KSP Announce Drive TO Keep Highway Death Toll Low

The Kentucky State Police are going into the advertising business.

With three major holidays—Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's—just around the bend, they aren't taking any chances that the state's heretofore record low highway death toll for 1974 is going to suffer a sudden disastrous turnabout.

In a joint announcement issued here today, Gov. Wendell H. Ford and State Police Commissioner Roger L. Johnson disclosed that state police strategy for keeping road deaths to a minimum for the remainder of the year contains at least one surprise for motorists.

In addition to all the usual ploys that most motorists have come to expect—roadblocks on secondary roads, plus maximum use of the air patrol, radar and road patrols—every trooper in Kentucky also will be sporting a large, brilliant-yellow bumper sticker on his cruiser which reads simply, in bold, black lettering: "55 MPH."

Ford said that the idea for the bumper sticker grew out of fears expressed by state police that the 1974 highway death toll may be starting to climb.

"During the first half of this year, Kentucky was commended publicly by the National Safety Council for reducing its traffic death toll by 32 percent. In fact, we did so well that we bettered the national average rate of reduction by a significant nine percent," he said.

But more recent reports indicate that more drivers are becoming increasingly careless behind the steering wheel, he said.

Johnson added that speed, especially, has been a major factor behind the rising death toll, and it was concern over that particular problem which led state police to the idea of using bumper stickers as a speed law reminder for motorists.

The number of motorists cited by state police for speed and speed-related violations, such as reckless driving, since the first of the year, over that particular problem which led state police to the idea of using bumper stickers as a speed law reminder for motorists.

To test motorists' reaction to the new bumper stickers, state police recently put one on an unmarked vehicle headed for Louisville on 154 from Frankfort. Surprisingly enough, said the trooper driver, "not one car passed me."

Thus, for the Thanksgiving Holiday period, Field Operations of the Kentucky State Police will display "55 MPH" on its patrol cars. Road and traffic control personnel will compliment this program will travel 55 miles per hour for distances of five to fifteen miles. Headquarters personnel will compliment this special 55 MPH patrol. Field Operations will continue its normal holiday enforcement procedures by utilizing aircraft, Vascor and radar. In addition, 25 new Speedgun radars will be distributed to the Field and placed into full operation.

The motorist's cooperation through voluntary compliance to speed laws is critically needed for continued highway safety. Kentucky has 388 fewer traffic deaths this year than last year. This is a commendable record and the KENTUCKY STATE TROOPERS want to help you keep it that way.

The 1973 death toll for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's was 16, 8 and 9, respectively.

Consumer Comments

By: Ed W. Hancock
Attorney General of Kentucky

Rising food prices, and especially meat prices, are everyone's beef these days. To save money, some consumers are turning to buying beef in bulk. Do they really save money? The answer is sometimes. It may be just as expensive or even less expensive to buy separate cuts on sale in the supermarket or other stores where you know in advance exactly what you are getting.

But if you do decide to buy meat in bulk, you may freeze, you should get the following:

1. Check for the USDA wholesomeness inspection mark, assuring safe, clean meat.
2. Know the types of meat: "Prime" is the top quality; "Choice" is the next highest grade of meat and is most often found in retail markets. "Good" is the third highest grade of meat, followed by "Standard" and then "Commercial." Names such as "Family Grade A" or "Supreme" mean nothing.
3. Learn about yields, which tell you the amount of usable meat on a carcass. Yield 1 is the highest yielding, about 80 percent edible meat. The higher the yield number, the higher the percentage of waste.

4. Know how much storage space you have available.

5. Study a meat-buying chart to learn the various cuts and how they are prepared.

6. Consider the different kinds of cuts your family prefers and buy the type of meat that will give you these cuts. For example, a hindquarter of beef will yield more steaks and roasts.

7. Don't be misled by the hanging weight—that means the untrimmed weight. The actual take-home weight will be less. Find out how much less.

8. Inquire if the cutting and wrapping cost is included in the price per pound.

9. Above all, beware of bait and switch tactics. This office has had complaints that such tactics have been used by some Kentucky bulk beef dealers.

The bait took the form of an advertisement offering meat at very low prices. A consumer who responded to the ad was shown fat, watery, unattractive meat. The sales person tried to discourage the consumer from buying the advertised meat.

