Kentucky is a land that has much to offer to the hunting and fishing public, as well as to the entire group of outdoor enthusiasts.

From the flat lands and swamps in the western section, across the Bluegrass area to the mountains and trout waters in Eastern Kentucky, there is always something to do and find for the outdoorsmen.

However, there are many people who do not know how to obtain the specific information that is highly important for their outdoor recreation needs. They don't know where to turn for the "when," "where" and "how-to" facts that can make a great outing.

For information regarding hunting and fishing opportunities, seasons and related matter, the local conservation officer is the man to contact. However, for printed matter or information beyond the supply of the officer, contact Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Capital Plaza, Frankfort, Ky., 40601 or call 502-564-4336.

For those who are interested in information about the Bluegrass state they can write to TRAVEL, Frankfort, Ky., 40601. This information comes through the Department of Public Information, located in the Capitol Annex building in Frankfort.

In Memory of Juanita Barnes, who passed away June 7, 1973:

God's Choice

We do not always understand When God has made His choice, A love one He does need And called them by His voice.

Come home, my child, I need As you. We hear Him speak so plain. The things of this world you're losing. A place in Heaven to gain.

The beauty of your life So rich, so pure, so sweet, Is needed now in Heaven To make it more complete.

The toils, the pain, the suffering, Have now all passed away, And safe in the arms of Jesus All is a perfect day.

But we are made to study As we sit and linger by, And we cannot help but ask Him Lord, we wonder, why?

Why did this have to happen Especially to me? For that was my dear loved one Oh! Father, can't you see?

But He who knows the future Can better understand, Just why this had to happen According to His plan.

And so we will not murmur But better understand, God's choice is always wisest When our life is in His hand.

"Weighing In"

Inspector Amon S. Ray checks the scale reading on a coal truck prior to issuing an overweight citation. The citation was issued during a recent series of Eastern Kentucky follow-up checks conducted by officers of the state Bureau of Vehicle Regulation's Division of Highway Enforcement. Almost every truck the inspectors weighed was found to be carrying loads between 65,000 and 75,000 pounds on roads designed for weight limits of 30,000 and 44,000 pounds.

At right and below are roads typical of those being used extensively for coal hauling operations in Eastern Kentucky.

Now Is The Time

It is good that we are giving environment, and the number of new thought to our fuel, people to be fed and clothed because we expect world population to grow by 2 or 3 billion people - about 7 billion by the year 2000. This observation was made by Harold Ballinger, Executive Director of Rockcastle Co. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. He said the time is right for us to help meet national and world demands. "We are now able to move forward with many steps of conservation on our rural lands that produce a large part of the world's food and fiber." The public has been awakening to many of man's environmental needs, states Mr. Ballinger, but public knowledge concerning our rural conservation needs remains minimal. According to Mr. Ballinger, Kentucky has a total of 6,586,739 acres of cropland of which 66 percent (4,321,983 acres) needs conservation treatment; 5,184,890 acres of pastureland of which 56 percent (2,870,551 acres) needs conservation treatment with three percent not feasible or needing a change in land use; 10,988,166 acres of forest land of which 54 percent needs conservation treatment; and 767,708 acres classified as "other" land of which 43 percent needs conservation treatment. "Essentially" what we have in Kentucky is a total of 13,448,873 land-use acres (about 57 percent) which needs conservation treatment." On a national level, this need is 60 percent.

Mr. Ballinger points out that this data was received from the State Conservation Needs Inventory Committee's survey in 1970, and that these acreages do not include water areas, federal non-cropland, nor urban and build-up land.

Recognizing the need to put our land-use acreage into better, longer-lasting conservation measures, the U.S. Department of Agriculture by law is administering during 1974 two cost-sharing conservation programs - the Rural Environmental Conservation Program (RECP) and the Rural Environmental Assistance Program (REAP) which was reinstated after discontinuance during 1973, acknowledges Mr. Ballinger.

This is a long-awaited opportunity for improvement work that most farmers have not been able to afford by themselves, Mr. Ballinger said. There is still time remaining for sign up this year when farmers may come in and find out about the cost-share agreements benefiting certain land, water and timber conditions.

Mayo Mansion Added to National Register

Renowned for its architecture, the John C. C. Mayo Mansion in Paintsville has been added to the National Register of Historic Places.

The three-story, 40-room brick building was constructed between 1905 and 1912 at a cost of $250,000. Herman Geisky of Ashland was the architect of both the mansion and the Mayo office, a one and one-half story structure also added to the register.

Mayo owned the Sandy Valley and Elk Horn Coal Company and in 1907 organized the Northern Coal and Coke Company. After the extension of the railroad up the Big Sandy River Valley, his fortune continued to increase until, at the time of his death in 1914, it totaled an estimated $20 million.

Paintsville Mayor John Chandler said, "Who else but John C. C. Mayo could signify the fierce pride, gutsy determination and independence of our Highlands people. What other structure than the Mayo Mansion could exemplify the net wealth interpreting times that came with the first bloom of the mountains when thousands came to dig the rich, black seams of coal."

The Mayo Mansion is owned by the Covington Diocese of the Roman Catholic Church and is known as Our Lady of the Mountains. Presently, it is serving as a convent and an elementary school.

Annual Farm Tour Held

The Rockcastle County Conservation District held its annual farm tour in conjunction with Soil Stewardship Week on May 30th. More than thirty local ministers and farmers were in attendance.

The tour made stops at the Bradley Saylor Farm at Wadd, the Billy Lawrence Farm at Quail, the Roy Brown Farm at Quail, and the John E. Holbrook Farm on Chestnut Ridge. Some of the practices seen on the tour were pasture renovation, a farm pond constructed with assistance from the Conservation District, a wildlife food plot, and some tile drainage that was installed this past April. On the John E. Holbrook Farm the group also saw a new Italian breed of cattle, the Chianina. These cattle show some remarkable weight gains.

The first stop on the tour was at the Bradley Saylor Farm where the group saw a pasture renovation test plot seeded with a new pasture renovating machine from the University of Kentucky. This machine seeds into pasture fields using the same principle as a no-till corn planter. The machine sprays a small band of a contact herbicide to kill weeds and a two-inch strip. A small rotating type disc cuts a groove in the soil, the seed is dropped in this groove and a press wheel covers the seed. The machine sprays and seeds a strip eight to ten feet wide in one trip. This greatly reduces the amount of time and labor involved in renovating grass fields.

