enter private business in Berea.

Mr. Powell's job, that of Water Plant Operator, was taken by Frank DeBorde, who resigned as City-Policeman to accept.

The Council also decided to do away with the 3rd shift policeman's job and offered Policeman Bert Gentry a job with the Water Dept. Mr. Gentry has not, as yet, accepted the position.

They will also be able to visit our Engineering Department and to observe actual long distance calls being handled by our operators.

Rockets Defeat Lynch; But Bow To Whitley

After defeating the highly touted Lynch Bulldogs in first-round Regional Tournament action last Wednesday night, the Rockets threw a bad scare into the Whitley County Colonels before bowing to the Colonels 56-55 in overtime.

Most Rockets fans said that the game with Lynch Wednesday night was the best game the Rockets have played all year long - and it was needed because the Bulldogs stayed right with the Rockets to the end of the 61-57 game.

Friday night it looked early in the game as though the Rockets nor Colonels wanted the ballgame.

The Rockets made several flow errors - handing the ball back to Whitley County several times without getting a shot off and the Colonels weren't hitting good so the first half ended in a 31-29 score in favor of Whitley.

However, the Colonels were almost blown out of the gym in the third quarter when the Rockets scored ten straight points and Whitley went to 3:32 left in the quarter before scoring. The Rockets built up a fourteen-point lead during the quarter and were ahead 10 points at the end of the third quarter, 47 to 37.

The well-coached Colonels changed defenses in the fourth quarter and kept after the Rockets doggedly until the score was tied 54 all with 25 seconds showing on the clock and the Rockets with the ball. The Rockets, of course, went for the last shot but were never able to penetrate the Colonels' defense for a short one and Riddie's could only add one point, on a fifteen-foot only hit the rim.

Thus, the overtime. Several flow errors by the Rockets probably made the difference here also but Whitley was also cold and only scored one field goal but that was enough because the Rockets could only add one point, on a free throw by Casey Carroll, for the 56-55 final.

However, even with the loss, the play by most of the Rockets was at times brilliant. John Clontz looked like the all-region selection he even

Meeting Scheduled To Recruit Foster Homes

The local Department for Human Resources (formerly known as Department of Child Welfare) is conducting a campaign to recruit foster parents.

Foster homes are needed for children with special problems; the child over ten who is emotionally disturbed, the delinquent teenager, the older child with medical problems, the slow adolescent, brother and sister groups.

For one reason or another, these children are unable to live with their parents and are in need of a temporary home.

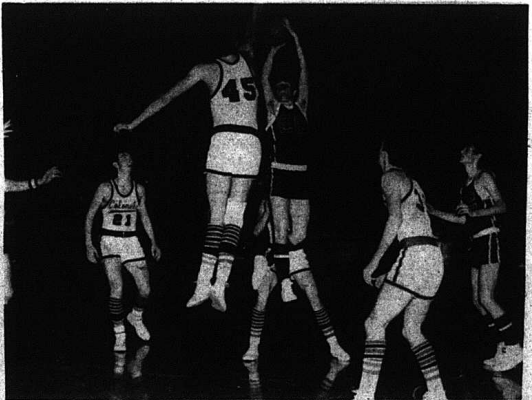

If you have the ability to provide love for a child in a stable atmosphere and the willingness to learn about the child's problems, your help is needed.

A special meeting will be held on Thursday, March 21st at 7 p.m. in the Conference Room of the Cumberland Production Credit Association building, for those of you who are interested in becoming foster parents.

An film will be shown and the Departmental staff will attempt to answer any questions you might have.

Rev. Northside Baptist, pastor of the Northside Baptist Mission, has been nominated and selected to appear in the 1974 edition of WHO'S WHO IN KENTUCKY, which is a compilation of biographical information on outstanding citizens in Kentucky. To be considered for listing in this publication, one must have distinguished themselves in business, government or civic awareness within their own community.

Casey Carroll, the Rockets starting guard goes high for two during Friday night's semi-final game with Whitley County. Carroll, a senior, played well the entire game. The Rockets won the game 56-55 in overtime. Carroll was also named to the All-Regional team along with John Clontz. The Whitley County Colonels staged a rally in the Fourth Quarter to make up an end-of-the-quarter ten-point deficit and take the win 56-55 in overtime.

JOHN NICHOOLS'

Frankfort Watchline

When all's said and done, one might ask: Was this legislative session really necessary?