Mr. William Anderson of Sarasota, Florida visited his mother Mrs. Noncarr Anderson and she accompanied him to Covington where they visited their daughter Mrs. and Mr. Virgil Sams and family.

Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Poynter in Louisville last Sunday to visit their new advertisement offering meat at very low prices.

Mrs. Curtis McHargue and Mrs. Russell Mullins were in Berea Monday on business.

Mrs. Thomas Kirby accompanied her husband to Atlanta, Georgia Monday where she will spend a few days.

"BURELY SALES"

day average was only 86c.

The spokesman also said that in his opinion prices would climb since a lot of tobacco on the floor at Madison yesterday was graded at no price support and this tobacco still averaged $1.00 a pound. He described the quality of this year's crop as "usable," rather than flashy or fancy, due to the adverse weather conditions under which the tobacco was raised.

One Lexington warehouse suspended sales because, as the owner of the warehouse said, "the grower deserves more money for his crop. If he is going to stop profit this year and come back next year, he's got to have more than the $1.10 per pound."

Sales on the Lexington market set an all-time high average of $110.84 per hundred pounds.

There was "little or no pooling" reported on the Lexington market.

Sales at tobacco warehouses across the state resumed Tuesday and will be held Wednesday and Friday. Thereafter, sales throughout the remainder of the season will be conducted the first four days of the week. Markets will close December 19 for the holiday recess and will reopen January 6.

Will Rockcastle Co. Be Going Metric?

What are the chances of the metric system coming to Rockcastle County?

What is the likelihood of the local area eventually turning away from the current units of weights and measures— inches, pounds, quarts and the like—and adopting such newer units as centimeters, meters, liters and grams?

The first concrete step toward that end has just been taken, nationally, with the enactment of a Federal bill authorizing the expenditure of $40 million over the next four years to introduce the metric system to today's school children.

According to the National Education Association, many schools across the country will now be pushing in earnest to make metrics part of their curriculum.

Rockcastle County children would be told, for instance, that because of the energy shortage the speed limit on highways has been reduced to 88 kilometers per hour, which is the same as 55 miles an hour.

They would also learn that their family car gets about 6 kilometers to the liter, instead of 14 miles or so to the gallon, and that the 4,600 passenger cars in their area consume an average of 2,720 liters of gas in the course of a year.

The Rockcastle County housewife, in shopping for food, will be buying 2 kilos of meat (equivalent to 4.4 pounds), 200 grams of cheese (7 ounces), and a liter of milk (1.06 quarts).

These and other changes in our present, non-decimal system of units will ultimately have to take place, according to Department of Commerce analysts.

There is increasing pressure in this country, from the business, educational and scientific communities to take the plunge. They propose a gradual conversion over a ten-year period.

As it stands now, more than 90 percent of the countries of the world now use the metric system. The United States is the only major industrial country that does not.

That fact puts us at a disadvantage as far as international trade is concerned, it is claimed.

Many oppose the change, however. They contend that conversion would cost any billions of dollars and would upset our economy for years to come.

City Retail Licensing Classified Frank A. Wichman, attorney for Erlanger, asked a question concerning a second bar, or counter, in a place holding only one retail drink license. Since drinks are actually mixed and prepared at a service bar in an adjoining room and only ordered and served at the counter, the question, it is the opinion of the Attorney General's Office that the procedure is practically identical with a waitress taking an order at a table and not a beverage bar which would necessitate an additional retail drink license.

SPORTS TALK Chuck Hardy

A YULETIDE GIFT...

IT'S THAT TIME of the year again—the approaching yuletide season...with chestnuts roasting on an open fire (preferably to the accompaniment of Nat King Cole)...If joywed with the Christmas spirit, you might want to cull the best of gift offerings—perhaps a sports book—to give a loved one, particularly the young adult, with special emphasis on the inspirational kind. And now there are many—more than ever—good sports books available, and you don't have to go to any great lengths to get them.

BEFORE RUSHING to the nearest book store be prepared that you won't find "Frank Merriwell at Yale," or "Tom Swift and His Electric Runabout" staring you in the face. Not on the bookshelves. But anyone who grew up during the 1920s or 30s will remember them well, particularly Tom Swift. He was the classic, young-adult inventor, with outstrut jaw, collar-and-cuff and a steady glint to his bright blue eyes, ready to give a thrashing to any bullly speaking ill of his mother, his flag, his old school ties, or using foul language in front of ladies.