In addition to the pasture renovation, the group also saw a beautiful farm pond and wildlife food plot that was developed on Mr. Saylor's farm in the early 60's. Technical assistance was provided through the Conservation District.

The second stop on the tour was the farm of Mr. Billy Lawrence at Quail. On Mr. Lawrence's farm the group saw some pasture renovation by conventional methods, some minimum tillage corn planting, and some tile drainage that was installed last April in a corn field.

Mr. Lawrence told the group about his wetness problem in this corn field. He stated that on June 20, 1973, he was spraying this wet area in preparation for corn planting when he nearly buried one of his tractors. On May 28, 1974, after the tile installation, he planted corn in this same area. The ground was dry and firm. He was even "kicking up" dust as he planted corn.

The group stopped for lunch at Mr. Roy Brown's farm near Quail. Grilled hamburgers with all the trimmings were provided through the courtesy of the Cumberland Production Credit Association. As usual, no one left Mr. Brown's hungry.

The last stop on the tour was the John E. Holbrook Farm on Chestnut Ridge. Mr. Holbrook showed the group several head of a new Italian breed of cattle, the Chianina. These were very big boned cattle which show some rather remarkable weight gains. For example, we saw a ten-month old bull that weighed 800 pounds, a 9 1/2 month old bull that weighed 1060 pounds, and twin calves that were 7 1/2 months old that weighed 800 pounds and 760 pounds respectively.

Mr. Holbrook also reported that the birth weight of these calves averages between 95 and 105 pounds. The lightest at birth were the twin calves which weighed 75 and 80 pounds respectively. The heaviest calf at birth weighed 108 pounds. Mr. Holbrook told the group that he has only one calf which had problems calving out of 25 cows that he has calved so far this year. Mr. Holbrook plans to continue improving his herd and eventually sell purebred Chianinas for breeding stock.

Fiscal Court Meets: New Budget Approved

At a meeting of the Rockcastle County Fiscal Court Tuesday, June 4th, the budget for fiscal year 1974-75 was presented to the Court for their approval.

The budget drew some fire from the Magistrates in the form of opposition to two appropriations which had been made and one item for which no appropriation had been made.

One appropriation concerned a salary for the County Judge's secretary in the amount of $3,300 from the financial administration section of Revenue Sharing funds. County Attorney James Lambert defended the appropriation, telling the Court that the secretarial help was needed so there would be someone to keep records for the Federal EEA (Emergency Employment Act) program and to assist the County Judge in keeping the records. Attorney Lambert said that the secretary presently employed for this position had originally been hired under the EEA program but that that section of the federal program had now been cut out. However, the Court decided that they felt the money could be better spent somewhere else.

The Fiscal Court also asked that the $500 appropriation for County Judge Pro Tem be cut in half to $250 and that $500 be added to the budget for the Civil Defense program.

The $500 appropriated for Civil Defense caused Director Lawson in Frankfort to tell the Court that although the appropriation was appreciated but the program would be pulled out of the county and the funds allocated as matching funds for Rockcastle would be used elsewhere. Mr. Burdette also told the Court that his original request of $250 a month from the county could be shaved to $200 per month; this amount was the bare necessity that was needed for the program. However, Magistrate Ernest Mason told Mr. Burdette that the $500 per year was all that the Court felt it could afford now and that amendment to the budget, along with the other two amendments, were duly passed and the budget was approved.

Sheriff Manuel Shepherd also came before the Court requesting an increase in allocation for the operation of his office. Counting rising gasoline costs and other increased expenses, Sheriff Shepherd told the Court that his office desperately needed an increase in expense money in order to meet the demands made on his office. The Magistrates expressed their complete sympathy with his situation, but decided that no increase in allocation could be made at present but promised to try to provide more expense money at a later date.

A breakdown of the $108,358.53 1974-75 Budget is as follows, with last year's actual expenditures listed in parentheses: General Government, $65,865.00 ($59,520.35); Protection to Person and Property, $500 ($7,100); this amount is a great deal less because this category covers operation of the jail, the expense for which was transferred to the Revenue Sharing program under the Public Safety category; Hospitals, charities and Corrections, $150 ($150); Debt Service, $12,900; Miscellaneous, General Fund (this fund includes $2,000 for emergencies and payment of social security contributions and retirement for county officials), $13,500 ($10,000); Health fund, $11,000; Library, $6,000; Agriculture $7,500; Forestry $2,500 and Soil Conservation, $1,200.

The figures above, nor the total budget, however, does not include $36,000 to be spent for highways from truck license fees and not from local taxation. Mr. Burdette said that $107,037 from Revenue Sharing funds.

The $107,037 from Revenue Sharing funds has been appropriated as follows: Public Safety $7,700 (maintenance and operation of the county jail); Environmental Protection $18,000 (mainly the operation of the ambulance service); $10,000 and $2,000 for a reserve in this account); Road Maintenance $30,000 ($10,000 for salaries, wages and advertising and $20,000 for utilities); Social Services for the Poor or Aged $1,500; Financial Administration $3,250 ($1,000 for miscellaneous bond and advertising expense, $2,100 for county treasurer's salary and $150 for materials and supplies and Courthouse Repair $4,857.

The Fiscal Court will meet again Saturday, June 29th to set the county officials salaries and to pay all claims pending.

MRS. LAMB PASSES AWAY

Mrs. Hulda Lamb, 94, wife of well-known evangelist Jimmy Lamb, was buried May 22nd in Waynesville, Ohio. She was born in Wayne County, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Lamb were the parents of 13 children, 92 grandchildren, 318 great grandchildren and 141 great, great grandchildren for a total number of 564 descendants. Mrs. Lamb lived to see all 564 of her descendants.

School Board Meets

Mainly routine items of business were taken up at Monday night's regular monthly meeting of the Rockcastle County Board of Education.

The Board did accept several bids which had been advertised for: A. B. Dick was awarded the bid for duplicating paper and supplies; the low bid of $2,990 for a 1/2-ton pickup truck was accepted from Britton Chevrolet Olds in Berea. The Board did accept a bid of $1,680.50 from Central School Supply for cabinets for the art room at RCHS which was accepted. On other items, the Board decided to postpone opening and acceptance of bids on a freezer because of additional time needed for preparation and submitting of bids.