Think now: Had the General Assembly not met for the sixty days which are about over, would Kentucky have suffered? Would chaos have resulted? Would people have wandered in the wilderness without guidance?

Of course not. Despite all the advance hoopla about this session, little reality was done that's going to affect the lives of three million Kentuckians.

How about the budget? Gov. Wendell Ford submitted a $1.4 billion budget for the next two fiscal years and the state must have some kind of spending plan.

Well, you know, if the Legislature hadn't passed the budget there would be no disaster at all. The state simply would continue to operate under the OLD budget and some think that would be a better idea anyway... at least cheaper.

Except for the inflation factor it might have worked. All right... state reorganization? It was on the executive order sheet anyway and is no more a reality for having been made a matter of law.

The third administration proposal of any consequence is the $50 million plan for the state's role in aiding construction of coal gas and liquefaction plants. We'll see if this one really was necessary.

After you're through with these administration measures to never get the right to strike which they secretly crave - so a whole lot of this fuss over an apparently dead issue is senseless.

See what we're getting at? Perhaps we've exaggerated and been too selective to prove a point, but less so than advocates remember - annual sessions, who would have led you to believe that the welfare of the Commonwealth depended on their getting together to half the year every year.

An abortion law? The ban against abortion is out, and even if no substitute is passed, the end of the world is not at hand. Collective bargaining or professional negotiations? Public employees and teachers will never get the right to strike which they secretly crave - so a whole lot of this fuss over an apparently dead issue is senseless.

See what we're getting at? Perhaps we've exaggerated and been too selective to prove a point, but less so than advocates remember - annual sessions, who would have led you to believe that the welfare of the Commonwealth depended on their getting together to half the year every year.

Nights

It appears that we've been approaching in the lower legislative chamber in recent days what our late, lamented colleague Clay W. Bailey used to grinningly refer to as the "Disorderly House."

The terms as he used it dates back to the 1865 General Assembly when, in the wake of what they considered Gov. Ned Breathitt's mistreatment of the widow Combs issue, a bunch of freshman and mountain Democrats joined with the 37 Republicans and helped beat an administration bill a day, yep, you heard right... one bill a day.

It got so bad that even the governor was roaming the halls of the third floor looking for help.

Well, we've got it again, triggered the other day when Speaker Norbert Blume ordered mountain Democrat Hoover Dawahare from the House floor for not sitting down when told to.

Dawahare was trying to resist a move to cut off amendment on the budget bill... trying to get a portion of the coal severance tax sent back to the hill country. He almost made it, but lost out when Blume recessed the House for about 30 minutes and put a leadership playhouse back in some order.

But now the mountain boys and the hill boys are at it again. Why not? They need something to keep their attention in this do-nothing session. Recently on their list of projects is Blume's involvement in the Louisville Jefferson County school crisis.

Now, besides several recalcitrant big city lawmakers with whom he doesn't see eye to eye... the Speaker also faces a hopping mad Eastern Kentucky delegation.

Reason they'll settle for one bill a day? ..

PAVING THE WAY - Overheard just after that House recess we mentioned, when members were urged to change their votes on the coal severance tax move on the budget: An Executive Branch aide: "Sure was an expensive recess... I'll bet we backtapped 45,000 miles of road in thirty minutes." Surely he was kidding, wasn't he? ..

LETTER TO THE EDITOR:

Editor
Mt. Vernon Signal
Mt. Vernon, Kentucky 40505

Dear Sir:

Mr. H. H. Fish and Mr. Leon Wilson of Texas are compiling a book on the descendants of Thomas Fish, born in 1755 in Guilford County, North Carolina, and died in 1840 in Renfro Valley, Kentucky. Mr. Fish is descended from Thomas' son Jesse and Mr. Wilson from his son John (Jack).

They would like to include information about the descendants of that family still in Rockcastle County. If anyone wishes to send material about their family, they are welcome to do so. It is not necessary to have information several generations back as they have most of that. At present they are interested in the families.

Those who would like to contribute may write to me and I will provide them with forms to use in reporting information. Mr. Fish and Mr. Wilson will also share the information they already have with those who are interested.

Sincerely,
Linda R. Ashley

DONT FERTILIZE STRAWBERRIES

Do not fertilize your strawberries this spring unless they are growing in a light, sandy soil. Spring fertilization often makes the strawberry plant grow too vigorously, according to W. D. Armstrong, University of Kentucky Extension Fruit Specialist.

Fertilization may also cause the berries to be soft and more open to rot disease. The best time to fertilize the beds you plan to keep another year is after harvest.