TOM SWIFT, circa 1930, was a walking warehouse of adverbs. He was always saying things "dynamically," or "frantically," or "somberly" (never "soberly" because with Tom that went without saying). He could never say simply, "Pass the sugar." It would be, "Pass the sugar," Tom said sweetly. Or, "Pass the salt," he said bitterly. Or, "Pass the collection plate," Tom said softly. How would it sound if young Tom were resurrected and applied his picturesque speech to the world of sports (ahem) presently?

YOUNG TOM, defender of the righteous and idol of every star-struck schoolboy, might burst up and say dynamically, "I never had a faked fight," said George Foreman fixer. Or, "I never bet on a football game," said Joe Namath oddly. Or, "Aaron has to hit 61 homers in 154 games for it to count on Babe's record," said Bowie Kuhn ruthlessly. Or, "My car did not leak oil," said race driver Tim McArdle slyly. Or, "I will turn Clay to ashes," said Joe Frazier smokingly.

GOOD GIFT BOOKS as reviewed by your sports talker are: "The Game" by Tex Maule—an official picture history of the National Football League; "Hockey in My Life" by Phil Esposito with Gerald Ekenazi; "Henry Aaron: Quiet Superstar" by Al Hirschberg; "Great Women Athletes" by Martha Moffett; "Six Days to Saturday" by Jack Newcomb; "Great Moments in American Sports" by Jerry Bradford; "Roberto Clemente" by Kenneth Rudeen; "The Complete Encyclopedia of Sports," edited by Keith W. Jennings, and "Inside: Cornet Talks with Tom Sawyer," edited by Joel H. Cohen. They're priced in the $5-$9 range. Go on! Be a spender! It only hurts for a little while.

ELEMENTARY BASKETBALL SCHEDULE CHANGES

The game between Brodhead and Mt. Vernon Elementary Schools scheduled to be played at Mt. Vernon on December 2nd at 6:30 will be played at Livingston instead on December 2nd at 6:30. This game will be a double-header with Brodhead vs. Mt. Vernon and Livingston vs. Roundstone (Girls only).

The game between Roundstone and Brodhead Elementary Schools scheduled to be played at Roundstone December 16th at 6:30 will be played at Livingston December 16th at 6:30. This game will be a double-header with Roundstone vs. Brodhead and Livingston vs. Mt. Vernon (Midgets only).

The game between Roundstone and Brodhead Elementary Schools scheduled to be played at Roundstone December 19th at 6:30 will be played at Mt. Vernon December 19th at 6:30. This game will be a double-header with Roundstone vs. Brodhead and Livingston vs. Mt. Vernon (7th Grade Boys).

It is necessary to make these changes in our Elementary Basketball Schedule in order to conserve our schools' coal supply. Hopefully, after settlement of the coal crisis, future changes in our schedule will not be necessary.

DWELLING ROBBED

The home of Mrs. Edith Bell Pigg, located ten miles East of Mt. Vernon on Highway 1786, was robbed Friday, November 22nd, and a stereo phonograph, a single shot shotgun and a bolt action rifle were taken.

State Police said that entry to the home was gained by forcing the back door on the West end of the house between 6 and 6:30 p.m.

LIVINGSTON RESIDENCE SHOT INTO...

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Mullins at Livingston was damaged early Sunday morning when it was shot into, evidently from a passing car.

State Trooper Greg Ennis, who investigated, said that one shot was fired into the front door of the residence and the storm door with a pistol.

Residents of Rockcastle County may now obtain police assistance by calling 256-4231. The radio system is set-up in the office of Central Ambulance Service and is manned by ambulance service personnel. John Grider, a member of the Central Ambulance Service, is shown with the radio which can be used to reach any law enforcement official in the county twenty-four hours a day, including the State Police. (See story elsewhere on front page).

Dial 256-4231 If You Need Police Assistance

For the first time in history, the residents of Rockcastle County now have available a system whereby they can get a message to law enforcement officials within a matter of minutes.

This came about recently when the Central Ambulance Service requested quarters in the City Hall Building for their employees. The Council granted this request with one of the conditions being that the Ambulance Service workers man a 24-hour system whereby residents of the county, needing help from police, can call 256-4231 and either the City Police, Sheriff or State Police will be dispatched by the radio which has been installed in the Ambulance Service quarters.

