

It's Time to Revel In A Kentucky Spring

I would take a windswept hill and on a gentle knoll place a house with a wide yard all around. I would place natural stones to make steps to a front porch and on the porch would place rocking chairs. There would be a rock chimney, and on chilly spring mornings wood smoke would curl in a blue-gray swirl, drifting through blossoms on a plum tree, drifting with blooms from pear trees.

I would look out over the Kentucky hills around and below me and feel such a surge of energy I would start running, across fields chartreuse with new grass and meadows where taller grass swayed like a blue-green sea in the breeze. At the promontory of the high hill I would survey this Kentucky land, see soft flags of smoke curling from my neighbor's houses and note spring-plowing on south bound slopes.

I would thank God for all this and more, too. On the way back I would walk through spring woods, noting leaves on thick carpets, newly laid each year. I would hunt for trout like bloom, wood poppies, buttercups, trillium, cinquefoil, hepatica and anemones. I would leave the path to gather leather-like cases in a grove of Kentucky coffeetrees, knowing that in spring these seed-filled pods leave their trees. The hulls would be saved for their distinctive shape and luster and the seeds harvested to give to neighbors.

Plantings of bloodroot, wild geranium, phlox and spring beauty would be admired. I would locate and compare bloom on Dutchman's breeches and squirrel-corn and see how many violets I could identify. They might be smooth yellow, halberd-leaved violents, sweet white, swamp white, white, Canada, lung-spurred, marsh blue, woolly blue, three-lobed, arrow-leaved and birdfoot, along with a favorite called common blue violet and field pansies.

I would be aware that I could not enjoy this nature's bounty forever, so once again, I would head for the windswept hill, the house with the front porch and rocking chairs.

The day's work would go well, for an early spring mornings energy swirls like sap flows in trees. Meals would be cooked, floors swept, windows cleaned, deadfall of winter raked from the yard, and finally the porch would be clean and a cushion brought out for one of the seats.

I would be evening and already the slowest-hour warmth surging like spring fever, marsh frogs would be croaking their songs with off-key chorusing from their insects.

The sounds would be assuring, and I would know that all was well with this land, and I would be grateful.

If for a multitude of reasons I had no windswept hill, no porch on a gentle knoll, no front porch with a rocking chair, no woodland path strewn with spring wildflowers and edged with tall trees, I still could find a way to enjoy this beautiful Kentucky.

I would start with my telephone in a more realistic world and call the toll-free number to a central reservations service, Kentucky Department of Parks: 1-800-372-2961 to see if a lodge room or cottage might be available. I know how sometimes former reservations are cancelled and a room or cottage can be had for the night.

I would drive leisurely, often less than 55 mph, in order to savor spring and observe neighbors in other parts of the Commonwealth as they raked, plowed, planted swept and dusted away winter.

In the room or cottage at the state park of my choice I would sit on open doors to the small, private balcony or front porch to make sure the chairs were there.

I would look out over the woodland lakes, meadows and hills. I would delight in sounds of insects in the evening stillness, and feel a certain peace with the world.

If you do not have a windswept hill, a house with a porch and chair and a wide-yard or even if you do use your free time to enjoy what the Commonwealth has to offer. Get wildflower and tree books in the park gift shop and learn more about this land. Put "you" where every "I" is and by starting where you are, revel in a Kentucky spring.

Livestock Loss Claims Must Be Filed For Within 24-Hour Period

Claims for reimbursement for livestock losses under the Kentucky-Dog Law must be made within 24 hours of the loss in order to qualify for consideration, according to Mary Lois Hawkins of the Dog Licensing Program of the Kentucky Department of Agriculture.

Claims should be made to the county dog warden or to the county judge, she added.

Sixty percent of the fees collected for dog licensing go into a fund for the payment of livestock loss claims, said Hawkins. Last year approximately $20,000 in claims were paid out by the Department of Agriculture, she added. Payments are made at the close of each fiscal year.

A claimant voids his opportunity for reimbursement for livestock loss to dogs if he owns an unlicensed dog, said Hawkins. Dogs must be registered annually with the county dog warden at a fee of $1.50.

Hawkins said that a Dog Law Advisory Committee appointed by the governor advises the commissioner of agriculture on the enforcement of the Dog Law. It is this board, she said, which approves all claims for loss at its annual meeting.

The board is composed of a representative from the Kentucky Livestock Improvement Association, the Kennel Clubs of Kentucky, the Kentucky Veterinary Association and the Kentucky Veterinary Association and the Kentucky Sheep and Wool Producers, as well as the commissioner of agriculture.

NATIONAL POISON PREVENTION WEEK - MARCH 14-20

Pills come in pretty colors - pink, red and blue - all colors that appeal to children.

