School Lunch Prices May Rise in Many Districts

By: Paula Alexander

Many Kentucky schools soon may be forced to raise the prices of their lunches to keep up with the inflationary costs of food staples, according to C. E. Bevin, director of school food services for the State Dept. of Education.

"I just don't see any other alternative than a price increase or many of the districts," he said. Bevin noted that most school lunches now fall in the 40c-60c price range. He added that "several" recommendations for higher fees recently had been made by his department following periodic visits to school cafeterias by Education Dept. consultants. He explained that such recommendations were not mandatory and that final decisions were made by the local school district. Bevin also said his office never suggests more than a nickel increase, as parents seem more receptive to that amount than to a 10c or 15c jump.

When asked if the quality of cafeteria lunches was being sacrificed in order to hold skyrocketing food prices in line, Bevin replied, "This is another alternative, but not one that is recommended. In some districts this may be true, but we try to help maintain at least the status quo."

Local school districts are aided in this inflationary battle by government subsidies. Only recently the federal reimbursement rate increased by 3 1/2 percent, a rise that may temporarily offset school lunch prices in some districts. These subsidies help feed some forty percent of Kentucky's 575,000 public school students who receive their meals at no cost or through a partial payment, Bevin said.

Several Eastern Kentucky counties recently contacted indicated that they could foresee no price increase, although careful budgeting is necessary to maintain proper food service. Pulaski County Supt. Roy Holt said his school system last had a price increase at the beginning of the 1973-74 session. "We haven't increased our prices because schools are making it. We're running about the same as last year, thanks to government reimbursement," Holt said.

Juanita Kocio, Ashland's food services director, noted, "We've put our feet on the ground. We just want to feed the kids and pay the bills." Ms. Kocio added that Ashland had an increase in lunch prices at the beginning of the present school year.

Whitley County's food director, Archie Hill, noted that his county had a nickel increase during the 1973-74 term. "We will not change now," he said. The price range for school meals in the Eastern Counties contacted falls in the 35c-50c category for students.

Bevin noted that although inflation has hampered operational costs, educators were trying to improve the school lunch program. For instance, he pointed out the increasing popularity cafeteria smorgasbord in secondary schools, or innovation that reduces the are a necessity in such metropolitan area as Newport, where the high cost of living demands a two-paycheck family. Since parents might have different work schedules, the children themselves are often responsible for making it to school on time and thus usually neglect to prepare morning meals.

So, the schools have often taken on this added responsibility, realizing that pupils will not function well intellectually without breakfast. "There are probably as many participants in the breakfast program in Newport as in the lunch program," Bevin said. The school food services supervisor added that breakfasts would probably also become standard.

Another New Business...

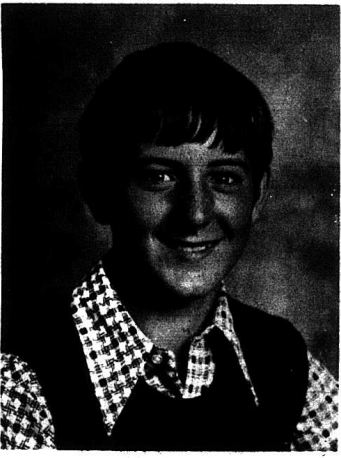

ANOTHER NEW BUSINESS - will open on Main Street in Mt. Vernon next week with Johnny Wynn of Rockcastle County opens his new White Auto Store. Mr. Wynn's store is located in the former Town Theatre Building owned by Clarence Carter. He was previously employed by Standard Oil Company in Mt. Vernon and is married to the former Janice Whittemore of Madison County. They have two children. Mr. Wynn has set Thursday, Friday and Saturday, February 27, 28 and 29 as his Grand Opening Date. The store will feature housewares, appliances and hardware.

Fast Time Not To Affect Local School Hours

Eastern Daylight Savings time will begin in Rockcastle County at 2 a.m. Sunday and the earlier than normal advancement of clocks will have no effect on the local school systems, according to Charles B. Parsons, Superintendent.

