Without a doubt, spring and fall are two of the most productive fishing seasons in Kentucky. However, summer, too, may be a very exciting time especially for those who are aware of some of the techniques that will almost always put fish on the stringer or in the portable ice box.

Some of the best black bass fishing of the year occurs during this time, especially for those anglers who ply their skills of casting the banks and dropoffs at night.

Night bass casters usually rest during the day and set their head to the lake near dark, as the waters calm down from the boating activities of the day.

Spinner baits and the artificial nightglow lures are two of the top producers during this period.

Many of the night anglers will locate a school of feeding bass off the deep drop-offs or rocky points, and as a result of their fish-finding efforts, they may even harvest a limit of five bass.

Night casting is fine for some but there are many who choose fishing after the first daylight hours. Then, a good choice is either casting the shoreline in early morning or late evening for black bass on the surface lures, or head to the open water and await the jumps.

Jump fishing, when it's right, is about the most exciting type of sport fishing that one may ever get into. Both white bass and black bass are taken from the jumps, as schools of these fish feed on surfacing of shad.

Surface lures as a rule will take black bass while spinners and spoons are the choice of the white bass.

Jump fishing most often occurs in calm water, especially in early morning and late evenings. Anglers must be accurate in their casts to the target areas where the schooling fish are feeding. At peak periods this type of angling will produce a fish or a strike with every cast.

Still fishing also has its place during the summer, especially for the bluegill. Many of the best strings or coolers of bluegill are to be taken during the hot summer.

Many of the pro bluegill fishermen drift the deeper banks or steep walls with worms or crickets and pick up dozens of numbers of these fine sunfish during the entire day.

Some anglers are missing a good bet during the summer by not trying for rainbow trout that the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources has stocked in 27 streams, seven fallwaters below the major lakes and in four state-owned lakes are stocked three times, and the two major lakes receive their trout at one time. (Trout fishermen need a trout stamp in addition to a valid fishing license.)

For further information, write to the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Capital Plaza, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601 and ask for the trout stocking pamphlet.

REDISCOVER KENTUCKY

Those who missed the first annual American Indian Reunion Days last year in Greenup County will have an opportunity to correct the oversight July 13-15 at the Boyd County High School athletic field near Ashland.

The reunion this year is part of the state's Bicentennial Celebration, explained Mrs. Marcella Rye of Ashland, spokesperson for the sponsoring group and herself part Cherokee.

"We'd like any area group to enter a float in the big parade," said the promoter of PIPE (Preserve Indian Peoples' Environment), "and also sponsor exhibits of historical nature to be set up on the high school grounds or in the auditorium."

Theme of the event, including the parade, is "America, Then and Now." Adena Indians are known to have been in Eastern Kentucky as early as 800 B.C., and the Shawnee and other tribes came later to hunt and roam the wilderness, searching for game and silver.

Attending the reunion will be Indians from throughout the United States. "Indian traders will set up booths on the grounds," Mrs. Rye said, "and will demonstrate the making of authentic Indian crafts and will sell their arts and crafts items."

Popular features are Indian dancing and music. Among drummers who will participate are Teofilo Lucero, Taos Pueblo from Arizona, and Benny Bearskins, a Winnebago from Chicago. "I expect twice as many Indians this year," said Mrs. Rye.

An added attraction will be a replica of an Indian village which is being erected at the reunion site.

Among tribes expected are Cherokee, Potawatomi, Pawnee, Chippewa, Apache, Saupe, Blackfoot, Santee Sioux, Seneca, "and many others."

Authentic Indian foods will be prepared at the site, with other foods available at concessions.

"The Indian reunion days at the Boyd County High grounds will serve many purposes," said Mrs. Rye. "We need to meet and get acquainted with Indians to foster greater understanding among all peoples, and we hope we can realize a profit from some endeavors in the event in order to continue our help of medicines and foods for needy Indians on reservations. The fact that the reunion is a part of the state's celebration helps emphasize the Bicentennial."

Mr. Gaines, a native of London, Kentucky, entered the Immigration and Naturalization Service at Detroit, Michigan on July 7, 1941. During his career he has served at stations in Detroit, Michigan, Miami, Florida, Savannah, Georgia, Nassau, Bahamas and Cincinnati, Ohio. In addition, he has served temporarily at offices in Washington, D.C., New York, New York and Pensacola, Florida. Mr. Gaines was appointed Officer in Charge of the Cincinnati office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service on September 12, 1965. The Cincinnati, Ohio office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service has administrative jurisdiction over Immigration and Nationality matters over the entire state of Kentucky and thirty-six counties in Ohio. During the coming summer Mr. Gaines and his wife plan a trip to the Orient which will include visits to Japan, Thailand and Hong Kong. Mr. Gaines hopes to indulge in his hobbies of golf, woodworking, gardening and just plain loafing. Mr. Gaines' wife is the former Lelaine Franck of Brodhead, Ky.

Anderson Makes Second Visit To Tombstone Jct.

The Bill Anderson Show, starring Bill Anderson and the Po' Boys, featuring Jimmy Gately and Mary Lou Turner, Hazard, Ky. native will visit Tombstone Junction on Sunday, June 16.

The lanky, personable, South Carolina-born entertainer is a former newspaperman who broke into show business when he became a disc jockey at a small radio station in Georgia. Later he turned to singing and composing, landed a contract with Decca Records and was on his way to stardom.

He is the star of his own weekly TV series, "The Bill Anderson Show," which is seen in 126 cities coast-to-coast. In addition, Bill also appears frequently as the guest star on such shows as "Dinah's Place," "Lee Haw," NBC's "Today Show" and many others.

Bill has written hundreds of songs which have been hits for himself and his fellow artists. He has received over thirty BMI awards - more than any other country music composer - and countless other awards. Among his hit songs are "Where Have All Our Heroes Gone," "City Lights," "Still," "Once A Day," and "I Love You Drops." Superstar Bill Anderson will be giving three performances at Tombstone Junction. Show times are 12:30, 3:00 and 5:30 CDT. Other entertainment will include gunfights, shows, train rides and train robberies. The park will be open from 9:30 a.m. till 6:30 p.m. Tombstone Junction is located one mile from Cumberland Falls State Park.

