TIME TO START PUTTING FOOD BY

Canning and freezing fruits and vegetables from your garden, or from the marketing place when supplies are plentiful, is a lot of work. But it makes good sense.

You can save money. You can add good nutrition and variety to your meals. And, if you're caught up with the idea of getting back to a more basic way of life, growing a garden and putting food by is a soul satisfying thing to do.

Some people can, some freeze, and a lot of folks do both. Canning is more work, and you must be super-careful to avoid any chance of food spoilage. On the other hand, canning equipment is much cheaper than a freezer, and you never have to worry about a power failure.

Freezing is easier. You can do small batches at a time as produce ripens in the garden. But a freezer is a big investment, and you have a good place to put it. If you have a job away from home and must do your food-preservation chores evenings and weekends, a freezer is a tremendous blessing. You can freeze almost any fruit and vegetable. Even tomatoes can be frozen and used satisfactorily in casseroles, soups and sauces.

LEARNING TO CAN

The only way to be sure of a safe, high-quality product is to follow to the letter a good set of directions on canning, paying close attention to the method recommended and to the processing times. Don't go out on a limb and start experimenting, because this is one of those times when going your way can get you in trouble.

There are good reasons why steam-pressure canning is the only approved way to can most vegetables: why the boiling-water-bath method is right for fruits, tomatoes, rhubarb and pickled vegetables. There are good reasons why open-kettle canning is only okay for jellies; why oven canning is outlawed by the experts.

There are good reasons why you should use special canning jars, not ordinary "one-trip" jars you buy food in at the grocery store. These packers' jars have not been heat-treated and may break during the canning process. Often they do not seal properly, and your food will spoil. Don't use half-gallon canning jars, either. Food in the center may not get hot enough for safe processing.

Safe canning procedures are based on two facts:

1. The correct temperature and processing time are necessary to destroy food-poisoning and food-spoilage bacteria, spores, and micro organisms.
2. A tight seal is necessary to keep food safe until you are ready to eat it.

CANNING EQUIPMENT YOU NEED

Boiling-Water-Bath canner is what you need for canning fruits, rhubarb, tomatoes, and pickled vegetables. You can buy one, or you can use a big metal cooking pot with a close-fitting lid. Be sure it is deep enough to allow about 4 inches above the tops of quart jars set in on a rack. This gives room for 2 inches of water over the jars.

plus room for the water to be kept at a rolling boil throughout the processing time.

Steam-pressure canner

This is what you must use for safe processing of most vegetables. That's because these low acid foods need to be processed at a higher temperature than the 212 degrees reached in the boiling-water-bath. There is no other sure way to kill the spore that causes the rare-but-deadly Botulism toxin.

Steam-pressure saucepan

A pressure saucepan with an accurate gage for vacuum pressure at 10 pounds may be used for canning vegetables in pint jars. But you must add 20 minutes to the regular processing time. This is necessary to make up for the quick climb in temperature at the beginning of processing and for the more rapid cooling at the end.

Have your pressure tested for a steam pressure canner or saucepan before the canning season, and also part-way through the season if it is used often. If the reading on the dial is off 5 pounds or more, you should buy a new gage. Have the gage checked by your County Extension Agent for Home Economics. For each pound the gage is off, you will have to add or subtract the same amount from the 10 pounds of pressure required for processing.

Jars and Lids

Use sound, nick-free canning jars. You can either the modern two-piece metal lids or the porcelain-lined zinc caps with a "rubber" ring. Old-fashioned glass-top jars also need rubber rings, just use new rubber rings and new lids. Easiest to use are the two-piece lids that "click" or "pop" down in the center when they seal properly.

Other useful equipment

This might include several large kettles, paring knife and vegetable brush, measuring cups and jar funnel, jar lifter and tongs, collarizer, dish towels, and dish cloths, wire basket or cheese cloth for blanching, timer, labels for marking jars.

Rules to go by

Two food-preservation manuals are free for the asking at your local County Extension Office. "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables" was written in 1973 and slightly revised this spring. "Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables" has been extensively revised and illustrated for this food-preservation season.

Due to requests - we are planning a second Food Preservation Demonstration for Tuesday, June 17 starting at 7:00 p.m. at the County Library. Please call 256-2403 if you plan to attend.

Use regulation canning jars only, not those "one-trip" jars you buy food in at the grocery store.

County Agent's Notes

By H. Lee Durham

FACE FLIES ARE TROUBLE-SOME INSECTS FOR CATTLE ON PASTURE

The face fly is among the most troublesome insect pests to plague cattle during the warm weather months. It is not only very annoying to cattle but also difficult to control.

