

USDA Gives Funds To Clean Tornadoes Debris

Mr. Wallace Proctor, Chairman of the Rockcastle County Conservation District, has informed us that the U.S. Department of Agriculture, USDA, has released limited emergency funds to clean debris left from the April tornadoes from the Rockcastle River.

Mr. Proctor said the USDA funds will allow McGreary, Pulaski, Rockcastle, and Laurel Counties to remove downed trees and other debris from the stream channel. He said the work is confined to areas deemed as a hazard to residents and property. The program is aimed strictly toward correcting damage caused by the tornadoes, but is not intended to solve watershed problems that existed before the storm.

Two USDA agencies, the Soil Conservation Service and the Forest Service, are surveying the damage to determine eligible work areas. Conservation districts are sponsoring the cleanup in each county.

Mr. Proctor urged each knowledgeable Rockcastle County to report tornado damage to the Conservation District Office in Mt. Vernon or to the District Ranger of the Forest Service.

Late Summer Is Good Time To Establish Alfalfa

Late summer is a good time to establish new seedlings of alfalfa, according to two Extension forage specialists at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

J. Kenneth Evans and Garry Laceyfield say that late summer seedings are usually most successful if made in late August or early September. They do not recommend seeding later than mid-September, since the young alfalfa plants need time to develop winter hardiness.

Evans and Laceyfield say Kentucky farmers are increasing their alfalfa acreage because of the increased demand for more and better forage. Alfalfa is the highest in feeding value of all commonly grown hay crops and has the highest in feeding value of all commonly grown hay crops and has the highest potential of all adapted perennial forages. The alfalfa weevil caused alfalfa production and acreage to drop in the 1960's, but the technology and know-how to control the alfalfa weevil is now available to growers.

Evans and Laceyfield provide the following information for farmers who are planning to make a late-summer seeding of alfalfa.

Land selection is very important for successful alfalfa production. Alfalfa thrives best on deep, well-drained and fertile soils. Soils with poor surface or sub-surface drainage will produce lower yields and less persistent stands. Winter heaving is also severe on these soils.

Always test the soil before attempting to establish alfalfa, because the crop has a very high lime and fertilizer requirement. The pH for maximum production should be above 6.5. Soil test levels of P and K should be in the high medium to high range (50-60 pounds per acre for P, and 175-200 for K), and these levels should be maintained.

Boron should be applied annually at the rate of 1.5 to 2.0 pounds per acre of elemental boron (B), either in a boric acid fertilizer or as a fertilizer borate. Nitrogen should not be applied, since alfalfa when inoculated with nitrogen-fixing bacteria has the ability to convert nitrogen from the atmosphere into a form which the plant can use.

Certified seed of a recommended variety should be used at planting time. Poor seed is never a bargain at any price. Seeding failures and poor stands may be blamed on the weather, soil conditions, fertilizer rates and other factors when poor seed is often the problem.

Alfalfa seed should always be inoculated at the time of planting. Inoculation enables the plants to fix atmospheric nitrogen and make it available to the growing plants. The seed should be planted as soon as possible after inoculation, and seed held for more than two-to-four months should be re-inoculated before planting.

Lack of moisture is a major hazard when seeding alfalfa in late summer. If you prepare a firm, weed-free seedbed and are ready to plant, you can reduce the fall moisture hazard by waiting for rainfall about one inch and then seeding as soon as you can work the soil without too much compaction. Seed-soil contact is important for rapid germination. Rolling or cultipacking after seeding packs the soil around the seed and provides good moisture contact between the seed and the soil.

This year's late summer seeding should furnish a good supply of feed next year. If you use the new crop for pasture, do not graze or use rotational grazing and do not overgraze. If you use the crop for hay, make only three cuttings, starting the first full growing season. The cuttings should be made around June 1, July 15, and September 1.

Do not graze or mow alfalfa between September 10 and November 1. This is the time when the alfalfa plants are preparing for winter by storing food in their roots. They cannot do this if their top growth is removed during the early fall.

You should topdress alfalfa fields with fertilizer annually to maintain the fertility level which is necessary for top production and stand life. You should also check them often for insect and disease problems. If you find any such problems, consult your local County Extension Agent for proper treatment recommendations.

Chinese Chestnuts From Seed

In attempting to propagate Chinese chestnuts from seed, many home orchardists have experienced considerable difficulty, if not failure. In many cases, the chestnuts simply did not come up after being planted.