PESTICIDE BILL REQUIRES EDUCATION CAMPAIGN

FRANKFORT, Ky. - A bill passed by the 1974 General Assembly requiring training and licensing of farmers before they use certain pesticides in Kentucky is expected to require an extensive educational campaign

The new pesticide legislation was enacted to bring Kentucky into compliance with U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regulations. Control of pesticides known to be potentially hazardous to human, animal or aquatic life rests with EPA. The states have until 1976 to assume responsibility for the controls.

Fred Waters, director of the pesticides branch in the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection (administering agency for the program in Kentucky), said the most pressing problem now is getting farmers to accept the controls.

Many of the pesticides which will probably be placed on the restricted list are in widespread use now, and many farmers are concerned they will no longer be able to use them to control pest and weed problems, Waters said. He added, "There are so many rumors flying around that the farmers don't know what to believe."

Waters said one of the strongest rumors is that all pesticides and herbicides will be banned. Use of pesticides will not be stopped, he said, but individual chemicals will be restricted to certain areas. The restrictions are necessary because a chemical that controls tobacco worms without leaving a residue can leave toxic traces when used on a grain, according to Waters.

"Pesticides have been a big boom to farming and increasing crop yields," Waters noted. "We are not trying to drive farmers out of business, but to train them in the proper uses of pesticides, so that they may obtain the maximum results with a minimum of detrimental effects on the environment."

Waters currently is developing a state plan for administering and regulating the program. Although scheduled to be in operation by the end of this year, the plan must first be approved by EPA.

Included in the controls will be a list of restricted herbicides and pesticides. The list is now being compiled by EPA and is expected to be released this fall.

Before farmers are allowed to use the restricted pesticides, they will be required to participate in a training session designed to acquaint them with the benefits and drawbacks of the individual compounds.

According to provisions of the new law, unless a farmer or commercial applicator has a state license to use the restricted pesticides, a dealer will not be allowed to sell the chemical to him. As the program is expected to cover a minimum of 30,000 farmers, Waters said the buying restriction may be one of only a few ways of enforcing the program.

Penalties for abuse of chemicals are severe. Fines may be levied up to $1,000 and a jail sentence of one year may also be imposed.

An added expense for non-compliance could be crop loss. The U.S. Department of Agriculture conducts spot checks of crops such as corn and tobacco for traces of restricted or banned pesticides. The presence of such a chemical can result in rejection of the crop for sale. "I have worked 20 years in the agriculture field, and I have always found farmers to be reasonable," he said. "They are not only concerned with their interests, but with the best interests of their environment and the people of this country that they feed."

KENTUCKY 4-H WEEK

Careers, leadership and opportunities in 4-H have the spotlight this week (June 10-14) as 14 county 4-Hers attend Kentucky 4-H Week at the University of Kentucky.

Featuring separate programs most of the time for seniors (ages 14-19) and for juniors (ages 11-13) this event took about 1,000 4-Hers from throughout the state to Lexington this week.

At senior 4-H Congress, the older 4-Hers are exploring career opportunities and developing plans for teen leadership programs back home. In addition, they are planning, campaigning for and electing state 4-H Officers. Senior 4-Hers attending from Rockcastle County are Doug Proctor, Brodhead, Casey Hines, Lisa Lewis, Lori Stewart and Sherry Bullock of Mt. Vernon.

Meanwhile, the boys and girls at the Junior 4-H Conference are finding out about the opportunities available in the many 4-H projects offered for Kentucky youth. They also have had a chance to tour the Bluegrass Area. The juniors from this county who went to Lexington are: Joey Williams and Mark Popoyar of Livingston; Shari Martin, Lori Cash, Paula Proctor, Audrey Faulkner, Jill Martin and Kim Bullock of Brodhead and Lisa Owens of Mt. Vernon.

The program opened Monday night with a general assembly for both juniors and seniors at which Kentucky Lt. Gov. Julian Carrill spoke on "Prepare for Leadership Roles Tomorrow." Then on Tuesday morning and afternoon and Wednesday morning, the juniors visited different departments in the UK College of Agriculture and Home Economics, according to their interests.

The Senior Congress program for Tuesday opened with an assembly at which Dr. Tom Haggai, North Carolina minister and orator who appeared on the list of candidates nominated before Congress by a Perfect World. For the rest of the morning the senior delegates met in multi-area meetings to select three nominees each for state 4-H president, vice-president, and secretary.

The list of candidates nominated before Congress by 4-Hers in the 14 Extension areas. Tuesday afternoon, the seniors visited UK colleges of their choice and on Tuesday night, the seniors heard Kentucky Senator Marlowe Cook discuss "Leadership in Thursday's program for juniors includes visits to various departments in the other UK colleges. For seniors, Thursday -- "Leadership Day" -- starts with area seminars on leadership -- what it's all about, what it means to them personally, and how they can use it back home. State officer elections are scheduled Thursday afternoon.

The final night's program for juniors features a movie followed by music, dancing and entertainment. For the seniors, 4-H Congress ends with a banquet, at which UK football center Rick Nazam will speak; installation of new state 4-H officers; and an Inaugural Ball. The 4-Hers return home Friday. Accompanying them at this event is Cindy Stearns, Summer Extension Intern from Berea College.

Wednesday afternoon, the juniors toured points of interest in the Bluegrass area. That night, both juniors and seniors went to a Kentucky Night dinner at Keweenaw Race Course, where they met Miss such productions which will play this summer around the country, including Bardonia, Kentucky's "The Stephen Foster Story" and Berea's "Wilderness Road." "Wilderness Road" opens the 1974 season on June 26 at Indian Ford Theatre in Berea at 8:30 p.m. and will run through September 1. Performances are nightly except Sundays; September 1, the final performance, is the only Sunday scheduled. This is the third season for the Civil War musical play. For information and reservations, contact: Wilderness Road drama, CPO Box 2355, Berea, Ky. 40403. The telephone number is (606) 986-9403. In Kentucky, the toll free number is (800) 262-7471.

"Advice To Vacationers"

mailing of letters and post cards while on their holiday were offered today by Postmaster James O. Smith.

"Mail as early as possible in the day, preferably in the morning," he said. "Avoid mailing on weekends when many post offices are closed. And try to deposit cards in mailboxes that indicate an early pickup."