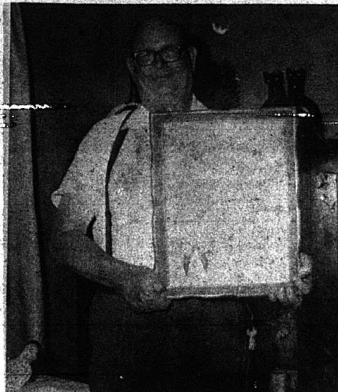

The face fly is a pest which came in from Europe, and it has only been present in Kentucky for about the past 15 years. It is similar in size and appearance to the house fly. Both males and females use their sponging mouthparts to feed on mucous secretions around the eyes and nostrils and on blood oozing from open wounds.

Face flies have been implicated in the spread of pinkeye in cattle, although a positive connection has not been proven. The bacteria which cause pinkeye can survive in face flies as long as three days, and pinkeye seems to be a more serious problem where face fly populations are high.

Face flies overwinter in houses and other buildings emerging in the spring to start laying eggs. Under ideal conditions it takes only 15-20 days for an egg to develop into an adult, so the populations can multiply rapidly during the summer. In the fall, when the weather begins to turn cool, adult flies swarm around houses and become a great nuisance. During this time, they are often mistaken for house flies.

There are several reasons why face flies are so difficult to control. For one thing, they feed around the head, and it is difficult to get insecticide onto an animal's head. Also, each fly usually remains on the animal only two or three minutes per day. When you are observing a herd of cattle, the face flies you see on the animals at a given time will probably be only about four percent of the total face fly population present in the area. Since the flies are only on the animals a short time each day, it is difficult to bring the flies into contact with an insecticide.

Sanitation is not very effective in controlling face flies because these insects prefer to breed in very fresh cow manure which has not been disturbed. For this reason they usually develop around cattle on pastures, and are not normally a serious problem for cattle kept in a dry lot situation.

A dust bag containing insecticide and placed so that the cattle are forced to bump their heads against it provides the most effective means of controlling face flies. The dust bag can be placed in a gateway through which the animals must pass to get water, or hung in the front of a mineral or salt feeder. So that the cow must bump it as she leaves the milking parlor. A regular spray program used in conjunction with the dust bags will provide additional control. Backrubbers will provide some control of face flies. They are not as effective as dust bags, but are better than no control at all.

The UK entomologist points out that no dust bag or backrubber will provide any fly control if it is empty. He stresses the importance of checking such devices at least once a week to make sure that they contain an adequate amount of insecticide and that the material is flowing freely.

A list of insecticides recommended for controlling face flies is contained in UK PUBLICATIONS ENT-11 and ENT-12, both of which are available at local County Extension Offices.

CARPENTER BEES

Several requests have been received concerning those "funny acting" bees that dart around the house, patio and outbuildings. They are large (1/2 inch long) beautifully colored, fast flying bees which closely resemble the bumble bees. However, the abdomen of the carpenter bee is shiny blue-black in color. The abdomen of the bumble bee is usually covered with bands of yellow and black "hair". In addition, the carpenter bees do not nest in the ground but instead cut tunnels in solid wood of buildings, fence posts, and trees.

The entrance hole is about 3/8 inch in diameter and cut straight into the wood for approximately one inch. Tunnels are then cut at right angles to the entrance hole for some distance. New tunnels are often made in the same timbers each season. In time, damage to these timbers can be quite extensive. Insecticides injected into the entrance holes should be applied into the tunnel during the late evening. The entrance hole should then be plugged with mud, clay, wood putty or a similar material. A good coat of paint is also useful in discouraging carpenter bees from beginning to tunnel in building timber or eaves.

ED HUBBARD HURT IN ACCIDENT

Ed Hubbard of Mt. Vernon, an employee of Hubbard Transfer, received several broken bones in an accident Monday evening on the entrance to I-75 at the Burr Interchange. Robert Hubbard, owner of Hubbard Transfer, stated that as Mr. Hubbard turned onto the ramp, the bed of the truck rubbed a wheel causing it to lock and flip the truck over. Mr. Hubbard was transferred to a Lexington Hospital.

Mr. Dale Vaughn Whitaker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Whitaker, Livingston, and a graduate of R.C.H.S. senior class of '75, has been awarded an Academic Scholarship in the amount of $830.00 by Sue Bennett College, London. To receive this scholarship, a student must have straight A's [4 point standing] all four years of high school.

GOPEL MEETING

A Gospel Meeting will begin June 16, 1975 at the Livingstone Church of Christ with services at 7:30 p.m. each evening. Everett Faulkner of the Lockland, Ohio Church of Christ will be the evangelist. The public is invited to attend.

