Fiscal Court Meets; Several Items Discussed

Several items of business were before the Rockcastle County Fiscal Court at their regular monthly meeting Tuesday.

The meeting began with a contract presented to the court by Wallace Roy of the State Department of Highways for the hauling, spreading and/or stockpiling of 6200 tons crushed limestone by the county for the state at a contract price of $5.32 per hour. In the past, this contract has been let at $1.00 per ton but the state now figures the contracts on an hourly basis using the county's labor and trucks. Mr. Roy told Fiscal Court members that the county would not lose any money by this new method in that the total contract price was $5,200, or the same amount as if the contract were figured at $1.00 per ton. However, Mr. Roy also told the court that the contract had a completion clause in it whereby if the man-hour usage should go over the total contract price of $5,200, the county agrees to complete the hauling, spreading and/or stockpiling of the limestone at the total contract price. Of full short of the total contract price - then, the state agrees to pay the total amount of the $5,200 contract.

Delno Mink, newly appointed Dog Warden for Rockcastle County, also met with the court to present his report for the first two weeks of his operation covering July 1-15. Mr. Mink also told the court that he did not feel he was getting the proper support from the County Health Department as to ascertaining whether or not a dog was rabid. Mr. Mink told the court that he had had to kill at least one dog which was more than likely rabid and that at that time he had not been able to get any cooperation from the Health Department in getting the head of the dog sent off for tests.

Mr. Mink also told the court that he felt that he should be provided with an office in the Courthouse since it was necessary for him to be responsible for sums of money belonging to the State and for dog licenses issued to him for sale to dog owners. After much discussion among the Magistrates, Civil Defense Director Larry Burdette—who was present at the meeting, told the court that he would be agreeable to sharing the two-room office which the county provides his office on the third floor of the building.

Garbage Collection with the Magistrates this month with a decision by the Magistrates to continue the garbage pick-up operation as it now stands for another month and in the meantime, the Magistrates will meet with City-County officials to see if there could not be something worked out whereby the City would like to provide funds for funding the service. Magistrate Ernest Mason said he felt that the main problems of the Garbage Collection system were with the four containers located adjacent to Mt. Vernon. He said that he felt that since it seemed that the residents and businesses of Mt. Vernon were using these containers freely that one solution to the problem might be a $3.00 garbage collection fee added to all city water users' bills to pay for door-to-door collection by Rockcastle Sanitation Service.

However, the matter was left until next month, after the Magistrates meet with members of the Mt. Vernon City Council, for settlement.

The recreation room of the Library building also came up for discussion again with Magistrate Ernest Mason making a motion that the facilities be advertised for rent for a recreation room and restaurant. Two of the Magistrates, particularly Magistrate Danny Sargent and County Judge Hubert Thacker seemed to think it might be wise to leave the room to be used as a sort of Community Room with the possibility that some of the Civic organizations might make use of the room and help with the utility expenses.

Ezra Carl Robinson of Orlando almost got into double trouble Monday while hunting Ganses in the Sand Hill section of the county. Robinson came upon one rattler and proceeded to kill it and found himself suddenly in trouble with another rattler nearby. He promptly dispatched both and found that the biggest one measured 46 inches and had 14 rattlers and a button. The "smaller" one was only 40 inches long.

Frankfort Watchline

Like a moon rocket everyone is watching with undivided interest, the Cook-Ford Senate race has finally, officially, left the launching pad. It was foolish for anyone to expect either side to pay attention to those time-honored, traditional campaign starting dates of sometime between the Fancy Farm picnic and Labor Day.

Not with the dynamite potential of this campaign. The heat developed by the candidates in just the few minutes they faced each other Saturday at Fancy Farm showed the race was more than ready to get into full swing.

The sad part of it is that Saturday may be the last time the two men see one another before the November Fifth election.

Senator Cook would like to debate. He's good at it. He's the kind of public figure who finds the time right to his liking... an easy forum to be in... one who answers questions and talks with relish for long periods without running out of ways to make what he's saying sound interesting.