Investigations have revealed that the main reason chestnuts do not germinate is that during the winter months field mice find these chestnuts and eat them up.

According to Jim Newman of the UK Department of Forestry, this problem can be solved by planting the chestnuts in beds and then surrounding the beds with hardware cloth, strips of screen wire, or some other kind of barrier. Bury the cloth or the wire at least six inches deep around the beds. This will keep the mice from tunneling through and into the chestnuts.

Another method is to plant the chestnuts in dirt filled boxes, flats, or some other kind of containers. Plant the chestnuts soon after harvest in late autumn, place the containers in the basement or some other place indoors, keep the soil damp, and along about mid-March, take the containers outdoors and let nature take its course.

Something else about Chinese chestnuts is this: If allowed to dry out too much, they become hard as a piece of marble and in this condition, usually will not germinate. The best policy, therefore, is to plant them soon after they fall from the burrs or before they become too dry. Chestnuts stored in plastic bags in refrigerators have been planted in December with good results.

Sometimes chestnuts fail to germinate because of the chestnut weevil. Sometimes when the nut is developing, weevil eggs are implanted and in the interim between planting and germination, the egg hatches and the larva destroys the nut's ability to sprout. Little can be done about this except to plant more chestnuts than normally expected to come up. In other words, plant three chestnuts where one is expected to grow.

Strawberry Fields Need Weed Control Work Now

Control winter annuals in strawberry fields' now to make next year's work much easier, recommends Dr. James Heron, UK Cooperative Extension Service weed-control specialist.

Two such winter annuals are chickweed and henbit. In strawberry fields where the weed-killer diphenamid has not been used late this season, treatments are needed.

SCHOOL COOKS WORKSHOP HELD

A Workshop for Rockcastle County lunchroom cooks was held Friday, August 9 at the Rockcastle County High School.

28 cooks attended the meeting which included a talk by Superintendent Charles Parsons on their duties and responsibilities. Mrs. Betty Ann Giovak spoke on nourishment and attractiveness of meals; a talk on sanitation by Tony Hopkins, local sanitarian and Robert Thompson gave a talk on donated foods and economical meals.

E.J. Smith is director of the newly instigated school food service.

Chambers of Commerce Not Subject to Open Meetings - In response to Roy G. Houser, executive director of the Corbin Chamber of Commerce, the Attorney General's Office says that chambers of commerce in Kentucky are not "public agencies" and therefore not subject to the requirements of the open meetings law recently passed by legislation.

Residence Required for Eligibility - In response to Steve Robbins of Richmond, the Attorney General's Office says that a city attorney must not only be a resident at the time of his election, but must remain in residence for the prescribed term or term for which he is elected. Where residence is made a condition of eligibility to office, it should exist at the time and for the period required by law.

Breath of Life Campaign Needs Volunteers

There are six million reasons why the Breath of Life Campaign needs volunteers - six million boys and girls who have the inherited, incurable disease Cystic Fibrosis, or other lung diseases like chronic bronchitis, bronchiectasis, severe asthma, and a condition sometimes called "childhood emphysema."

"These children need our attention - they demand our concerted effort to do something about lung diseases," said Mrs. Leslie Harris, chairman of the Breath of Life Campaign for the Mid-South Chapter, National Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation.

The National Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation supports over one hundred Cystic Fibrosis Centers across the country, where children suffering lung diseases are diagnosed and treated. It also supports continuous research, seeking a cure or more effective control for Cystic Fibrosis and the development of new techniques to make possible a practical test to determine carriers of the Cystic Fibrosis gene.

Money contributed through the Breath of Life Campaign over the years has made possible research and care which has significantly increased the life expectancy of Cystic Fibrosis children. Although Cystic Fibrosis is still incurable, these children are living into the teen years and increasing numbers are reaching young adulthood. This research has also brought tremendous advances in the treatment of other chronic respiratory illnesses. Today, many of these diseases can be cured, and all respond favorably to treatment.

"Obviously, we are tremendously encouraged by the progress to date," said Mrs. Harris, "but so much more needs to be done. Anyone willing to devote a little time can work in a number of Breath of Life Campaign activities and Mid-South Chapter functions. The rewards are great," she added, "for you will be truly making possible the breath of life for those who cannot take breathing for granted."