JAYCEES TO SPONSOR JERRY CLOWER APPEARANCE

The Rockcastle County Jaycees met Monday night for their regular meeting and plans were made for the Jerry Clower Show which is scheduled for Saturday, July 5th at the Rockcastle County High School. Mr. Clower, well known for his "Knock Him Out John" talk songs from the coon hunting stories, will give one performance at 7:30 p.m. Advice tickets are on sale for $3.50 for reserved seats. At the door, tickets will be $4.00 for reserved seats and $3.00 general admission.

Fiscal Court Reimposes Coal Tax; Discuss Housing Teen-age Runaways

The Rockcastle County Fiscal Court voted at its regular meeting Tuesday to reimpose a 10c per ton tax on all coal mined in Rockcastle County. Magistrate Ernest Mason, who made the motion, said that the tax, which had earlier been imposed by the Court and then rescinded while the question of its legality was being worked out in the courts, had now been declared a legal tax and that he felt the county should collect this money to help repair the roads which were being torn up in the county by heavy coal trucks.

Magistrate J.R. "Boone" Cromer seconded the motion and Magistrate Chester Whitaker voted yes. Magistrates Danny Sargent and Bill Wren abstained in the voting. In other business, the Court discussed the problem of housing teen-age runaways picked up in the county. Constable Ted Rose told the Court that he had been housing these juveniles himself and that he felt the county should make some provision for these children since state law does not permit the housing of juveniles with adult offenders.

Courthouse would be raised sixty-two and one-half percent when each lease came up for renewal. The Court felt that this action was necessary to even break-even with the additional cost of furnishing heat, air conditioning and maintenance.

Sheriff Manuel Shepherd was once again before the Court asking that some provision be made in the new budget for funds for his office to hire deputies with Sheriff Shepherd told the Court that due to the increase in the cost of gasoline and other supplies that the Sheriff's office did not take in enough revenue to pay for more deputies. And, he added, that additional deputies were essential if the stealing and vandalism, particularly by youths, in the county were going to be checked.

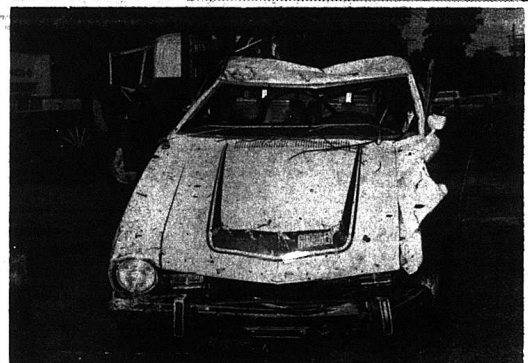

The court discussed the problem thoroughly and Magistrate Ernest Mason suggested that Sheriff Shepherd hire two other deputies with other incomes to help him police the county. Sheriff Shepherd agreed with this suggestion but the discussion returned then to the original point that the Sheriff thought additional funds should be budgeted to pay these men (Cont. to 8)

Delno Mink, Dog Warden, presented his monthly report to the County and also asked the Court for some idea as to how he should apply dog laws in the county. Mr. Mink said that state laws called for dogs to be kept at home tied; however, Mr. Mink said he was getting quite a bit of static from this and asked the Court what procedure he should follow. Several of the Magistrates felt that this was extreme, particularly for dog owners living in the country, and the Court finally decided to look up statutes and see what the law provided.

Dave Purcell, of the Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center, met with the Court requesting some financial assistance from them for the alcoholism program in the county. Mr. Purcell told the court that through the years the Court had provided some financial assistance to the County but that none had been provided since July, 1974. He said that the money was used to help those participating in the program who could not afford to pay for treatment. Mr. Purcell also told the Court that in the first three months of this year, $1800.00 had been spent locally on persons participating in the (Cont. to 8)

Jeleta Taylor, 19, of Brodhead escaped serious injury last Saturday evening when she was involved in a two-car accident on U.S. 150. According to State Police reports, Miss Taylor was traveling east on 150 when she was struck by a car driven by Mrs. Joyce Trebels of Brodhead. Mrs. Trebels told police that she had passed her husband on the road and applied her brakes to turn around when the vehicle skidded across the rain-slick road and struck Miss Taylor's car in the left rear. The Taylor car then went over an embankment and into a creek forty-foot below where it came to rest upside down. Casper Bowling, of Brodhead, rescued Miss Taylor. Miss Taylor is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Taylor of Brodhead.

1975 Rockcastle County High School Honor Students

Lisa Lewis, daughter of Mrs. Betty Lewis of Mt. Vernon and Dr. Jack Lewis of Berea, and Marcia Lamb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lamb of Conway, were chosen co-Valedictorians for the 1975 RCHS graduating class. Miss Lewis and Miss Lamb had identical grade averages in academic studies. Miss Gwenlynn Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Harris of Route 1, Mt. Vernon was chosen salutatorian.