The Board also voted to employ J. Courtenay Horton, Jr., CPA, of Mt. Sterling to audit General Fund, Title I, and High School accounts for a total of $1,100. Appointed to audit the elementary school accounts were Pauline Mullins, Bige Towery and Lloyd Shuts.

On a motion by Board member Billy Burdine, the Board employed Connie Wheeler as special education teacher at Brodhead School for 1974-75, subject to certification.

The placement of teachers, as presented by Superintendent Parsons, was approved on a motion by Board member Willie Smith, and the Superintendent was authorized to make necessary transfers and assignments of personnel as found necessary, subject to approval at the next Board meeting. A list of teachers and their assignments will appear in a later issue of the Signal.

The Board also approved participation in supervision of summer youth employment program (a more detailed explanation of the program will be found elsewhere in this week's Signal).

The Mid-Term Conference, mandated by the 1972 National Convention, will be adopting a new charter for the National Democratic Party.

Instructional meetings for Rockcastle County are set for June 15th, at the Mt. Vernon Courthouse at 2 p.m.

All Democrats are urged to attend.

ARE YOU GOING TO 4-H CAMP??

If you are planning to attend 4-H Camp this summer, you will need to send your registration form and fee soon. The 4th Grade Camp will be from Tuesday, June 25th to Friday, June 28th. The fee for this camp is $16.00.

annually. The Superintendent was also authorized to advertise and accept bids on needed materials and supplies to light football field by Boosters Club and also to advertise for bids to sell trees. Bids to be opened at 2 p.m. June 17th.

SCHOOL LUNCH PROGRAM RECOMMENDATIONS MADE

C. E. Bevin, Director of School Food Services, State Department of Education, Frankfort, met with County School Superintendent Charles Parsons and all the school principals on May 21 to discuss pertinent matters pertaining to the school lunch program for the coming school year.

During the discussion, Mr. Bevin recommended that the county consolidate its school lunch program and appoint a qualified person to direct the program. He pointed out that someone should be in charge and be responsible for the total lunch program. Such matters as bookkeeping, accounting, menu planning, purchasing and supervision should be conducted on a county-wide basis rather than the individual school basis as in the past and that a central banking system should be established for the lunch program.

Mr. Bevin also pointed out that unless this type of program is set up, the county could lose some of its lunch reimbursement funds.

At Monday night's regular School Board meeting, the Board appointed E. J. Smith as director of the program on a part-time basis. Mr. Smith will also serve as assistant principal at Mt. Vernon Elementary.

SUMMER YOUTH PROGRAM ALLOCATED TO COUNTY

Rockcastle County has been allocated a total of 106 Summer Youth Programs slots for 1974. These positions are available to boys and girls from age 14 through age 22, either in school or dropouts who intend to re-enter school or seek vocational training. These positions have been allocated to various government agencies, school systems and non-profit, non-affiliated organizations.

These agencies, such as city governments, Fiscal Court, Rockcastle County school system, Recreation Committee, Day Care Centers, etc., will be furnishing meaningful work and adequate supervision to the program participants. The workers will work a total of 160 hours over a period of eight weeks, and will be paid by the Department for Human Resources.

The pay rates for the program will be $2.00 per hour for all participants with work beginning June 10th.

Selection and hiring of these youth will be done by the Bureau for Manpower Service Office located in Corbin. Selection is based on family size and family income, and only those who qualify as disadvantaged, according to Federal guidelines, will be hired for this program.

Frankfort Watchline

Didn't make any outlandish primary election predictions this time, so we don't have to make any apologies. But it means we're in no shape, either, to say "we told you do."

Of course, we all knew the Senate primaries would be like they were: Gov. Wendell Ford just beating the fire out of his cosstown Frankfort neighbor Harvey Brazin and incumbent Marlow Cook the overwhelming choice for re-election by his fellow Republicans.

That's going to be an interesting race. Cook may be facing some censure at the polls by a section of his party for telling the president he should think about quitting. And Ford appears unshed about some moves here at home such as the chairlift at Cumberland Falls State Park.

We have confidence in each man's ability to exploit the boob-oo of the other. And we insist it'll be a close race down to the wire.

Meantime, we look in dismay at that narrow win by State Senator Carroll Hubbard over veteran Frank Stubblefield in the Democratic First Congressional District primary. We view it as an upset of momentous proportions. Not only did we not think Hubbard would win, we didn't think it would be close.

Wonder if the light voter turnout had anything to do with that one? It certainly wasn't a primary battle in which issues and records were thoroughly and intelligently discussed.

We know it's a cop-out, but from this point, it's one of those political phenomena for which there is no real good explanation. Sure, Hubbard was an energetic campaigner, but his campaign keynote was weak.

By the way, that's what Carroll's brother Kyle is saying now that he faces the formidable task of unseating Republican Snyder in the general election in the Fourth Congressional District. That ought to be a heated, mud-slinging affair.

More about that in a minute. Meantime, if Carroll's attitude toward incumbents is a valid one... that because they've been there, they should be replaced... there may be trouble on the horizon for the likes of William Natcher and Carl Perkins.

We don't agree, however. We think that Watergate has spun off an undeserved amount of public mistrust of officeholders. We think that's what hurt Stubblefield. It's what may hurt Snyder.

Gene Snyder is in his fourth term in what must be the most awkward Congressional District there is. The Fourth runs from Louisville to Cincinnati. It's more than a hundred miles long and in between the major population centers there are more rural stopoffs than you can shake a tobacco stake at.

Congressman Snyder has proven he's able to deal satisfactorily, with this cross-section of Kentuckiana, but if there's ever to be a time when he's vulnerable, this could be it.

Hubbard will pull no punches. He'll trot out the land deals Snyder is making for the power industry in his district. He may even stoop so low as to discuss the Congressman's past domestic problems.

But Snyder's done his homework, too. Hubbard's served in various offices in public life in recent years and if there are bones hidden in my closets, the Congressman will manage to bleach them in the heat of the Fourth District primary, the voter is done a tragic disservice.

