throughout Kentucky but generally schools that bear with electricity have not experienced soaring costs that coal users have.

All of the school personnel who were consulted said that using costs such as those described above have swallowed up increased allocations from the state.

How, then, are the schools coping with inflation?

The Bowling Green system has reduced its maintenance staff from 10 to six people and has cut capital outlay expenses such as construction and repair projects, purchase of equipment etc. according to the finance officer.

Clark County Superintendent White said that even though population in that area has increased, the system is not adding to the supply of teachers. White also reported cutbacks in maintenance work and supplies.

Jefferson County Schools will fight inflation by holding the line on the budget according to Finance Officer Grayson.

We will have an 8 to 10 percent increase in allocations over the next two years but we won't raise budget allocations, Grayson explained.

A road guess: deputy director of the Bureau of Administration and Finance to the state Department of Education said that the methods for dealing with inflation used in these districts are typical of actions school systems Kentucky have been forced to take.

Inflation is causing cuts in teaching staff and deferred maintenance that can only lower the quality of our school programs, Guess said.

And despite the general belief that there is room for reducing administrative costs, Kentucky districts already spend less on administrative services than districts in the surrounding states.

CUSTOM MUSIC SYSTEM INSTALLED AT DOWELL & MARTIN FUNERAL HOME

A custom music system of advanced electronic design has been installed at the Dowell and Martin Funeral Home in Mt. Vernon.

Manufactured and maintained by the National Music Service of Spokane, Washington, the system provides background music where desired throughout the funeral home and complete service music for all faiths and creeds. The new music service will allow the Dowell and Martin Funeral Home to provide appropriate music for virtually any type of funeral rite.

National Music Service (NMS) research has developed a recorded sound fidelity and "Music Presence" which by test is said to be almost indistinguishable from "live" sound, a feature which funeral homes have found indispensable in their services. Each NMS installation is customized and individualized according to the architectural and acoustical considerations of the funeral home.

Music for the background and vocal tapes is originated in a modern recording studio located in the Spokane headquarters. Over 1700 vocal solo and background tapes are available for use from NMS. The voice of Company President Merrill Womach, a singer of considerable note, is heard on vocal selections used in funeral services.

Womach has been gifted with a magnificent voice which he artfully utilizes for sensitive lyrics. He has been singing for funeral services since age six and through National Music Service has devoted himself to providing a music ministry for the funeral profession.

Began almost a dozen years ago in a one-room Spokane shop, National Music Service now operates from a plant which encompasses just about one-half of a city square block in Spokane. Included in the complex are offices, an assembly plant, a tape duplication center, a cabinet shop, a warehouse and the recording studio with what is said to be the most sophisticated facilities in the Pacific Northwest.

A rapidly expanding sales force now brings representation for the company to all Continental States. Regional headquarters are maintained in California, Minnesota, New York, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Georgia and Texas.

Because National Music Service maintains the responsibility for servicing all of its equipment, a nationwide service team of engineers and technicians is set up to provide almost instantaneous service, wherever needed, anywhere in the country. *****

OPINIONS FROM OFFICE OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

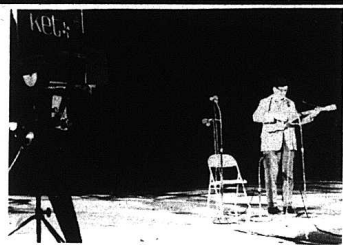

Among opinions released last week from the office of Attorney General Ed W. Hancock were the following:

Laws Governing Possession Or Transfer of Marijuana - In response to James S. Secret of Scottsville, the Attorney General's Office states that any person who knowingly and unlawfully possesses for his own use or transfers marijuana shall be confined in County Jail for not more than ninety days or be fined not more than $250. Furthermore, any person found guilty of violating the above law may be ordered to a facility designated by the Commissioner of the Department of Mental Health where a program - not to exceed ninety days - of education, treatment and rehabilitation shall be prescribed.

Clarification of Voter Registration - In response to Ottis W. Elam of Morehead, the Attorney General's Office has published the following rules regarding voter registration.

Any person may register during the period registration is open if he possesses, or will possess on the day of the next election, the qualifications set forth by Kentucky law. Therefore, any individual can take up legal residence in a particular precinct and immediately register to vote if, by the day of the next regular election, he has satisfied the thirty-day residential requirement.

Kentucky Educational Television (KET) cameras captured Dr. Jimmy Driftwood's performance at the Kentucky Lake Bicentennial Festival earlier this month at Kenlake State Resort Park. Dr. Driftwood, founder of the National Folk Cultural Center in Mt. View, Arkansas performed during the two-day festival, which airs this fall on KET.

Farm Income In County Hit $8,132,000 In 1973

How did the average farmer in Rockcastle County make out in the past year?

The answer is very well - far better than right now. According to the final figures for 1973, recently compiled, his gross receipts were the best for a long time. For some local growers, they were the best ever.

Their overall income from the sale of crops, livestock and other farm products compared favorably with the returns reported for many other parts of the country. The figures are from a national survey released by the Standard Rate and Data Service. It shows that farm receipts in the local area were $2,055,000 larger than in 1972, which was a relatively good year itself.

The increase was due to the big upsurge in foreign orders for American food products. Exports jumped from the $9.4 billion recorded in 1972 to more than $17 billion as a result.

The good growing conditions, also, prevailed in contrast to the year's ruinous drought, made it possible to meet the unexpected demand.