Anyone willing to volunteer for the Cystic Fibrosis Breath of Life Campaign should contact Mrs. Harris at 226-2415. *****

Board To Consider Girls' Basketball Exemptions

By: Jennifer Kaye Robinson

The State Board of Education is scheduled to meet September 10-11 to establish guidelines for reviewing requests from school systems for temporary exemption from complying with the girls' basketball law.

Dr. Lyman V. Ginger, state superintendent of Public Instruction, outlined some of the difficulties that Kentucky schools will face in complying with the law: expense of extra coaches, equipment and transportation and arranging for practice time and facilities.

He estimates it will cost "roughly $5 million to phase into basketball, just to purchase equipment and so on. That doesn't include building extra gymnasiums and extra physical education practice plants."

He pointed out that federal laws regarding sex discrimination require schools to treat boys and girls equally in all phases of their programs. Failure to comply will mean withdrawal of federal funds.

At its last meeting, the board was asked to settle two cases involving differences between local school superintendents and local boards of education.

The board directed the Ohio County Board of Education to retain William Michael Price as art teacher and disagreed with the Henderson County Board's allegation that Mrs. Virginia Atkins was morally unfit to be principal. But the state board supported the local board's rejection of the local superintendent's recommendation that she be retained as principal of the Spottsville Elementary School. Instead, they directed the local board to reassign her to another school in the county without prejudice and without decrease in salary.

The board distributed $250,000 allotments from a $1 million revolving loan fund to Mason and McCracken counties to replace schools destroyed by fire and to Daviess County to replace rusted pipes.

The board directed the Department of Education to research and report at its December meeting on tornado warning systems used by schools in other states.

America's upcoming 200th birthday should be an occasion to recommit to principles on which our country was founded. We may be able to blow out the candles on the birthday cake, but no one will ever be able to blow out the torch of freedom as long as this nation continues to carry it high, like she has in the past. This is a place where any man of any color or creed is free to excel at whatever he wants to do; and if ever there was a cause for a festival on patriotism, it is now. It is openly apparent that the nation's youth are ready to carry on the heritage of freedom and strive to leave their children with an even better world.

Local Cars Cost Owners $7,645,000 A Year

The uneasiness that Rockcastle County residents felt last summer about going on automobile trips for their vacations has all but disappeared.

Local families who are now, 1968. His son, David (far left), has worked as accountant in the office since 1964 and Charles M. Baker (far right), has been laboratory technician for the firm since 1951.

SOARING COAL PRICES PLUS INFLATION, EQUAL RISING ELECTRIC PRICES

Magazines, newspapers, TV, radio and the entire news media throughout the country on a daily basis are proclaiming the rise in electric rates.

While there are many reasons why electric rates are going up, perhaps the most important one currently is the spectacular rise in fuel costs brought on by the energy crisis and resultant coal, gas and oil shortages.

In addition to the cost of a vacation being greater, the annual expense involved in the ownership and operation of a car has mounted considerably, as Rockcastle County residents are discovering.

Applying this average locally, Rockcastle County residents are spending some $7,645,000 a year to own and operate the 4,600 cars that are in use.

In addition to high and continuing utility costs for supplies, equipment and borrowed money, the electric industry is faced with significant and unusual costs for environmental equipment in power stations and environmental requirements for transmission facilities which not only increase the investment cost but also adds to operating costs.

We surely understand every member's desire for low cost electricity, however, with coal and the other related costs such as they are now, it was and is absolutely necessary that the extra fuel costs related to our wholesale power costs be added to our electric rates.

We appreciate your understanding of these problems related to rising prices and assure you that we will make every effort to maintain our electric rates at the lowest level possible consistent with good sound business practices.

$1,986,213 Budget Approved For 1974-75 School Year

The Rockcastle County Board of Education's budget inched toward the two million mark this year, with the approval of a $1,986,213.85 school year as compared to last year's $1,839,696 budget.

The big jump in this year's budget came in Instruction (which includes salaries of principals, supervisors, regular classroom teachers, etc.) from last year's $1,155,000 to $1,235,000, mainly due to a seven per cent increase for teachers approved by the 1974 Legislature.

Pupil Transportation Services took a $20,000 jump to $220,000 and Operation of Plant (which includes wages of plant engineers, building supervisors and custodial services; expenditures for heat, fuel, water, and sewage; light and power; telephone service, etc.) was budgeted at $10,000 more to $135,000.