You know, quite often, as in the recent First District primary, the voter is done a tragic disservice.

He's not informed by the candidates about their attitudes on campaign issues. Sometimes, issues are never developed. A voter has the right to hear -- and the candidates have the obligation to discuss -- views on such things as the incumbent's record in Congress, how he's served his district, how the opponent would do better.

The voter is entitled to something better than just "it's time for a change." When campaign issues are forsaken for other, juicier tidbits an opponent knows well who the voter's baser appetites, then everyone loses.

There are two or three interesting campaigns in Kentucky this summer and fall on which the eyes of the nation will be focused. We hope they'll be the top-caliber kind of races for which Kentucky has been well known in the past... races which will merit national attention.

Cozer to the Governor? - If there's anything to be said for geographical location, Tommy Preston, press secretary to Gov. Ford, is getting closer to the governor.

He used to be two rooms away, and now he's moved next door.

The idea is to get him away from the casual passerby. We reporters take a lot of his time, too, but we must admit that Preston is the soul of generosity to the news media on that score.

Note, though, that there's no way to move Preston's phone. He's still, at least for those of us who covet his attention, just a couple of rings away... and his phone rings all the time.

..Among opinions released this week from the office of Attorney General Ed W. Hancock were the following:

State and County Offices Incompatible - In response to a question asked by Honorable C. Allen Muncy, Leslie County Judge, Attorney General Ed W. Hancock said that no person may be a state officer or a member of the General Assembly while holding a position as an officer of any county, city or municipality, or an employee thereof.

Members of KRTS Must Be Certified By Board of Education - In response to a question asked by Ray Corns, Dept. of Education, Frankfort, Assistant Attorney General Carl Miller said that although Kentucky statutes require all school administrators and teachers to be certified, the certification of other school personnel is vested in the state Board of Education. Miller added that without being certified teachers may not become members of the Kentucky Teacher's Retirement System.

Gold cash can be saved!

Refrigerators and freezers serve you day and night, so they offer real opportunities to save.

Filled to capacity, but not overfilled, a freezer or refrigerator runs most economically. But be sure your unit is not set to run colder than is necessary. The manufacturer's recommendations can save you energy and money.

Carefully check the seal around all doors. Air leaks cause the unit to overwork, wasting electricity and money. Obviously, you save most if your unit is the right size for your family.

Electricity is too good to waste!

Energy Conservation Tip

Enjoy electricity throughout your house, but use it sensibly - you'll get the best results and save yourself money, too.

Fluorescent lighting costs considerably less than incandescent bulb lighting for the same amount of light. This might make it worth consideration where lights are on for long periods of time, such as the kitchen.

Turning lights off in unused rooms can result in savings. Contrary to some popular beliefs, turning a light on and off does not use more electricity than leaving it on. But in the case of fluorescent lighting, the life of the fluorescent tube is shortened about two hours each time it is turned off and restarted. With an incandescent bulb there is little effect on the life of the bulb.

Suspected Liquor Fraud Spurs Investigations

FRANKFORD, Ky. There's a room in the Kentucky State Crime Laboratory that smells like a bar.

But the lingering odor of sour mash doesn't seem to bother the lab's chief chemist Tom Eastering against whose desk is propped a brown grocery bag containing several pints of name-brand whiskeys.

It started this spring when state Alcoholic Beverage Control (ABC) Inspector Les Cole asked the crime lab to help him determine if some bars in Fayette and Jefferson counties and in Northern Kentucky are refilling name-brand liquor bottles with cheaper substitutes.

Under state law, liquor retailers are required to pass sprits only from the original containers. Failure to comply with that law may lead to penalties ranging from a 30-day suspension to revocation of the retailer's license.

Cole and fellow agents confiscate 12 bottle cases of suspect liquor from the crime lab. Eastering then tests contents of each bottle for liquor's different constituents, which include alcohol proof, acids, color, solid materials and oils.

Nearly a month's work was required to establish the complicated testing procedures, Eastering said. "All distilled spirits have slightly different compositions," said the 17-year veteran of crime lab operations.

He said a case can be solved readily if, for example, confiscated liquor which is labeled "100 proof" tests out instead as "86 proof." But several additional tests are required at a 100-proof $7 bottle of whiskey has been refilled with 150-proof 53-stuff.

Eastering said he gained considerable price-cutting knowledge from the federal Alcohol and Tobacco Taxation Laboratory at Quantico, where similar tests routinely are performed in the federal crime lab.

federal lab also provides labeling with some pertinent information. "In standard brands of whiskey, still he keeps a bag of whiskey pints by his desk so he can readily compare the differences of confiscated samples."

Even though he looks to variances from state and federal standards, he does not "predict the identity of the material with which a bottle has been refilled."

Cole said that his most common criterion is the color which spurs the possibility at ABC investigations. "The drink I was served didn't taste like what I ordered."

Cole's tactics appear to observe suspect bars and taverns. If observation turns up questionable serving practices, the premises officially are inspected and bottles are confiscated.

Cole said that ABC agents will check the condition of bottles, noting any torn labels. They also determine from inventory, the amount and type of stock actually purchased by the retailer.

Sometimes consumers complain that labels on bottles are switched behind the bar. But most inquiries by ABC prompt only the illegal pouring of spirits from one bottle to another, Cole said.

According to Cole, ABC investigation teams already have uncovered several bars in Jefferson and Fayette counties which may be in violation.

Eventually they also will canvass establishments in Franklin, Campbell and Kenton counties.

Possible litigation of investigated cases awaits final test results from the crime lab. Cases will be used in blocks by counties with those in Jefferson County to be first on the docket.

The inspector said ABC is cracking down on violators to protect consumers from paying high prices for low quality drinks and to shield wholesalers from "flimflam" operations which force low quality liquor on the market.

INCREASE IN RUNAWAYS EXPECTED

A growing number of teenagers are heeding an urge to leave home — an urge that can lead to tragedy.

Texas police uncovered the shallow graves of several teenage boys who had been murdered in a homosexual tryst. The boys were runaways and their deaths make up one of the gristliest episodes of the dangers facing runaways.

Still, the number of runaways is climbing, prompting Kentucky State Police to introduce new procedures to cope with the increase they anticipate in early summer.