In addition to these three girls, six other students were recognized for having attained a perfect 4.0 standing during their four years at RCHS. They were: Lori Stewart, Regina Taylor, Lacey Parrett, Wanda Brown, Dale Whitaker, and Eddie Hammond.

Other individual awards went to Lisa Lewis, English; Lori Stewart, Science; Gwenlynn Harris, Social Studies; Marcia Lamb, Math; Margaret Dale Craig, Commerce; Wally Trebels, Agriculture; Debbie Morris, Most Athlete; Grl. John (Cont. to 8)

Frankfort Watchline

"My only answer is that there will always be wars and rumors of wars. We were not slating anyone."

That was Bill Cox's response to a query about suggestions of last minute slating by the Carroll campaign team with certain of the candidates for lesser offices.

It amounted to a flat denial by Cox, who was Gov. Julian Carroll's state campaign chairman, but despite the denials, there are substantial rumors, and some indications that go beyond rumors, that there may have been a great deal of slating, or overt non-slating, in the last days of the primary campaign.

For example, many observers say that while Thelma Stovall would have won the primary for lieutenant governor without assistance, that she could not have achieved the exceptional margin she finished with without help.

In Jefferson County the 1974-75 election campaign workers openly talked of Carroll (Stovall) slating in many precincts. There are also indications that Mrs. Stovall was slated with Carroll in other carefully chosen counties throughout the state.

For example, in Hopkins County, Cox's home county, Mrs. Stovall nearly tied State Sen. Bill Sullivan. In Christian, where there was almost a great deal of Carroll camp activity because of auditor candidate George Atkins, Mrs. Stovall beat Sullivan, though barely.

These two counties are especially interesting in that they are both in the first congressional District, when Sullivan won by nearly three to one.

In politically sensitive Muhlenberg County, Mrs. Stovall beat Sullivan by almost three to one.

There are some other unusual statistics out of Hopkins County, where Carroll won overwhelmingly.

Dev. Yeiser, the Winchester agriforeman generally thought to have the tacit support of the Carroll camp in the agriculture commissioner race, lost that county by almost three to one to Thomas O. Harris.

There have been, along with murmurings of slating, some hints that Yeiser, for reasons unknown, was dropped by the Carroll people several days before the primary and the Hopkins County figures seem to bear this possibility out.

If there is a great mystery in the lieutenant governor's primary on the Democratic side, it is the apparent endorsement of Sullivan by former Gov. Bert Combs.

Except for Sullivan, no one can seem to come up with any good reason for why Combs might have lent a little support to Sullivan.

Whatever the reason, Sullivan was not helped very much. He ran a poor fourth in Eastern Kentucky, where a Combs endorsement would be expected to carry the most weight.

The biggest surprise of the race was State Sen. Tom Ward's excellent showing statewide. For a time it looked as though Ward might run as good as second behind Mrs. Stovall.

While Ward was expected to do well in Central Kentucky, hardly anyone expected him to run away with some counties, and his self-touted Western Kentucky organization proved itself out much to everyone's surprise.

There is already some talk going around that Ward has become a viable opponent for U.S. Rep. John Brockenkow, who, while still strong in Northern Kentucky, is considered to be vulnerable in the Central Kentucky portions of his Sixth District.

"LOCAL CVADD DIRECTORS ATTEND DISTRICT CONFERENCE"

The Gamut of America's problems from flood insurance and housing to energy, railroads and solid waste disposal were examined from every angle at the Ninth Annual Conference of Regional Councils. From May 27th to the 31st over 1500 local government officials and interested citizens from throughout the nation met at the Sheraton Boston Hotel to discuss the future of life in America.

They also had advice from such Washington experts as HUD Secretary Carla Hills, EPA Administrator Russell Train and Wilmer Mizell, Assistant Secretary of Commerce. Senators Henry Jackson and Lloyd Bentson also discussed issues with the local citizens.

A substantial number of panel discussions turned to ways of meeting federal guidelines for the increasingly scarce funds needed for the development of communities. Regional councils, such as the Cumberland Valley Area Development District (CVADD) have the responsibility of determining priorities in their district on such projects as housing, transportation, law enforcement, and sewage treatment. "I believe we have in our hands the opportunity to mold and influence the future development of our country. This is the time for you and me to seize the opportunity before us to revitalize and redevelop our country," was the way Mr. Mizell put it.

Board members attending from the Cumberland Valley were Rockcastle Judge Hubert Thacker, Williamsburg Mayor Foster Lane, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Dupier, Mr. Don I. Bingham of Knox County and Mr. James Baker of Middleboro. Board members were without pay.