A complete breakdown of the estimated expenditures is as follows: Administration, $42,000; Instruction, $1,235,000; Attendance Services, $15,000; Salaries of principals, supervisors, regular classroom teachers, etc.) from last year's $1,155,000 to $1,235,000, mainly due to a seven per cent increase for teachers approved by the 1974 Legislature.

JOHN NICHOLS'

Frankfort Watchline

Sometimes, all it takes to have one's eyes opened is to get a good look at how the other guy lives. Usually, it tells us that we don't have things as badly as we thought.

But here at Watchline, we got an inside view of how state governments operate in other states recently while a participant in a seminar on that subject in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

And, brother, we didn't get it so good.

To put it mildly, Kentuckians exist in a form of government that's usually labeled the "strong executive" style. To put it bluntly, the governor calls all the shots. Don't kid yourself that the Legislature really shares in any of this.

The lawmakers may kid themselves, but as long as the governor has such things as roads and jobs to offer or withdraw, the legislator in Kentucky is under the governor's thumb.

This is generally the case. Oh, there are a few independently-minded individuals that improve the character of the Kentucky General Assembly but their efforts at inquiry into smelly legislation ... their attempts to make budget changes ... these kinds of activities are thwarted because there are not enough of them around.

Would you believe that in an increasing number of states it's the lawmaker, not the governor, who draws up the budget? That's right. Wouldn't an overnight change like that here in Frankfort blow the minds of a lot of bureaucrats?

Would you believe that in many other states, there's no such thing as a daily list from the governor's office telling the lawmakers which bills should pass and which should fail? Would you believe that in a growing number of states, the governor does not select the committee chairmen and thereby guarantee passage of his programs?

Believe it. And for those of us used to the current relationship between Kentucky's executive and legislative branches, it's like a whole different world.

No, we haven't named any names, because this is not a criticism of individuals. It's a blast at the system. It's the way things have been in Kentucky for a long time.

And who can blame the governor for taking advantage of a situation that gives him complete autonomy? But somewhere down the line those who started this lawmaking process forgot about a little something called co-equal branches of government.

If you don't know what it is, you can read about it in Article 28 of the Kentucky Constitution. It says that no department of government shall exercise any of the powers belonging to another department (department in this context means branch.)

For instance, how few legislative differences did all of the legislative inquiry into the 1974-76 budget make last January? How many bills did the governor want that were not passed? How many were passed that he rejected?

We can argue 'till we're blue in the face about reforms ... those institutional changes we see so much of in the Legislative Research Commission. But until we begin to see the people's representatives have some actual effect on the laws that are passed, it's only noise.

We are spending seven million dollars to the Legislature and its LRC to acquire more effective inquiry for the future in technical fields ... there's a push for more awareness on spending needs and audit. All this to tell the lawmaker more about the job he must do.

But where is being better informed getting him? He still has little or no say, ultimately, about what happens to the legislation he proposes, unless, of course, he makes a deal with the man in the governor's office.

The typical legislator shrugs, grins and bears it, often sheepishly murmuring "that's the way the game's played."

And no one is saying that everything the governor wants is bad. But it's questionable until the lawmaker's approval comes because he believes it's good ... not because of some pressure.

Until there are enough lawmakers with guts enough to say "damn the next election, and full speed ahead," the quality of the legislature will never change.

A full-time legislature is often offered as the best alternative to what we've got. It may be, but a full-time lawmaking body is tied first to annual sessions and, because they don't like what they've seen here every two years, the Kentucky voters have repeatedly turned their backs on that idea.

Challenge the strong executive type of state government and its defenders, many of them members of the current administration, will ask, "Would you rather have it the other way? Look at Pennsylvania. They didn't have a budget for six months because the lawmakers couldn't agree."

Yes, we'd rather have it that way if what we get is agreement by those elected by the people to decide such things. On that score, Kentuckians are being cheated.

Some in the executive branch these days refer to what they are part of as "a benign monarchy." Others are proud that it's probably the strongest executive branch in the country.

We simply ask: Is it the most representative? *****

Letters To The Editor

Parents of Rockcastle County, be proud. Last week I was fortunate enough to lead the annual pilgrimage to the Shrine Circus at Lexington with approximately six hundred of our county children. An invigorating experience, I might add.