John Grider, ambulance service employee, said that any of the three town's policemen, the Sheriff, or State Police can be reached by the radio. Or, if you need to speak with the State Police directly but don't wish to make a long-distance call to London, you may call this number and your request will be relayed by radio to London and a State Policeman dispatched to your house. Also, the city's point-to-point system has also been installed there and can be used to contact other law enforcement agencies throughout the state when needed.

The radios were purchased through the Kentucky Regional Crime Commission on a matching grant basis by the Mt. Vernon City Council.

Remember - Call 256-4231 anytime you need police assistance.

were sold at Hi $ with the pool taking none.

Farm Bureau Launches Meat Promotion Campaign

The Rockcastle County Farm Bureau is launching a campaign to promote the sale of meat gift certificates through local grocery stores between now and Christmas.

According to Rockcastle County Farm Bureau President Wallace Proctor, meat gift certificates are available for purchase at stores throughout the county.

The certificates can be purchased in varying amounts, Mr. Proctor said, and will make wonderful Christmas gifts for family and friends, or at work. All types of meat are represented in the campaign, including beef, pork, turkey, chicken and lamb.

The Rockcastle County campaign is a part of a statewide effort by the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation to aid the livestock producer. Impetus for the promotion is provided by this year's low market prices that have hurt all segments of the meat industry in Kentucky. Cattle prices, for instance, have fallen at times to less than half what they were a year ago, and (Cont. to 8)

ARCO STATION ROBBED AGAIN

Two Cincinnati, Ohio juveniles were arrested in Madison County following an armed robbery Wednesday night about 8 p.m. at Van Zant's Arco Service Station on U.S. 25, South of Mt. Vernon.

The attendant on duty at the time told State Police that the two juveniles entered the station, pulled a '62 automatic and told him to give them his money. The attendant handed over $35 and the youths got in their car and headed North on the Interstate.

The attendant immediately notified State Police who radioed a description of the car ahead and the two boys were apprehended in Madison County by the State Police. Following a juvenile hearing, the youths were turned over to representatives of the Ohio Youth Commission.

The Mount Vernon Firemen were called to the home of Chester McClure on Laik Street last Friday night at about 9:00. The Fire Department quickly extinguished the fire which did $200 to $300 damage to one room. According to Fire Chief John Cox, the blaze caught around a fuse which had been installed last summer. ## Frankfort Watchline

Could it be that we detect the sometimes soft but often heavy-handed touch of Kentucky Democrat Julian Brown, Jr. that recent feeler about the candidacy of John Y. Brown, Jr. for governor?

It's been a while since we've heard from Miller. We, too, get wind of these stories about a rift between him and Wendell Ford, the man for whose political fortunes Miller was the draftsman.

Wonder if there was really much to that. The business about whether or not the federal government is still actively interested in the Democratic Party's fund-raising activities a couple of years ago may have caused both men to cool their relationship for obvious reasons.

But Ford's future is pretty much a secure thing, now, and it's not unreasonable to be looking for Miller's renewed interest in creating another candidate or two.

And it would certainly be a timely kind of move, because it's no secret there's little love lost between Miller and the current Democratic center of attention — Julian Carroll.

This, of course, dates back the time when Carroll's candidacy for high state office, for some reason, set Miller's teeth on edge. And Carroll was a winner and the well-known Miller scowl deepened.

So, we have Carroll, with a free year in the governor's office now on which to mount a charge toward a full four-year term in the coming May primary election. And, suddenly, we get the word that Brown thinks he's likely candidate fodder.

The story was no accident. It cropped up through an interview with a reporter.

Later, Brown demurred on some points in that story, but the latest is the unveiling of a poll in which the successful young businessman's record in the world of commerce is displayed in an apparent effort to provide some insight into his status as a candidate.

Fine. But we remember back in one late April evening in 1971 and recall how close Brown came to entering that year's Democratic Senate primary and testing "Dee" Huddleston.

For whatever reasons, that faceoff never happened. Does anyone seriously believe that a battle with Julian Carroll would be less bruising? Surely not. Meantime, the use of the poll as an entree into the Democratic primary field is not unique, but it's an old and reliable tool of former party chairman Miller.

Hardly a move was ever made in any Wendell Ford political camp unless a poll of some kind said it was the right move.

Not much evidence, we know, but it's a brief look at some of the possible whys and wherefores behind the renewed political hopes of the Fried Chicken magnate.