When a minor runs away, the first person many parents notify is the nearest police radio dispatcher. He must then field frantic pleas for quick action and launch a police search which, police admit, often leads nowhere.

State police dispatchers, after taking reports on runaways, develop descriptions of the missing juveniles and send them to all law enforcement agencies in Kentucky and nearby states.

Capt. Felix Atwood, commander of the State Police Communications Section, said that after initial contacts have been made, data on each runaway is entered into the Law Information Network of Kentucky (LINK). Tied to the FBI's nationwide computer memory bank, LINK provides sixteen state police posts and some two dozen local police departments with an instantaneous flow of criminal information.

Capt. James Hostley, commander of the State Police Computer Services, said LINK only recently has begun handling data on runaways. Earlier, they had been kept on file at each post.

Capt. O. G. Mullins, state police chief legal officer, said police cannot search for or detain a runaway unless the child's parent or guardian signs a warrant charging the child with waywardness.

"We need that warrant to hold a runaway, otherwise our hands are completely tied," said Col. James Mayes, field commander of the state police.

A recent survey of three state police posts which annually receive large numbers of reports on runaways indicates this spring's total should at least equal the numbers reported in years past.

Jettison, chief dispatcher at the Frankfort post, said 27 runaways already have been reported since January 1. Of those, 80 percent departed during the last six weeks. However, only one still is unaccounted for.

Besides LINK, the "best machinery" to track down runaways is coordinated communications between families of runaways and juvenile authorities, Mayes said. Police will attempt to locate runaways primarily because they want to reduce the potential for kidnapping and other forms of foul play, he said.

Mayes urged parents of runaways to notify state police the minute their son or daughter turns up. Many parents will delay the whole legal process of recovery or force police to continue searching by failing to inform all agencies involved in the search.

A juvenile counselor for the State Bureau of Child Welfare said that an estimated 80 percent of Kentucky's runaways are 15- and 16-year-old white girls from middle class homes.

Most, he said, leave home during the first months after school ends. Florida or California appear to be the most popular destinations.

"These youngsters choose to run away because, in most cases, they feel their parents have placed stiff restrictions on them. It's a form of adolescent rebellion which seems to be increasing," he said.

Problems confronting newly departed runaways primarily stem from the fact that they leave town penniless or almost so. Runaways then resort to shoplifting, dope peddling or panhandling to get by, activities which explain why more than half of all runaways are nabbed by police for crimes, the counselor said.

FOUR KENTUCKY BUILDINGS ADDED TO REGISTER

FRANKFORD Ky The Kentucky Heritage Commission has been notified that four historic buildings have been added to the National Register of Historic Places.

Three Lexington houses named to the register include the Dr. John McGeary house, William Poindexter house and Charles McPheeters house, all located in the 350-360 block of Mill Street. The Van Kitchen house in Carter County also was selected.

The McGeary house was built in the 1830s by George Trotter, one of Lexington's earliest developers. The house was occupied by McGeary pastor of the Christian Church during and after the Civil War.

William Poindexter, watchmaker, jeweler and silversmith from Virginia built his federal the late 1820s.

The Van Kitchen home a two-story log cabin built by Elijah Morton in 1835, was the location of a Civil War skirmish between federal troops led by Gen. George Morgan and Confederate troops led by Gen. John Hunt Morgan in September, 1863.

McPheeters built this house in 1816. From 1830 to 1868 the house served as a parsonage for the Methodist Church South.

The McPheeters house a federal townhouse, is the only surviving member of a complex of three row-houses that once stood on this site.

Specialist 5 John Mason, grandson of George Mason of Orlando, a paratrooper in America's Guard of Honor will be returning to his hometown area where he will be working with the "Unit of Choice Enlistment Program of the 82nd Airborne Division. He is a native of Covington, and a 1970 graduate of Holmes High School. An active participant in sports, Spec. Mason was also a member of the Student Council and the Letter Club. While on his recruiting duty, he will be informing the youths of Rockcastle County the opportunities that are available to them as a member of the 82nd Airborne Division and the Army. Spec. Mason and other "All American" "Unit of Choice" representatives are looking for men to join America's combined arms team. This recruiting program allows an enlistee to choose the military unit with which he wants to serve. The program is for combat arms Military Occupational Specialty (MOS) and requires a three-year initial enlistment period. A similar program, "Special Unit of Enlistment" is also offered by the representatives. This allows a man to serve in a unit within the 82nd Airborne Div. in any MOS of his choice, provided the position is available. An insured duty period of 16 months is offered for those who qualify in their MOS and Airborne Training. Further explanation of these and other enlistment options can be obtained through Spec. Mason.

Down On The Farm

By: Roy G. Brown Assistant Vice President Cumberland PCA

This is a real busy time for all of us farmers and a most important time, too. Important that we get our crops out on time and in the right way if we expect a good harvest this fall.

All farmers are setting tobacco, planting corn and harvesting hay along with many other farm chores that must be done about every day.

Farmers' net incomes will be lower in 1974 due to low prices for cattle and hogs and the higher cost for everything we buy that goes into the production of crops, building, equipment and about everything else.

The government and consumer expect the farmer to produce food at or below cost, but farmers are changing their thinking about this. We, too, must get a profit above cost for the things we produce if we are to buy the products that the consumer gets high wages for making.

We need good prices for our farm produce if we are expected to buy the things that are necessary and a few things for a better standard of living which farmers need to make life a little easier and happier "Down on the Farm."

BOOKMOBILE SCHEDULE

The schedule for your Rockcastle County Bookmobile for June 9-15 is as follows: June 10th - Livingston, Ft. Squoyah, and Lamerco; June 11th - Fairview; and June 10th - Negro Creek.

Look for the Bookmobile when it is in your area. You'll find books galore from which to choose, and Mrs. Robbins will be delighted to assist you in finding your favorite reading material.

JUNE IS DAIRY MONTH — AND WE WOULD LIKE TO SAY . .

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE Dairy Industry

This month is a good time for all of us to take a closer look at our Dairy Industry. One thing is certain, it has become big business and is getting bigger every day. And our dairy farmers have done an excellent job in increasing production to meet growing demands. They are using the most modern, up-to-date equipment in rigidly controlled modern plants. We salute them for a job well done!