Governor Ford, meantime, does not find the debate setting as much to his liking. Besides, he says, why help Cook draw crowd? Ford feels he's ahead and there's no point in helping attract listeners for his opponent. He charges the Senator with not being back to Kentucky often enough in his 5 1/2 years in office to be a drawing card himself.

In fact, that'll be one of the Ford issues... what he calls the Nixon-Cook... isolationism. He charges that the Nixon administration doesn't know or care what the people of the country want and that Cook hasn't been in the state enough to find out.

Ford will be charging that junior Senator Dee Huddleston has been back to Kentucky more in a year and a half than Cook during all his term.

It's probably not settled yet just how much campaigning Ford will do on the Watergate issues... he almost got his fingers burned once on whether or not Nixon should quit. He nearly said that Nixon should quit, while the national party leaders were leaning in the other direction.

But Ford will saddle Cook with responsibility for some of what he calls Nixon's lack of meaningful domestic policy in the land... inflation, farm economic problems, tax inequities.

That's the way we see the race from the Ford side of it.

Senator Cook, meantime, has been champing at the bit to get the race underway for several reasons. Maybe most importantly, he already finds himself having to be in Washington on impeachment

PAGE TWO business in the Senate and he needs to get some things said quickly while there's the time.

Also, if, as election watchers now say, Ford is slightly ahead, an aggressive, Marxist Cook could take some of the edge off Ford's advantage.

Cook knows that Ford is operating from a built-in power base in Frankfort, being the ultimate employer of some 30,000 state workers. And he's aware that Ford's organization will be strong. And he's watching what Ford's doing in that key county, Cook's home county... Jefferson County.

Cook will attack Ford on the integrity issue. He will discuss the Cumberland chairlift fiasco. He'll criticize current state space-leasing practices.

He'll gleefully suggest that Ford has something to do with the Democratic Party's fund-raising difficulties with the Federal government. He'll talk about boat dock leases. He'll discuss the Red River Gorge dam... and he'll go on and on.

From each man's campaign strategists, we get the feeling that there's no shrinking from the charges they know will be thrown at them... that the charges they'll throw back will be more telling.

The Cook people do agree on one thing with their adversaries: that the voter is worried most this time about his pocket book... about inflation. If Ford is unable to make great inroads here, it's because Cook was able to convince the Kentucky voter that he worked hard to help cure the nation's money ills.

And it's ironic that circumstances could develop that each will hammer the other on essentially the same issue... integrity in government. The charges here would be aimed at the administration with which the other has been associated.

With all this and more, you've got to agree now, don't you, that this election has to be one of the hottest Kentuckians have seen for quite a while.

Recently I have been giving considerable thought to adding an authentic history of Renfro Valley to our proposed book. Naturally, a brief history of the Valley and its activities would belong in a history of the county; but, to give it more in detail would interest more prospective customers living away from here who might not be concerned about the county itself. In reading through old copies of the Mt. Vernon Signal between 1888 and the present issues for such information as I can pick up on county activities, I am running across frequent articles on Renfro Valley in its earlier days and finding things I had forgotten with the passing of the years.

When we staged our opening performance in the barn, in the autumn of 1939, we also opened the souvenir shop in the restaurant building and by midnight had sold out the entire stock of souvenirs we had bought for the whole season. Anything that had Renfro Valley printed on it sold as fast as the items could be passed out. Most items sold for one dollar and at the close of business that night, I recall that we had one thousand one-dollar bills in a waste basket that we used as cash register. The attendance on opening night put a stop to the predictions which had been freely made that people were not going to pay to see a lot of musicians playing in a barn. Actually, local critics had expressed the opinion, while we were building the barn, that there would be tobacco hanging in it inside of three weeks from our opening night - a prediction that was far from ever realized.

Crowds kept growing, right on through cold weather, in spite of the fact that we could find no way to heat the barn, and, by next spring, we were forced to put on two or three shows each Saturday night and sometimes more.

Recently, I came across an article in the Mt. Vernon Signal of July 12, 1941, telling of an incident I had almost forgotten. It told of a crowd of ten thousand descending upon the barn on a single Saturday night, of how we put on five shows in succession, and had the sixth show sold out in advance, when some of the acts collapsed and couldn't go on and we had to refund the money for 800 tickets and tell the huge crowd still outside the barn that there would be no further performances that night. Bob McKenzie, now president of the Bank of Mt. Vernon, remembered this incident quite well, as he was the ticket seller for the barndance at that time.