In Rockcastle County, the NRDS figures show, farm income in the year came to $8,132,000, as compared with the previous year's $6,127,000. That was the gross amount, before deductions for taxes, labor, supplies and other operating costs.

The increase, 33 percent, compares with 27 percent in the United States and with 29 percent in the State of Kentucky.

Included in the gross income figure are the cash receipts from farm marketings, government payments and "income in kind," which is the value of home-grown products that are consumed on the farm.

Of the amount received by local growers from the sale of farm commodities, the latest Department of Agriculture breakdown reveals that some 44 percent of it came from crops and 56 percent from the marketing of livestock, poultry and dairy products.

The sharp gains made in the year by American farmers and ranchers are attributed to the unprecedented worldwide demand for their products. It led to much higher prices.

Gross receipts, as a result, rose $21.6 billion as against a $15.2 billion rise in operating costs. The net gain was $6.4 billion.

Proposed Schedule of Grade Loan Rates for 1974 - Crop Burley Tobacco.....

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) today announced a "Proposed" schedule of Grade Loan Rates for 1974 - Crop Burley Tobacco.....

The proposed loan rates range from $5.25 per pound to $4 cents per pound and reflect an average support of 85.5 cents per pound, 6.9 cents above 1973.

As in the past, no loans will be available on any tobacco grade (No. G (No Grade), U (Unsound), W (Doubtful Keeping Order) or Scrap. The cooperative associations through which advances are made available will be authorized one cent per pound to apply against overhead costs.

Comments regarding the proposed rates will be considered if submitted in writing by October 20, 1974 to the Director, Tobacco and Peanut Division, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, USDA, Washington, D. C. 20250. The comments will be available for public inspection.

JOHN NICHOLS'

Frankfort Watchline

We sort of like Lt. Gov. Julian Carroll's idea that the biennial pre-legislative conference be moved from Kentucky Dam Village State Park to the Capitol Building in Frankfort.

But we don't buy what sounds like an assignment of blame to another segment of the legislative scene for the poor image the conference seems to acquire for the lawmakers. Rather, we like his motivation.

The Lt. Gov. says that Kentuckians have a bad impression from stories that say senators and representatives use the conference for a few nights of partying. A "playhouse" is how he characterized it.

In these days of talk about legislative reform - an empty phrase, still because of the continued imbalance of power between the legislature and the executive - it's good that someone watches over the public relations aspects of anything with a state government label.

But Carroll by implication blames someone other than the few legislators whose activities bring discredit upon their colleagues.

If you don't know what a pre-legislative conference is, then bear this: Every other December, just before the start of the General Assembly session, lawmakers, aides, legislative research staff members and the executive branch all set up shop for three to five days at the Park.

The purpose is to bring the lawmakers up to date on procedure, indoctrinate the freshmen, and allow everyone to get to know one another. The sessions are well attended. As Carroll puts it, "we're doing the state's business."

Bill down the road a piece, while the legislators are busy with their meetings, lobby groups are toiling with hospitality preparations because that's where most of the action is after sundown. And that's what the Lt. Gov. is talking about.

Invariably, a reporter will slide into one of these hospitality settings one night and report things that tend to embarrass all the legislators. It's dirty pool, but it's there.

What Lt. Gov. Carroll doesn't like is that the lawmakers all get painted with a big black brush if the word goes out that they're misbehaving again at the park. He'd rather blame the lobbyists, it seems.

Well, the lobbyists wouldn't go to all that trouble if they didn't have reason to believe that someone likes them nearby. We've had lobbyists swear to us that they've gone entire conferences without once discussing issues with any neighbors.

Why, it hasn't been too many years ago that the lobby groups had an active part in the orientation of new lawmakers. Wonder why they don't allow that anymore?

Now, to Carroll's solution. He'd move the whole thing to Frankfort, move it up to November and stretch it to ten days.

He feels that in Frankfort, on state property, there's more control of the extra-curricular activities. Don't know why. The Frankfort nightspots aren't so hard to get to from the Capitol Building.

Maybe it's just that what seems out of place at a state park doesn't seem out of place in the state capitol. After all, Frankfort's putting up with the same kind of foolishness three months in every twenty-four for better than 150 years.

We like Carroll's intent. It's high time someone gave a boot to the Legislature's image. But, don't forget, a lot of that image depends on what's done during the sessions. Carroll, who might be your next governor, will find himself faced with lots of opportunity to give the lawmakers large chunks of freedom so that they can begin to be truly reformers.

But there are all kinds of reform. There's reform in work output, so that more time can be spent on important legislation.

There's reform in general behavior to better satisfy the people they did a good job at the polls. And there's true reform - reform in the amount of real input, real decision-making in the financial and policy matters of state government.

There hasn't been much of that last kind of reform because it takes guts. Courage on the part of the governor to give up some of his power... courage by lawmakers to accept some responsibility.

There's your reform - regardless of who drinks whose whisky in whose hospitality room and in what city.

Where'd They Go? - Have we missed something? We thought there was supposed to be a heated U.S. Senate campaign going on somewhere nearby and for the life of us we can't find it. Guess we were wrong.

Yeah. We got fooled several months ago and promised you one of the hottest Senate campaigns in decades. Wonder what happened?

Maybe the candidates wore themselves out on the Red River and Gorge Dam issue. We hit the bulls-eye on that one, though. Right or wrong it has turned into the top argument of the race. Wish they'd deal more with the economy, state spending and integrity in government.