Mr. Parsons said that he had discussed the time change with members of the Board of Education and they had decided that due to the pull of parents taken two years ago which went heavily in favor of school hours remaining the same, except on fast time, and also due to the fact that a check of surrounding school districts showed that they would all be moving up with fast time, that the school's hours would remain the same, except be on fast time. Mr. Parsons also said that a study of the school bus schedules and of the timetable showed that the problem of picking children up in semi darkness would only be for about four weeks and after this period, all children would be picked up in daylight. Mr. Parsons said he had received several calls from working parents who were concerned about having to leave their children at home an extra hour in the morning should the schools change their hours.

Danny Lee Hunt

Danny Lee Hunt, 14 Wins $5,000 Scholarship

Danny Lee Hunt, 14, of Route 4, Mt. Vernon has been awarded a $5,000 college scholarship by Revell, Inc., the world's largest manufacturer of plastic toy kits.

Danny entered a contest sponsored by the company several months ago and wrote an essay of two hundred words or less on the subject "What A College Education Means To Me." He was notified by telegram last October that he had been chosen a winner. According to an accompanying letter, "this essay was graded very highly by the educators who judged the thousands of entries." Two scholarships were awarded as grand prizes. The contest was open to boys and girls between 8 and 16 all over the United States as well as Canada.

This week, Danny received legal papers on his scholarship fund. An escrow account has been established at the Bank of America National Trust and Savings in Los Angeles, California, with a $5,000 Certificate of Deposit which was assigned for Danny and will be drawing 7 1/2% interest until he is ready to enter any college of his choice. In addition, a savings account was opened in order that the interest on the time certificate of deposit could earn additional interest.

If Danny should decide not to enter college of if he doesn't complete his college education, he may appoint another person to use the remaining funds. Danny is a freshman at Rockcastle County High School. His mother, Mrs. Sue French, is a teacher at Mt. Vernon Elementary School.

Rockets Draw Jackson In 49th District Tourney

Anville, Clay County, and Oneida all drew bytes in the district tournament drawings held last Thursday. Rockcastle will meet Jackson County in the first game of the tournament Tuesday night, March 4th. This year, the girls' district tournament will be played at the same time as the boys' tournament with the girls' game beginning at 6:15 p.m.

The way the drawings shape up is as follows: Anville and Clay County both in the top bracket and each drawing boys. Rockcastle and Jackson County facing each other in the bottom bracket and Oneida drawing a bye in the same bracket. Thus, the first game of the tournament will be played Tuesday night, March 4th at 6:15 p.m. between the Rockets girls' team and Jackson County's girls' team. This game will be followed by the boys' team.

Then on Thursday night, the Rockets Rockets was unable to recover in the fourth quarter and the final score was 78 to 69.

Individual scoring in the Rockets Middleboro game was as follows: VanHook was high man with 27 points; Clontz and Griffin got 19 each; and Whitaker and Hammonds, 6 each.

Tuesday night, VanHook again, led the scoring with 23 points, followed by Clontz with 17, Whitaker got 12, Hammonds, 8, Griffin, 6, Henderson, 3 and Belcher, 2.

On Friday night, February 21st the ROCKETS travel to Jackson County for a pre-tournament trial between the girls and A teams. Next Wednesday night, the girls team, B team and A team all journey to Berea for make-up games with the Pirates beginning at 5 p.m., and next Friday night, February 22nd, the ROCKETS close out regular season play with an A and B team game against Casey County at home.

Rockets Drop Two

The Rockcastle ROCKETS bowed to two strong teams, Middleboro and Richmond Model, but only after taking Middleboro into overtime and after staying with Richmond Model the entire first half. Both games were played on the opponents' home courts.

Last Friday night, the Rockets fell behind Middleboro early in the game and stayed there throughout the first half. However, in the second half, the Rockets came on to tie the game up 55 all at the end of regulation play. In the overtime, Middleboro cut loose to score nine points while the Rockets could only muster four and that was the difference with Middleboro winning 64 to 59.