It is with a great sense of pride that I commend the parents of these fine kids. I was particularly impressed with their decorum, behavior and conduct. This is a reflection on your efforts to rear your children in the proper manner and I salute you.

I would also like to express my appreciation and those of my fellow Shriners to the Rockcastle County School Board, the Supervisor of the transportation for the use of the school buses, and last but not least, the fine and dependable drivers who volunteered their time to safely deliver all of us to the Circus, and return. To you wonderful ladies who so ably chaperoned and cared for all these children. (Cont. to 7)

Mrs. M. O. Miller, Noble, Illinois.

"Our son, Gayle, came home with a written guarantee from the Navy. It promised he'd be trained as a Data Processing Technician. And he was." That's what Mrs. Miller says about the Navy's training guarantee.

Any high school graduate who qualifies can get the same guarantee. Talk to your local Navy Recruiter for more information.

Attend Dedication of Woodford Co. Ambulance Service Building

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. "Buddy" Cox accepted the invitation of the Woodford County Fiscal Court, and attended the dedication of the Woodford County Ambulance Service Building, Saturday, August 17th.

The facility is located on land donated to the county by International Paper Company. The metal building which housed the county court clerk's office during the rebuilding of the county courthouse has been utilized in the construction of the new facility.

The ambulance service is four years old and is an agency of the Fiscal Court. With the new facility the service now provides twenty-four hour service, employing six men, with two men constantly on duty. The facility has sleeping space, a kitchen, office, training area and two bays to keep the ambulances out of the weather and at the ready at all times.

Ambulance service, by the county, came into being in April, 1970, after Federal regulations made the operation by private funeral homes impractical.

The county's service began April 1 that year and through April 11 was operated by the Woodford County Sheriff's office. From April 1, 1970 to April 1, 1971, the service was operated under contract with the Woodford Fiscal Court by Carlos E. Blevins. In April 1971, all members of the Woodford Ambulance Service became county employees.

In August 1971 the service purchased a new 54 inch headroom, four-patient unit, plus two-way communications radio. The unit was then fully equipped to meet all emergency medical standards.

Also in August Blevins was sent to North Carolina to be enrolled in the American Red Cross instructors course and graduated as an instructor in all phases of first aid. In September, 1971, all members were enrolled at the University of Kentucky in the Emergency Medical Technician Ambulance Program sponsored by the State Health Department.

"More efficiency here pays off at your electric water heater, too!"

Mrs. Carol Benson KU Home Economist

Keep dirty dishes out of sight in your dishwasher till you can wash full loads. Dishwasher and water heater work less - give longer service, more value.

Some other tips. Showers take less hot water than baths. Repair leaky hot water faucets fast, one drop per second wastes about 200 gallons a month. Install water heater near the point of greatest use to avoid long, heat-wasting pipe runs. Common sense hot water use has many benefits - from more efficient use of appliances and electricity to lower water bills.

Down On The Farm

By: Roy G. Brown
Assistant Vice President
Cumberland PCA

We are visiting the Rockcastle County Agriculture Fair at the Little World's Fair in Brodhead.

This is the second year the Rockcastle Agriculture Fair has been in existence. It was re-established last year after a lapse of several years by the Brodhead Fair and the State Department of Agriculture.

This year we made a lot of improvements in all areas of the Fair, with more farmers taking

Federally Insured Student Loans Help Many Farm Boys and Girls

More and more Kentucky farm boys and girls are taking advantage of the Federally insured student loans administered by the Kentucky Department of Agriculture.

As of the first of August, twenty-five loans had been approved for the 1974-75 school year. The average loan is about $1,100.

We are real pleased with the fact that through this program we have been able to provide an opportunity for rural boys and girls to go to college or vocational school. The program was established in 1972, and last year was the first year for it to become operational.

The program utilizes funds that were granted to Kentucky around 1958 under the Rural Rehabilitation Program. The funds were held in trust by the part. There were many more exhibits in every class. We had a much better dairy and beef show this year.

We hope with your co-operation to make a real old "country fair" for the good people of this area as we used to have in years gone by... "Down on the Farm."

Federal government until 1970, when they were returned to the State. The assets total about $765,000 (book value). About $280,000 of the assets are invested in Federal notes and student loans and will be available for future student loan purposes as the notes are paid in full or liquidated.