He also suggested: Buy enough stamps before leaving home to prevent running out far away from the nearest post office. Keep in mind that stamps are more expensive when purchased from commercial vending machines.

Always use sufficient postage. For first class cards, use an 8-cent stamp if the post card is not larger than the standard 4 1/4 x 6 inch size. For "jumbo" cards, 10-cent stamps are required. For airmail, use an 11-cent stamp on standard post cards and 13 cents for "jumbo" cards. As a general rule, use airmail stamps only when the mailing distance is 600 miles or more.

Remember to use ZIP codes. Many times cards are addressed hurriedly without ZIP codes, trains or planes. Legible ZIP Codes will help speed mail to its proper destination.

Keep this trick in mind: Type the addresses of friends and relatives on self-adhesive labels before you leave home. It is surprising how much time this saves on the road and how much neater those cards will look.

Another note: Don't forget about your personal mail back home. Remember to ask a friend or neighbor to empty your mailbox daily and to hold the mail until you return. An overstuffed box in your absence is an open invitation for thieves to enter your temporarily unoccupied home.

However, if you prefer, you can fill out a form available from the post office and request that your mail be held for any period up to thirty days. If you choose this method, be sure to specify when you want your mailman to resume home delivery.

"The best way to insure a relaxing vacation comes from taking the necessary steps to make certain that everything - including the mail - is in good order back home," Postmaster Smith said.

"4-H CAMP"

carefully planned and supervised to assure maximum participation and maximum safety.

This year a tennis court has been added to the camp's recreational facilities. Also this summer the youngsters will find an amphitheater on the grounds where they can hold their vesper services and stage talent shows and other events of this kind.

Something else added this year is a fleet of bicycles that will be used to teach bike safety and maintenance. Camp custodian Bob Lindy said that no effect was being spared to see that young people attending these camps this summer will be given an opportunity to learn, have fun, and to enjoy a wholesome recreational experience under competent instructors.

Any 4-H youngsters wishing to attend one of these series of camps can contact his local county Extension agent for details, or call 256-2403. Rockcastle County will be camping July 8-12.

KENTUCKY AFIELD

Fishing is an exciting pastime that is enjoyed by both men and women, young and old. There are those who choose to cast artificial lures, while others would rather fish with live bait. Many anglers seek out the black bass while others choose trout, white bass, crappie or the fighting bluegill.

Every year, however, there are those who, along with their other fishing interests, try their hand at a different type of fishing, trot-line fishing.

Trotlines have been used down through the years by both sport fishermen and by commercial fishermen who each year will harvest tons of prime catfish and other rough fish such as white perch, buffalo and carp.

The most sought-after fish of the trotliner is none other than the catfish. Channel and blue cats are the top contenders and many monster flatheads also are taken annually.

While some choose this technique for a livelihood in commercial fishing, many family groups find trotlining a really exciting sport and an excellent way to put fish on the table and in the deep freeze.

Cut bait works well at times and small shad, crawfish and grasshoppers are not to be overlooked. But possibly more big cats are harvested when small live bluegill are used as bait.

There are many fishermen who find stink baits and doughballs prime bait for trotlines and they too will harvest an ample share of catfish and other rough fish.

Trotline fishing can be especially exciting in Kentucky's major lake areas as well as the big rivers that abound throughout the Commonwealth.

However, in some of the state-owned lakes trotline fishing is illegal. Therefore, check the legality in your area.

Following are the rules and regulations concerning the use of sport fishing trotlines. A valid fishing license is required and:

- Only two sport fishing trotlines (not more than fifty hooks each) may be used by a sport fisherman at any one time. Hooks cannot be set closer than 18' apart.

- Each trotline must be baited and all fish removed at least once every 24 hours.

- Each trotline must be removed from the water when fishing is terminated.

- Failure to bait and remove fish from the trotline each 24 hours or failure to remove the line from the water at the termination of fishing shall constitute illegal use of the gear and this gear shall be subject to confiscation and/or the user subject to prosecution.

- No sport fishing trotline may be used within 700 yards below Kentucky Dam or that area between Barkley Dam and Highway 62 Bridge or within two hundred yards below any dam.

- No sport fishing trotline may be used in those lakes under five hundred acres owned or managed by the Dept. of Fish and Wildlife Resources, except those lakes on Ballard Co. Waterfowl Management Area.

County Blood Donor Program Organized

A proposed county-wide blood donor program may insure the future blood needs of everyone in Rockcastle County. The program, technically called a "blood assurance plan," was developed by the Rockcastle County Donor Club in conjunction with the Lexington-based Central Kentucky Blood Center.

Under the blood assurance plan, people will receive benefits simply by being residents or employees of Rockcastle County. Everyone, including the elderly, the disabled, and those not physically able to donate blood will be covered by the plan.

This is the way it works. If you are married and donate a pint of blood, the blood needs of yourself, your wife and your children will be covered for an entire year up to any amount. If you are single and donate a pint of blood, the blood needs of yourself, your parents and your parents' dependents will be covered for an entire year up to an amount.

However, to maintain this blood assurance plan, the Rockcastle County Donor Club must acquire a total of 330 pints of blood each year. This total can only be reached if the residents and employees of Rockcastle County are willing to voluntarily donate a pint of their own blood. As a spokesman for the Central Kentucky Blood Center said:

"The adoption of this new plan depends upon an increase in the number of blood units (pints) drawn from the people of Rockcastle County. The number of units we need to draw to put this program into effect is dependent upon the number of units used each year by the county hospital and the residents of Rockcastle County. Presently, there are no blood mobile visits in the community, but we have hopes of being able to bring the unit perhaps five or six times a year."

The Rockcastle County Donor Club is anxious to meet the 330 pint quota and will start its donor recruitment drive on Tuesday, June 18th, when a mobile blood drawing unit will set up quarters in the Mt. Vernon Elementary School. Qualified phlebotomists (blood drawers) will draw blood from Rockcastle County volunteers only after each volunteer has undergone a thorough screening to make sure that he is physically able to donate blood.

Those interested in donating blood should come to the Mt. Vernon Elementary School between 12 noon and 8:30 p.m. on June 18th.

At least one hundred donors are needed at this time and it is hoped that steps in Broodhead and Livingston, in future months, will draw the additional pints needed to assure Rockcastle County of participation in this program. Any healthy adult between the ages of 18 and 66 is eligible to be a blood donor.