Tuesday night, the Rockets were behind four points at the first quarter stop, 14 to 10, but had pulled to within one at half-time, 27 to 26. But, a blitz by Richmond in the third quarter, 25 points, put the Rockets down 52 to 42. They

Frankfort Watchline

J. R. Miller's public statement last week emphasizing his neutrality in the upcoming Democratic primary for governor must come as a terrific blow to Jefferson County Judge Todd Hollenbach. There has been a great deal of speculation that the former party boss was behind young Hollenbach, something that would have given the candidate a sorely needed power base from which to begin his work against Gov. Julian Carroll.

Miller more than adequately put that speculation to rest by complimenting winners never cease. Carroll by declaring his more than ample qualifications to be governor.

If Miller can be held to his statement, Hollenbach is in difficult straits.

He has already lost to Carroll his home county Democratic power structure.

Carroll is likely to run into a little criticism elsewhere in the state for the time he is devoting to Jefferson County politicians. He's been winning and dining various Democratic county officials and party leaders from Jefferson in the governor's mansion and tripped to Louisville on his first outing as a candidate last week.

It's only smart politics, of course, since a quarter of the state's voters live there. That was no doubt Carroll's first priority in seeking the blessings of the Jefferson County machinery, but the secondary result of wiping out Hollenbach's strongest potential base was strength was no doubt just as satisfying.

Regardless of his apparent long lead in the primary field, the governor is leaving nothing to chance.

His campaign headquarters more closely resembles a tactical command center.

A selective fund raiser is already underway for adding to a war chest that probably is already the envy of any other candidate.

And while Hollenbach is trying to put onto Carroll the stigma of being the machine politician, Carroll is hard at work on his own image of the "cleaner than clean, whiter than white" candidate.

It's stupid to do it any other way," said his campaign manager Bill Cox in a recent interview.

Cox focused on the problem of other candidates and... Joe holders have run into in past campaigns, putting on them selves the appearance of conflicts of interest and attaching messy generally considered undesirable by the voters.

"Why not take the extra step," he says.

So now Carroll has a campaign airplane. "The accepted means of campaigning," according to Cox and campaign automobiles.

While these may seem to be extravagant displays of contributed wealth, Cox views it to be the contrary.

In the long haul, Cox believes that the campaign will cost less because of these things, and if it does not, then there is the added benefit that no one can say Julian Carroll rode to Western Kentucky on a corporate favor.

While these actions add measurably to the image Carroll is trying to present, he is at the same time making life that much more difficult for his opponents, who are unlikely to be able to round up the kind of money he takes to present that kind of image.

John Stanley Hoffman, the state's new secretary for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, took a bold step last week that other government officials, here and in Washington, could take a lesson from in these post-Watergate days.

Rather than risk the taint that so often comes from in-house investigations of irregularities, Hoffman has turned the allegations of criminal misbehavior in connection with the state plumbing department over to the Kentucky State Police.

RC&D Plan Released For Public Review....

The one hundred thirty-eight page draft copy of the Cumberland Valley Resource Conservation and Development (RC&D) Project Plan has been released for public review according to an announcement today by R. L. Brown, Sr. of Williamsburg, RC&D Council Chairman.

It is a peculiar one in one sense. The Council really does plan to carry out the resource development projects called for in the plan. The resource development projects range from recreation development around Lake Linville in Rockcastle County, to flood prevention in Wallins Creek area, to a farmers' produce market in London. There are over forty projects described in the plan covering the counties of Bell, Clay, Harlan, Jackson, Knox, Laurel, Rockcastle and Whitley.

The draft plan is a result of many hours of hard work contributed by the thirty-two RC&D Sponsors (the Fiscal Courts and Conservation Districts in the eight counties plus sixteen cities), sixty-four RC&D Resource Committees, and twenty-seven Technical Advisors from the Cumberland Valley Area Development District and various other state and federal agencies. Some Rockcastle County people who assisted in the write-up were Roland Mullins, Hubert Thacker, Wallace Proctor, Clay A. Colson, Roy G. Brown, Tommy Harold Mink and Kenneth York. The Draft plan is a determination of local problems and decisions on how to solve them. It also sets up priorities for carrying out the projects.

The plan will be updated annually and new measures will be added as the older measures are installed and the needs of the area change.

The draft plan is available for review from any of the thirty-two RC&D Sponsors, the local people mentioned above, or from the project office at 810 S. Main Street in Corbin.