To be eligible for a loan, a boy or girl must live on a farm in Kentucky. The family's adjusted income cannot be over $15,000 per year. The boy or girl must be a high school graduate, of course, and must have been accepted by an accredited institution before they can be considered for a loan approval.

An advantage of the loan program is the fact that the students are given a very liberal re-payment schedule. The program was designed in this way in order to provide maximum benefits to farm youths wanting to get a college education or vocational training.

A boy or girl interested in knowing more about the Federally Insured Student Loan program can contact the Student Loan Director, Kentucky Department of Agriculture, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, 40601. They can also contact the student financial aid officer at the school or college which they wish to attend. In addition, they can contact the local committee in their home county. This local committee is comprised of the Farmers Home Administration supervisor; the county school superintendent; and the vocational agriculture teacher. Committee members will be able to provide interested students with information on the loan program as well as official application forms.

All of us who recognize the importance of getting a college education or training for a vocation, also recognize the importance of making it possible for all interested boys and girls to go to college or to a vocational school. Consequently, we are glad to be able to administer the student loan program and to have a part in investing the future of our rural youth - an investment which we believe will be returned to our communities in the years to come.

FOOD COST-CUTTERS

Although food is usually the largest single expense in a family budget, you can generally reduce the amount you spend for food by——Checking weekly specials in newspaper foodstore advertisements.

—Preparing a grocery list before you shop.

—Comparing costs and buying food in the form (fresh, frozen or canned) or the weight of package that gives the most servings for the amount of money you spend. To make an intelligent choice among brands of the same product, test different ones to see which one gives the greatest quality plus greatest number of servings for the amount of money spent.

—Shopping carefully for low-cost foods within each food group.

—Using grades in making your food purchases. Government grades will enable you to be sure of the quality of the food you buy, and you are often better able to compare prices.

—Taking advantage of seasonal abundances. Radio, television and newspapers call attention to foods in plentiful supply. These foods will be at their peak of quality and sometimes will be offered at lower prices.

—Limiting perishable food purchases to amounts that can be used while they are in top quality.

—Preventing food waste by proper storage and by cooking methods that conserve nutrients.

—Increasing skills in cooking.

—Considering family likes and dislikes when food shopping. Thrifty food buys pay off, only if your family eats and enjoys the food.

Here are some suggestions that may help you get more food value for your food dollars:

—When buying meat, consider the amount of lean meat in the cut, not the cost per pound. Some cuts contain bone, gristle and fat waste. For example, ground beef and beef short-ribs cost the same per pound, but ground beef will give twice as many servings or more per pound than short ribs. Bacon, which is largely fat, is one of the most expensive foods you can buy in terms of protein value.

—Chicken and turkey have a large proportion of bone to lean, but are often bargains compared with other meats. Fish is high in nutrients, but is often low in cost.

—Eggs are usually a less expensive source of nutrients than most meats. Dry beans and peanut butter are inexpensive alternates for meat.

—Beef, lamb and pork liver give unusually high nutritive returns for money spent.

—Sturdy bread labels before you buy. Choose bread for weight and food value, not by the size of loaf. Look for bread that is whole-grain or enriched and contains milk.

—Ready-to-serve cereals in multipacks of small boxes may cost two or three times more per ounce than the same cereal in a larger box. Sugar-coated, ready-to-serve cereals cost more per ounce than many common, unrefined ones and furnish more calories, but less other food value.

—Buy packaged cereals or any other packaged food by weight, not by the size of the package. To compare prices, first look for the weights listed on the labels and note the prices. Then figure the costs for an ounce or a pound.

—Cereals you cook yourself (particularly the kinds that take longer to cook) are quite often less expensive than the ready-prepared ones.

—Baked goods made at home usually cost less than ready-baked ones.

—Nonfat dry milk and evaporated milk cost considerably less per quart when reconstituted, than whole fluid milk, and supply comparable amounts of calcium and protein. Reconstituted nonfat dry milk is an excellent beverage for most persons and generally can be substituted for whole fluid milk in cooking. For preparing and baking many other foods, nonfat dry milk does not need to be reconstituted before using. A glass of whole fluid milk usually costs three times as much as a glass of reconstituted nonfat dry milk.