Okay. We're going out on the limb just a bit farther, now, and wondering out loud whether or not Brown might slate in the primary with Todd Hollenbach.

Though Hollenbach is credited with having had some odd things to say about the prestige of the office of Lt. Gov., we believe the fever's got him, too, and that he'd tuck away his pride for a time.

Whew!!! The old Watchline crystal ball has had a workout this week, so let's give it a little rest for a while, okay????

C'Mon, Get It Over With — Once again, the specter of Kentucky coal field strike looms over the Commonwealth, and that's bad. It's bad for everyone.

No one argues with the United Mine Workers' right to stay on the job or to leave the mines, as they choose. But how can Kentuckians ignore the long injustice of roving bands of strikers forcing the shutdown of independent operators?

"If we don't work, no one works," is a poor slogan under which to try to seek understanding of one's labor problems. Could there be more than meets the eye here? Is it possible a few old Tony Boyle hangers-on are not anxious to see new UMW President Arnold Miller win a good contract so quickly?

What someone had better understand and quickly is that coal has been very good for an important segment of blue-collar America, and has recently been extremely good to the financing of government, at least at the state level.

This strike is costing the Kentucky revenue picture more than a million dollars a week in severance taxes. That's a pretty hefty blow to withstand when, because of coal, this state's economy was faring much better than others who don't possess this precious resource. JN

LETTER TO THE EDITOR...

Dear Editor:

Last Thursday night, around 9 p.m., while trying to get some rest and sleep, I suddenly found myself lying in a bed of glass from a beer bottle which had been thrown through our window. By the mercy of God, I wasn't injured.

Two years ago, I voted for our sheriff, Mr. Bales, Mr. Thacker and Mr. Hrenko, but now, we need protection from drunks making the roads dangerous to be on Residents of Flat Gap Road live in fear of being killed by flying bottles or of a bottle coming in through a window such as happened Thursday night.

We, the people of Flat Gap Road, need protection from the law which we don't have and it is a terrible thing to have to live in fear day and night.

I wish Mr. Thacker and Mr. Shepherd would come to this area some day and count the beer cans and whiskey bottles from here to the Madison County line.

We don't bother anyone and try to live good. My father and I are both in very bad health and certainly can do without the excitement of worrying that a beer bottle is going to come through the window at us.

We need the Flat Gap Road patrolled by the law.

Yours truly,

Carl Durham

TAKING CARE OF THAT TURKEY.....

Whether you're cooking holiday turkey for hundreds of people in a restaurant or school or for a small family at home, the same rules apply for the safe handling of poultry or meat.

Following a few simple rules can keep illness from spilling the holiday spirit. As a starting point, consumers must realize that the inspection mark of wholesomeness means that the product is wholesome, not that it is germ free. Few, if any, foods are germ free.

Proper handling and cooking, however, will keep these micro-organisms at safe levels. No matter the amount of meat or poultry you're buying, it should come from well refrigerated display cases and be stamped with the date of sale. If the meat or poultry is torn or damaged, once bought it should be returned to refrigeration quickly.

Storage after arriving in the institution or home is equally important. If it's going to be used in a few days, the meat or poultry may be stored in the coldest part of the refrigerator in its original wrappings.

For long term freezing, the meat or poultry should be tightly wrapped in moisture resistant material such as aluminum foil or freezer paper. Until the cooking day arrives, the food should be kept refrigerated.

Ideally, frozen meat or poultry should be defrosted in the refrigerator. Meat or poultry may also be defrosted in a container of cold water if left in watertight wrapper. Careful thawing procedures are especially important for poultry.

If the bird must be thawed at room temperature, its surface should be kept cool during thawing. This can be done by placing the bird, still in its original wrapper, in a closed double-paper bag until the bird is pliable.

It is important, especially with poultry, that cutting boards, counter tops, knives or pans which contacted the raw poultry or meat do not come in contact with the product after it has been cooked.

For this reason, soap and water or a cleanser which kills bacteria should be used on surfaces on which the raw meat or poultry was prepared.

Your hands, utensils and other surfaces which contacted the raw products should also be sanitized thoroughly before contacting the cooked product.

The actual cooking of the meat or poultry should not be taken lightly. Poultry especially should be cooked completely at one time and it should never be left partially cooked or to be finished later.