Your suggestions for improvement will be carefully considered when the final plan is written next month for general distribution in late spring.

CARTER: The Rockcastle County Carter's trace back in an unbroken line to Captain Thomas Carter, Sr., born 1833, died 1700. He was married to Catherine Dale in 1870, having come to America in 1850 and settled in Virginia. His son, Thomas Carter, Jr., was the father of Daniel Carter, Sr., who was a Lt. of Cavalry during the Revolution. His son, Robert Carter, was the father of Daniel Carter, Jr. This Robert Carter migrated to Sumpter County, S.C., about 1752. His wife was Margaret Brunson. Daniel Carter had a son named William who married a Sullivan and migrated to Tennessee, settling near McMinnville. They had a son, Charles Lambert, who was named for a cousin, Charles Carter, who had married Diana Lambert and in 1798 had settled in Lincoln County, Kentucky. This Charles Carter seems to have been of some considerable wealth and standing. Although quite old, he was said to be always extremely well dressed, accompanied always by two slaves. When he went out in his carriage one of these was the coachman, the other the outrider, both in elaborate livery, with ruffled shirts, etc. His namesake, Charles Lambert Carter, married Nancy, who was named for a cousin, William Alfred Carter, was the father of Judge Charles C. Carter. He held the office of County Judge of Rockcastle County for 20 years.

Charles Lambert Carter and wife were parents of the following children: Sarah Adeline, Samuel Willison, John Marion, Mary Jane, James Harrison, Fountain Lee Pitts, Josephine, Emerson Etheridge, Louise Catherine, Charles Whitten, Linda Ellen, Julia Ann and Nancy Parline. All these children scattered and went to Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, New Mexico, Washington state and Illinois, except Judge Carter's father, who came to Rockcastle County, Kentucky, in the year 1898, having married a Kentucky girl, Nancy Elizabeth York.

Daniel Carter was the father of fourteen children. They were James Rutherford, Robert, William, Daniel, Benjamin, John Conyers, Isaac, Alexander, Milton, Anderson, Margaret, Mary, Elizabeth Agnes, Caroline and Susannah Amelia.

William Alfred Carter's wife, Nancy Elizabeth York, was a daughter of Christopher York, a first cousin to the father of Alvin York, outstanding American hero in World War I. He and his family were living in Arkansas when William Alfred Carter married Nancy Elizabeth there. In 1897 they all moved back to Kentucky, settling on Brush Creek, in Rockcastle County. The York family had migrated from England in the early 1700's.

Apparently the James B. Carter who served two terms as County Attorney back in the 1870's was not related to the "branch" of the family. Neither was Dr. William F. Carter, long-time county physician, who for many years occupied offices in Boggsville, Ky. Dr. Carter, who worked untrigarily as a county doctor with the well-being of his patients at heart, came originally from Owen County and from a long line of worthy and substantial ancestors.

CHASTEEN: The first of the name to come to our attention is James Chasteen, who was born in Virginia and served as a private in the Virginia Line during the Revolution. He was married in Amherst, Virginia, to Nancy Kennedy and they afterwards settled in Madison County, Kentucky, in the portion of that county later cut off into Rockcastle County at its formation, in 1810.

I have received information from two different groups of descendants and they are not in agreement, as to the generations between James and John Chasteen, John Chasteen being the sort of turning point in the family history, after which the contending parties are unable to agree. One group records that John Chasteen was born in Scott County, North Carolina August 10, 1772 and was married to Elizabeth Harding in Madison County, Kentucky, March 18, 1818. The other side says this cannot be proved, because the date of his marriage was in a Scott County, North Carolina. They say he was a son of Jesse Chasteen and his wife, the former Levette Flowers, who were married in 1815, presumably in Virginia.

But regardless of the ancestral line back of John, it is with his son, Brightberry Chasteen, that the family name really starts spreading. Brightberry, or "Brighty," was born in Madison County, Kentucky, in 1818, was married three times and left a numerous progeny in Rockcastle County, later spreading into many of the Western States. He was married to his first wife, Sarah A. Clark, in 1840; to his second wife Juliann Mullins, in 1849; and to his third wife, Eliza Brannaman, in 1864. Children by his first wife were: Will, who had eight sons and daughters, who married and raised families; Walk, who had six children, one of whom, John Walker Chasteen, was the father of Edd Chasteen, who owned Seagr View Motel in Rockcastle County; a third son by Brighty's first wife was John, whose five children raised families in Colorado, Wyoming and Idaho; There was one daughter, Mary, by the first wife, concerning whom we have no information.