Mullins told him that he could keep two thirds of the crop instead of the usual one half generally allowed in such cases. The summer passed uneventfully and soon it was time to gather but he heard nothing from his tenant about his share of the crop, finally called on him for settlement, reminding him of their agreement that two thirds of the crop was to go to the tenant tenant and one third to the landlord. The old man was most apologetic in his explanation. He said, "You know, Massa Jep, afaah I gathered my two thirds of dat cawn daye wasn't nary bit left fo' you."

Many slaves were owned by residents of Rockcastle in the days before the war. William (Devil Bill) Adams probably owned the greatest number, with Gen. William Smith second. Earlier, the Dysart Family kept many of them on three separate plantations. Also at the time of the Civil War, Jephtha Mullins had big slave quarters and William Peaslie Hatt lost so many by the Proclamation of Emancipation that he faced financial ruin.

One of his slaves, Lewis, stayed with him after freedom and after his death remained with his widow and ran the farm for many years. My father and his brothers remembered "Uncle Lewis" with great affection. In their early boyhood he told them all the old folk tales of the slave quarter which Joel Chandler Harris many years later gathered up and published in book form, under the title of Tales by Uncle Remus. In addition to these old tales of Br'er Rabbit and the Nigger The Baby, and Br'er Fox and other animal stories, Uncle Lewis had a few of his own. He used to tell the boys that he once had a machine into which he could throw a few pieces of wood and a little paint, turn a crank and a little red wagon would roll out. Another favorite of his was to take the boys to a high point on a wooded hill across Reelfoot Valley from where his masters old home was located, and tell them that during the war he was once pursued by Union soldiers to that very spot and that he dived off head first, and hit the ground at the foot of the hill with such force that he "Booded (burrowed) under de ground" like a mole and "come out way up behind Massa's barn."

In my boyhood, Uncle George Adams was my favorite of all the old ex-slaves still around. He worked for my father during crop season and came to riding a terrible jumper and was often a sorrel horse that would weave from side to side as he walked. Uncle George called him "Lal' Dit" (Dick) and felt a great affection for him although always free to admit "de wuzn't much horse'n't." When they boylike, I would sometimes dash up beside him on a frisky colt and banter him for a race he would take it as a huge joke and laugh loudly and immoderately.

Uncle George had a philosophy in life I would have done well to listen to and remember. As was the custom of the day, when we had work feelings for dinner my mother set a separate table out on the back porch for Uncle George and other colored help. One day, heeding the boyish urge to stir up something, I went out on the porch and started telling him about the imaginary feast of good things we had on the dining room table and asking him if he could wish he was in the eating with us. His reply was something I never forget. He said "Hit make no differ what yo' eat. Honey. Atter yo' get full, yo' do'n no but what it wuz chicken an' pie."

An ex-slave couple I used to often stop by and visit on my way to and from school was Uncle Sam and Aunt Molly Smith. Uncle Sam had evidently been a coachman in the Smith family and was the proud possessor of what had once been a black coachman's coat but which had long since turned green. This coat he wore on all dress up occasions, winter and summer alike. He was a big tall man, somewhat on the lighter side complexionwise. Aunt Molly was of a still lighter shade and he, mother, who had belonged to a wealthy family, had been known to boast that Aunt Molly was the daughter of one of the most important men in Kentucky.

When Harriett Beecher Stowe visited in the Kennedy home near Lancaster for a considerable length of time while gathering material for her sensational book, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," she is said to have visited also the family of William (Devil Bill) Adams, a close personal friend of young Thomas Kennedy, and it was claimed by the family that the character of Little Eva was taken in part, from Adams' daughter, Elizabeth, who is buried in the Adams family plot on the old Jess Livesay farm.

It was often said by older folks as I was growing up that some of the instances of cruelty to slaves Mrs. Stowe put into her book were built around actual occurrences in Devil Bill's treatment of his Negroes. Most of the tales told, however, may be greatly discounted. While Bill did have a terrible temper and was often a hard taskmaster, it is also true that he was very solicitous of the health and care of his people. He often threatened them with dire punishment for their misdeeds but did not always carry his threats into execution.

He undoubtedly kept them in line through fear, as exemplified in a story my grandmother Lair used to tell. Devil Bill's wife and my grandmother's mother were sisters and most of my grandmother's childhood was spent in his home. She used to tell of a frosty morning when Bill had come in from a before-breakfast ride around the farm, had laid his big silver watch and his riding whip on the table and called out gruffly to the cook that he wanted fried turkey for breakfast and wanted it set before him in five minutes.