It's safest to cook dressing outside the bird. But if you do want to cook the dressing inside the bird, stuff it just before roasting.
The internal temperature of the roast or bird is the proper test for sufficient cooking.
Fresh beef should be cooked to a temperature of 1 (for rare) to 170 degrees F (well done).
Turkey should be cooked to an internal temperature of 180 to 185 degrees. The stuffing inside the turkey should be brought to 165 degrees.
Leftovers should be covered tightly and refrigerated or frozen promptly. Whenever possible, large quantities should be put in several small containers rather than one large in order to speed cooling.
The meat or poultry, any stuffing, and the broth or gravy should be stored in the refrigerator in separate containers.
By following these simple rules you can make your holiday meal both tasty and safe.

Rockcastle Recollections

© John Lair

During the Civil War the guerrillas on either side, not under any military restraint or control, were free to follow their own inclinations and were always more bloodthirsty and savage than men in uniform. Nowhere is this better shown than in the affair at Hackney's Corners.

In a previous article in this series, I told the story as I had been able to unearth it and added that I would like to know more about the affair, the names of people involved, the location of the former Hackney's Corner and other pertinent information. The most complete version I have been able to get appears below.

Hackney's Corner, according to David Singleton, was on the old State Road, less than two miles North of Livingston, Kentucky. This old road followed along Roundstone Creek to the mouth of Calloway Branch. There was an old tavern there, which burned around 1866. It stood not far from the Dillon home, near Pine Hill, where a member of the James Gang was later killed by the Dillon brothers. After the tragedy occurring at Hackney's Corner, the people of the community immediately changed the name of the locality and it was never again known by its original name. Singleton believes that it was changed to Calloway, a name which it still bears.

To get the facts leading up to what took place there, and why, we go back to a letter written by J. K. McClary, a former resident of this county, in which he relates that in 1862 he was operating a small store at Lyncamp, on the old Wilderness Road and about eleven miles North of Barbourville, Kentucky. One evening a party of sixteen men, including Uncle George Thompson, Captain Harve King, Campbell Dameron, and other acquaintances of Mr. McClary, slipped into the store and told him that they were being pursued by a group of Rebel soldiers and that they were nearly famished, having had nothing at all to eat for the past three days. They explained that recently a body of Rebel soldiers had been shot from ambush in their locality and a blanket order had been issued by the Rebel commander to hang or shoot every able-bodied man living in that community. These refugees declared their innocence of any connection with the bushwacking but felt sure they were being followed and would be killed if overtaken.

McClary advised them to get back into the woods without delay and promised to bring them what food he could find to a designated meeting place under cover of darkness that night. Owing to intensive foraging in the vicinity of McClary's Store, he was able to rustle up only some corn meal and Irish potatoes which a neighbor woman cooked up as appetizingly as possible, and that night he and one of her slaves carried it to the appointed meeting place. A few days later Uncle George Thompson came back to tell him that all the others had been shot and killed at Cumberland

Ford, now Pineville, Kentucky.

About a month later a party of six Confederate soldiers and sympathizers were captured at Hackney's Corner by a group of Federal guerrillas and were hanged in retribution for the killing of the troops at Cumberland Ford. They were taken to a big tree with one unusually long limb, from which they were all suspended, one after another. Two of the group were Rebel soldiers home on furlough. The other four were civilian neighbors and friends, among which was a fifteen-year-old boy. He was the last to be strung up, after watching the death struggles of the others, and begged pitifully for his life until the tightening of the noose put an end to his pleadings. It was not pretended that any of these six victims had anything to do with the shooting of the Federal soldiers; they were simply hanged to help even up the score. It was said that a brother of Captain King, killed at Cumberland Ford, led the avenging party which hanged these men.

An instance of the death of a Rockcastle civilian at the hands of men in uniform was the killing of W. B. Laswell by Negro troops, in 1865, at what was known in my youth as the old Shafter House, on the Mt. Vernon-Broadhead Road, near Burton's Gap. The logs from the old barn which once stood near the house are in the typical Kentucky Cabin which I built in Renfro Valley some years ago for the benefit of tourists who had never seen such a structure. The old house itself is still standing and is among the oldest log houses in the county yet in excellent livable condition. It is now occupied by Arthur Adams, who gave me the following account of what took place there, verifying information received from H. Reginald Laswell, great-grandson of the William B. Laswell who figures in the following account.