PEPPER GROWER

"We hope you got your plants in on schedule and that things are going smoothly for you. One of the major concerns to us now is weed and grass control. If you are cultivating, remember to cultivate very shallow (about one inch deep). Deep cultivation will cut the roots of the plants and reduce yields.

Also you should check fields closely to observe for plant lice (aphids) and bacterial leaf spot disease. Plant lice get on the underside of the leaves. They can cause the leaves to curl and cup downward and also transmit virus-diseases. You can control by spraying with malathion.

Bacterial leaf spot shows up as small specks or spots on the leaves when we have lots of rainfall. Infected leaves usually drop from the plant and expose developing fruit to sun scald. If you notice spots on the leaves, let me know as soon as possible. We can spray with a material called tri-basic copper sulfate. Do not use copper sulfate.

SAVE ON INCOME TAX BY PAYING CHILDREN FOR FARMWORK.....

You may be able to save on income taxes by paying your children for work they do on your farm. That is pointed out by Stephen Q. Allen, Extension Farm Management Specialist at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"You should consider paying reasonable wages to your children for work they actually do," says Allen. "Such payments are deductible farm expenses so long as there is a true employer-employee relationship."

In order to establish such a relationship, you should assign your children definite jobs or responsibilities, agree on wages, and pay the children by check as you would any other employee. Wages paid by parents to children who are under 21 years of age are not subject to Social Security tax, according to Allen. Also, these wages are not counted on the child's Social Security record.

A child under 19 years of age or one who is regularly enrolled in school may still be counted as a dependent on his parent's tax return as long as the parent pays over half of the child's support. Of course, a child who earns more than $2,050 a year may have to file a tax return of his own, notes Allen. Even so, this makes it possible for two personal exemptions to be claimed for him. The child can claim his own exemption when he files his return and his father can claim an exemption by including the child as a dependent.

Rules regarding a child filing a tax return may be different when a child has unearned income (rent, interest, dividends, etc.) or is self-employed. Allen explains.

BEAR FACTS:

In case you've ever wondered - the total land area of the United States is approximately 2,264 million acres. Over 26% is used for grassland pasture and range. Depending on whether the tide is out or in. And this land can be grouped into five broad categories according to use. The economists of the U.S. Department of Agriculture say that nearly 21% is used for growing crops. Nearly 32 percent is forest land. Around 12 1/2% is made up of marshes, open swamps, bare rock areas, desert, tundra and other land generally having low value for agricultural purposes. Then, there's 8%. That's where we live. All of it. It includes our cities and surrounding urban areas, plus land used for transportation, recreation, wildlife, public installations and facilities, farmsteads and farm roads. What all this amounts to is that us humans have about 8% of this land.....while Smokey Bear has nearly 32%.

PRESERVING FOOD AT HOME

A meal on a moment's notice; fresh corn in December; deer from last Fall's hunt - all compliments of the home freezer.

Freezing is one of the simplest, most popular methods of preserving foods at home. It retains the natural color, flavor, texture and food value of most fruits and vegetables, meats and baked goods.

The quality of the food frozen can vary with freshness of product used, methods of preparation, packaging and conditions of freezing.

For successful freezing select good-quality products. Freezing will not improve low grade food.

Frozen meat, poultry, fish and eggs equal the fresh products in nutritive value. Retaining this value of fruits and vegetables depends largely on treatment before freezing, storage temperature and method of cooking and serving.

Handling the food properly also retains quality. Improper packaging can cause undesirable flavor and appearance. The selection of containers depends on the type of food and personal preference.

But all materials should be moisture - vapor proof to prevent evaporation and retain the highest quality in frozen foods.

Glass, metal, rigid plastics, freezer wrapping materials, waxed and most bags are recommended because they are moisture-vapor proof or at least moisture-vapor resistant. Do not use ordinary waxed papers, household aluminum foil and cottage cheese or ice cream cartons.

All packages should be airtight. Freezer burn, a surface discoloration on meat and poultry, often results when meat or poultry dry due to improper packaging.

Give special care to foods which may become rancid, a result of natural fats and oils being exposed to atmospheric oxygen. These foods include fish, shellfish, beef, pork, meat, poultry.

Freeze fruits and vegetables at 0 degrees F. or below. Meat should be frozen in a commercial plant at 5 to 20 degrees F. for best results.

Space packages of unfrozen food at least one inch apart since heat must be given off in order for them to freeze. Put unfrozen food into a freezer than will freeze within twenty-four hours.

For quickest freezing, place packages against freezing plates or coils.

Storage temperature matters. For example, many foods noticeably lose quality and vitamin content when stored at about 25 degrees F. in an "open-at-one-end" household refrigerator freezer.

Freezing does not sterilize the product, but the low temperature prevents the growth of harmful yeasts, molds and bacteria. Some microorganisms are killed by freezing but many survive.

Election of state 4-H officers also is part of the Leadership Day activities. Nominations for state officers were made by the area 4-H groups prior to state 4-H Congress and, at multi-area meetings on Tuesday, the 4-Hers will narrow the candidate list to three candidates each for president, vice president and secretary. Campaign speeches and elections, using voting machines, are scheduled Thursday afternoon.

Leadership Day - and the 4-H Week program for seniors - ends with a Leadership Banquet and Inaugural Ball on Thursday evening.

Meanwhile, nearly 500 younger 4-Hers will be touring UK subject matter departments as part of the Junior 4-H Conference, where they will learn what UK has to offer and find out about 4-H project opportunities in various fields. On Tuesday morning and afternoon and Wednesday morning, they will visit different departments in the UK Colleges of Agriculture and Home

One of the most interesting characters ever to be involved in the history of Rockcastle County was William Adams, generally known throughout a long and colorful career as Devil Bill.

He was born in Culpepper County, Virginia, in 1776, the son of Rev. Feathergill Adams and his wife, the former Nancy Elizabeth Smith, of Bedford County, Virginia. Feathergill's father was Absalom Adams, who had married before leaving England for the American Colonies a Miss Feathergill, related to Dr. Feathergill, "Physician to the King" and also related to Lord Culpepper.