Drain cleaners, detergents, furniture polish, paint and pesticides, all potentially poisonous household products, come in packaging that attracts a youngster's eye.

Over 90 percent of all poisoning accidents occur in the home and involve children under five. Studies done by the National Clearinghouse for Poison Control Centers show that in 95 percent of these accidents, the children were under the supervision of adults.

With March 14-20 proclaimed National Poison Prevention Week, the Kentucky Department for Human Resources, along with other public welfare and youth-oriented agencies throughout the state, is joining in the kept out of sight and reach, preferably locked in cabinet or closet.

Internal medicines should be stored separately from other household products. All products should be stored in their original containers and labeled properly.

Human Resources particularly stresses the careful handling and storage of pesticides which fall into four chemical categories: those used to control weeds, fungi, rodents and insects. Pesticides should not be kept inside the house where toxic fumes may escape.

Information on poison prevention may be obtained from the Department for Human Resources' Office of Pesticides and Consumer Product Safety, 561-4537.

From 1966 to 1968, the world's largest auger was used in mining operations, in eastern Kentucky. The Kelly Giant, with its 6-foot diameter bit, is now retired in Breathitt County.

MISS ANGLIN AND MR. BURDETTE SERVE AS SENATE PAGES

On Friday, February 27, 1976, Edwina Anglin and Jeffrey Burdette, both 8th grade students from Mt. Vernon Elementary School, served the Senate as Pages upon invitation from Senator Walter Baker, Republican from Glasgow, Kentucky.

While there, they met and talked with the first woman to become Lt. Governor of this Commonwealth, Mrs. Thelma Stovall. Edwina and Jeff found Lt. Gov. Stovall both congenial and hospitable as she gave them the seat she occupies as she presides over the Senate and posed for a picture with them.

They heard Senator Baker vote with the prevailing side on the Senate

Bill to provide free textbooks to all pupils of grades 9, 10, 11 and 12 beginning with the 1976-77 school year.

After the Senate adjourned in memory of the pupils from Floyd, who lost their lives in the state's biggest school bus accident, Edwina and Jeff toured the historic spots in Frankfort. They seemed to agree that seeing history in the making was more fun than reading about history from a textbook.

The Legislative Round-Up Continued from 10

Collective bargaining bills for public employees met mixed fates. Senate Bill 200, requiring teachers and school boards to negotiate salaries and working conditions, passed 25-11 in the Senate and subsequently was reported out of committee in the House. However, House Bill 300, which would have required state and local governments to negotiate with nearly all employees, died in the House Committee on State Government by a vote of 4-7.

A revised land planning bill was approved by the Senate Committee on State Government. Senate Bill 14 would establish a 15 member Land Use Coordination Council to set priorities for spending state and federal land use planning funds. The council also could require cities and counties to submit local land use plans for review and comment.

Other bills which were approved by committees last week included: HB 371, to tighten licensing requirements for hearing aid specialists; HB 771, a so-called new car "lemon" bill; HB 459, to require greater surety bonds for strip-mining and to increase penalties for violating reclamation requirements SB 220, to abolish the so-called holder in due course doctrine, which allows lending institutions to collect on installment contracts even if service or merchandise is unsatisfactory; SB 203, Gov. Carroll's tax package to increase tax credits for the elderly and blind, increase state income tax standard deductions, increase inheritance tax exemptions for surviving spouses and exempt additional items from the state sales tax; SB 27, to license physician assistants in Kentucky; SB 142, to establish a fund to pay workmen's compensation benefits for coal miners suffering from "black lung."

House Bill 151, to change Kentucky's primary election date from May to August, appeared dead when a vote to send it to the Senate floor failed in the Senate Committee on Elections and Constitutional Amendments on a 3-3 tie.

Above left, a bust of "the Great Compromiser," Henry Clay. At right are campaign paraphernalia used in both state and national elections. A collection of newspapers outlines the story of Gov. William Taylor's dispute with the legislature over the 1900 election. Gov. William Goebel was assassinated in that controversy.

POLITICS IN KENTUCKY-The Bluegrass State has always been a part of the complex and intricate web of politics. In the era of tension preceding the Civil War, the state's most famous orator and Congressman, Henry Clay, stood on the floor of the U.S. Senate, pleading with his brothers of the North and South to cool the flames that were driving them apart. At the beginning of this century, a disputed gubernatorial election created a controversy that led to a fight between the governor and General Assembly, finally resulting in the assassination of state senator William Goebel, who became the state's governor while on his deathbed. The stories of these and other events in Kentucky politics are on display in the temporary exhibits gallery at the Old State Capitol Annex in Frankfort.