Mr. Larry Burdette, chairman of the Rockcastle County Donor Club, feels that all civic, industrial, and religious organizations must actively participate in order to put blood assurance plan into effect in Rockcastle County. Mr. Burdette will be happy to answer any questions or give additional information concerning the blood drive on June 18. He can be reached by calling WRVK Radio, 256-2146. Questions can also be directed to the Civil Defense Office, 256-4911.

Mt. Vernon City Council Meets....

The Mt. Vernon City Council at its regular monthly meeting Monday night, decided to resurface five streets in Mt. Vernon if Allen and Company's blacktopping plant in Mt. Vernon reopens in July as reported. The five streets had been scheduled to be resurfaced earlier, but due to the closing of the plant, the cost of hauling blacktop from a plant outside of the county proved too exorbitant.

The blacktop plant in town is scheduled to reopen the latter part of July and, if this is done, these streets will be resurfaced and any other streets in town needing it will be patched.

Scheduled for resurfacing are: Hunter Drive from the Old Broodhead Road SW to the dead end, a distance of 0.83 miles; Lovell Lane from Richmond Street NW to Ferguson Street, a distance of 0.31 mile; Newcomb Avenue from Hospital Drive E to the dead end, a distance of 0.15 mile; Paul Street from Sand Springs Road E, a distance of 0.38 mile and Perciful Street from Newcomb Street N to High Street, a distance of 0.10 mile.

In other business, the Council also voted to hire Roy "Schooner" Lucas permanently as City Policeman. Mr. Lucas had been hired originally for thirty days.

The Council also approved the Revenue Sharing budget for 1974-75 with a breakdown as follows: Public Safety, Operating/Maintenance, $2,000 (materials and supplies for fire and police departments); Public Transportation (Street) $2,420 capital expenditure and $6,020 operating/maintenance; Recreation (boat dock), $1,250 capital expenditure; Social services for the aged (60 poor), $304; Financial Administration, $840 and Libraries, $300.

HEALTH DEPT. HOLDS FOOD SERVICE SCHOOL

The Rockcastle County Health Department recently held a Food Service School, and there were eight graduates from the four-day course.

Those participating and the food service they represented were: Cynthia Herrin, Shannon Raines and Mary Ann Howard, Red Top Restaurant; Wade Graves and Geneva Anglin, Hen House Cafe; Betty McPerron, Ideal Cafe; Billy Medley, Medley Drive-In and Mary Jane Isaacs, Central Vending Company.

Local Teen-agers Spend $1,615,000

Financially, Rockcastle County's teenagers have come into their own. They have wealth such as their parents never dreamed of at their age. As a result, they have blossomed into a consumer group to be reckoned with.

With the unprecedented amount of money at their command, estimated at more than $1,615,000 a year, they are being courted as never before by manufacturers and retail merchants through frequent changes of fashions and styles.

For the most part, it is found, what they have they spend - fast. The money doesn't get a chance to bore holes in their pockets.

It goes for the whole gamut of personal items and leisure activities that are important to them - beauty aids, jewelry, pop records, radios, cars, clothes, snacks, entertainment and the like.

In addition to what the young people in the local area spend on themselves, they exert a strong influence on family purchases.

The findings are based upon surveys and studies made by the Youth Research Institute and others. The figures show that the 29 million teenagers in the United States are currently spending at the rate of $24.7 billion a year, which averages out to about $50 each.

In Rockcastle County, where the number of boys and girls in the 13 to 19 age group is now 1,900, according to the Census Bureau, this amounts to nearly $1,615,000.

The poll taken by the Youth Research Institute shows that girls usually outspend the boys. Among the 13 to 15-year-olds it is at the rate of $6.10 a week for the girls as against $5.56 for the boys. At ages 16 to 19 the gap widens to $18.90 a week versus $17.85.

One reason for the freer spending on the part of girls is that they have bigger incomes. They are able to get jobs more easily than boys, especially in the highly profitable baby sitting area.

Nationally, it is estimated, teenagers have direct influence over nearly $50 billion of family purchasing.

In Rockcastle County, at that rate, they have a voice in the spending of an additional $3,262,000 annually.

FARM EMPLOYERS SHOULD HAVE IRS TAX.

If you are a farmer who hires labor, then you should have a copy of an Internal Revenue Service publication pertaining to taxes. This is the recommendation of Stephen Q. Allen, extension farm management specialist at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Allen says farmers who hire labor should have a copy of IRS Circular A, Agricultural Employers Tax Guide. This publication advises agricultural employers of the various forms and tax returns that may be required when labor is hired for agricultural work. It also indicates the dates these materials are to be filed.

The publication provides information on voluntary income tax withholding on wages paid for agricultural work, deducting employee social security taxes, use of government depositories for tax liability, and records that must be kept on employees.

A useful table is included that shows how employment taxes apply to agricultural labor. The table indicates when certain types of labor are subject to income tax withholding, social security tax, and federal unemployment tax.

Allen says farmers can obtain copies of Circular A from the Internal Revenue Service.

JOHN NICHOLS'

Frankfort Watchline

Our governor, like any candidate worth his salt, is keeping himself before the public eye. If he's not on national television, he's busy passing out budget surplus goodies or he's looking for a better way to handle campaign gifts.

And mind you, this is all just in the past week. But we're not being critical. It's just a comment on the man's ability to keep making news, while casting an eagle eye on the Senate seat in Republican Marlow Cook.

Of course, there's the good mixed with the good. We'd like to have seen Ford's face when he was told by phone in Seattle that Parks Boss Ewart Johnson admitted to some slight suggestion of support for certain Western Kentucky primary candidates... solicitation. That is, among parks workers.

Now, that's a no-no. No matter how gentle the nibble, it's still a no-no. It might not have been intentional but don't you know what tasty fodder it'll provide for the Cook camp when the Senate campaigning gets hot and heavy?

We have to give Johnson his due for being honest enough to admit it. What's left is to sit back and wait for the Democratically-controlled State Personnel Board to take note of his stumble.

Wonder if our pat on the back for Johnson's honesty will be matched by a slap on the wrist by the board for his subtle alert to the parks people that he could "work with" Frank Stubblefield and Appellate Court candidate Joyce Clayton.