The fire was already going in the big kitchen fireplace and the big iron skillet was still hot from previous use. Being a quick thinker, for reasons given later, the cook grabbed up a butcher knife and ran out to the poultry coop where chickens and ducks and turkeys were always fattening, ran her arm between the slats and caught a turkey, pulling it over to where she could cut off a piece of its breast and ran back to the kitchen pulling out feathers as she ran. By slapping this on the skillet it was fried in time for her assistant to serve it to him on schedule, while the cook herself ran back out to the pen, killed the unfortunate turkey and dressed it with speed, fearing the master might for a second helping when he had finished the first. My grandmother, who had watched the whole scene with horrified admiration, said later to the cook, "Aunt Dilcie, how in the world did you think of that so quick." The reply was, "Aye Lawd, Honey, if Hell-Fiah bin as close to yho' back as it was to mine, youds thought o' somethin' too!"

Incidentally, the "Uncle Lewis" formerly spoken of as being a slave of William Peaslie Hatt, came originally from Devil Bill Adams' slave quarters. During one of the periodical occasions when his wife had left him he had gone to her niece, Hatt's young wife, and begged her to effect a reconciliation between them. Shortly after she had been able to accomplish this, she and her husband visited the Adams place and as they were preparing to leave next morning, Devil Bill picked up young Lewis and threw him up on the horse behind Mr. Hatt, telling him that was a present for his wife, for having done him a great favor.

When Rockcastle was formed in 1810 there were only 183 slaves owned in the county and no free persons of color. By the census of 1840 this number had grown to only 377. So far as can be learned at this late date, they were generally well cared for, treated kindly and not overworked. After they were set free many of them continued with the families of their former owners and so far as I could tell in my early observations of those here in my boyhood a degree of affection seemed to still exist between former master and slave. One outstanding example of this is to be seen in the case of Bill Newcomb, a former slave who, after he gained his freedom, by hard work and frugality became moderately successful. When his former master died and his widow fell upon hard times and in her old age, Bill and his wife took her into their home and cared for her as long as she lived. At her death she was buried in a cemetery back of the old graded school building, on land given by Bill's father, Uncle Horace Newcomb, as a burying ground for ex-slaves and their families. There may of these good old people speak today, remembered and respected by their former "white folks" whom they served so faithfully and long.

One amusing story is told of an experience of Jephtha Mullins with one of his former slaves. When Mr. Mullins told his slaves that they had been set free, and could come and go as they pleased, one of the oldest of them did not want to leave so Mr. Mullins suggested that he stay on as a share-cropper, explaining that he would be allowed a certain small acreage on which his cabin stood, and would have the use of a team and a plow to plant and cultivate a corn crop. In a spirit of generosity toward the old fellow, Mr.

Farmers Foresee Good Crop Year

By: Bob Meeker

A recent weekend tour of farmland in the Northern Bluegrass indicates another prosperous year is in store for many Kentucky farmers in spite of soaring prices due to fertilizer shortages.

Buoyed by a record $1.35 billion 1973 income, many farmers apparently anticipated a problem with fertilizers and stockpiled enough to last through the 1974 crop year.

Agricultural interests ranging from a six-acre truck farm in Jefferson County to the largest farm in Shelby County all expressed guarded optimism concerning this year's crop. And none of the farmers contacted was adversely affected by the energy crisis or other shortages plaguing many western states.

Lawrence Farison is a part-time farmer with six acres near Middletown. He said he has enough fertilizer in storage "to make it this year but I can't get all I want and the price is double." Ironically, Farison works full time for a fertilizer company in Louisville.

In contrast, J. R. Sanderlin operates a sprawling 4,000 acre farm just outside of Shelbyville. In addition to general crops, he has 1,500 head of cattle, half for beef and half for dairy. Last year Sanderlin raised and sold 108,000 pounds of burley, which was 27,000 pounds short of his allotment.

If this year's burley tobacco referendum calling for continued poundage quotas is approved, Sanderlin will be able to add the 27,000 pound shortage to this year's crop, creating a prosperous outlook in light of last year's record burley prices of 83.2 cents per pound.

Sanderlin buys his fuel in bulk from Southern States Supply and has received all that he requires. He anticipates no problem concerning fertilizer and said he plans to substitute urea for ammonium nitrate.