Maybe they have and we've just been in the wrong places. Looks like Julian Carroll has been the most frantic campaigner of the race and he doesn't even have Ford's promise to return the favor a year from now.

One thing's sure, the candidates haven't peaked too early.

Hope you folks remember there's an election in November and not stay at home out of boredom.

"Airtightness" is an important part of saving energy and money. When your fireplace is not being used, the damper should be tightly closed to prevent the chimney from drawing heated or cooled air from the house.

Good fitting storm windows and doors save energy, too. Anything you can do to cut down escaping air that you pay to heat or cool makes sense and saves dollars. It's worth the effort. Today, it's the lazy homeowner who wastes energy.

GRAND OLE OPRY STAR TO APPEAR AT TOMBSTONE...

The Bob Luman Show will be at Tombsstone Junction on September 29th. This Country/Western singer is a veteran entertainer who is famous for many Country Music hits, plus he does some great on-stage impersonations.

Bob started out as a baseball player—he signed with the Pittsburgh Pirates at age 17. But he turned to music and was carried to sudden fame in the 50's with a song "Red Cadillac and a Black Mustang."

This Naacogoches, Texas native soon switched to Country Music and has had a long list of hit songs, such as: his million seller "Let's Think About Lovin'"; "Come On Home and Sing The Blues to Daddy"; and "Lonely Women Make Good Lovers." Bob has been a member of the Grand Ole Opry since 1965 and captivates Opry audiences as often as his personal appearances schedule permits him to appear on that famous stage.

Bob is a natural showman who obviously enjoys his work. He includes impersonations of everyone from Fats Domino to Walter Brennan in his act, which is mostly Countrytopian, and throws in some rock and roll for good measure. There is no stopping this 6'1" good looking, all-around, All-American boy, and he's proven it!

OPINIONS FROM OFFICE OF ATTORNEY GENERAL

Among opinions released from the office of Atty. Gen. Ed W. Hancock last week were the following:

Blue Lights Unlawful on Private Vehicles - In response to Chief C. L. Stevens of Ashland, the Attorney General's Office says that it is illegal to use blue lights on privately owned vehicles. Blue lights may be used on "emergency vehicles" only. As defined by Kentucky law, "emergency vehicle" means any vehicle used for emergency purposes by a fire department, public police department, sheriff's office, rescue squad, ambulance service, or any publicly owned vehicle used for emergency purposes by civil defense, ambulance service, police officers or firemen. It is the further opinion of the Attorney General's Office that the unit described as the Boyd County Police Unit cannot properly be called a part of a county civil defense unit. Also, if any direction or restraint is placed upon a citizen by a person representing himself as a police officer when such is not the case, the pretender may be held liable for false imprisonment or false arrest.

Insect Causes Tree Defoliation In SE and S. Central Kentucky

An insect known as the pin oak sawfly has caused considerable defoliation of oak trees in Adair, Bell, Casey, Jackson, Laurel, Pulaski, and Rockcastle Counties. Oaks in these counties have been turning brown for more than a month due to the feeding activity of this insect.

Recently, the Kentucky Division of Forestry completed an aerial survey of the affected areas and it was found that more than 300,000 acres were infested by the sawfly.

It is the larvae (caterpillar) of the insect that cause the defoliation. The larvae are small, slug-like and yellowish-green in color, and their heads and legs are shiny black. This stage of the insect feeds primarily on the lower surfaces of the leaves, leaving only the upper surface and a fine network of veins.

Results of an aerial survey of Rockcastle County, conducted by the Division of Forestry near the end of August indicate that about 8,226 acres in the county are affected by this insect.

Since defoliation occurs late in the season, serious damage to the trees is unlikely, however, growth loss is possible. Oaks growing on Southern slopes may become susceptible to root rot due to a reduction in vigor and the poor-site quality on Southern slopes.

An important fact to remember is that defoliators are cyclic and populations usually diminish due to natural controls. Although more than 300,000 acres of forest have been infested by the pin oak sawfly, very little tree mortality is expected.

Control Lawn Weeds In The Fall

weeds such as buckhorn plantain, broadleaf plantain, wild garlic, dandelion, and ground ivy can be controlled with treatments of 2, 4-D, silvex, banvel, or a combination of these chemicals in the fall.

For the one of the safest periods of the year to use these herbicides on established bluegrass lawns. Many formulations of 2,4-D, silvex and banvel volatilize at high temperatures, and there is less danger of vapor drift to desirable plants when air temperatures are in the 60 to 70 degree Fahrenheit range, rather than the high 80 and 90 degree range that occurs in the summer. Since annual flower and vegetable plants die in the fall and perennial flowers and shrubs are going dormant, there is also less chance of injury from spray drift at this time of the year.

Treatments with 2, 4-D, silvex and banvel should be made when air temperatures are expected to be at least as low as the 60 degree range for several days following application of the herbicide. In Kentucky, it is not unusual to be able to spray into late November or early December when there is a late fall.

Banvel, silvex, and 2, 4-D are active ingredients in many weed control products and sold under various trade names. Follow closely the directions and precautions in the label for proper use of the product purchased. Do not use Banvel on the root zone area of desirable trees or shrubs - restrict its use to areas where it is used under various trade names.

Since fall treatments with these herbicides will kill only existing plants, additional treatments may be necessary the following spring to control new weeds that have grown from seeds.

Practices that will stimulate growth of desirable lawn grass will often aid in preventing weeds from becoming established. Therefore, it is important to follow good management practices with regard to seeding, fertilizing, and mowing as well as using the correct herbicides.