Maintenance. Ford critics will probably jump on the timing of his allocation of some forty million dollars in state budget surplus... especially the $5 million going out to the beleaguered coal counties in severance tax excesses.

The timing was not of Ford's making. It was a legislative mandate under which he was acting. If he's going to get some good will out of these spending decisions, so be it. That's part of the advantage of being governor while running for another office.

Were you surprised at the elevation of three-time State Representative Billy Paxton of Central City to the Secretary of Transportation post? We were, just a little.

We expected Transportation boss Jim Gray to leave soon to help in the Ford Senate campaign, but it never occurred to us that the governor would replace him with someone generally identified with former party chairman J. R. Miller. If there's anyone who's been down in the mouth lately about prospects of Ford leaving the governor's office and going to Washington, it's Miller.

It means a year's free ride as governor for Lt. Gov. Julian Carroll and to put it mildly, Carroll and Miller ain't on speaking terms. That's not to say Ford and Miller are on the outs, but the job shuffle just didn't seem to follow, somehow.

Our premise may be wrong. Paxton appears to be at least as close to Ford as he is to Miller. Seems to us, though, that Paxton not too long ago appeared to be supporting Miller for governor in '76.

Anyway, the governor says Paxton's the best man for the Transportation job and judging from his legislative performance he can cut it. He was certainly a loyal member of the governor's leadership and he climbed to a new level of respect this year, pushing hard for abolition of the infamous strip-mining bond form deed.

But this sparks another question. What happens to all of these Ford disappointments at top-level spots in state government, if and when the governor ascends to that Olympus in Washington? Will Carroll be able to live with all of them?

Or worse than that, yes, he'll grit his teeth and force himself to bite back that urge to dump several on the state payroll for whom he has no earthly use. We believe that Carroll has told Ford that he will retain in office those now holding sensitive positions in state government through the end of Ford's regular term. That is, if they want to stay.

But that's assuming Ford will be leaving Frankfort in January. We still believe he's got the fight of his life facing him. To count out incumbent Cook would be fatal. But Cook's got to find ways to cope with Ford's continuing ability to make headlines from the governor's chair.

Unlocking The Files - The State Democratic Party's decision the other day to make open records of every penny of political gift-giving is laudible. It embraces the concept of openness and it will probably cost the party some money. There are those who feel it's no one's business to whom they give and how much.

We can agree, too, the desire by candidate Ford to avoid the troubles that still plague the party in the wake of the Huddleston campaign.

And Ford invited the Republicans to open all of their records. Could be he's hoping it'll cost the opposition some big gifts, too. *****

Don't blow your top, insulate your ceiling!

The ceiling area is the easiest place to install insulation. Yet, it's the greatest area of heat loss or gain in most homes.

Insulation keeps a home cooler in summer, warmer in winter. An uninsulated home loses up to twice as much heat as one that is properly insulated.

Your greatest opportunity to save energy and money is through improved insulation. Your Rural Electric system will be happy to advise you about the right type for your needs. So call us.

Electricity is too good to waste!

FEWER YOUTHS ASK FOR JOB PERMITS

FRANKFORK, Ky. Not as many Kentucky youths have requested job permits this year as last year, but the Kentucky Department of Labor is preparing for the usual summer deluge.

Department records show 6,270 employment certificates were issued to Kentuckians aged 14 through 17 from January through April 1973. This year, the number was 5,086.

But Harold Parrish, child labor field supervisor for Kentucky, says the certificates usually pour in during June when school ends for the summer. Last June about 8,000 certificates were issued, and that's a fourth of the certificates granted in 1973 when 32,000 youths 11 per cent of the state's 14-through 17-year-olds obtained work permits.

State law allows employment of 14-through 17-year-olds provided they have obtained the employment certificates.

According to Parrish, the certificates help the department enforce state child labor laws. Usually, the department revokes more than 100 permits each year usually because the occupation is considered hazardous. From January through April this year, 48 certificates were revoked.

Prohibited activities include working in plants which manufacture or store explosives; working on roofs; handling power driven machines such as wood working machines in a saw mill; wrecking and excavation.

Employment at bars and lounges is prohibited also. However, minors may work in restaurants which serve alcoholic beverages if their work conforms with regulations of the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission and if they are supervised by an adult.

State law restricts the hours a minor may work to no earlier than 7 a.m. or later than 7 p.m., except from June 1 through Labor Day when they may work until 9 p.m. Minors also are prohibited from working Teachers Retain Tenure In Response to a question submitted by Ray Corns, Department of Education, Atty. Gen. Hancock has stated that teachers who have a continuing contract in one district and are transferred to another are subject to one year's probation. If the teacher is then re-employed for the second year, he acquires continuing contract status in that employing district.

Among opinions released this week from the office of Atty. Gen. Ed W. Hancock were the following:

MOVING MATTERS COULD BE OUSTED - Terry A. Sturgis, City Councilman of Neon, Ky., asked if a mayor who changes his legal residence and moves outside the corporation limits disqualifies himself from office. Atty. Gen. Ed W. Hancock said no person shall be eligible to hold any office in the city unless he is a resident and qualified voter in the city. Thus, if the mayor moves his residence out of the limits, he has disqualified himself.

Employment Prospects Improved In State

Despite the energy crisis and the annual spring flow of graduates seeking jobs, the employment picture in Kentucky appears bright, according to Norman Willard, Jr., commissioner of the Bureau for Manpower Services for the State Department for Human Resources.

He cited March figures showing the state's unemployment rate at 4.6 percent, compared to a national average of 5.3 percent. A 6.5 percentage is considered a depression warning sign, while three percent illustrates a labor shortage, Willard explained.

The commissioner said his office is hopeful that the rate will gradually decline to a healthy four percent, adding that some unemployment is normal due to relocations or workers between jobs.

The energy crisis not only has left little impact on the state, but in Kentucky has reversed the initial nationwide trend of layoffs with a renewed emphasis on coal production, Willard said. The industry now employs more workers and has a need for additional people with some knowledge of equipment maintenance.

Willard said college graduates will face better job prospects this year than before since 32,000 new positions are expected to open during 1974. However, he cautioned that many "will have to adjust if they are to obtain employment since there is a trend toward specialization in the labor market."

He explained that many graduates enter the market with a general degree and no specific skill, while there is a demand for technicians. So, some soon enroll in special courses to make their resume more enticing.