By his second wife, Brighty fathered four children: Eliza Jane, Amanda - who married a Putts and went to Texas; Nancy, who married a McGuire and was the mother of nine children; Sarah, who married an Isaacs and was also mother of nine; Julianna, who married Forsythe and had a family of eight.

By his third wife, Brightberry, or Brighty Chasteen was the father of: Isabelle, who married a Smith and had seven children, most of whom she had nine children; Martha, who married a Phillips, by whom she had nine children; Mary, who married a Griffin, and raised a family of four; Abraham, father of five daughters and one son, namely, Melissa, who married a Moses; Delora, who married a Gadd; Georgia, who married a Moses; Della, who married an Adams; Beulah, who married a VanZant; Henry, Brighty had a daughter, Ella, concerning whom no information has been given. His sixth son by his third wife was William Harrison Chasteen, born November 22, 1877, who died in October of 1964 and is buried in the Renfro Valley Cemetery. With a remarkable memory, for his years, he was the source of much of the earlier history of the Renfro Valley Settlement. With him I visited many of the old cemeteries in this area and he could readily recall the individual histories of most of those buried there.

For many of his later years he owned and resided in the old "Renfro Valley Home" previously known as the "Ant Pulli Hiatt Place," an old log house built by Col. William Fish, around the time of the War of 1812 and now restored to its original condition to serve as a home for The Renfro Valley Country Music Hall of Fame, which we expect to open to the public some time during 1975. He and his wife, the former Addie Hiatt, were the parents of Ona Gertrude, who married Curfew Holl; Eliza Ellen, who married Chester Hysinger; two sons, Herbert and William Herman Chasteen.

When our information is complete on the Chasteen family, we hope to be able to get it in proper shape to be included in our finished book.

The Kentucky Department of Labor shall promote the interests of the

WAGE EARNER and INDUSTRY*

By Labor Commissioner James R. Yocum

FRANKFORT, Ky. - One of our most important tasks, we feel, is to promote and maintain harmony between management and labor, and one of the ways we try to do that is through our mediation service.

If we are invited into any dispute by either labor or management, or both, or if we feel the dispute is serious enough, we interpret an objective third-party view. We are careful and only plan to participate in a dispute when the public welfare is at stake.

We find ourselves entering more disputes recently about six months in our current average. I and the other two members of my staff proficient in mediation are Deputy Commissioner George R. Wagoner, who has been in several contract negotiations, and Charles McCoy, an experienced mediator and director of our Labor Standards Division.

We make a strong effort not to weigh the scales for either side in a dispute. Nor do we try to impose any solution. The mediator's role is one of making suggestions and recommendations and trying to persuade the parties to make a voluntary settlement. We will help parties in a contract settlement dispute or in a disagreement involving a contract grievance, filed by a unionist.

In a grievance situation, generally, we try to work out a solution early and then submit that to committees of both sides. In the meantime, we sit down and talk.

Mediation is important because it can locate a solution that is probably more objective than one that is put forth by either party to a dispute. It can save money and time, important factors in today's inflationary marketplace.

Though we almost never enter a dispute unless we are invited by one or both sides, and though we believe the spirit of mediation is greater when we're invited, that doesn't mean we won't if the public interest is at stake. We are empowered by statute to do so.

As in other areas under the Department of Labor's jurisdiction, we try to work gently and not to push our solutions upon anybody and we try not to be such strict constructionists of the law that we appear to be bullish, but we want to aid and assist in any area where we can.

DR. FINLEY HENDRICKSON, son of Bob Hendrickson and the late Ruth Frith Hendrickson of Brodhead, whose medical specialty is family practice, sees patients like this infant in the UK model family practice office every day.