The greater number of weeds that are controlled in the fall and the better the stand of desirable grass that develops in the fall and winter, the greater the chance for a good lawn next spring. *****

How To Make Sauerkraut From Late Cabbage...

It's time to whop up a batch of that good Kentucky sauerkraut.

For the uninitiated, sauerkraut is cabbage which has been cut fine, salted, and allowed to ferment in its own juice. Some folks swear by it. Others can't even abide the smell.

For sauerkraut fans, here's a tried-and-true recipe from your County Extension Agent for Home Economics, Cheryl Witt. A ten-gallon crock holds about forty pounds of cabbage.

Select firm cabbages. Remove outside leaves and hard core. Wash and drain cabbage and weigh it. For every forty pounds, provide one pound (approximately 2 cups) of coarse salt (not iodized salt).

Shred the cabbage, put a 3- or 4-inch layer in the crock; sprinkle with salt. Stamp thoroughly with a heavy potato masher or wooden stamper until cabbage is covered with juice. Repeat cabbage-and-salt layers and stamping until contents are within 2 1/2 inches of the top.

If you prefer, you can mix cabbage and salt before packing into the well-scrubbed crock.

To keep the cabbage covered with brine, you can weight it down with a large heavy-weight plastic bag partially filled with water and sealed at the top. Or cover cabbage with a clean cloth and weight it with a plate topped by two quart jars full of water.

Fermentation starts right away in a warm weather.

One loss. Tied for second place are the Millers and the Buckaroos, with 6 wins and 2 losses. There is a three-way tie for third place, with the Barons, the Moonlighters, and the Strikers all with 4 wins and 4 losses.

High Team Series went to the Buckaroos with 2191, and High Team Game went to the Moonlighters with 776. High Series, Men: Hulen Simpson, 568; Ernest Brown, 568; and Claude Simpson, 557. High Game, Men: Ernest Brown took first with 230; Hulen Simpson, 2nd with 202; and Bobby Bullock, 2nd, 198. In High Series, Women: Betty M. Simpson was first with 480; Debbie Kieser, 470; and Clara Proctor, 451.

High Game, Women: Betty M. Simpson, 192; Sylvia Reynolds, 179; and Debbie Kieser, 177.

Make Easy Uncooked Jam To Store In Freezer or Fridge...

Homemade uncooked jam will keep in your freezer for as long as a year, or in your refrigerator for a couple of months. You can make it in all kinds of wild or cultivated berries, peaches or plums.

This jam keeps its fresh fruit flavor and takes a very short time to prepare. Here's the recipe:

Sort and wash fully-ripened fruit. Drain. Remove caps, stems, pits, core or skins. Crush fruit and measure three cups into large bowl. Add five cups of sugar, mix well, and let stand for twenty minutes. Stir occasionally.

Dissolve one package of powdered pectin in one cup of water and bring to a boil for one minute. Add to fruit mixture. Stir for two minutes.

Ladle jam into half-pint freezer containers, leaving one-half inch space at top. Cover the containers and let stand for 24 to 48 hours, or until the jam has set. If you plan refrigerator storage, use regular jelly glasses or jars and cover jam with one-eight inch layer of melted paraffin.

Store in refrigerator or freezer until ready for use. Once opened, the jam should be used within a few days. It will mold or ferment if stored at room temperature. *****

FHA REPORT.....

'FHA's Search for Leadership' was the theme for the 13th Regional Fall Meeting of the Future Homemakers of America held at Rockcastle County High School, with thirty schools represented on September 14th. Many interesting activities were planned for the chapter officers as they learned of their duties. The group determined goals for Region 13 of FHA for the 1974-75 year, and plans were made to carry them out.

Attending from Rockcastle County were the following officers: Regina Taylor, president; Lisa Randolph, 1st vice president; Wanda Brown, 2nd vice president; Joan Mize, secretary; Debbie Owens, treasurer; Debby Cable, historian; Marian Gentry, parliamentarian; Debbie Bishop, recreation leader; Delilah Alexander, song leader; Joy Ballinger, reporter; Vicki Jones, honor roll chairman; Serena Stewart, scholarship chairman; Rita Brown, hostess chairman.

The all day program included sessions on leadership and responsibility as well as many recreational activities. Some of the highlights of the program included Mr. Glen Polly, the guest speaker from Rockcastle County High School speaking on "Search for Leadership," and the presentation of "FHA Inquiry," a test of the girls' FHA knowledge.

The Fall meeting proved to be an educational and enjoyable experience.

Down On The Farm

Well, we just had our first frost of the Fall, but not too much damage to crops, as yet. There still remains some tobacco out, late corn, and hay to be harvested.

Some of the old timers are predicting a cold winter by the many signs they say: such as the shuck on the corn, the wooly worm, how many snows by the number of logs in August. But whatever the outcome is, it will be a costly winter to try to keep warm, with the increased cost of fuel oil, coal, gas and electric for heat. We may have to go back to burning wood if we have a fireplace or stove. As for me, I think we'll cut wood and use the fireplace more. There is nothing any more relaxing and enjoyable than sitting before an open fire, watching the fire consume the logs....with its popping, spewing and the smell of wood smoke drifting in the air from the chimney.

And, another weather sign: if the smoke settles down to the ground, it will be bad weather; but if it goes on up into the air, it should be clear weather. "Down on the Farm."