The commissioner added that those who major in the fine arts or hope to teach will be harder to place. He said that the health services and data processing fields are "wide open" for prospective technicians.

"The labor market is also more competitive due to the great influx of married women during the '1960's and '70's," Willard said.

He explained that the trend really began during World War II when women were encouraged to fill industrial jobs vacated by men entering combat.

"Inflation has also forced many women to work outside the home," he said, adding that the labor market once contained only 20 percent women. The figure has risen to about 40 percent.

Willard noted that women majoring in business education now are actively recruited by companies seeking to come under federal guidelines since "women just don't exist in any numbers in business schools."

He said that field was slower to open to women than law or medicine.

"Although there is a shortage of college-trained blacks, the pressure on hiring them is not as great as a few years ago, while veterans and handicapped persons continue to receive priority. Veterans deserve some special consideration since, as a result of their service to their country, they have missed opportunities which many citizens take for granted."

Willard said that Kentucky once was losing about 400,000 people every ten years, but now is actually receiving residents from neighboring states.

"Our bureau, in cooperation with the Dept. of Commerce, is constantly searching for areas of the state from which people are reluctant to move or to which former residents readily return. Such areas contain a labor pool which is the first thing potential industries verify before deciding to locate in a region," he concluded. *****

JUNE IS DAIRY MONTH — AND WE WOULD LIKE TO SAY . .

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE Dairy Industry

This month is a good time for all of us to take a closer look at our Dairy Industry. One thing is certain, it has become big business and is getting bigger every day. And our dairy farmers have done an excellent job in increasing production to meet growing demands. They are using the most modern, up-to-date equipment in rigidly controlled modern plants. We salute them for a job well done!

New DWI Law May Increase Convictions

The person who drinks or takes drugs before driving on Kentucky's highways should be aware of a new law effective June 21 which may increase the likelihood of convicting a person arrested on charges of driving while intoxicated.

The 1974 General Assembly enacted the legislation to put mandatory license revocation in more realistic terms, said E. Hugh Morris, assistant director of research for the Legislative Research Commission.

Currently, the license of a person convicted of DWI is automatically revoked for six months. But the automobile has become such a necessity that courts have been reluctant to revoke a driver's license, Morris said, so it's become commonplace for courts to amend DWI charges to lesser convictions such as "drunkenness in a public place" or "reckless driving," he explained.

In 1973, Kentucky State Police arrested 12,441 drivers on DWI charges, but only 45 percent for 5,550 DWI court convictions resulted.

Courts were especially reluctant to convict persons arrested on a first offense of driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs.

But the new law makes allowances for a first offender. The secretary of the Department of Transportation will be authorized to issue a restrictive license to a first offender — provided the convicting court recommends such action.

Thus, workers might be permitted to drive only a couple of hours, five days a week, or a traveling salesman might be restricted to weekday travel, Morris explained.

In addition, a person convicted of DWI must enroll in a drivers' education course sponsored by the Department of Transportation. The federally funded drivers' education courses taught across the state will stress alcohol abuse, said O. B. Arnold, commissioner of the Bureau of Vehicle Regulations.

However, revocation of a license becomes mandatory if the driver violates his or her restrictions or does not complete the drivers' education course.

Also, all convicted DWI offenders must pay a fine of $100 to $500.

A second DWI conviction brings a mandatory one-year license revocation, and a third conviction results in a two-year revocation.

In addition, a person convicted of a second DWI offense must be sentenced to jail for three days to six months under the new law. Conviction on a third offense carries with it a jail sentence of thirty days to one year.

KHC HISTORICAL HUNT BRINGS SURPRISE

FRANKFORT, Ky. The Kentucky Heritage Commission's continual search for clues to the Commonwealth's past can turn up some surprises.

Recently, the KHC completed a study that revealed to the disappointment of many Frankfort citizens, that a group of brick structures referred to as the Civil War Barracks did not exist during the Civil War.

The barracks, three structures on Shelby Street and three more on Woodland Avenue, were constructed in 1871 instead of 1861 as many local newspaper articles, books and records had claimed.

The Commission's research began several years ago with the decision to nominate the Civil War Barracks for the National Registry of Historic Places. Solid evidence rather than legend was needed to prove Union soldiers were quartered in the barracks before the National Registry would accept the application.

Previously, the Commission had contacted the National Archives of the War Department in Washington, D.C., inquiring about records of the barracks in the 1860s. The National Archives replied that there was no record of barracks built in Frankfort during that decade.

William Hearn, KHC research analyst, found that the barracks were listed in the 1870s county tax books and Francis Travis, assistant secretary of state, remembered her grandmother saying that Union troops stayed in Frankfort long after the Civil War was over.

Working with these two clues, the staff again contacted the National Archives asking them to check their records of the 1870s. The National Archives responded by sending voluminous material about the construction and occupation of the barracks in the 1870s.

Included in the information was the builder's name, Alexander Goldsmith Brawner, whose great-great grandfather supposedly helped Gideon Shryock construct the free-standing circular staircase in the Old Capitol. Brawner built the barracks in 1871 and rented them to the federal government for $250 a month, from January 1872 until 1876.

A hospital, guardhouse and bakery also were included in the military compound.

Companies D and K of the 4th U.S. Infantry were housed in the barracks. However, the company officers stayed in rented quarters in Frankfort.

One day last week the long search for the last resting place of Rockcastle County's top-ranking Revolutionary War officer and one of Kentucky's Long Hunters came to an end when Chester Whitaker took me to an abandoned family burying ground on the farm of his brother Robert Whitaker and pointed out a rough-hewn limestone marker with the name J. A. Dysart cut on it. The stone was broken in two, had fallen on the ground and was imbedded in the dirt so firmly that we were unable to get it completely clear without the aid of tools, which we did not have. On this account, we were unable to find at the time whether or not there was a date on the stone, but anyway we know from records that the date of his death was May 28th, 1818, and that he was seventy-four years old at the time of his death. We told something of his history two or three weeks ago when we included his name on our list of Revolutionary War Veterans who died in Rockcastle County.