There was more than one occasion during the early years of the barndance when we could tell by mid-afternoon that crowds would be heavy. We would start the show at around two-thirty and run continuously until early Sunday morning. Around midnight, when they realized they were not liable to get in to see a show, hundreds of people would give up and go home. But our crowd for any one occasion showed up for one of our All-Day Gospel Sings, when a total of more than fifteen thousand people came, from all over the country. We ran two shows concurrently, one in the big barn and the other in front of the grandstand (just twice the size that it is now) and still were unable to take care of everybody. We never tried to have that big a crowd again. The grounds were not big enough to handle such a mob of people and they broke down fences, pushed over small buildings and did a lot of damage - just from their size.

Visitors came in from every state in the union and seven foreign countries. Hardly a Saturday night went by, for many years, on which we did not check car license plates from as many as 24 different states. They came in all manner of conveyances - by auto, bus and farm truck. On two different occasions, I remember seeing crowds come in a sheep truck, packed in two layers. In the beginning, there were local people who came on horseback, in buggies or farm wagons and many walked as much as five miles to get here.

All this, it must be remembered, was twenty-five or thirty years ago, when there were no super highways and tourist travel was not one-fifth of what it is now. A part of the time, roads through here were under construction and the place was hard to get to. The Sunday we had our record crowd, people had to detour and come into the Valley over an ordinary county dirt road. Fearing our crowd would be small on this account, we doubled our advertising for the event, with the results noted.

When all this influx of visitors started, we had the only motel between a point north of Cincinnati, Ohio and Cumberland Gap - so, where did they sleep on Saturday night? All that could be so went home. New motels sprang up quickly to accommodate the people. Business and professional men of Mt. Vernon set aside rooms in their homes to help us with the problem. We filled everything as far south as Corbin and north as far as Richmond, with many going on to Lexington and still more sleeping in their cars or rolled up in blankets on the parking lot around the barn. There were emergencies when churches and schools were filled and still we could not take care of the overflow. This lack of sleeping accommodations did much to slow down visitors in the ensuing years and during the nineteen sixties, attendance sharply diminished and I decided to sell the business and retire, at the age of seventy-five. And then, I-75 got under way and travel increased amazingly and visitors to the shows picked up sharply. I have often wondered what we could have done if similar conditions had existed from the beginning, but I don't see how we could have handled more people than we actually did back then. Of course, the hundreds of motels which have since sprung up in this and surrounding areas have made a great difference. Renfro Valley was the beginning of the tourist trade, not only locally, but all along the line. Several years ago, state officials claimed that Renfro Valley had brought more tourists to Kentucky than either Mammoth Cave or the Kentucky Derby, and that only the development of the Kentucky Lakes country had gone ahead of us in that respect, in recent years. I believe we are safe in saying that no event since the coming of the railroads has done as much for the economy of Rockcastle County as Renfro Valley.

During our years of broadcasting from the Valley, we have accomplished many things, including a long run on CBS Network, where we were the highest paid and most successful show of its kind, with the highest rating of any show on any network opposite us. We established an early mail record of two hundred and forty-six thousand responses to a picture offer. We played at the White House Party (on the personal invitation of Mrs. Roosevelt) for the King and Queen of England. We played every good-sized theatre in Indiana, Ohio and Kentucky and established new attendance records in many of them. We played many state fairs, including a record-breaking performance before eighty thousand at the Ohio State Fair, at Columbus, and the first time we played the Kentucky State Fair at Louisville, records showed that one out of every twenty who bought tickets to the fair also bought tickets to the Renfro Valley tent. We had two huge tents of our own in the earlier days and kept them on tour all summer of each year, with two separate sets of talent, traveling and showing every night all the way from Florida to Maine and, believe it or not, we did better business in the state of New York than in any other part of the country. As well as I now remember, Bob and Ess Baker are the only ones now around who worked on one of the earliest tent