CHEVROLET FOR 1975. CARS THAT MAKE SENSE FOR TODAY.

MONZA 2+2 The small car of tomorrow will probably be a little more powerful, handy and comfortable than ever. The 1975 Monza 2+2, shown above, offers this today. It looks like a million and drives like it looks.
NOVA In the background above, our new Nova LN Sedan. A luxurious Nova with thick carpeting and wide-back reclining front seats. In 1975, all Novas have been emphatically refined along the lines of elegant European design. Nova's always been good. Now it's beautiful.	IMPALA America's favorite car continues to provide the room, many families need plus plenty of quiet and comfort. Still the great American value.
CHEVELLE Mid-size, easy to drive, room for six, mid-priced, strong reputation for value. America's most popular intermediate.	MONTE CARLO Its special ability makes you feel good. About the way it looks and drives. About your own taste and judgment.

CHEVROLET'S NEW EFFICIENCY SYSTEM FOR 1975 It's the key part of a program aimed at helping our new cars run leaner (more economically), run-cleaner—and save you money every mile.

The Efficiency System is standard on all 1975 Chevrolets with V8 or 6-cylinder engines. It's a series of significant engineering improvements working together for the very first time.

Components include High Energy Ignition, catalytic converter, Early Fuel Evaporation and steel-belted radial ply tires. In sum, the System is designed to heighten the pleasure and lower the cost of driving a 1975 Chevrolet—to bring you a better running car in many ways, along with improved fuel economy, more miles between recommended maintenance and an engine that stays cleaner internally because of no-lube fuel.

Your Chevrolet dealer will gladly give you the details—and answer your questions. See him and the sensible 1975 Chevrolets starting September 27.

Following the War Between the States Rockcastle County had its share of Ku Klux activities. Here, as elsewhere, what might have been a good thing in the beginning soon degenerated into a means of gratifying personal grudges and satisfying bloodthirsty inclinations. From the very nature of any secret organization, the names of the organizers and promoters of the Klan were not generally known, even at that day, and cannot be ascertained at this much later date.

A few years ago someone brought in, for display in our museum in Renfro Valley, a bundle of old dried and withered switches which had once been used by the local Klan as a warning to prospective victims of their wrath. A bundle of switches left on a man's porch during the night indicated that he was doing something to which the Klan objected, and that if he continued doing it, he would be whipped. Still later, in tearing down an old house in town, a mask and robe and complete Ku Klux uniform was found hidden away in the attic. This was immediately destroyed, without anyone other than the finders being allowed to see it.

There are many tales of their activities whizzed about in a guarded manner among the folks, and among the most often repeated is the story of an inoffensive old man, Joe Ramsey, a Civil War veteran, who had been whipped by the Klan on suspicion of having butchered a hog belonging to a neighbor and hiding the meat in what was known as The Devil's Coffin, inside Sand Cave, near the Renfro Valley Settlement. Smarting under the disgrace of such punishment, he hanged himself in the flat woods near the old Jim Myers house, using a small grapevine instead of a rope as a hangman's noose.

The father of Rodney Adams of Preachersville, Garrard County, Kentucky, was killed and robbed while on a cattle buying trip and Andy Cummins was suspected of the crime. He moved away, secretly, during the night to Rockcastle County. Later on, another of the Adams family came through buying cattle and saw and recognized him. Next night Adams returned with a group of kinfolks and KKK's and surrounded the homes of Andy Cummins and Jim Bethurum, his kinsman, seeking revenge. Andy was killed, but not before he had killed Rodney Adams. Andy's daughter was shot when she recognized another Adams brother whose mask had become misplaced. She recovered, however, and the Adams boy was later tried for shooting her. He had another brother, somewhere in the South, who greatly resembled him and he was called home for the trial. When their lawyer had the two brothers stand up in the courtroom for her to identify her assailant, she could not do so and the case was dismissed.

When Jim Bethurum's house was surrounded, Walter Saunders, ex-sheriff of Lincoln County, forced open the door and met a fusillade of shots from three rifles. He was slightly wounded and another man, Charley Burton, was killed instantly. The rifles were fired by Jim Bethurum, his wife and a woman relative. Jim escaped, but was later killed on the Somerset road, just out of Mt. Vernon. His brother, Bob, had previously been killed by Saunders in Lincoln County.

Saunders had also been instrumental in the arrest and imprisonment of four men, friends and relatives of Bethurum, suspected of having beaten and robbed an old couple, so there was already bad blood between the two. The KKK, numbering around a hundred men, under the excitement of the moment, decided to go on to Mt. Vernon, where the suspects were in jail, and take them out and hang them. This they proceeded to do, utilizing as a hangman's tree a big oak that stood alongside the road just out of Mt. Vernon. Early next morning the bodies were cut down and taken to the Courthouse, where they were laid out on the floor awaiting removal by their families. If a touch of humor may be injected into such a gruesome situation, here is where it comes in. The undrained bodies remained there overnight and during the night Logan Thompson and two or three boon companions who kept their liquor stored in the courthouse, decided to draw on it. They entered by way of a hallway on the ground floor, and it was exactly that! Just even with the ground and the boys which roamed the streets of the town during the day often wandered inside the building to sleep at night.

In tiptoeing furtively along this hallway, one of the boys stumbled over a sleeping animal which sprang to its feet with a startled wail and led a wild stampede of mixed porkers and prowlies to the nearest exit.