This old cemetery had once been well kept but is now sadly run down and neglected. What has happened here is the same as has happened elsewhere. Most of the private burying grounds on old farms were located in an open field, not far from the residence, and had had shrubs and young trees set out in them, which soon grew into big shade trees and made the cemetery a cool spot for cattle, which as time went by overran the graveyard and broke down headstones, standing in the shade of the trees and stomping for flies. Family graveyards have about disappeared. As long as the original family members were alive, they tended and took care of the graves, but after they died off and descendants moved away, the graves were neglected to become overgrown with bushes and briars and soon presented a sad picture of neglect.

In this particular cemetery there had formerly been several fenced enclosures surrounding certain graves. The walls have now fallen in and all traces of headstones, or markers, are covered with rubble. If these enclosures were cleaned out and the stone walls put back in original condition, many other stones could probably be found and their inscriptions read.

In recent years, before its purchase by the Whitaker brothers, the farm on which this burying ground is located had been owned by the Norton family, along with many other acres in the area. This had undoubtedly been the homestead on Dysart's original fifteen hundred acre settlement. It is easy to see why he chose this spot. It was located close to the old Skaggs Trace, the first road made through Rockcastle County, was rolling land, rich and easily tilled, and was well watered, with a big overhanging spring, something looked for by every settler when selecting a homestead. Signs of two large log cabins are still visible, one of them being the original James Dysart cabin, the other no doubt occupied by his oldest son, John B. Dysart, who long survived his father.

Exact date of the coming to Rockcastle County of the Dysarts is unknown. We know that after the close of the Revolutionary War, Dysart went back to his home in Virginia, where in the course of time he was elected to represent his home county (Washington in the Virginia Legislature. He engaged in business, erecting a mill and a distillery, both of which he lost by going security on notes for friends and relatives. We know that he was still in the milling business in 1782, because a traveler coming into Kentucky in that year mentions passing his mill about 88 miles south of Cumberland Gap. From various indications, we are inclined to believe that he moved here around 1800, certainly before 1810, as we find him listed in the Rockcastle census for that year and the fact that he had been here long enough to be well and favorably known when the county was formed is attested by the fact that he was named as a trustee of the Rockcastle Academy when the county was created.

On my visit with Magistrate Whitaker, I learned much of that side of the county which had hitherto escaped me and expect a lot of help from him in further research. I was told that he knows every foot of land between his homeplace and Rockcastle River, my informant adding "He ought to; he owns about half of it." I believe that he gave me the location of another tract of land which should prove of interest. I have also been searching and enquiring for the location of the Pew land, settled by Reuben C. Pew, in 1803. His grave is also being sought and chances are that it will be found somewhere on his homeplace. From military records furnished me by a descendant, Mrs. B. B. Waterman of Kansas City, Mo., he saw more than three years active service during the Revolution, including a winter at Valley Forge and was one of the more interesting veterans of the great conflict to end their days in Rockcastle County. Whitaker tells me that if he is correct in his location of the Pew place, the old original Pew home is still standing, the central part of log walls, over which many additions have been added.

And while on the subject of lost graves, I can add another name which I do not believe I have mentioned before, and that is

"Don't bother me now ... I'm busy!"

There was a time when the funeral director (or "undertaker" as he was called then) didn't need to be personable. Or specially trained. Or even polite. About all he needed in those days were a hammer and some nails, along with enough lumber to put together a "coffin." Times have changed, and we're glad they did. Today, if a funeral director doesn't like people -- if he doesn't really want to help and know how to help others in countless ways -- then he's in the wrong profession.

"ROCKCASTLE RECOLLECTIONS"

Valentine Harmon. I do not know if he was a Revolutionary veteran, but he was a member of the famous party, known as the Long Hunters that came into Kentucky several years ahead of Daniel Boone. Since he had been associated in this venture with both Dycart and Pew, it is reasonable to assume that he came to Rockcastle County when they did, or soon thereafter. He was at Booneboro in May of 1775. He later moved to Harrodsburg, and finally to Rockcastle County, where he died in 1815. He was born in Germany, but came to America at an early date and became associated with the Long Hunters soon thereafter. We know that he was a close friend of James Dycart, who once held back a crowd of onlookers to keep them from interfering with Harmon while engaged in administering a severe whipping to a Tory, long after the war, for expressing such sentiments. He was married, but had no children. Nothing is known of his location in Rockcastle County, but we have assumed that he was not too far removed from the vicinity in which we find his friends, Dycart and Pew. Something else for Squire Whitaker, or somebody, to work on.

In addition to wanting to locate the graves of these three men, or any Revolutionary soldier, for our history I have a double motive in trying to find them. As part of our Centennial observance, the D.A.R. is attempting to locate the graves of any veterans buried in Rockcastle County so that they may secure government acknowledgment of them. For all such graves, properly identified, the Government will, on application from the D.A.R., furnish a bronze plaque, or marker, engraves with the Veteran's name and Military record, to be placed on his grave. We would like to see the graves of all Rockcastle Revolutionary soldiers so marked and will appreciate your help in locating them for that purpose. In this connection, let me say that the local D.A.R. Chapter will be glad to help you in tracing your ancestry back to a Revolutionary source.

And while still on the subject of James Dycart, let me repeat that I am very much interested in finding a book - any book - with his name or book plate in it. He was said to be an avid reader and to have one of the largest libraries in the county. Of course, in later years, when the family moved to Missouri well after his death, they no doubt took his library with them. I have hoped that maybe he had loaned out a few books in the county which he or his relatives failed to get back when the move was made to Missouri. I would be glad to make an attractive offer to anybody who has a book that once belonged to him. Also, let me repeat here that I am still trying to locate the old tax book mentioned in previous articles - the one with the hand-drawn sheepskin cover containing tax information about William (Devil Bill) Adams and others. It is still kicking around the county somewhere and I would pay a hundred dollars for it if anybody wants to dispose of it.

Again, I want to publicly thank Chester Whitaker for his assistance in rounding up information on land holdings in the Skaggs Creek area. His knowledge of such matters can save me a lot of research work in this direction and probably be more authentic than I could find elsewhere. If, as they tell me, he owns seven miles of land on both sides of Skaggs Creek and big tracts elsewhere, he should be able to help a lot. Incidentally, his story of achievement in getting possession of all these acres sounds like a story of great accomplishments and I am sure he can, and does, take much pride in being the biggest individual land owner in the county.