Postal Official Forecasts $1.5 Billion Deficit

The Postal Service's financial condition is serious and, despite recent postage rate increases and a massive systemwide belt-tightening program, it will probably end the year with a $1.5 billion deficit, a high-ranking postal official said here today.

"If there is one impression I leave you with today," Paul N. Carlin, Assistant Postmaster General, Employee Relations from Washington, DC, told a meeting of the Lexington Postal Customers Council members at the main Post Office, "I want it unmistakably to be that the Postal Service's financial position is grave."

Mr. Carlin said there is no easy way out of the Service's financial crunch, and outlined a series of tough, cost-reducing steps the Postal Service has undertaken in its fight to restore financial stability.

They include reassignment of postal workers to offices where they can be used more productively; elimination of overtime for functions not directly related to mail processing and delivery; a ban on outside hiring; closing down some small post offices that can be served as well or better by alternate means; implementation, subject to arbitration, of a program to establish objective work standards for letter carriers, to assure that each of them works an eight-hour day; and other measures.

"Since labor costs make up 85 percent of the postal budget, our cost reduction measures are directed mainly toward more efficient use of our 700,000 member work force," Mr. Carlin said.

"We also have moved to trim unnecessary spending in other areas," he said, noting that the Postmaster General has initiated cuts in headquarters budgets, reduced capital spending and stepped up sales of excess real estate.

He said the Postal Service, established July 1, 1971, has made substantial progress toward the goals of improved service, revitalization of facilities and betterment of employees' pay and working conditions, but admitted the goal of being financially self-sufficient "has been an elusive one."

"Due to forces almost totally beyond our control, the Postal Service's financial health has deteriorated rapidly," he said. "We had a $438 million deficit in fiscal 1974," after having almost broken even in fiscal 1973, he said, adding that the deficit "ballooned to $989 million" in fiscal 1975. "This year, the outlook is again bleak," he said. "Despite the December rate increase, the deficit is expected to reach $1.5 billion during the current fiscal year."

Mr. Carlin said the main reason for the red ink is a combination of high inflation, that boosts Postal Service costs and recession that reduced mail volume and revenues. Aggravating the problems caused by the poor economic climate was the two-year period the independent Postal Rate Commission took to rule on the Postal Service's requests for higher postage rates.

"Can you name any business that has not increased its prices during the last two years?"

Despite recent rate increases, first class postage in the United States is below that of almost every other industrialized nation in the world, he said.

The Postal Service has also asked Congress to consider legislation that would speed up the rate-making process by the Postal Rate Commission, and to take a closer look at public service subsidies provided the Postal Service by Congress, to determine the true cost of public services and adjust the subsidy accordingly.

Working together these four departments resolve complaints of alleged mail-order swindles when postal customers fail to receive merchandise ordered, refunds promised or find that the service or product purchased is not as advertised.

When a complaint is made, the Postal Service decides whether to investigate for possible commercial deception or to handle it informally as in cases where poor business practices are found to be the problem. Whatever the action, the customer is notified.

In cases where it is believed that false representation by mail exists, the Consumer Protection Office working with information obtained from postal inspectors initiates administrative proceedings that the mails are being used to promote schemes to obtain money by misrepresentation, the Judicial Office issues a mail-stop order which results in the return of all subsequent mail to the sender, unless it is clear that the correspondence has nothing to do with the scheme.

Where violation of the Mail Fraud Statute is indicated, postal inspectors refer the case to appropriate U.S. Attorney for consideration of criminal prosecution.

The Consumer Advocate provides the consumer with a strong voice in postal management in cases of delayed purchases or refunds, extension of rural routes, delivery schedules and employee conduct.

"If you have any problems with the mails, come in and talk with me or a postal inspector. We want to help," Postmaster Smith added.

Two special hour-long programs wrap up Kentucky Educational Television's (KET) coverage of the Kentucky legislature on COMMENT ON KENTUCKY.

Al Smith, host, has announced that the first program, Friday, March 26, features a legislative panel headed by the House Speaker William Kenton. Rep. Joe Clarke, D-Danville; House minority leader Harold Demarcus, R-Spanford; and Sen. Eugene P. Stuart, minority floor leader, R-Prospect, are also on the panel.

John Ed Pearce, veteran political writer for the Courier-Journal, will join Smith and the panel for an overview of the 60-day legislative session.

Friday, April 2, Gov. Julian Carroll and a panel of journalists will discuss the legislative session and state government, with emphasis on the governor's viewpoint. Questions related to governmental programs and projects for the rest of 1976 will be discussed, as will Gov. Carroll's expectations and outlook for the remainder of his administration.