Keep Conservation Tip

Keep Heat For Cooking - An oven needs only about ten minutes or less of preheating to reach any pre-set temperature. The moment it's ready, put your dinner into the oven. You don't have to preheat an oven for hours to preheat an oven for hours. Foods requiring longer cooking may be placed in a cold oven. You should thaw most frozen foods at room temperature before cooking. Putting a frozen roast directly into the oven requires an estimated 2/3 more cooking time.

shows we put out. Later, we sent out smaller units that played the well-known Kemp Circuit throughout all the southern states. Being sent on this circuit was like being sentenced to hard labor. The unit traveled by bus, which was beginning to be a little the worse for wear and they had to get out and walk at the steeper grades - and steeper grades were the usual thing through the mountains of the Carolinas, Tennessee, West Virginia, Georgia and Alabama. The Kemp Circuit was a killer, but, we survived it, by the hardest. And, by the way, we were most pleased with our reception in the big Keith Circuit Theatre at Huntington, West Virginia, where we broke attendance records of both Amos and Andy and Lum and Abner.

Yes, Renfro Valley was the big name in those days and we did it all ourselves, without a big staff of professional promoters. Harry Mullins, when not doubling as Little Clifford with A'nt Idy, was booker and road show manager. Cotton Foley and Bob Cummins took care of the money we brought in from any and all sources, and Gene Cobb and Jake Salisbury kept it coming in off the tent shows. For years, Bob McKenzie kept an eagle eye on the box office and sold tickets with both hands, what time he was not calling for help to keep the crowd from mobbing around the ticket box and turning it over. He remembers issuing such calls for help on three different occasions one Saturday night.

Such is a brief glimpse of Renfro Valley in the older days. I wonder if any of us realized at the time what an amazing thing we had going!

Down On The Farm

By: Roy G. Brown, Assistant Vice President Cumberland PCA

Farmers today are in a price squeeze and the great majority of consumers do not know the true picture of the farmer's condition.

Most people think that because food costs are so high, the farmer is "getting rich," and "never had it so good," as some of the politicians believe who are not from an agricultural state.

But to set the record straight and bring out the true facts, here are some examples.

First, here are a few things the farmer produces to sell. Look at beef prices, hog prices, and eggs. Farmers are getting less for their milk, and the talk of tobacco companies trying to hold down the price of tobacco this year is another example.

Then look at what the farmer is paying in increased cost to produce the food: Baler twine is up three hundred to four hundred percent from last year; fertilizer prices doubled; fencing, nails, herbicides, pesticides, tobacco spray, farm equipment and party labor, and anything else we buy to produce food and fiber, is much higher than last year.

Some reasons of the great spread between the farmer and consumers are: transportation, labor, processing, fancy packaging and wrapping, and food prepared ready to serve. All of these are extra dollars with high labor cost.

All the farmer wants is a decent price, above cost of production, so he can buy the necessary things for a decent standard of living; an education for his children and improvements for the farm.

This is what the farmer deserves for the long hours of wading in mud, manure, out in the cold and rain and hot sun, going to the barn to check on the old sow to save the pigs or cows giving birth to a calf so that the world may have food on the table. This is life "DOWN ON THE FARM."

EATING OUTDOORS CAN BE LESS EXPENSIVE...

The keeper of the household budget has probably never been more conscious of prices than at the present time. There are such things as "consumptionism," "price controls," "wage control," and numerous bureaucrats who remind us to keep a firm hand on the reins so that we can save money. None of them, however, tell us exactly how to save money on some of the most common home practices.

For instance, did anyone ever tell you it's less expensive to carry dishes from your kitchen to the backyard or to a picnic and wash them than it is to buy paper plates? And while the plates may be recyclable, how about those plastic forks and spoons? Also, how about the nuisance of getting rid of all of them?

The facts of the matter are simple arithmetic. To buy enough paper plates, paper cups, plastic spoons and forks for six people will cost you an estimated average of $1.50. If you take your kitchen dishes, cups, forks and spoons, along with your dishes and bowls, you can serve the same six people for $1.50 to $1.55 less. In other words, you or your dishwasher can wash all those dishes for the small cost of 45 cents to 10 cents, an added plus, you won't have to find someplace to dispose of them!