The last KKK raid in Rockcastle County of any importance was staged on a November night of 1877, about ten days after the lynching referred to above. It was said that about half of the gang concerned with the lynching were included in this later mob, plus a few other members of Mt. Vernon klansmen, not known to have participated in previous raids. This body of men, in full regalia, surrounded the home of Irvine Gilmore, a Negro, who lived near the old Wilderness Road, about two miles East of Mt. Vernon. He was an ex-slave, the former property of Liberty Langford, son of Stephen Langford, one of the county's first settlers.

Dragging Gilmore from his home and tying him to a tree in his yard, they questioned him at length about Liberty Langford and his activities, beating him unconscious and leaving him for dead when they failed to get the cooperation they sought. After they had gone off in the direction of the big log tavern owned and operated by Langford, Gilmore's wife was able to revive him and he set off for the nearby home of James Langford, Liberty's son, to apprise him of what was happening. On the way he met his brother, Sydney, and another colored man, George Middleton. Middleton stayed with the wounded Irvine while Sydney hurried on to warn James.

On the way he met James and a neighbor, Mike Pitman, who had heard the shooting, which had already begun in the vicinity of Liberty's tavern, and were on their way, fully armed, to give what assistance might be required. James' young son, Elzy, had begged to go along with his father, but had not been allowed to do so. He was later to grow up to a life of adventure and bloodshed, which was terminated in a most unusual manner, as will be related later.

After leaving Gilmore insensible in his own yard, the KKK mob had proceeded to Langford's Tavern, which they surrounded and demanded Liberty's surrender. When it was not forthcoming, they proceeded to riddle the building with rifle and pistol shots which had slight effect on its thick log walls. Lifting the siege for some unexplained reason, they started riding back the way they had come. Upon reaching a plum thicket on top of the hill near the present site of the Southern Dollar Store, just South of Mt. Vernon, they were suddenly fired on from ambush, by James Langford and his four helpers, who had concealed themselves to wait until the party came past them. It was estimated that between two and three hundred shots were fired before the mounted Klansmen galloped away from the scene in apparent panic.

In this engagement, generally referred to as the Battle of Sand Hill, the only casualty sustained by the Langford forces was an additional injury to the unfortunate Gilmore in the form of a slight bullet wound in the hip. Of the attacking forces, four out of twenty men were killed and their bodies, under cover of darkness, smuggled away to their own homes. Several Mount Vernon men immediately following the Sand Hill Fight were confined to their homes with mysterious ailments and Dr. Jack Brown was said to have set up a temporary operating room in a back street barn where he was able to salvage a considerable quantity of lead in the general course of his business. When I was a boy this affair had long been over, but Uncle Billy Poynter was still being discreetly kidded by older citizens of the town about having a prize saddle horse which in some strange fashion got an ear shot off on the very night of the battle.

This was the last stand, in force, of the KKK in Rockcastle County. Other deplorable incidents occurred and other lives were lost before the end of the reign of terror, with the incident about to be related writing the final chapter. On July 16th, 1886, a meeting was arranged between Lee Carter and the Moore Brothers, Tom and Jack, looking towards a final settlement between the Ku Klux and citizens of the county. It is said by some that one of the Moores was sheriff at the time and Carter was proposing that the Klansmen would break up and disband if the law would grant them amnesty for past offenses. Others have stated that no officers of the law were involved and that this was simply a matter between private citizens.

Whatever the occasion for the meeting, it broke up in gunfire and Carter was said to have gone across the street and into a store, where he was furnished with a shotgun, by Willis Adams, following which he came out on the sidewalk and fired at Tom and Jack Moore, killing them both. Jack was killed instantly and Tom died the next day. This, so far as is known, was the last killing in the county in which the Ku Klux Klan was involved. Lee Carter was later killed by Jim Frazier, but his killing was supposed to have been in no way connected with the shooting of the Moore Brothers.

"YOUR CLOTHING DOLLAR"

Is your clothing budget stretched past the limit to cover family wardrobe needs these days? Information to help you make your clothing dollar go further is now available from Cheryl Witt, Rockcastle County Extension Agent for Home Economics.

Mrs. Witt just returned from a workshop on "Your Clothing Dollar," conducted by University of Kentucky Extension Specialists in Lexington. She brought back many money and time-saving suggestions relating to the family wardrobe which should be of help to Rockcastle County families.

Attending the September 17-20 workshop were 22 home economics Extension agents from around the state who are responsible for Extension clothing programs in their respective areas. In addition to helping families with their clothing-dollar problems, Mrs. Witt will be working with other Extension agents and homemakers in the Wilderness Trail Area on this subject.

"Emphasis at the workshop was on making the best use of resources as they relate to the family's wardrobe," she says. "We discussed how to plan for the best use of the clothing dollar and how to judge quality when shopping for clothes - and considerable time was spent on home sewing."

"Two especially interesting sessions were on time-saving sewing techniques and on recycling the wardrobe," she continues. "We learned how to recycle clothes that can no longer be worn by updating them or making children's clothes from them. Fabric care and stain removal to make clothes stay wearable longer - was also discussed."

Mrs. Witt notes that the clothing agents also had sessions on reaching more families with Extension clothing projects and activities now available for young people. Training in the use of mass communications and visual aids was also part of the workshop.

"Those interested in more information on stretching the clothing dollar - or on any other home-related subject - can contact her at the Rockcastle County Extension Office in Mt. Vernon at 256-2403."