Both programs will be broadcast at 9 p. m. (EST), 8 p. m. (CST). As with all public affairs programs organized by KET, both programs will be offered to commercial television stations for use on a live or delayed broadcast schedule.

Gardening Tips from Extension Specialists at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture

Unless a tremendous amount of compost or barnyard manure is available, commercial fertilizers should be necessary to raise good crops of garden vegetables. The kind of fertilizer needed and the rate of application will depend on the type and condition of the soil as determined by a soil test, and the kind of crops to be grown.

For general use, however, UK Extension vegetable specialist C. R. Roberts recommends one of the following fertilizers: 5-10-10, 6-12-12, or 5-20-20. He points out that the first number stands for the percent of nitrogen in the fertilizer mixture, the second number the percent of phosphorus, and the third the percent of potash. All these elements are essential for plants to grow and produce good yields.

Soils where the soil tests show a very low phosphorous and potash reading should receive 4 to 4 1/2 pounds of a 5-20-20 fertilizer per 100 square feet of soil surface area, Roberts says. The fertilizer should be broadcast and washed into the soil before planting time. For soils with average fertility, cut this rate in half or use a 5-10-10 or 6-12-12 fertilizer at the above rate.

The soil should have a high level of phosphorous and potash for all vegetable crops to do well. Too much nitrogen, however, can result in crop failure with fruit-setting crops such as tomatoes and peppers and root and tuber crops such as potatoes. The general rule of thumb is that if you have applied quite a bit of manure to the garden, use very little additional nitrogen. Since nitrogen is applied with a complete fertilizer such as 5-10-10, 6-12-12, or 5-20-20, use only 1 to 2 pounds of fertilizer for each 100 square feet of garden space when manure has already been added.

Roberts says that, as a rule, commercial fertilizers should be applied a few days before planting or when the crops are being planted. Several kinds of vegetables will benefit from additional side-dressings of nitrogen along in the growing season, he adds. When the fruit on tomato and pepper plants are the size of golf balls, when potato plants are in full bloom, when sweet corn stalks are knee-high, and when cabbage heads begin to form, side-dress them with about 1/3 pound of ammonium nitrate granules to each 100 square feet of soil surface area and wash it lightly into the soil.

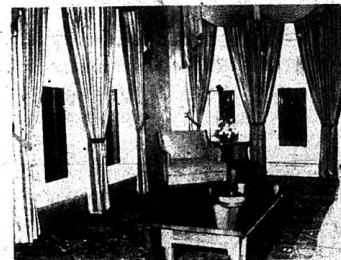

Satisfactory yields of top-quality vegetables cannot be obtained without an abundance of available nutrients in the soil. Putting these nutrients there in the right amounts may not exactly be easy, but there are now that claim serious gardening to be a play job. For the best advice on the kind and amount of fertilizers to use and how to apply them, check with your county Extension agent.

Local committee chairmen reported their totals to date as follows: Joy Ballinger, Heart Sunday Chairman, $217.72; county school, $947.85; coffee day, $110.90 (Holiday Steakhouse highest with $25.40); business gifts, $631.24 (Braden Steel Co. highest with $50.00).

Mail returns are still being received from residents who were not at home when volunteers called. Mail contribution envelopes were included with the heart-saving information left at their doors.

Miss Hamm expressed the hope that mail contributions yet to be received will raise the campaign total to $2,000. Heart Fund contributions may be mailed in any envelope addressed to: the Rockcastle Heart Association, Rt. 1, Box 300, Mt. Vernon, Ky. 40456.

Commenting on public response to the campaign, Miss Hamm noted "The cooperation and generosity of the people

STRIP MINE PERMITS ISSUED

The following permits to strip mine were issued by the division of Reclamation in the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection for the week of March 4 through March 11, 1976.

Permit No. 12, to be held in different areas in the county and Saturday, a luncheon will be held at Mt. Vernon Elementary School. Food for Saturday's luncheon

Scotia Coal Mine Explosions Affected Two Local Families

Two men killed in the Scotia Coal Mine explosions last week had close relatives in this county.

Don Polly, who was one of the 11 men killed last Thursday, after re-entering the mine to prepare it for inspection, was a brother to Glen Polly, head football coach at Rockcastle County High School.

Mr. Polly said Tuesday that his brother, who was a foreman for the Scotia Coal Company and who had been in the mines 20 years, was three and one-half miles underground waiting at the entrance of the level where the Tuesday blast had occurred when the second explosion occurred. Mr. Polly said that he was told by one of the men who entered the mine and found the bodies that the concussion from the blast killed the men.

Mr. Polly had not been in the mine Tuesday when the first blast occurred. It went off just before his shift began and he worked that day and then double back for another shift so that he might be off to attend services for the 15 men killed in the first explosion. It was during this second shift that Mr. Polly was asked to go into the mine along with three federal inspectors and seven other miners to prepare the mine for inspection.