In the spring of 1865, as the war was drawing to a close, bands of renegades, marauding ex-soldiers and deserters were a constant threat to farmers of the county. One day a group of black soldiers appeared at the Laswell home and the head of the house, William B. Laswell, went out on the front porch to talk to them. Seeing a saddle hanging on the fence near the house, one of these men decided to take it. As William B. turned the doorway, probably going for his gun, a series of shots rang out and he fell in his doorway, mortally wounded. One slug took effect in the arm of his five-year-old daughter and she carried the scar for as long as she lived.

Somebody alerted the sheriff and a man suspected of being the murderer was taken into custody and lodged in jail, to await trial. William B.'s brothers, however, were not willing to wait for justice to pursue its leisurely course and formed a plan of their own. They taught their youngest brother, John Henry Laswell, to fire a pistol and took him to jail, with instructions to slip inside while the jailor was feeding the prisoners and shoot his father's suspected murderer. The plan fell through when the jailor would not allow the youngster to enter the jail. No one recalls the outcome of the case or whether or not the suspect was ever brought to trial.

Ralph Griffin, frequently referred to in these pages, used to tell him that all the others had been shot and killed at Cumberland

Griffin, who lived near Green Hill and operated there one of the few blacksmith shops in use during the war, when horses had become so scarce. It seems that Adam was at work in his shop one day when his quick ear caught the sound of a galloping horse. Stepping out the door to see what was going on, he was almost run over by a mounted Army officer, who whipped out a pistol and ordered him back inside to shoe his horse.

When Adam tried to start up a conversation with his visitor, he was ordered to talk less and speed up his work. Finally, the work was done, in record time, no doubt, and the officer walked his mount up and down the road for a short distance to see that the blacksmith had not misled him. When satisfied on this score, he ordered Adam to face the other direction while he mounted and galloped off out of range. Ralph used to say that whoever the officer was, and whichever side he belonged to, he had been poorly raised, because he never even said "Thank you," Adam did. He said "Thank you, Lord" and really meant it!

Wally Phillips tells of his father and his three brothers all serving in the Union Army at one time. His father, Charlie, was in the 4th Kentucky Cavalry. He and a companion by the name of Marcum went to Somerset to enlist and were in the Battle of Mill Springs the next day, where Marcum lost his life. The four Phillips brothers were all wounded in the fight at Chickamaug, but none fatally.

Thanksgiving In The Country

By: Helen Price Stacy

There's nothing quite like a Kentucky country Thanksgiving.

Now there are magnificent city Thanksgivings, I'm sure, but, just for old time's sake, let's go back to when the family finally made it to Grandma's for that turkey feast.

Grandma, being the independent lady that she was, wanted to do all the cooking by herself, but she seemed mighty pleased when our car drove up with the food basket roped onto the running board.

Jumping out of the car, I stopped just long enough to smooth the wrinkles from my stockings where the long underwear bunched at my ankles. Then I made a bee-line for the back porch and the big kitchen.

The room was already warm and steamy, smelling of sage and onions. A tin cup hung from a nail on the wall by the oak bucket to satisfy the thirst with water from the well.

In the parlor, Grandpa was sitting in front of a wood fire, his ear bent to a radio in the corner. He jumped when I put my hands over his eyes. He knew who it was behind him, but he guessed the name of every child on the creek before he got to mine.

Dad brought the basket of food in from the car. Mom and Grandma lifted out dishes and jars, while exclaiming over pumpkin and raisin pies. My mother even thought to bring along some vegetables she'd canned in the summer.

Just then, my uncle came in from the cold outdoors, wearing hunting clothes that smelled of the barn and curing animal hides. He and my brother talked about taking the hounds out for a rabbit hunt after dinner.

While the rest of the family was occupied, I stole away upstairs to dream of pretty clothes and parties. I spent a long time making paper dolls beautiful for any occasion and was startled when I heard a voice calling me from my world of dreams into the world of reality.

The oilcloth had already been wiped clean and placed on the big table. Setting it was my chore. Nine, thick, white plates were arranged with forks on the left, knives and spoons on the right. An extra dozen spoons were in a glass-holder on the table and a big cloth napkin lay on each plate.

Grandma basted the turkey and spooned the dressing into a pan to bake along with the bird. After that, she started kneading dough for big, buttery biscuits, streaking her hair and apron in the process.

"She would say to my mother, 'put the potatoes on.'" Then she would turn to me and tell-me to have Grandpa bring-the butter and milk from the cellar, along with some apples.