School Enrollment Drops

Across the United States, the decrease in 1974-75 school enrollment is expected to be seven-tenths of one percent below last year's enrollment, while in Kentucky it is expected to be one percent.

"The decline is more pronounced in the first three grades, especially in the first grade. However, secondary school enrollment remains fairly stationary," said Lee Tyler, director of the Division of Pupil Personnel Attendance and Accounting for the state Department of Education.

"The decrease in enrollment in Kentucky is due mainly to the declining birth rate. This trend is expected to continue for the next four or five years," he said.

"The decline in enrollment in Kentucky has been slowed somewhat due to new kindergarten and special education programs that have been added this year," he said.

Enrollment in public and non-public schools, grades kindergarten through twelve, has shown a steady decline since the 1971-72 school year when it was 790,220 at the end of the first month of school. At the end of the first month of 1973-74 school year, it was down to 777,454. This year, according to estimates submitted to the state Department of Education, by local school personnel in June, 1974, Kentucky's enrollment will be approximately 768,916. Actual figures on enrollment will not be available until December 1, 1974.

other crops have not yet been damaged by the heavy rains, but that drier weather is needed to speed up maturation.

Corn and soybeans are coming along pretty well, he said, but need to start maturing at a faster rate in case of an early frost.

KENTUCKY AFFIELD
By: John Wilson
Guest Writer

Saturday, September 28 is National Hunting and Fishing Day, but many of Kentucky's dedicated sportsmen will be too busy to go hunting or fishing. Instead, they will be holding open houses at sportsmen's clubs, manning display booths or managing other exhibits or demonstrations.

The first nationwide observance of Hunting and Fishing Day was in 1972, and since then it has become an annual affair, held each year on the fourth Saturday in September.

The purpose of this day is two-fold. First, it is to honor the contributions which sportsmen have made to conservation and, second, to acquaint the general public with the nature and scope of these contributions.

It is this second reason which keeps those involved from their favorite squirrel woods or fishing lake. Although it is their day, many hunters and fishermen will spend it explaining to those who drop by the exhibit or open house which their club is sponsoring just what sportsmen have done and are continuing to do for the conservation of our natural resources.

Briefly, they will explain to their visitors - that sportsmen were among the first to call for a halt to market hunting and the other practices which rapidly were depleting wildlife populations at the turn of the century, and how they were responsible for establishing fish and game departments in all fifty states and for both state and federal laws to protect wildlife.

They also will tell how sportsmen, through their hunting and fishing license fees and by a federal excise tax on hunting and fishing equipment, finance wildlife surveys, research, management and the acquisition of much-needed lands for both game and non-game species.

They will show that concerned sportsmen, through state and national organizations such as the National Wildlife Federation, the Isaac Walton League of America and Ducks Unlimited, are among the leaders of those seeking the wise use of all our natural resources.

Check for National Hunting and Fishing Day activities in your area and drop by on September 28th. Let Kentucky's sportsmen know that you appreciate their efforts toward a better environment.

Heavy Rains Hindered Tobacco Harvest

The recent heavy rainfall throughout Kentucky definitely has been damaging to this year's tobacco crop, agriculture specialists say, but farmers still have a fighting chance if sunny weather prevails over the next several weeks.

As of mid-September, burley cutting was running about twenty-five percent behind schedule, said Arlon Scott of the Kentucky Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. Scott said that reports from county agents throughout the state indicate that approximately forty-one percent of the burley harvest was in, as compared to sixty-six percent this time last year.

"The wet weather has damaged tobacco in both the field and the barn," Scott said. "There's been a high degree of rotting, more leaves are slipping off the stalks, and sucker growth is causing additional problems in some fields."

And, he added, materials for heating and drying are scarce in several parts of the state.

Harold Harberson, tobacco specialist in the Kentucky Department of Agriculture, said that although the total burley crop is going to be short, the final assessment will depend greatly upon the weather during the next few weeks.

An average of 2.5 to three inches of rain fell throughout Kentucky in the first two weeks of September, the National Weather Service reported, which is about one inch above normal.

Some areas were hit harder, such as Greenville, where 7.08 inches fell; Glasgow, which received 7.25 inches; Berea, 4.85; and Princeton, 4.38.

Scott said that Kentucky's

YOUR ELECTRICITY

MUST cost you more. Here's why.

There is no shortage of electricity in our service area. You can count on all you need for home, office, store or industry. But today you can also count on something else... higher costs. Electric bills that must get bigger and bigger. Why?

Inflation
Sky-high prices for everything we use to generate electricity and bring it to you. Wire, transformers, trucks, wages... the thousands of things that make up our "market basket." It costs more to bring you electricity... every day.

Environmental Controls
A clean environment carries a huge price tag. Money we must obtain from our customers. We will spend $10.3 billion in 1974 for environmental control equipment, more than $30 million between '73 and '77.

Construction Costs
To meet your ever growing demands for energy, including the demands for power caused by the shift to electricity from other fuels and by

Kentucky's industrial expansion, we must spend at least $500 million between 1974 and 1978. And costs keep growing as inflation adds to planned expenditures.

Interest Costs
To serve those growing needs we must borrow money to build—more than $300 million in permanent financing by 1978. The interest cost alone could be as much as $30 million a year, fixed charges that must be provided by our customers.

These are the reasons behind the rising cost of electricity. The more and more our costs go up, the more and more our rates must rise. And the more equitably they go up now, the more competitively we can borrow the money we must have—and the less your rates will rise in the years ahead.