Besides his brother, Mr. Polly is survived by his wife, Dolly, his mother, who lives in Daisy, Tennessee, two other brothers and two sisters.

It was decided later to seal the entrance to the Scotia No. 2 mine where the blasts occurred for several months and the bodies of the 11 men will be recovered then.

The T. J. Wilcox family of this county also suffered a loss in the disasters - their 29-year-old son-in-law, David Gibbs of Padgett was killed in the first explosion last Tuesday.

Mr. Gibbs, who would have been 30 in 9 days, had been in the mines for 11 years. He and his wife, the former Libby Wilcox, had two sons.

Future For County's Coal Tax is not Good

The way things look at present, Rockcastle County is going to be left out in the cold when it comes to collecting the coal tax voted on by the Fiscal Court last year.

County Attorney James Lambert said Tuesday that he was hoping up on sending out the forms to coal companies because a change in the coal severance tax collected by the state would, if approved by the governor, make the collecting of county coal taxes illegal.

According to a story in last week's London Sentinel-Echo, Laurel Fiscal Court is expecting March to be the last month in which they will be able to collect the coal tax. In Laurel County, as proposed here, the tax would have been used to repair various coal haul roads in the county after the mining had been finished on a particular road.

An attempt to reach Rep. Harold DeMarcus in Frankfort Tuesday, to learn whether or not the tax was already prohibited, failed but at this time, it seems highly unlikely that Rockcastle will get to share in this highly lucrative source of income.

Grand Jury Chosen

Clyde Livville is serving as foreman of the March term of the Rockcastle County Circuit Court Grand Jury and Sam Ford was selected secretary.

Members of the Petit Jury called were: Geraldine Clifford Anglin, Glenna Carter Baker, Irene E. Boner, Flora Mae Brown, Verla Jewell Brown, Howard Taft Bullock, Mary Ann Bullock, Saul Carpenter, Gattlin Evans Craig, Vera Clark Dailey, Arnel Davidson, William Franklin Debor, Dorothy Johnson French, Dorothy Lovell.

Junnie B. Hanel, Gertrude Griffin Hillon, Virgil Hopkins, John Houston, Victor Arnold Hysinger, Wesley Myers.

Sam Vanover Designated Acting Dis. Conservationist

Sam Vanover, District Conservationist, Lancaster, has been designated Acting District Conservationist in the Mt. Vernon Field Office, Soil Conservation Service, effective March 15, 1976.

Kenneth York, who has been District Conservationist here for the past 4 years, has been transferred to Butler County where he will continue as District Conservationist at Morgantown.

Mr. Vanover will serve as Acting District Conservationist until a replacement for Mr. York has been selected.

Junior Long, Conservation Technician, Lancaster, will continue to assist landowners in both Garrard and Rockcastle Counties as in the past and Tommy Adams, CETA employee, will be available full time to help landowners with their conservation needs.

28 attended the luncheon. Luncheon held last Saturday at Brodhead School. Photos were taken to elderly as their best friend and the first of her to be held in different areas in the county and Saturday, a luncheon will be held at Mt. Vernon Elementary School. Food for Saturday's luncheon was furnished by the Brodhead Baptist and Christian Churches, the Quail Home-makers and the Brodhead Home-makers. Mrs. Janet Brasley is Director of the Senior Citizen program in Rockcastle County.

FRANKFORT WATCHLINE

Amid all the confusion, emotion and action, or inaction, over the Equal Rights Amendment to the U. S. Constitution, a bill slid through the House last week to ratify three far more controversial amendments to the Constitution.

The difference was that the controversy over the other three rose and somewhat subsided more than one hundred years ago.

The ratifications are moot, of course. The thirteenth amendment, abolishing slavery, the fourteenth amendment, guaranteeing citizenship and equality under the law, and the fifteenth, guaranteeing the vote regardless of race, have been the law of the land for many years.

While the laws may not have been particularly well enforced over the years, they were the law, nevertheless, and they were law without the approval of Kentucky.

There was not a "no" vote in the House last week. There were, however, quite a number of passes. The vote was 77-0, but not a voice was raised after Rep. Mac Street Kidd, D-Louisville, moved passage of the ratification to "raise the shadow" of the hundred years of neglect of these amendments by Kentucky.

One wonders if a hundred years from now the debate over the amendment declaring equality under the law regardless of sex will be as stilled as the debate over the three amendments ratified Friday.

Thursday, March 18, 1976

The answer is probably yes, but for some years to come the public is likely to remain aroused about the Equal Rights Amendment, and public arousal will no doubt mean legislative interest.