—Choose the type of pack or grade in a canned product that is appropriate to your cooking method. It is thrifty to buy canned tomatoes of low market grade for stews and sauces. A can of solid white meat tuna costs more than the same size can of grated light meat tuna. You may prefer the solid pack for a salad and the grated pack for casseroles and sandwich fillings.

—Consider your time and the quality of the finished product in deciding between convenience foods (those with more than usual services added) and unprepared ones. Compare prices to see if it pays to prepare a product yourself from basic ingredients. Sometimes it does not. How much you enjoy cooking and how much time you can spend will influence your choice.

—If you want more help in following a food plan to budget your food money, ask for "Family Food Budgeting (Home and Garden Bulletin 94) at the County Extension Office in the Court-house.

Dear Editor:
We now have a qualified ambulance service. I can remember not too long ago how upset everyone was that we did not have this service. I feel that as a community, we should all band together and support it.

Having worked in the medical profession for ten years, I know how important time can play in an emergency. Promptness can save lives and much can be accomplished with good service. I feel more secure for my family and myself now that we do have this service. Let's everyone join together and support the Central Ambulance Service as it is a non-profit corporation.

Very Truly Yours
Mrs. Julianne Harris

To All Citizens of Rockcastle County

As president of the Rockcastle County Homemakers Association, I want to urge all of you who have not already done so, to please buy a membership in the Central Ambulance Service.

This is the ONLY ambulance service we have in the county and the cost of a membership ($15.00) is really a very small price to pay for a service so desperately needed. This service is necessary to all and certainly something we can't afford to lose. Do you imagine the April 3rd tornado with no ambulance service? Mothers, can you imagine a sick or injured child with no ambulance service? We could go on and on—

These things could happen and are happening in other sections of the country where there is no longer ambulance service available. I, for one, do not want to see such a tragedy in Rockcastle County. Do you? You may purchase your membership at the Bank of Mt. Vernon or at the Citizens Bank in Bowling Green, Ky. Write to Central Ambulance Service, Mt. Vernon, Ky.

The $15.00 membership fee covers husband, wife and unmarried children and raises 21 living at home. Please, if you have not done so, do it today!

Sincerely,
Mrs. E.J. Smith, President
Rockcastle Co. Homemakers

Having run into unexpected delays in the matter of a shortage of paper and cover material, I am not yet able to put a price on our book nor set up a definite press date. As soon as these things can be straightened out, I will make the necessary announcement through this column. My main hope now is to get the book out in time for Christmas presents.

The following copy is shown here just as it will be printed in the book, unless some reader can point out an error or furnish additional information.

No part of the history of Rockcastle County has required more research than the attempt to name the county's first permanent settler. Collins' History names Stephen Langford as among the first and places his coming at about 1790, which is indefinite indeed. Further complications arise from the fact that there were two Stephens Langfords, cousins, one from Virginia and the other from North Carolina, and who is to tell us which of the two was living in Lincoln County, according to the first Kentucky census in 1790, and was later transferred to Rockcastle County when a portion of Lincoln County went into its formation.

The way out of the dilemma seemed to be to find an earlier settler than either of the Langfords, which we seem to have succeeded in doing. In getting into old land grants from Virginia we find the names of a great many men who had taken up land in our area as early as the late 1700's, but this was of little assistance, as the grants in most instances were for huge acreage, taken up by land speculators who sold their holdings, much like the Langfords, to them. Linda Ashley, my valued assistant in searching out old records in the land office at Frankfort and the archives of the University of Kentucky, has come upon many early entries in what is now Rockcastle County, dated as far back as 1780, at least one of which speaks of "improvements," a term generally indicating the building of a cabin or the raising of a crop of corn on the land claimed by the warrant. This particular entry was in the name of Lewis Craig, who next year led "The Travelling Church" from Sparrsylvania Court House in Virginia to a new settlement in Garrard County, Kentucky, following Skaggs Trace, which ran alongside his claim. In "The History of Garrard County and Its Churches," the author, Forrest Calico, an authority on "The Travelling Church," says that Craig came to Kentucky as early as 1779, looking for a place at which to locate the church which he planned to bring out of Virginia to escape the persecution to which they had been subjected there by the Church of England groups in that state. It may well be that this man, Rockcastle County grant was one of many he acquired, in different localities, from which to make final choice.