Consumer Comments

Use Caution in Contracting Home Improvement Repair

"Hello, Mrs. John Doe. I am the building inspector, and would like to check out your home for possible defects in construction - no charge."

Although most home improvement repair companies are fair and do good work, there are some so-called repair companies which the consumer should be on the lookout for.

Free inspections offered by home improvement and/or repair services may turn out to be anything but free. Defects they allegedly discover might range from faulty furnaces to termites to dangerous roofs, wiring, chimneys, or trees that must come down.

These repair services also have been known to pose as health, zoning, or governmental inspectors to gain entrance to homes to perform supposedly necessary inspections.

Because some home improvement repair services have abused the consumers' trust in the past, consumers should verify the credentials of persons claiming to act in an official capacity by calling the public office they claim to represent.

You can help avoid being defrauded by a home improvement "con artist" by following these pointers:

"Before consenting to a free inspection, a consumer should request proper identification from the inspector and check it.

"Do not rush into the signing of a contract for repairs following a free inspection. A smart consumer reads all contracts slowly and carefully and is not afraid to ask questions."

"Prior to entering into an agreement for repair, consumers should be certain to check the warranty or guarantee closely."

If the repair service offers no warranty or guarantee, or a very limited one, it might be wise to seek another repair service - if, in fact, you feel repairs are necessary.

If you have any questions regarding the repair service's reputation, check with the local Chamber of Commerce, Better Business Bureau, or the local or state Consumer Protection Agency.

Always remember that a warranty is only as good as the person or company that stands behind it.

For answers or suggestions to aid with consumer problems, Kentucky residents may call on the toll-free consumer hotline, 1-800-372-2960, or write the Attorney General's Division of Consumer Protection, Room 34, Capitol Building, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

Study on Tobacco Marketing Announced

The state Department of Agriculture and a legislative subcommittee have announced plans for a two-pronged study of tobacco marketing in Kentucky.

Water Enforcement Officer Cornelius Freeman conducts a safety inspection of a fishing boat anchored near the shoreline of Dewey Lake in Jenny Wiley State Resort Park. State boating officials advise fishermen (who will account for an estimated 75% of the boating activity on Kentucky waters from now through next Spring) to make sure they have the safety equipment required by state law on board their boats. Equipment should be in serviceable condition before use on the water.

Schools Hit Hard By Inflation

FRANKFORT, Ky. While the national rate of inflation today is 7 1/2 per cent according to the Kentucky Department of Commerce, some Kentucky school superintendents and finance officers are citing much higher rates of increase of prices of essential school supplies and services.

The rising costs of paper products fuel and food for example hit the school systems as hard if not harder than they hit the individual consumer.

James Wood, finance officer for the Bowling Green Independent Schools, reported that the costs of instructional supplies for his district are up 21 per cent over last year.

Under the category of instructional materials are such teaching essentials as construction paper, Scotch tape and duplicating supplies.

The cost of paper alone has risen 17 per cent over the 1971 figures for Clark County according to Superintendent Ernest R. White Jr.

Finance Officer Ernest Grayson of the Jefferson

County Schools listed several other products for which prices have skyrocketed during the past year.

*Tempera paint up 30 per cent.

*Mimeograph paper up 63 cents a box to $1.51

*Duplicating fluid up 176 per cent

Newspaper, a formerly inexpensive paper with a multitude of uses in art classes and elementary activities costs .00 per cent more than it did in 1973.

Grayson added. Both Grayson and Wood commented on other costs to the schools that the public generally overlooks supplies for vocational education and laboratory classes.

Wood said that metals parts for welding and wood products are among the supplies getting more and more expensive every day.

According to Grayson the cost of the silver nitrate used in chemistry classes has increased 800 per cent from $6.50 a pound in 1973 to $105 for the same amount today. Needless to say we'll be doing fewer experiments with silver nitrate this year, Grayson added.

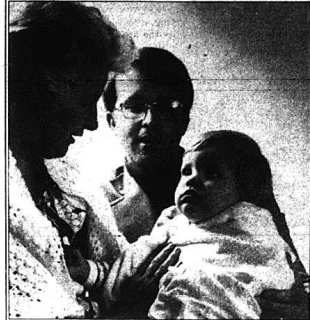

Gasoline prices have elevated school transportation budgets across the state. Wood said that Bowling Green's transportation budget $55,000 two years ago has risen to $74,000 this year.

In Jefferson County the cost of gasoline for school buses rose from 10 cents a gallon a year ago to 40 cents a gallon today. William B. Hall, assistant superintendent of the Laurel County Schools, noted that gasoline prices rose from 22 to 37 cents a gallon in one year in his district.

Laurel County also was particularly hard hit by increases in the prices of fuel. Ten of the 12 schools there are heated with coal. Over the past year coal costs went from $17 to $38 per ton doubling the district's fuel budget. Clark County also reported a doubling in coal prices $16 to $32 a ton since last year. Utility bills are up (Cont. to 16)

Be There, Be Neighborly and Bring a Friend Not Responsible in Case of Accident Dinner On the Ground

WE HAVE THIS LITTLE PROBLEM ABOUT IMAGE

In western movies, the funeral director is a shifty-eyed, no-good character who races with his tape-measure in hand to every shoot-out. In contemporary books and shows, he's the shrewd businessman who thrives on death.

How does a guy overcome an image like that?

Perhaps the best way is by setting an opposite example -- by serving the living in a friendly, unselfish manner. We hope so, because that's what we've been doing all along.