Last week, the Kentucky Senate defeated by a substantial majority a move to get a resolution rescinding Kentucky's 1972 ratification of the ERA to the floor for a vote.

A day later, the same Senate found a way to put ERA to a vote of the people, or at least that is one view of what they managed to do.

The Senate passed a bill to place an equal rights amendment to the state constitution on the ballot in 1977, with supporters of rescission saying that will be a test of voter feelings about the federal Equal Rights Amendment.

The move, assuming it eventually is approved by the House and actually gets on the ballot, raises some interesting possibilities.

For example, Kentucky could pass its own Equal Rights Amendment and the amendment to the federal constitution might never be ratified by enough states to become law.

Or, Kentucky could end up defeating an ERA for the state constitution and a similar one could go on the federal document, superseding any such action by Kentucky at any rate.

Or, both the federal and state amendments could fail.

While placing the amendment on the ballot for the voters was something the rescissionists wanted, it is not a move without some risks.

Some polls have shown Kentucky voters overwhelmingly favor the ERA, and although rescissionists don't believe those polls, the results are still there and potentially correct.

The greater risk, voiced by some of the women most ardently working for rescission, is that while the sentiment for rescission may hold the majority, the vote may not reflect that, and Concerned Women of Kentucky, the most active rescission group, has not yet decided whether or not to support the move to put a state ERA on the ballot.

Well those women know the political experience and frequent success of supporters of Equal Rights Amendment for women.

The rescissionists are not nearly as experienced at politicking and they see imminent danger of simply not being able to get enough of their number to the polls.

The final risk is that the move seems to play into the hands of the supporters of the Equal Rights Amendment to the U. S. Constitution.

Even if they cannot win in Kentucky, they still have every hope that the federal ERA will be ratified, and there is a possibility, at least, that ratification could come even before Kentuckians get to vote on the state ERA.

If that would come to pass, the question of ERA on the state constitution would be moot.

In the simplest terms, the supporters of ERA could have their pie and eat it too.

It would seem that at this point, especially with the crucial Senate vote last week, the Supporters of the ERA have the upper hand in Kentucky.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I am writing about the article you had in the paper about Gun Control. Please, friends, don't support the gun control law.

You outlaw guns and only outlaws will have guns. We need criminal control and added sentences and no parole for people who commit offenses with a gun. How much longer will America stand if we don't stand now and be counted before it is too late.

When the Supreme Court is allowed to break the constitution of the United States and take our children by force, busing, our homes by force housing and our rights to protect our family and home by gun control, you will have nothing to fight for and nothing to fight with.

Write your congressmen and your representatives and Governor Carroll. Let them know Americans will take a stand.

Thank you,
Mrs. Barbara Davenport

WHO'S HOME TONIGHT?

You can't tell who is home, but you sure know who isn't. A dark house is almost a sure sign no one is around. When you leave a light or two on, it's impossible to know whether or not your home is unoccupied. Most prowlers won't take the risk to find out.

Night lighting protects you in other ways, too. A well lit stairway is easier to navigate. Forgotten bicycles aren't tripped over. And you no longer have to feel your way from the garage to the house.

For about 3¢, you can leave a 100 watt light burning all night. A little difference in your electric bill, but a big difference in your family's safety and security.

We have a few good ideas on how to use outdoor light wisely. For recreation, safety and security. Stop in at any of our offices and we'll be glad to share them with you, at no charge.

MASTER COMMISSIONER'S SALE

ROCKCASTLE CIRCUIT COURT Civil Action File No. 3022

ROY DOAN PLAINTIFF VS: NOTICE OF SALE VS: Luther Cromer, Jr., Et Al., Defendants

By virtue of a judgement and order of sale of the Rockcastle Circuit Court entered on February 27, 1976, in the above styled action, a partition action, I shall offer for sale at the courthouse door, Main Street, Mt. Vernon, Kentucky, to the highest and best bidder, at public auction on the 20th day of March, 1976, at the hour of 10:30 A.M. EST, or thereabouts, the following described real property, to-wit:

Beginning at a corner of William Dyche and Dillingham said corner being at a white oak; thence westerly following George Sowder's line to an ash in the Adams heirs line to a stone corner in W.L. Wheat and Adams line; thence easterly following said W.L. Wheat line to the County Road; thence with said County Road to the point of beginning, containing eight (8) acres, more or less.

The property shall be sold to the highest bidder on terms of ten (10%) percent of the purchase price in cash at time of sale, the balance in six (6) months, with the purchaser being required to execute bond with surety thereon to be approved by the Master Commissioner, to secure the unpaid balance of the purchase price; said bond to bear interest at the rate of seven (7%) percent per annum from date of sale until paid. The purchaser shall have the privilege of paying all of the purchase price in cash, or paying said bond before maturity by paying the principal amount thereof together with all interest accrued thereon until the date of such payment.