Other entries of 1780, on Skaggs Creek, in Rockcastle County, include James Barber, Isaac Hite, John, Abram and Joseph Bowman, and John Curo. Jones Bennett Hitt of Renfro Valley has in his possession an original grant of one thousand acres on Roundstone Creek, dated as far back as 1780, at least one of which is Henry in 1781. There is nothing to indicate, however, that anyone was living on any of these claims at the time. Jacob Meyers, who took up land on Skaggs Creek in 1782, was apparently living there in 1790, but it is not known just when he settled there. Stephen Trigg also took up land on Skaggs Creek in the same year, but since his name does not show in the census of 1790, he probably never took up residence on his claim.

Mrs. Ashley has sent me copies of Kentucky Vital Statistics from which it appears that a Solomon Lambert was born in Rockcastle County in 1789. The only Solomon Lambert we can locate was born in Clark County at that time, his parents moving the family to Madison County about 1785, which later put them in Rockcastle when the county was formed. His father was a Revolutionary soldier and an ancestor of Attorney James Lambert, of Mt. Vernon, Kentucky. These Vital Statistics records also show a Jane Anglan, born in 1784, listed as having been born in Mt. Vernon, Kentucky, the daughter of M. J. and Mary Miller. She died in Mt. Vernon in 1859, at the reported age of 75. According to family records, M. J. and Mary Miller were among the first of the family name to come to Mt. Vernon, coming here in 1823 from Jessamine County, Kentucky. Incidentally, their names do not show up in the 1830 census for Rockcastle. It is possible that a mistake was made in reporting Jane Anglan's age at 75, or that she was born elsewhere in an older M. J. and Mary Miller, although this seems quite unlikely.

James Proctor, who came from Pennsylvania to Rockcastle County, at a date now unknown, can justly lay claim to having been one of our oldest settlers. At the time he built his pole cabin in the Cove area, the nearest store from which he could purchase supplies was at Logan's Fort, now Stanford, Kentucky, and it took three days to make the round trip on foot. So wild and unsettled was the country that bears and predators would sniff around the door and peer through the cracks between the logs of his cabin at night while he was gone, and his wife and babies covered in fright under the bedcovers. William Henderson was first here in 1779, but not as a settler. He reported being over here for a hunt and killing a buffalo near the present town of Mt. Vernon. He was then on his way back to Virginia, following the close of George Rogers Clark's Northwest Campaign, in which he had participated as a Lieutenant. He was stuck in this part of country again with surveying parties and, according to Russell Dyche, in his History of Laurel County, Kentucky, surveyed, in 1783-84, the Military Reserve Line, which set aside certain lands to be reserved for settlement by military land grants issued for service in the Revolutionary War. By 1794 he had come back to Rockcastle County, in company with Frederick Akes and the Graves Brothers. Leonard and James, where he took up a grant of one thousand acres of land around what is now Mt. Vernon. The five Mullins brothers, including the late Spencer, Champ and Gardner, were here in 1792, but soon moved on to White's Valley, near Boonesboro, returning to Rockcastle at a later date and settling permanently around White Oak Branch.

Between 1790 and 1800 many family names were well established and later appeared in the census of 1810, after the founding and naming of Rockcastle County. It is to be understood that when we hereafter refer to Rockcastle County prior to 1810, the date of its formation, we have meant to indicate the land in the area of which the county was later made up. By the time of the official setting up of the County, the population had grown (see 1810 Census) to more than seventeen hundred persons, all of whom may well be considered early settlers.

In our attempt to name the first family to make Rockcastle County their home, we carefully sifted all the evidence readily available to us. No doubt, if we had the time to go through all the musty old records in the land office, and other state archives, we might very likely turn up positive evidence that would enable us to state with certainty the actual time of the coming of many early settlers. The earliest printed record we have found indicates that David Lewis of Petersburg, Virginia, came with his family to Kentucky in 1787 and settled two miles west of present Mt. Vernon, Kentucky, where he spent the remainder of his life. This information, from Volume 8, of The History of Kentucky, by Conley and Conover, provides us with the first definite notice of a particular family, settling on a given location in the area of Rockcastle County, and leads us to the conclusion that to the Lewis Family goes the honor of being called our first settlers.

We will expand on this family later on by bringing in their several collateral branches, such as the Hendersons, the McCalls, the Bethunns, the Whiteheads, the Stewarts and others.