Outside, a light snow began to fall. A family, crowded in a farm truck, waded as they passed. In the distance, a horse and rider travelled slowly along the muddy, dirty road. Chickens ran squawking to the porch as my uncle brought an armload of stove wood for the kitchen.

As I wiped steam from the windows, I watched the snow put fresh cleanliness on the hills, pencil tree limbs and make tiny, lacy caps on the palings of the fence.

The boys came down the path, their breath making spurts of steam in the cold. They stopped at a washpan near the water barrel to dip their hands and splash their faces.

Later, as we sat around the dining room table, Grandpa made us bow our heads as he said "Our Heavenly Father, we thank Thee for this food and all our bounties. Bless this food to our body's use, forgive us our sins, guide and direct us along life's way. Make us not a stumbling block unto our brother. May we love our neighbor as ourself. We ask Thee, Father, to help the sick and lame, to feed the poor and comfort every troubled heart. These things we ask in Christ's Holy Name. Amen."

more money now than in previous years, many of them have moved up, as a result, into areas of higher income brackets.

Whether they are able to buy any more with the added cash is another question. Locally there has been a progressive shift upward. Some families, who were in the $8,000 to $10,000 category a few years ago, are now to be found in the $10,000 to $15,000 group. Their former positions on the income ladder have been taken over, in turn, by families who had been earning less than $8,000.

The gratification of being in a higher bracket is somewhat dampened, however, by the realization that tax-rates are higher on the upper runs.

"Bowling News" (Cont. From 5) Brian Bowl-

First place for the Briar Bowl League in Somerset went to the Buckaroos with 37 wins and 7 losses; in second is Reynolds Grocery with 27 wins and 17 losses; and Nolet's Garage is in third place with 26 1/2 and 17 1/2.

High team game and series went to the Buckaroos with 208 and 518.

Men's high series: Bobby Proctor, 594; Loren Simpson, 578 and Ernest Brown, 565. Men's high game: Jerry Vault, 244; Loren Simpson and Bobby Proctor tied for second place with 223; and Helbert Derald, third place, with 207.

Ladies' high series: Betty M. Simpson, 513; Karen Wilson, 505; and Clara Proctor, 498. Ladies' high game: Clara Proctor, 187; Karen Wilson, second, with 186; and tied for third place are Carolyn Carroll and Priscilla Childers with 183.

The facts and figures covering the local area and other parts of the country are contained in a report released by the Standard Rate and Data Service. It indicates, for each community, the number of families in the various income divisions.

The purpose of the study was to obtain a clearer financial picture of each locality's purchasing power than was revealed by its average income figure.

Does that average comprise a small proportion of families with big incomes counterbalancing a much larger proportion with low incomes or are earnings more evenly distributed?

In Rockcastle County, it is shown, no less than 34.3 percent of the households had disposable incomes of $8,000 or more after payment of their personal taxes.

Compared with the proportion at that level in many other parts of the country, this was high.

The breakdown figures for the local area list 21.3 percent of the households with net incomes of $5,000 to $8,000, 11.1 percent at the $8,000 to $10,000 level, 13.9 percent between $10,000 and $15,000 and 9.3 percent higher than that. The others have $5,000 or less left after taxes.

The bigger incomes have not improved the buying power of the average family, however. The cost of living has been rising at a faster clip than incomes in the last year or so.

ONE FROM COUNTY ENROLLED AT WESTERN

Campbell, or students enrolled at the Jones-Jaggers Laboratory School.

Western's enrollment represents a significant increase over the 11,749 students enrolled during the fall, 1973 semester.

Among those enrolled at Western is Michel Lee Robbins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Verl Robbins of Route 1, Brodhead.

"FARM BUREAU" (Cont. From Front) an oversupply of beef is said to be a primary factor.

"The only way to improve livestock prices is to sell more meat," according to the president of Kentucky Farm Bureau, J. Robert Wade. He says meat gift certificates are a very appropriate gift, and they make "a lot more sense than the trinkets which are too common as gifts during Christmas."

Wade also said that this cooperative venture between meat producers and meat retailers will do far more for the farmer than "finger-pointing, blame-placing or ill-conceived publicity stunts."

"We all have a stake in maintaining an adequate supply of good-quality meat," Wade said. "Increased sales, and an opportunity for a reasonable profit by all segments of the industry will ensure the continued availability and affordability of this high-quality food item."