CAL BASEBALL TEAM PLAYS DOUBLEHEADER

The Corbin American Legion Baseball Team opened its regular season scheduled at Laurel County High School Field Sunday by dividing a twin bill with the Knoxville, Tennessee Governor's. The local team dropped the first game by the score of 6-2 but came back to take the nightcap by the identical score of 6-2.

In the first game Corbin scored two runs on only one hit, five walks and one Knoxville error, leaving five basemen stranded. Knoxville had six runs on seven hits, five walks and one Corbin error, leaving seven men on base. Eddie Beams of Laurel County High School started for Corbin and was relieved by Larry Overbey of Laurel County in the sixth inning who was tagged with the loss. Greg Sergeant started for Knoxville and was relieved by Chuck Hoskins in the sixth. Hoskins was credited with the win.

In the second game Corbin jumped off to a four-run lead in the first inning as David Hannah of Corbin High School hit a bases-loaded double off the right field fence, followed by a timely single up the middle by Garry Gibson of Corbin High School. Gibson's single plated two runs to complete the big inning for Corbin. For Corbin, Doug George of Laurel County High School was the starting and winning pitcher. Johnnie Saylor of Rockcastle County High School came in to pitch in the seventh with two men on base and no outs to retire the side and end the game.

Corbin's next appearance will be a doubleheader with the Paintsville, Ky. American Legion team Thursday at 1 p.m. at Laurel Co. High School field. This doubleheader was originally scheduled for Wednesday, but Paintsville called and asked for the change to Thursday. Corbin will round out the weekend by meeting South Lexington at Laurel Co. Saturday at 1 p.m. and then traveling to Lexington on Sunday to play Lexington Man-O-War a doubleheader on Lafayette High School Field at 1 p.m.

Ryan Riddle of Rockcastle County is also a member of the Corbin American Legion team, playing as catcher.

TRAFFIC FATALITIES SHOW STEADY DECLINE

Traffic fatalities on Kentucky's highways have declined for the fifth month in succession according to Bureau of Highways statistics. Bureau figures show 62 persons were fatally injured during the month of April, compared to 78 during April, 1973.

Jim Fehr, planning director for the Bureau of Highways, said that the decline in traffic fatalities could possibly be the result of lower speed limits and less traffic volume.

"Our figures show that traffic volume throughout the local state is down from last year and motorists are driving slower, therefore, contributing to the 25 percent decrease in traffic deaths we've had for the first four months of this year," Fehr said.

Bureau of Highways travel information shows that statewide travel in Kentucky during March was off five percent from March 1973 totals. Limited information gathered from traffic recorders shows that travel on Kentucky's Interstate system during March was 13 percent less than the volume recorded during last March.

Fatality figures for March and April, show traffic fatalities were down 33 percent and 21 percent respectively as compared to the same months in 1973.

Five-month fatality statistics beginning with December show each month had a significant decrease from last year with December being down 35 percent, January 36 percent, February seven percent, March 33 percent, and April 21 percent (Compared to the same month in 1973).

Totals through April 30th show 223 traffic fatalities in Kentucky compared to 299 during the first four months of last year.

County Agent's Notes

By H. Leo Durham

WHAT TO DO IN JUNE

June, as the old song goes, is the month of roses, but as UK Extension vegetable specialist C. R. Roberts adds, it is also a month of garden weeds.

It is the month in which weeding and cultivation begin in earnest and it is mainly upon these two tasks that the success of the harvest depends. Roberts' advice is: keep the soil well stirred and the weeds under control, but don't cultivate too deep. During this month, plant roots will be spreading out near the surface between the rows and to let the rototiller or cultivator run too deep may injure the roots and stunt the plant.

To reduce the weed control effort, maintain good soil structure, conserve moisture, and prevent ripening fruits from coming in contact with the soil, June is a good month in which to apply organic mulches such as straw, sawdust, lawn clippings, or leaves. For best results with organic mulches, spread to a depth of two inches or more. If sawdust is used, add one cup of ammonium nitrate fertilizer for each bushel of sawdust; otherwise, decomposing sawdust will cause plants to be nitrogen deficient.

Start looking for signs of insect damage and disease symptoms early in June and take appropriate action. Preventive measures taken now may ward off epidemics later in the season. Spray tomatoes with fungicide to control leafspot diseases. Use maneb zinc or similar compounds for control of leaf diseases. Usually, insect control should not be started until there is evidence of vegetable injury -- but keep close watch. Call on your County Extension agent for helpful information on how to solve these and other garden problems.

Weeds and insects also start causing problems in the flower garden in June, so this is the time to pull the weeds and watch out for such insects as aphids. According to UK Extension floriculturist Benny T. J. flowers should be sprayed with malathion if aphid infestation occurs. June is also the time to cover flower beds with mulches, grass clippings and leaf mold, he says, and to plant such flowers as cannas, geraniums, and salvia.

By June, of course, most garden vegetables will have already been planted and growing in the ground. But for a crop of lima beans in August, a patch can be planted during the first week of June, Roberts says. Also, for roasting ears in August, sweet corn can be planted around June 15.

Actually with a little luck, some roasting ear varieties can be planted as late as July 4. Some gardeners make a practice of doing this and have boiled corn to enjoy as late as the first frosts of Autumn. If by some chance late in getting started this Spring, there is still time to plant several vegetable crops. During the early days of this month carrots, chard, collards, watermelons, muskmelons, okra, sweet potatoes, pumpkins, and squash can be planted with a reasonable expectation of satisfactory harvest. Tomato and pepper plants set out in June will almost surely produce before frosts.

By this time the peas planted back in February or March should be coming in. Along with all his recommendations for weeding, spraying, and cultivating, Roberts likewise recommends some time should be taken off to eat the new peas, dig some potatoes to cook with them, and pull up some green onions to eat with both. Such a meal alone will make worthwhile the effort expensed thus far. If Robins and other birds don't get them first, pick some cherries and bake them into a cobbler pie. Make some homemade ice cream to go with and enhance the taste of the cobbler.

As the Psalmist says in effect, in June man goes forth to his work and his labor until evening. This is very necessary but some time should be taken off to enjoy the fruits of the labor. Else it is in vain. So have a picnic or two in June, eat the good things from the garden and by all means, enjoy the roses.

Hopefully, June will come again -- but not this particular June.