BONDS SALES

Sales of Series E and H Savings Bonds in Rockcastle County for March were $3,569 while sales for the first three months totaled $22,785 or 30.2 percent of the County's annual goal of $75,250.

This summer would be a good time to help a certain kind of deprived child - the one who has never been fishing. Chances are that there is one in your neighborhood, maybe next door, or even in your own house.

For the boy or girl who has never been fishing, a trip to a nearby stream or pond will provide a brand-new set of experiences and will serve as a good introduction to the outdoor world. This is particularly true of the urban child, who may find a world outside of the concrete of the city which he never dreamed existed.

However, some care should be taken to assure a successful trip, especially if younger children are involved. While a twelve-year-old needs a different kind of trip for his initial fishing experience.

For the younger child, bank FAILURE TO PERFORM JUDICIAL DUTIES A MISDEMEANOR

Gary E. Conn, Grayson city attorney, explained that the city council has become dissatisfied with the conduct of the city police judge. Conn stated that the judge has failed to impose fines for violations of certain ordinances and has otherwise refused to perform duties required of his office. Conn wished to know what steps could be taken to either bring the police judge to trial or insure that he would perform his duties. The only method of removal would be by impeachment before the House of Representatives. However, a police official is guilty of official misconduct in the second degree when he knowingly refrains from performing a duty imposed upon him by law or clearly inherent in the nature of his office. Official misconduct in the second degree is a class B misdemeanor and carries a maximum jail sentence of 90 days and/or a fine not to exceed $250.

SCHOOL FUNDS TO BE USED ONLY FOR THE SCHOOLS

John C. Roberts, commissioner of the Department of Transportation, asked whether or not school funds may be expended for the construction of entrances to school property within the right of way of state highways. Even though property owners are required by the department's rules to pay the entire expense of providing entrances to their property, it is the Office of the Attorney General's opinion that funds accrued for school use must be expended for the public schools and for no other purpose. Both the Department of Transportation and each school district are state agencies, but constitutional provisions appear to place the burden of such an expense upon the Department of Transportation.

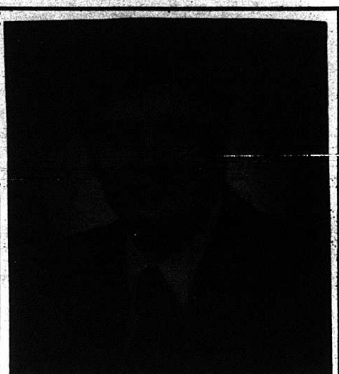

fishing offers more chances to expend youthful energy than does fishing from a boat. Kids are notoriously fidgety, and the confines of a small boat start getting on everyone's nerves.

For the first trip, it's also best to go after easily caught species (such as bluegill) with simple tackle. A cane pole, bobber and a can of earthworms makes a good starting outfit, and if you have access to a farm pond, this could prove an ideal setting. Even a pond you wouldn't normally consider because it is out of balance and teeming with stunted bluegill will provide an afternoon of fast action which will keep any child happy. Also, the pond owner will very likely be happy for you to catch as many bluegill as possible from such a pond.

The adult who accompanies a child on his first fishing trip should subjugate the desire to catch fish to the effort to make the trip enjoyable to the child. If heaving rocks in the water suddenly catches the youngster's fancy, don't yell at him, but instead teach him how to skip stones.

There's more to fishing than filling a stringer, and the adult should take every opportunity to point out as many examples of the outdoor world as he can find. Explain what the dragonflies darting over the pond are doing, examine a snail, a grasshopper, a turtle, a crawfish. Take time out to watch a bird building a nest, or go looking for blackberries.

There will be time later to teach the youngster the angling skills and refinements which you have picked up over the years, but the first trip or two should be an introduction and an awakening. Do it right, and you've made both a friend and, very likely, a life-long fisherman.

JOHN ROGERS Thanks The Voters of ROCKCASTLE CO.

I want to thank everyone who supported me in my Senate Race. Also I would like to thank my opponents, William VanHook, Leonard Hislope and George Carmicle for running a competitive and issue-oriented campaign.

I will become your State Senator in January of 1976, but if there is anything I can do for you as your Senator-Elect, please contact me at the Akers and Rogers Law Building, 106 W. Columbia St., Somerset, Ky.

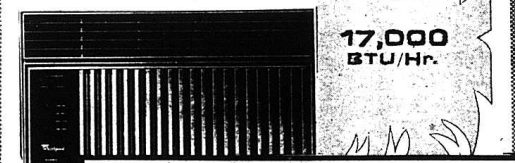

Thank you and I will do my best as your State Senator.