TRAINING FAMILY DOCTORS

Family Practice Department at UK is sending specialists in Kentucky who are as interested in people as diseases

BY BETTY TEVIS

Young Dr. Finley Hendrickson, a native of Brodhead, Ky., and chief resident at the University of Kentucky's Family Medical Center, is in the middle of a good, and typical, day in his 60-80 hour week. He is a new kind of doctor, a specialist in family medicine.

He has finished morning rounds at Central Baptist Hospital in Lexington, met with the other 15 residents (most of them Kentucky half of them graduates of the UK, College of Medicine) and professors for a discussion of paroxysmal atrial tachycardia (abnormally fast heart-beat), then reported to the model office across the street from UK's Albert B. Chandler Medical Center to find patients waiting for him.

From one "nervous and uptight" mother he learns, on this second office visit, that her teenage daughter has run away from home. He comforts the mother and offers to counsel with the youngster.

He cuts down the plaster cast on a non-dislocated fracture he had wrapped in a gait a week ago, now fitted with a walking boot, the young man ran go back to work.

In a family of four, he treats the baby's carache, the father's sinusitis and the mother's sore throat. It takes sponging of the baby's body, an antibiotic shot and keeping him in the clinic an hour to make sure the 104-degree fever is down and under control.

Dr. Hendrickson welcomes a young mother who is bringing the baby he delivered a year ago for an immunization shot. He examines her and confirms her suspicion she is pregnant again. They discuss her feelings about the pregnancy (she is happy) and he schedules the next regular pre-natal checkup.

From the examination room he steps to his own small, neat office and makes three telephone calls asking for advice to a thoracic surgeon, an internist, then to a radiologist, about the nodules which have appeared on the chest of a patient scheduled to come in that afternoon.

When he finishes his residency in May, Dr. Hendrickson, 28, will go to Danville to practice family medicine, the new (since 1968) specialty authorized by the American Medical Association (AMA).

A member of the first graduating class in the UK program, Hendrickson wanted to settle in a small central Kentucky town with a hospital, a place "within an hour's drive of my hometown." He didn't even look outside the state. For Dr. Hendrickson, as for most of the new family medicine residents, choosing from among the communities vying for his attention was an agonizing decision. At Danville he will join a group practice with Drs. John Berz, Jr., and Quinn Bailey.

Dr. Hendrickson, finishing his phone calls, takes a minute to tell you he likes working with people rather than only with diseases; that the 3-year residency in family practice prepares a doctor to handle 95 per cent of the people he sees and to "realize when a specialist is needed."

He met his wife, the former Brenda Whitlow, during his first year of residency at a Roanoke (Va.) hospital where she was a nurse in the recovery room. A smalltown herself, she shares his fondness for golf, tennis, water sports, and the amenities of rural life.

"I think if you've gone through college and medical school you have a right to live comfortably," Dr. Hendrickson says. "But I know I'm not going to make the money that I might in another specialty." He doesn't care.

Although he is already a resident physician, Hendrickson is typical of the kind of student that Dr. James Burdette, chairman of UK's Department of Family Practice, has just in the last five years begun to see coming through medical school. This kind of student is interested in people as well as in their diseases, attracted to a wide variety of health problems, lighted by a streak of idealism and a sincere desire to serve people, and longing for a place where he can enjoy living.

"More students than at any time in the past 20-25 years want to be family doctors," Burdette, himself an experienced family doctor-turned-professor, says. Five years ago there were only 100 family practice residents in the entire U.S.; most other residents were in cardiology or surgery or obstetrics or another of the classic specialties. Today there are some 2,500 residents in the new family

It takes a lot of nourishment to keep a healthy young calf going - especially one that weighed 130 pounds at birth as the above calf, belonging to Nathan Clark of Wildie, Ark. "Pete," as he has been named, is a cross between a Chianina sire and a purebred Brown Swiss dam. Our farmer friends tell us that the average weight of a calf is between 60 and 80 lbs.

UK is training the family doctor practice specialty at some 43 medical schools across the country.

UK's department opened in 1972 and in May, 1974, moved into the model Family Medical Center across the street from the College of Medicine. To provide a realistic, community-type setting for training family physicians, this building has a model doctor's office with an administrative area, patient reception facilities, three treatment areas with examination rooms, an x-ray unit, a dental clinic and a laboratory.