With the Legislature
In Frankfort

By Rep. Harold DeMarcus

One area of legislation which concerns every Kentuckian resident is land use planning and zoning.

The theory being proposed in support of legislation for land use planning and zoning is that our land should be managed and conserved so as to assure our future needs. While the theory may be sound, the results of implementing such a theory may mean that probably will mean that our residents and taxpayers will be deprived of the "free use" of their land - land which you've worked hard for and for which you've paid dearly for.

Two such bills have already been introduced in the General Assembly, House Bill 90 and Senate Bill 14.

House Bill 30, which passed the Board on March 8, creates the Kentucky Department of Buildings, Housing and Construction within the Kentucky Department of Buildings, Housing and Construction. What this means is that the state will assume control over building and housing within the state.

House Bill 90 requires the Kentucky Board to do several things, the most important of which are:
(1) To administer regulatory legislation relating to buildings and construction.
What this means is that legislation will be drafted and implemented for the building industry. The problem here is that regulations are passed by small groups of individuals, and not by the General Assembly, but these regulations have the effect of law and apply to all of us.

(2) To adopt a mandatory uniform state building code which shall establish standards for the construction of all buildings in the state.
This will mean that the state will have complete control over the building industry. The Board will draft their code and then every building must comply with the requirements contained therein.

This legislation troubles me greatly. The code which the Board must draft will provide:
(1) That building plans must be approved by the appropriate state officials.

(2) That certain requirements must be met in every aspect of building which includes heating units, plumbing, electrical units, etc. - everyone and their business will be affected.

(3) That building materials must meet certain standards.

Furthermore, every local government (that is, your community) must hire a building inspector to enforce these provisions. And, the bill states that "no building shall be constructed in this state until an official issues a permit for such construction."

Now, what does all of this mean to you and to me? First of all, every time we want to build any type of structure for any purpose (farm dwellings and farm buildings are excluded from this bill if certain requirements are met) we must get a permit from the proper official and pay a fee for such permit. But, the most troublesome portion is the control by the state - the state board will tell me and you how we can build our buildings; what materials we can use in our buildings; and if we do not satisfy their regulations, then they can fine us a thousand dollars each day.

Rockcastle Recollections

By John Lair

People in Rockcastle County were shocked and amazed at the tornado-like winds which swept the county in 1971, leveling acre after acre of forest land and piling up a tangle of trees and brush not yet removed from many areas.

While these winds touched down in many different localities, wrecking houses and barns and doing considerable damage to the county over, they seem to largely have confined their fury to a stretch along the Rockcastle River.

Funing through the narrow valleys and severing the steep hillsides, they left a scene of destruction with which the inhabitants were entirely unfamiliar.

But in an intensive study of this area back to the coming of the first white man, in preparation of an account covering the history of Rockcastle County and surrounding community, we find that this was not the first time an event had taken place. In his journal, under date of May 9, 1750, Dr. Thomas Walker mentions reaching what he then called Lawless River (later named Rockcastle River), where he got among trees that he thought had been blown down about two years before. This downed timber was thick and tangled as to impede his progress and he and his party to detour around it. A few days later they encountered stretches of timber that had been burned over, leaving many dead trees.

Twenty-five years later, when Daniel Boone and his rind-cutting crew were laying out the road to Booneborough they were also impeded by blown-down timber. Their troubles began when they hit the Rockcastle River, which seems always to have been the chief center of attack of the tornado-like winds. Many pioneers have mentioned this difficult "breath country" in passing but Felix Walker, a member of Boone's rind-cutting crew, found it aggravating enough to go into more detail concerning it. He says that at Rockcastle River they started cutting their way through a country of about twenty miles entirely covered with dead brush, which they found a most difficult and laborious task.

Following Roundstone Creek, a tributary of Rockcastle River, they seem to have encountered the worst part of this downed timber at about where Houch Creek runs into Roundstone. The concentration of such impediment, they probably accounts for the name given the smaller tributary. Instead of proceeding north along the banks of the Roundstone, Boone and party turned sharply to the west, following up Cove Valley. A never failing spring near the site of the old Cove Schoolhouse was the location of an overnight camp by a party of Boone's men, according to a marker erected here by the DAR in 1915.

From this point Boone and his men crossed over Buckeye Ridge, coming down to Renfro Creek near the site of the old log Buckeye schoolhouse. Here the buffalo trail they were following either went down Renfro to its junction with Roundstone, or else turned to the left, to avoid obstructions, and went over the ridge by Green Hill, coming down to the Roundstone near the present graded school building. From this point on north to the Boone Gap exit into Madison County, they seemed able to follow the creek with a minimum of brush-cutting.