It is not definitely known at what time the Rev. Feathergill brought his family to Kentucky. Joseph Adams, a grandson of Devil Bill with whom I talked frequently in his old age, was sure that it was sometime before 1787; Forrest Calico, author of a history of Garrard County and an acknowledged authority on the Adams family, says it was possibly before 1785; a tradition in our family says that the families of Feathergill Adams and William Lawrence came into Kentucky, traveling together as well as Sugar Creek, where the Adams' settled and the Lawrences went on in the direction of what is now Danville, Kentucky. This is an established fact that William Lawrence had founded Lawrence's Station in the outskirts of Danville and was living there in 1782. His daughter, Rebecca, was born in 1785, the first white child born in Danville, and later became the wife of Devil Bill.

He was the first of his branch of the Adams family to come to Rockcastle County, and that date, also, cannot now be determined. He was the first married man of Long of Lincoln County, in 1797. Calico believed that they lived for a while in Barren County but soon separated and he came back to Garrard County, where he married Rebecca Lawrence, possibly around 1808. A son, Jones Lawrence Adams, was born in 1810 and it is known that he had an older brother, Smith Adams, born in the latter part of 1808 or early in 1809. They were living in Rockcastle in 1816 when they participated in the division of Feathergill's estate, following his death in 1807.

In the meantime, Devil Bill had spent his young manhood growing up as a wild, roistering bled, companion to some of the young Kennedy boys, the Kennedys and Adams' being neighbors. He served in the War of 1812, and it is here he is supposed to have won the name by which he was ever after known. The story is that his commanding officer was on his knees in his tent, praying, just before a battle, when Adams burst in upon him with a oath and told him there was no time to pray, but to get up and fight, as the enemy was upon them. The officer is supposed to have rebuked him for his language, exclaiming, "Billy, you devil, you Devil!"

Devil Bill was apparently a wealthy man when he came to Rockcastle County and seemed to add to his wealth with the passing of time. He always said that he came to Rockcastle because he could raise cheaper here than he could in any other place. He was long noted as the richest man in Rockcastle and the biggest taxpayer. He owned many rich acres around Mt. Vernon, including the Staverson and Livesay farms and other holdings running into thousands of acres. He is said to have lived at one time at what is now the Wally Phillips place, owning five thousand acres of land and around 100 slaves. Before his death he operated a tavern at what was later known as the Ike Bowman hogue, just outside Mt. Vernon, which he later gave to his daughter, Elizabeth, whose second husband was Dr. Josiah Jopkin, she first having married John Crawford. They were the great grandparents of my wife.

Devil Bill Adams was a man of great charity, but subject to fits of almost insane temper. This he inherited from his mother, Elizabeth, a red-headed Irish girl. It was told of her that if a cow she was milking kicked over the milk pail or otherwise misbehaved she would put the cow's teeth in her mouth and bite them severely as punishment. Devil Bill early showed symptoms of strong-headedness and strength of character. After coming to Kentucky, and when he was only twelve years of age, his father gave him a switching in the presence of a little neighbor girl he considered his sweetheart, which so angered and embarrassed him that night he took his father's best horse, saddle and bridle and went back to his grandfather's home in Virginia, a twelve year old boy riding alone through the many miles of Indian-infested forest between Garrard County, Kentucky, and his grandfather's home in old Virginia.

I have been in a position to learn much about this man I knew and often talked with two of his grandsons, both of whom lived to be very old men. One of them, visiting here again on his 100th birthday, gave me some very interesting stories of him. But I had even a better source than that. My grandmother Lair lived as a child in his home for many years. Her mother was a sister to Devil Bill's wife and they took her in when her own father failed to provide for his family. It was my grandmother who told of the morning when Devil Bill came to the breakfast table in a black mood and gave the cook three minutes to have fried turkey on his plate. The slave, a quick thinker, dashed out to the poultry pens, sliced the breast from a live turkey, ran back to the kitchen with it, pulling out feathers as she ran, and within the prescribed three minutes had it smoking hot on his plate. When asked by my grandmother how in the world she had thought of all that so quickly she replied "Ay Lude, honey, if hell-fish bin as close to you 'back as it was to mine, you'da thought of somethin', too."

Devil Bill's grandson, Joseph Adams, told of the time after winning a horse race in Tennessee when he had to cut his way out of a gang of robbers who had surrounded him to take his winnings, and repeated a story Joseph's father had told him of a time when Devil Bill took his family, by covered wagon, to visit relatives in Texas. While camped out one dark night, Bill went into the brush to get wood for a campfire and was attacked by a wolf, which he finally succeeded in stamping to death after having practically all his clothes torn off by the savage beast. His other grandson, Willis Adams, told of the time the bully of Green County came to Mt. Vernon to try to find out, as he put it, "Which was the Bull-of-the-Woods." He got a skull fracture for his trouble and the only doctor in Mt. Vernon (a Dr. Love, a "water doctor") got run out of town by Devil Bill because he was afraid to treat the patient with Bill taking over treatment himself and succeeding in saving the man's life. Being cured of his curiosity as well as his disability, the gentleman was glad to head back for Green County as soon as he was able to sit his horse.

A man of many moods and passions, his generosity knew no limits when a real need was present. He clothed and carried many an unfortunate family through the winter when misfortune overtook them. On the other hand, he knew no mercy to an opponent. Being a bit on the small side in stature, he made up for it in raw courage and determination. Having heard so many rough tales concerning him I had long been prepared to think of him as sort of a "raw head and bloody bones" character until a few years ago, when I finally turned up an old picture of him, which I expect to run in our book. This shows him as a well-groomed, cultured gentleman of the Old South - flowered silk vest and all. Except for the wild tales told about him - and still remembered - he had been all but forgotten until some twenty years ago when I found his grave in a tangle of weeds and briars on the old Jess Livesay place and started digging into his history, little of which could be given here. It would take a separate book to get the job done right. *****

Manpower Programs Get Federal Funds - Gov. Wendell H. Ford announced that Kentucky's local manpower programs will get approximately $28 million in federal funds starting July 1. This means the state's unemployed or under-employed will have more classroom and on-the-job training, basic education counseling and job development before being placed in jobs. Ford also announced that Kentucky's 1974 summer youth job program will get $7.4 million in combined federal and state funds.