Each resident gets extensive study and practice in pediatrics, surgery, obstetrics-gynecology and psychiatry, as well as in general medicine and community medicine - thus preparing the new specialist for most of the health situations he is likely to encounter in patients and the community.

When families come to the family medical center for care, they are assigned one of the resident physicians who serves as their family doctor. "You get involved with your patients," Dr. Hendrickson says. Even though residents do not usually make house calls, Dr. Hendrickson finds himself often stopping to visit an elderly shut-in patient, recognizing that the patient "needs somebody to talk to." Faculty physicians, like Dr. Burdette who is certified by the American Board of Family Practice, supervise the activities of the residents. The center admits patients primarily to Central Baptist Hospital in Lexington, because it is typical of the hospitals the doctors will be affiliated with once they begin private practice.

Most of UK's 14 residents in family practice are Kentuckians. A doctor's intent to move to a smalltown Kentucky area, many of which have crucial doctor shortages, is a consideration in his admission to the UK program from among the "flood of applications," Dr. Burdette says.

The University of Kentucky's involvement in family practice is more than casual. The department here is called the William R. Willard Department of Family Practice in honor of the first vice president for the UK Albert B. Chandler Medical Center and first dean of the UK College of Medicine (Willard is now dean of the University of Alabama School of Health Sciences). The "Willard Report" helped convince the AMA of the need for what the report described as "a new kind of specialist, the family physician who is educated to provide comprehensive personal health care."

The "Willard Report" was endorsed by the AMA and in 1968 that organization

Food Resources and Human Nutrition - After Bird Shoot.....

Game birds are among the most delicious wild meats, offering much variety in flavor as well as in the sport of hunting them. The distinctive flavor of upland game birds is delicate and quite different from waterfowl.

But improper handling can cause off flavors due to bacterial growth after shooting or to penetration of gastric juices into the flesh. To prevent postkill deterioration:

(1) Remove entrails as soon as possible after shooting, being careful not to rupture the gall bladder or craw.

(2) Allow air to circulate in the body cavity.

(3) Cool the carcass quickly and thoroughly. "An insulated cooler with ice and some plastic bags will make this easier. In any case, avoid piling warm birds together in a mass.

(4) Keep the meat cold (38-40 degrees F.) until cooked or frozen. If you intend to freeze the meat, do so right after cleaning.

Occasionally, you may notice worms in the intestine of some game birds, particularly in areas of high bird populations. These may be any of several types, and are fairly normal in occurrence. The meat may be safely used but cook it thoroughly before eating. Wild game meat should always be thoroughly cooked.

Seasoned hunters have their own preferred method of removing feathers, but the inexperienced may choose from several alternatives. You may dry pluck while the bird is still warm; scald by dipping in 150-155 degree F. water for a few minutes until the feathers pull free easily; or skin the bird (all except the woodcock). After plucking, finish dressing the bird by removing the head, feet, and remaining entrails, and wash it thoroughly.

varies regarding the need to age pheasants before cooking in order to tenderize the meat. If you choose to age the meat, two to four days in the refrigerator should be sufficient. A slow thaw in the refrigerator tenderizes and develops the flavor in frozen birds.

Freezing Game Birds....

Immediately after cleaning the birds, wrap them in moisture/vapor proof materials - heavy duty foil, plastic freezer bags, or waxed freezer paper.

Freeze immediately and store no longer than four to six months. Thaw by placing the package in the refrigerator for 12-18 hours.

Cooking Game Birds....

The meat of upland game birds tends to be somewhat dry, particularly in older birds. Using bacon, salt pork, butter, cream or other liquid during roasting helps keep their meat from drying out undesirably. Except for sharp-tail grouse and woodcock, the meat of most of these birds is white. You can use most of the following suggested recipes for any combination of these birds.

Roast Pheasant, Grouse, or Partridge ...