Sanderlin buys his fuel in bulk from Southern States Supply and has received all that he requires. He anticipates no problem concerning fertilizer and said he plans to substitute urea for ammonium nitrate. Chuck Crain runs the 1,000 acre Cat-tall Lakes Farm near Simpsonville. He specializes in Charolais cattle for beef and had a 1973 allotment of 18,000 pounds of burley.

Crain said that last year he anticipated a fertilizer squeeze and higher prices and stockpiled enough to easily carry him through the 1974 crop year.

Wendy Wagner manages the 170-acre Don Harris Stables in Shelby County. The breeding of show horses is the farm's mainstay, and Miss Wagner reported that she hasn't been affected by shortages, although she expressed concern over the rising cost of feed and seed.

A visit to Warner Jones' thoroughbred horse farm in Oldham County also indicated no shortages. However, farm manager Tom Shartle noted that the cost of hay has nearly doubled, from $75 to $125 a ton, and prices of other necessary materials has also risen.

All of the farmers contacted believed that if the weather is favorable, the 1974 Kentucky farm crop will establish another record. They also voted unanimously to continue poundage acre controls on burley tobacco for another three years.

Drips waste money!

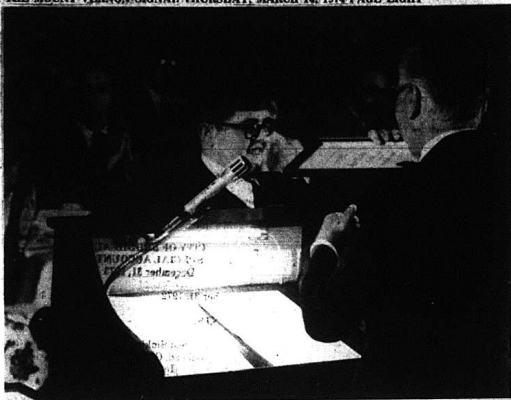

A leaky water faucet that drips one drop per second can drip as much as 650 gallons in a year's time... money down the drain.

The heating of water is the third greatest energy user in your home. So drips waste water, energy and money.

The really silly part of such waste is that the problem of dripping faucets is often corrected by simply replacing a washer.

Electricity is too good to waste!

Kentucky Afield

The Department of Fish and Wildlife maintains a list of the record fish caught on hook and line in Kentucky. To get on the record books, the first thing to do is catch the fish. The next step is to have the fish weighed on a certified scale - that is, one that is legal for trade, such as a grocer's scale.

Two persons must witness the weighing and sign a statement verifying the weight. This statement, plus a photograph of the fish and a statement signed by you stating where, when, by what method and the type of lure or bait used, should then be sent to Division of Public Relations, Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, Kentucky, 40601.

With the fishing season just around the corner, some of the existing records will probably be broken this year. Check the following list of record fish and get ready - yours could be the next name in the record book.

PLANTS FOR PERMANENT AREA OF GARDEN....

Some very good plants to establish in the permanent area of your vegetable garden include asparagus, rhubarb, and strawberries or other small fruit.

Asparagus can be grown on many kinds of soil, but good drainage is essential. The asparagus plant has an extensive root system and for maximum development must have a soil which is fertile, deep, well-drained, loose, and light.

Sandy loams are excellent for asparagus. The Martha Washington variety of asparagus is recommended for Kentucky. In establishing a new planting, it is important to use a rust resistant variety. Soil preparation: Break the soil to a depth of 10-12 inches and work the soil to a good loose condition. Set the roots 6 to 8 inches deep and 3 feet apart in the row. Sixteen roots should supply enough asparagus for a family of five. From setting to harvest requires three years. Asparagus roots should be set out around April 15.

Rhubarb

Rhubarb will thrive on most soils that are well-drained. It does best on deep, fertile loams that are well supplied with organic matter.

The varieties Victoria and Linnaeus are the best known, but McDonald and Ruby are also recommended. Fertile soil should always be selected for rhubarb. Prepare the soil well to a depth of six inches. Apply 8 to 10 pounds of 6-12-12 fertilizer per 100 feet of row at planting time. Set the crown pieces every three feet in rows four feet apart. Cover the crowns 1 1/2 to 2 inches deep. The plants should be set March 10 to April 10. Fifteen to 16 plants should supply enough rhubarb for a family of five. Expect the first harvest two to three years after planting.