Stripping Permits Denied - Breathitt Firm - The Div. of Reclamation of the Kentucky Dept. for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection has denied surface mining permits to a Breathitt County coal company seeking to strip coal on two sites in Walk County near Red River. Div. Director John Roberts said the proposed mining operation would constitute a hazard to the stream. Portions of the Red River are protected by the Wild Rivers Act.

Contract Rights
Consumers, be smart. Anything you sign might be a contract.
A contract is a promissory agreement between two or more persons that creates, modifies, or destroys a legal right.

In a contract, certain disclosures regarding the credit terms of the transaction must be made to the consumer, in the writing, at the time he or she signs, and a written copy of the contract must be furnished to the consumer before the first payment becomes due.
Blank spaces relating to price, charges or terms of payment must be filled in at the time a contract is signed. Consumers must receive without request a receipt for cash payments. Look at the contract and see if the guarantee is specific. Be sure all charges are itemized.
Consumers are legally bound by the terms of a written contract, not by the glowing words of the salesman. Never sign a contract where the blank spaces are not filled in. Keep a copy of the agreement, and if, after reading, you still do not understand all provisions of the agreement, consult an attorney. Remember, "as is" means no warranty. Read the small print. Beware of the legal double talk.

Follow these rules before signing any contracts:
Be sure you need what you are signing for. Read every word - even the small print. If you do not understand, do not sign - get help from someone you trust or ask a legal aid agency.
Don't be rushed - smart people take their time. Remember, it's your money.
Be sure all the seller's promises are written in the contract. Never sign a contract without getting a copy and know the total cost. Never sign a paper to get rid of a salesman or an Air Force officer who had fled a base hospital psychiatric ward. He went to the fugitive's home and the man ran out the back door. Lt. Purcell followed in pursuit, ran around the corner of a garage at the rear of the residence and came upon the man with a .22 pistol drawn.

Lt. James N. Purcell of the Wright-Patterson Air Force Base Security force in Dayton, Ohio is shown receiving an award for valor from Brig. Gen. Irby E. Jarvis, Jr., base commander. Lt. Purcell was cited for bravery in apprehending

Purcell said his weapon was still in his holster. "So, I just started talking." The man finally lowered the weapon and finally relinquished it to the officer. Purcell, a native of Mt. Vernon, is the son of Mrs. Flora Purcell of Mt. Vernon and the late Cecil Purcell.

PINE MOUNTAIN CAMP MORE TO DO THAN THE VIEW

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Travel brochures bill the view from atop lofty Pine Mountain in Harlan County as "breath-taking."

At 2,800 ft., the crest offers panoramic sight seeing and a home for the residents of the state's minimum security forestry camp. Perched right on top of one of Kentucky's tallest peaks, they manage to find plenty to keep them busy besides the view.

For them, Pine Mountain represents an uphill struggle in more ways than one, according to camp supervisor Don Battles.

"Even though the camp is a minimum security facility providing a relatively free atmosphere, residents here still are prisoners who need some degree of rehabilitation," Battles said.

A recent report from Battles suggests that the camp has been successful in rehabilitating its residents and helping the surrounding community.

With a handful of residents and 13 staff members, the camp opened in April of last year as the newest of seven state correctional facilities. It earlier had been operated by the old Department of Child Welfare.

A year later, the Harlan County camp now houses 33 residents of Foresty, either upon their arrival at the camp or at the state penal facility from which they are being transferred.

The men are trained by the Division of Forestry, either upon their arrival at the camp or at the state penal facility from which they are being transferred.

But the men also assisted as compared to 29,859,011 tons derived from surface mining. Muhlenberg County led the state in overall coal production with 24,133,982 tons.

Memorial Weekend Traffic Fatalities Lowest Since 1957 - Three persons died on Kentucky Highways as Memorial weekend ended. According to Kentucky State Police Com. Ron Johnson, that's the lowest number of fatalities during that holiday period in 17 years.

He attributed the lower number of fatalities to stricter enforcement of the lower speed limits. Three hundred state police troopers patrolled from midnight Thursday to midnight Monday.

Programs developed at the camp during its first year include Alcoholics Anonymous, Jaycees, vocational and academic training, drug abuse groups, family planning seminars and group counseling.

Battles says camp-community relations always have been good. A spaghetti dinner sponsored by the camp's Jaycee chapter recently feted some 100 Harlan Countians.

Record Coal Production - Kentucky was the nation's number one coal producer in 1973, with a record-breaking 127,514,000 tons, according to figures released by the state Department of Mines and Minerals. The total production figure tops the previous record, made in 1970, by more than two million tons. Underground mining produced the largest amount of coal - 67,244,969 tons.

Petitions Must Be Signed By Registered Voters - In a question asked by Robert Lee Rose, Winchester, Assistant Attorney General Walter C. Herdman said that petitions should be filed with a fiscal court no later than ninety days after the date of the first signature on the petition. Herdman added that where initial petitions have been filed but the ninety days have not expired supplemental petitions may be filed prior to the deadline. Kentucky statutes require that all petitioners be qualified voters who voted in the last general election.

Textbook Law May Save Parents Money

FRANKFORT, Ky.—In these days of rising costs, parents should be pleased to know that Kentucky's new textbook law may save them some money.

The revised law allows for introduction of new textbooks in cycles of five, rather than four, years. This change will mean fewer texts when parents of high school students must buy new texts instead of used ones.

The textbook law puts Kentucky in line with a national trend toward five-year "adoption" cycles. In Kentucky and 23 other states, a textbook commission selects or "adopts" certain texts for use throughout the state. Until this year Kentucky was one of four states with an adoption schedule shorter than five years.

Under the recommendation of the Textbook Advisory Committee, a group appointed in 1973 by Superintendent of Public Instruction Dr. Lyman V.

Ginger, the legislature lengthened Kentucky's adoption cycle.

The five-year cycle will allow more time for selection of texts, according to Eugene Robinson of the Department of Education's Division of Instructional Media.

Robinson explained that during each year of the adoption cycle, books for different school subjects are chosen. The more years in the cycle, the fewer subjects come up for review each year.

For example, the state formerly adopted both math and science texts in the same year. Now, each of these subjects will be adopted separately, going both to the textbook commission and the local schools more time to review material before selection.

The longer adoption cycle is financially advantageous not only to parents, but also to elementary school systems. A school that must purchase books for two major subject areas in one year often feels a budget pinch.