Cover each bird completely with thin slices of bacon and tie with a string to keep the bacon in place. Place in a roasting pan and pour in just enough water to cover the bottom of the pan. Bake at 400 degrees F for 20 to 25 minutes. Remove bacon, brush birds with melted butter. Sprinkle with flour and continue baking at 325 degrees F until the birds turn a rich brown. To make gravy, thicken the liquid in the pan with flour or cornstarch and add one-half cup dry sherry if you desire. Heat to boiling and cook three to five minutes.

set up its "Essentials for Residency Training in Family Practice." Dr. Nicholas J. Piscano, associate dean of UK's College of Allied Health Professions, is secretary of AMA's American Board of Family Practice.

Each third-year family practice resident at UK has a patient load of 150-200 families, drawn from every stratum of the Lexington community. The center serves some 2,500 families. The young physician, working long hours at the University hospital their first year, spend 20 per cent of their time seeing patients in the office and remain on call at night in case of emergency. The second year they work at Central Baptist Hospital and extend their in-office hours. In the third year the residents, like Dr. Hendrickson, spend most of their time in the office treating patients. Residents earn around $10,000 a year for their 60-80 hour week.

The Department of Family Practice emphasizes preventive medicine and urges patients to have regular health checkups. And when they are ill, 95 per cent of the time the family practice specialist knows everything necessary to take care of them.

And the other five per cent of the time, the family specialist knows to what other specialist the patient should be referred.

Think about waste

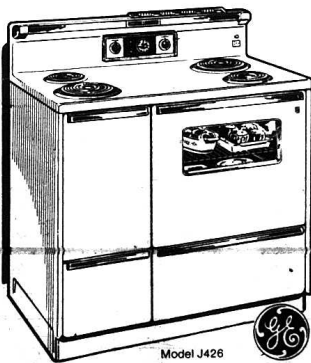

It doesn't make sense to waste electric energy. Wire costs more. Poles cost more. All prices are rising.

Sit and stew about it if you want, but facts are facts. Our electric energy is generated by burning coal. And coal costs have soared out of sight. Pollution fighting equipment costs a fortune. And you know who finally has to pay the bill. Think about it. Then contact your electric cooperative for help in saving electric energy.

Electricity is too good to waste!

Residential Chairmen Named For Heart Sunday

Mrs. Jerry Mink, Mrs. Kenneth Cornelius and Mrs. John Glavok were appointed residential chairmen of the Lexington, Mt. Vernon, and Broadhead Heart Fund drive, respectively, to be conducted Sunday, February 23rd.

In making the announcement, Mrs. Robert Pybas, local Heart Fund campaign chairman, said that Mrs. Mink, Mrs. Cornelius and Mrs. Glavok will head the efforts of volunteers in their respective communities. Local volunteers will join more than two million across the nation during American Heart Month when they visit the homes of friends and neighbors to distribute helpful heart literature and collect funds to support Heart Association programs.

"Heart and blood vessel diseases cost the nation an estimated $20 billion annually, including lost income and payments for medical care," Ethel Baker, Heart Fund business chairman for Mt. Vernon, said today.

She also noted that heart and blood vessel diseases kill more than one million persons a year. This adds up to more deaths than to all other causes combined. Heart attacks alone kill more than 680,000 persons every year.

Mrs. Baker noted that area firms will be asked to cooperate in the fight against the nation's health problem by distributing educational materials and information about community programs sponsored by the Rockcastle Heart Association. "No businessman can afford to overlook these economic facts about heart and and twelve great grandchildren also survive. He was preceded in death by one son, Howard, who was killed in Germany in World War II.

Funeral services were held February 4, 1975 at 2 p.m. at the Bullock Funeral Home in Heron by Rev. Lawrence Peety and Rev. G. T. Cozougher. Burial was in Forest Lawn Memorial Park in Erlanger, Ky.

blood vessel diseases," Mrs. Baker said. "Men in the 45 to 64 age group are industry's most valuable executives and employees. Deaths in this age group cause a significant loss of key management skills, and production 'know-how.' Besides this, there is the cost of training replacement personnel."

Mrs. Pybas, Heart Fund Chairman, said that heart and blood vessel diseases, the nation's Number One killers, will claim more than a million lives this year. In addition, lost wages and medical expenses resulting from these diseases will cost the nation an estimated $20 billion in 1975.