SUNDAY CLOSING LAW DEFINED

Robert Mack of Lexington asked if his business of selling costume jewelry, dishes and glasses, antiques and used clothing could be classified as a gift shop and therefore exempt from closing on Sunday. It is the opinion of the Attorney General's Office that the items being sold are not what one would ordinarily select as a gift or souvenir. There would appear to be no more reason for the shop's remaining open on Sunday than for any other mercantile establishment.

WHO GETS DEPRESSED AND WHY

Frustrations, disappointments, a personal loss of any kind, can understandably make us gloomy. We vary in our ability to bounce back. But certain individuals may be more prone, more vulnerable, than others to temporary or chronic depression. It can happen any time from the cradle to the grave. Some studies indicate that the incidence appears to peak in adolescence, drops off between the ages of 20 and 35, then slowly rises thereafter.

In this article we examine depression:

IN INFANCY:

Even babies can be depressed, particularly when they miss a loving mother, feel emotional neglect, or sense the mother is herself downcast.

Dr. Joseph D. Teicher, director of the Division of Child Psychiatry at the University of Southern California School of Medicine, observes: "Clinically, such infants show feeding disorder, often repeated regurgitation, lassitude, poor muscle tone, and excessive sleeping... These infants look like depressed little old men."

Seven-month-old Billy, for example, was unresponsive, listless, cried irritably, and failed to gain weight. His pediatrician labeled the baby's expression as "depressed."

Dr. Teicher noted that the pediatrician that she was uneasy about caring for the baby, afraid to hold him and generally avoided him except for necessities. After she talked with the doctor, many of the mother's fears were allayed, following the doctor's prescription, she was able to give her baby ample doses of tender, loving care. Billy began to smile and thrive.

IN YOUNG CHILDREN:

As in the case of 9-year old Betty, traumatic depression over parental friction is not uncommon in the family chaos. Betty felt lost and unloved as both her mother and father increasingly tended to ignore her. Other events, such as failure at school, punishment, or moving to a new neighborhood and losing friends, may precipitate moping. But rarely does a young child become as deeply depressed as an adult, young.

Mr. and Mrs. Arch Lee Cook of Broodhead will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday, June 14th with an Open House at their home. Mr. and Mrs. Cook were married in Rockcastle County June 13, 1925 and they have 10 children and 19 grandchildren.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clouts of Berea wish to announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Jacqueline Dianne, to Randy Cross, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Cross also of Berea. The wedding will be an event of June 6th at 7:30 p.m. in the Crestview Holy Sanctuary Church in Berea with a reception following in the fellowship hall of the church. All friends and relatives of the couple are invited to attend. Miss Clouts is the granddaughter of Corina Clouts of Berea and the late William Clouts and of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Lovell of Mt. Vernon.

AUCTION

The Parsons' Warehouse

SAT., JUNE 14th - 10:30 A.M.

Lot #1 - consists of the above pictured commercial building measuring 100 x 200. The lot measures approximately 137 x 250. The building is ideal for most any type building that requires a great amount of floor space. There is a 28 x 48 office and sales room partitioned off in the front of the building. Having 12 ft. wide walkways inside the building gives you ample room to maneuver trucks, trailers, forklifts, etc. This lot joins the free parking lot belonging to the city.

Lot #2 - measures approximately 43 x 200 and is adjacent to Lot #1. This lot could be utilized for many different businesses due to its strategic location.

Owners reserve the right to sell each lot separately then combine them selling whichever way reflects the best returns for owners.

Here's your opportunity to own a building that is adaptable for many different purposes. It does join the L and N Railroad. Don't miss this important sale!

TERMS - 20 percent down day of sale, balance due in 30 days upon delivery of deed.

expressed as stomach aches or headaches, or in misconduct. He feels insecure, overeats or lacks appetite, is restless and doesn't play with other children. A sense of worthlessness or guilt, and signs of self-deprecation appear in most cases of depression. Some child psychiatrists believe that the "hyperactive" child may actually be suffering from depressive illness.

Some children even make suicidal threats, but young children are not likely to attempt suicide.

Next, we'll look at depression in teenagers and young adults. Future articles will be concerned with depression in middle age, the aged, the incapacitated and others and how it can be treated.

For information about these and other mental health matters contact your local Cumberland River Comprehensive Care Center, Office, (Phone 256-2129).

FOOD CLIPS

Did you know that a banana may be entirely brown and yet the flesh will be in prime condition?

Overmature cherries lack flavor. You can tell by shriveling, dried stems and a generally dull appearance. Look for the very dark color which is an indication of good flavor and maturity in sweet cherries.

Grapefruit is picked "tree ripe" and is ready to eat just as soon as you buy it in the store. These scab scars or thorn scratches even discoloration seldom affects the eating quality of the fruit.