Strawberries are a wonderful fruit and can be grown in a garden if you have available space. A planting of strawberries given proper care, will last for several years. The recommended time for planting is early spring (March 15 - April 15). Varieties of strawberries for our area include: Tennessee Beauty, Earliadawn, Pochontas, Citation, Sunrise, and Surecrop.

Soil preparation and planting: Prepare the soil as you would for other garden crops in fall or early spring. The soil should be fertile. Early planting encourages runner plants to form early. These early runner plants are more productive than plants formed later. Set the plants every three feet in rows four feet apart. Make sure that the crowns of the plants are flush with the surface of the soil. All blossoms of newly set plants should be picked off the first year. If they are allowed to develop, runner formation will be slowed down and a poor root will result. Cultivate as needed to control weeds. Mulch with straw in December. The first harvest will be in May following year. One hundred (100) plants should furnish enough strawberries for family use. The planting should bear for several years.

For further information on these plants, contact your local County Extension Agent.

Last Friday, I witnessed a new grass seeding machine developed by the University of Kentucky and John Deere Company.

The machine was used on the farms of Tommy H. Mink and Bradley Saylor - two farms set up in Rockcastle County for demonstration plots.

The picture of the machine and Tommy H. Mink is on Tommy's farm of 235 acres. His farming operation consists of livestock, beef and hogs. Tommy runs about 240 head of beef cattle. His crops are corn, tobacco, small grain and forage crops.

Tommy has just finished seeding about 35 acres in renovating pastures. The machine in the picture is a new machine that seeds the legumes, sprays a strip of grass about four inches wide. The machine has disc that makes grooves about 3/4 inch deep and wide for the seed; the spray kills the grass where the seed is sown.

The machine is on the same principle as a no-till corn planter.

Tommy is an excellent farmer, doing a good job "Down On A Good Farm."

Lunchroom Changes Increases Participation

Before you get to the door, you know lunch will be good—the delicious aromas are waiting out to greet you. When you get to the serving line you see salads attractively arranged on a bed of crushed ice, shimmering ketles of vegetables, trays of meat, a variety of breads, and desserts.

The best surprise is the price of this feast—only 45 cents.

This wonderful eating establishment is also highly praised by its patrons, but amazingly its name and location are not widely advertised. It is the Shelbyville High School cafeteria in Shelbyville.

Until recently the students of Shelbyville High, Shelbyville Middle School, and Shelby County Vocational School did not have as many words of praise for their cafeteria. In fact, even in their best month only 438 of the 980 students ate lunch in the cafeteria daily.

Involvement in the high school participation project of the division of School Food Services of the State Department of Education resulted in an improved school lunch program.

Shelbyville is one of the 11 schools participating in the project. These 11 schools have one of the state's lowest percentages of students participating in the school lunch program.

Innovations in Shelbyville High's cafeteria include offering a wide variety of foods and allowing each student to fill his own plate, serving himself the amount of each food that he plans to eat.

One indication of the success of the project can be seen in the trash cans. Robert Walker, the custodian, reports that there is very little food in the trash cans now just milk cartons and paper napkins.

Before, the students filled up their trays with food. Now, they fill only one bag.

Another indication of success is the increase in the daily participation in the school lunch program. During the first week, an average of 604 students ate in the cafeteria each day.

McChandler, principal of Shelbyville High School, said, "We can't believe the response. We expected an increase of 10 per cent, but got a 25 or 30 per cent increase."

Chandler also said, "The noise level in the cafeteria has been reduced by more than half."

SUIT YOURSELF

More and more men are suiting the action to the word. The word is, according to a recent survey of men's tastes in suits, 91 percent of them prefer suits of pure wool or a wool blend. These same men were asked what they'd be willing to pay for an all-wool suit next year. Sixty-nine percent said they would be ready to pay more than they paid this year or last year. Nearly half indicated a willingness to pay as much as $25.00 or more for this quality.

The action men are buying more all-wool suits than ever before. They know the assets of wool in a suit—its long-lasting, easy-to-keep and comfort attributes. You get this whenever you buy a suit with a sew-in label marked Woolmark or Woolblend Mark. The Woolmark label is the seal of quality-tested products made of the world's best, 100 percent pure wool. The Woolblend Mark label appears on clothes that combine wool with a synthetic or a natural fiber. If you don't see either Mark, ask for it. It means quality.

In a generally inflationary economy where a man can lose his shirt not only in the stock market but also in the supermarket—it's nice to know the true value of a man's wool suit is holding fast!

Cornish fares are said to have the smell of fish. Every one does, after a while!