Now add up all those evenings you eat outdoors and those weekends you can go on picnics: How many pieces of school clothing will it buy at the end of summer? How much will it pay on next month's food bill?

Amazing how it soon adds up, isn't it?

Now that you have decided to take your everyday kitchenware outdoors, whether it's ironstone that's chipped or melamine, what do you do after the picnic? The one disposable item you probably will not do without is a roll of paper towels or some paper napkins. Wipe the plates and silverware with them before tucking them back into the picnic basket. As soon as you arrive home, and before the remaining soil dries any more, load them into the dishwasher, or enlist the family help to wash them, while you take a well deserved rest.

Here are some recipes you may want to try the next time you plan to eat outdoors:

Tasty Burgers

(Make 12 hamburger patties 1/4 to 3/4 inches thick from):

- 3 lbs. ground beef
- 1/4 tsp. pepper
- 1 tbs. salt
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup milk
- 1 cup dry bread crumbs
- 1 small onion, finely chopped

Put on grill five inches from heat. Broil 7 to 10 minutes basting with sauce made from:

- 1/2 cup catsup
- 2 tbs. honey
- 2 tbs. vinegar
- 1 tbs. mustard
- dash steak sauce
- 2 tsp. meat tenderizer

Outdoor Baked Potato

Wrap scrubbed baking potatoes in heavy duty aluminum foil. Place potato on glowing coals. Bake on grill until done, turning occasionally. Cut a cross on top, pull back foil, and insert butter. Serve in foil blanket.

Roasted Corn

Remove husks and silks from corn. Spread corn with butter, salt, and pepper. Wrap tightly in heavy aluminum foil, twisting ends to seal. Roast over hot coals thirty minutes, turning several times.

Kentucky Barbecue Chicken

- 2 1/2 cups water
- 1 tbs. sugar
- 2 1/4 tsp. black pepper
- 2 tbs. butter or salad oil
- 1/4 cup vinegar
- 2 1/2 tsp. salt
- 2 lbs. Worchestershire sauce
- 1 bud garlic
- 1 onion, chopped
- 1 tsp. powdered mustard
- 2 tsp. chili powder
- 1/2 tsp. tobacco sauce
- 4 chickens, cut into quarters

Mix all ingredients for sauce together. Bring to rolling boil. Let chicken set overnight.

County Agent's Notes

By: H. Lee Durham

CURING AND STORING IRISH POTATOES

Irish potatoes should be dug and picked up from the field on the same day. Potatoes which are exposed to sunlight develop a green pigment (solanin) in the skin which has a bitter taste. In sufficient concentration, this pigment is toxic to human beings.

After harvest, wash potatoes to be stored to remove field soil, and air dry them. For maximum storage life, cure the tubers in a dark moist place at 60° to 75° F for a period of about two weeks. This allows healing of skinned areas and small cracks and thus reduces the possibility of decay.

Cured potatoes will store best at temperatures of 40° - 50° F, but any reasonably cool, dark place will serve. Root cellars, basements, garages, or ground pits are the most usual storage places for home-grown potatoes.

Provide for ventilating any potato storage to prevent the development of disorders brought about by a shortage of air. Tubers are living plants and require oxygen to remain in a normal, healthy condition.

Great Sandwich Spread

- 2 cups chopped hard cooked eggs
- 1 tbs. chopped onion
- 1/4 cup pickles
- 1/2 cup chopped celery
- 1 tbs. pimientos
- 1 cup flaked chicken
- Mayonnaise to moisten

THE MOUNT VERNON SIGNAL THURSDAY AUGUST 8, 1974 PAGE TWO is dry, be certain to wet the soil down well before seeding. Moisture should penetrate to a depth of 12 inches or more. As soon as the soil surface is dry enough, rough it up slightly with a steel garden rake and sow the seed. Moisture the surface of the soil well after sowing. If water is scarce, it is essential to apply a mulch of weed-free straw at the rate of about one bale per 1,000 square feet. Even if water is available, it is desirable to use straw because it will aid in keeping the soil surface uniformly moist until the grass seedlings are up.