When preparing fresh vegetables remember, remove bruised, wilted, yellowed or tough portions from fresh vegetables before serving to avoid excess loss of food and nutrients.

Light brown markings on the outside skin have no effect on the flesh of the avocado. Some avocados are shades of green, some tawny, maroon, brown or even purplish black as they ripen.

Check the date! If you're using yeast, either dry granular or compressed, check the package for dates, because for best results, the yeast should be used before the expiration date.

What are "Hydrogenated fats"? Oils that are made solid by the addition of hydrogen. Emulsifiers are often added to help keep the fat particles evenly distributed in a mixture. These emulsifiers also help stabilize the batter until it is set by the heat of baking.

Baking muffins? Don't overmix - the results would be poor texture, large holes and tunnels.

What's the difference between a dough and a batter? Dough should be thick enough to be rolled or kneaded. Batter should be thin enough to pour or drop from a spoon.

Eggs, a natural emulsifier help to keep fat particles suspended in batters and to maintain smoothness. Did you know that quality in baked products sometimes depends on the baking pan you use? Proper depth in the pan and dark or dull pans make a difference. Follow the directions in your recipe; it's important, it is not unusual for us to supply 45 to 50 percent of the total calories in an American diet.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion Kelley and daughter of Hamilton visited Mr. and Mrs. Russell Mullins and other relatives over the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnel Taylor visited Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Taylor of Addicksville, Illinois over the weekend.

Mrs. C.F. Mullins, Jr. of Louisville is visiting Mr. and Mrs. C.F. Mullins.

Mrs. Thomas Kirby of Nashville, Tennessee visited her mother Mrs. Bertha Bingham last Friday.

Isaac and Billy Neal of Louisville were in town last week end renewing old acquaintances.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Drew and daughters Debbie and Terry of Milford, Ohio and Doug Drew of Cornersville, Indiana spent the weekend with their mother Mrs. Zula Drew.

DOWN ON THE FARM
By Roy G. Brown
Assistant Vice President
Cumberland PCA

Farmers are still in one of the most busy times of the year with all of the spring work to be done. We usually run into weather trouble in putting up hay. The time hay is cut makes a big difference in the feed value of the hay. Hay that stands too long after it is ready to cut will lose a lot of quality in feeding. Also hay that gets wet or gets too burned before raking and baling will lose a lot of feed value.

You know how high a scarce hay was last winter. Well, we can prevent that some next winter by putting up all the hay we can now. Most of us have pasture fields that have grown up even with cattle on them. This surplus can be cut and baled for winter feeding. This is where the big round bales can be used to good advantage if there is one available to use. We need to use every acre on our farm to its greatest use, especially with the present low price of cattle and high cost of

JUNE is DAIRY MONTH CONGRATULATIONS to our DAIRY INDUSTRY

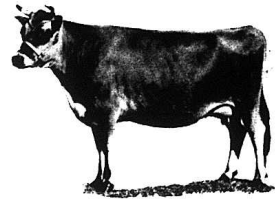

DAIRY MONTH IS A NATURAL TIME TO SAY THANK YOU.

The dairy farmers and their families who live and work around our community deserve a great deal of thanks. Their stability helps our community remain stable and healthy. Their insistence on offering only the highest quality milk and dairy products sets an example for us all, and improves the quality of our lives. We congratulate them now, during Dairy Month, and thank them for their contributions.

June is Dairy Month

This month is a good time for all of us to take a closer look at our Dairy Industry. One thing is certain, it has become big business and is getting bigger every day. And our dairy farmers have done an excellent job in increasing production to meet growing demands. They are using the most modern, up-to-date equipment in rigidly controlled modern plants. We salute them for a job well done!

Rockcastle Recollections

By John Lutz

BURIED TREASURE

We are inclined to be a bit skeptical of the many tales of buried treasure that come up from time to time, but it must be remembered that in the earlier days there were no banks or safes of deposit other than what the possessor of surplus cash or money had hidden away. It is true that more money than he could carry around was faced with the necessity of finding what he hoped was a safe place to hide it, which was generally in the ground.

The most outstanding and one of the earliest tales of hidden wealth had to do with the legendary figure of John Swift, whose journal told of huge caches of silver coins left in different sections of the Kentucky mountains before the coming of the first settlers. The story of John Swift and his fabulous silver mine has long held a great fascination for Kentuckians and many people were avidly searching for it as far back as 1792, when James Harrod was murdered by a companion while trying to locate it on a fork of the Kentucky River, and James Renfro had been killed by lightning while searching for it near what is now Pineville. The search for it continues to the present day and has covered several Kentucky counties. There is nothing in printed history to connect Swift's operations with Rockcastle County, but several years ago while conversing with Jones Durham about the Crews Ferry region he made mention of "The Mundy Hole" in Rockcastle River. When I asked why it was so called, he told me that the old folks used to tell that, many years before, an Englishman by the name of Mundy was run into deep water there and killed by the Indians. I immediately called to mind that one of Swift's companions by the name of Mundy was reported to have been killed in exactly that same way in a stream not far from his home. I also recalled reading in Swift's journal that most of his company was at Mundy's home one Christmas, when two of the men settled a dispute in a duel in which both were killed, one dying instantly, the other sustaining wounds from which he died the next day. It was further stated that before going into the fight he had buried their share of the money, amounting to hundreds of thousands of pieces of silver, and that after their death the money was never found. If Mundy's home was near "The Mundy Hole" in Rockcastle River, the intriguing idea immediately presents itself that two considerable hoards of silver had remained for all these years hidden away somewhere in the Rockcastle hills.

Of more recent times, and consequently more easily investigated, is the story of James Crews and his hidden wealth. As proprietor and operator of Crews Ferry, with its accompanying tavern and stockpens, located where the Madison branch of the Wilderness Road crossed Rockcastle River, he is said to have acquired considerable wealth taking care of (by one means or another) the earlier travels along the world. At around the time of the Battle of Watauga Mountain, he is supposed to have become alarmed by the presence of the many deserters and stragglers prowling through the country, which caused him to decide to hide his money to prevent its being stolen. Placing it in a big chest, he had a slave lead it in a high wheeled cart and drive him across the river with it at a shallow ford below the ferry. When the chest was unloaded on the other side the slave was told to drive back across the river and warned that if he so much as looked back he would be promptly shot. Crews then disappeared into the woods and when he came out again the chest was missing.

The spot where the chest was unloaded from the cart was across the river directly in front of the tavern. At the foot of a steep hill, Crews had long been in the habit of climbing this hill at night and building a fire, by which he sat until far in the night listening to his pack of foxhounds coursing through the hills. He had often said that when he died he wanted to be buried on the highest point of this hill so he could still enjoy the pleasures of the phantom chase.

Later, when he steadfastly refused to tell his partner in the ferry enterprise where he had hidden the money, he was shot to death.

The family, honoring his oft-repeated wish, dug his grave on the top most point of the hill, even though the last few feet of it had to be chiseled out of solid sandstone. At his death he was buried here but was not allowed to rest undisturbed. The search for his hidden money became so intense that his grave was dug into in the mistaken belief that he might have tried "to take it with him". Rollie Mullins, living nearby, remembers that it was done more than forty years ago by three men, whom he named, who also dug up other graves in the vicinity, including that of a man named Parker, supposed to have been hanged many years before by a Laurel County mob and brought here for burial. A local newspaper reveals that on May 18, 1870, Daniel L. Pleasant and Willis Parker were hanged at the gallows in Laurel County, for the killing of Peter Bullock. One of these three must have been buried in the grave desecrated along with that of James Crews.

A different story concerning Crews, however, was given me by D. Graves, who has furnished many unusual items of information for this work. He says that a group of men he names offered the final indignity to Crews' grave when they removed the bones of its occupant, taking the skull to Dayton, Ohio for some purpose unknown to him. Around twenty years ago I purchased the old Crews Ferry place across the river from the burial site. When last I visited the grave it was completely empty, but the stone marker bearing Crews' name and burial date was still lying beside the open grave in undamaged condition.

The area around the grave shows much evidence that the search for Crews' buried money still goes on. The old tavern and stables and all buildings connected with the ferry operation have long been gone, washed away in one of the periodic floods that sometimes make the Rockcastle River indeed a "wild river". Searchers still probe around the stone foundations of the old tavern and stables and the one chimney that stands a monument to what was once a landmark in the early progress of Rockcastle County. The only searchers who have any luck are those who dig in the old garden and occasionally turn up a few silver coins of small denomination. The biggest find that has come to my attention was a glass fruit jar, half full of coins, dug up near the site of the old kitchen. Maybe the money is still there; maybe it never was. Who knows?

The name Crews seems to have been associated with wealth in the earlier days of Kentucky's history. There was a David Crews at Booneboro who was reported to have had so much money he kept it in a barrel inside the fort.

In Loving Memory Of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Griffin

They say that time heals all sorrow

And helps us all forget But time so far has only proved How much we miss Mother and Daddy yet.

God gave us strength to fight it. And courage to bear the flow But what it meant to lose Mother and Daddy No one will ever know.

How sweet the memory still lingers

While on earth they lived But death has left a loneliness This world can never fill.