It is a well-established fact that animals, domestic as well as wild, have a faculty for following the line of least resistance traveling between two given points. They have a tendency to avoid grades and, where possible, to travel in a straight line. This is still demonstrated today by the paths followed by cattle and hogs across the fields and pastures of surrounding farms.

With this fact in mind, it is customary for historians to look over certain stretches of country and form very accurate ideas of the paths of the pioneers into Kentucky, being aware that in most cases they were following paths laid down by generations of wandering Indians and traveling buffalo and other game. With this principle in view, it is hard to look over the territory Boone traveled without being struck by the fact that in some particular instances the direction he took seemed at direct variance with the path an animal would have laid down. Suddenly we find him leaving a level watercourse and turning abruptly across a hill, when it does not seem that he even saved distance by going the longer way.

There may have come upon an explanation for this in our study of the blown-down timber that seem to have costed this part of the country a fortune. An animal trail laid out in the traditional way and followed for many years might suddenly become completely blocked by fallen timber, so that the animal might be forced to take a new path, a detour around an obstruction of hundreds of acres, which will have to be followed for many years, or until the downed timber and brush has rotted away. I have never seen this theory advanced before, but it seems reasonable to entertain it, especially since there are several instances in which Boone made changes in the direction he was following without any apparent reason for doing so. The same is true of the route taken by Skages Trail immediately after crossing Rockcastle River, when it turned abruptly up the hillside to the north instead of joining the creek nearer its confluence with the Rockcastle River.

Kentucky Afield

By Hope Carlson Dept. of Fish and Wildlife

Not too many years ago, the typical fishing boat was a simple affair, powered by a small outboard and capable of only fairly slow speeds. But today, more and more fishermen are going to larger, faster boats with high horsepower motors, pedestal seats and other features which make fishing more enjoyable and efficient.

But these modern fishing boats can also be more dangerous. It's not that the rigs themselves are unsafe, but rather that the increased speed and power increases the potential for an accident if the boat is misused.

So, with some fine spring fishing just around the corner, now would be a good time to review some of the principles of safe boating. After all, you don't want to drown yourself and miss the crappie run.

First, don't get carried away by the current trend toward more and more power. If you must hang 200 horses over the transom, make sure that the boat is designed to handle that size motor. The safest practice, according to Doug Shoulters, Director of the Water Enforcement Division of the Kentucky Department of Transportation, is to follow the boat manufacturer's recommendations for maximum motor size. An overpowered boat, Shoulters says, causes loss of freeboard and erratic handling, greatly increasing the possibility of accidents.

Pedestal seats are comfortable and convenient for fishing, but both dangerous and illegal for running at speed. According to state law, boat passengers must be seated at or below the level of the gunwale while the boat is underway. This prohibition includes not only using pedestal seats, but also sitting on the gunwale, transom, the back of a regular seat or in any other dangerous position.

Stick steering is inherently more dangerous than a steering wheel. Shoulters says, "The boat operator, if he should lose his balance, will instinctively try to regain it by pulling on the steering control, possibly throwing the boat into a sharp turn and catapulting the operator into the water. Although stick steering is not illegal unless used in conjunction with a seat which extends beyond the gunwale of the boat, Shoulters feels that a wheel gives the operator much better control of the boat.

A "kill switch" although not required by law, is a recommended safety device on all boats, Shoulters says. This device, which plugs into the ignition system of the boat, will immediately shut off the engine should the operator be thrown from the boat.

With no one at the controls, any outboard powered boat will run in light circles, sometimes striking those who have been thrown overboard. Thus, the addition of a kill switch could turn a possibly fatal accident into merely a good dunking.

And, speaking of dunkings, a personal flotation device (PFD)—that's the official term for a life preserver these days—won't do much good if it's in the boat and you're in the water.

Wearing the PFD is particularly important in the early spring before the water warms up. In 50 degree water, even the strongest swimmer cannot last for more than a few minutes before the effects of the cold water start weakening him. And the added bulk of cool-weather garments presents another handicap to the person thrown overboard. The law requires one coast guard-approved PFD for each person on board. For motor boats 16 feet long or longer, the PFD must be the wearable type and boats of this size must also carry one throwable PFD.

Another thing to watch, particularly on the larger lakes, is the weather. High winds and waves can be a problem on any body of water, but the hazards are particularly acute on the "Inland" lakes in western Kentucky. Fishermen, particularly those in smaller boats, need to watch out for commercial pleasure boat traffic on the large lakes. Remember too that there aren't many people on the lakes early in the spring, and help may not be as available as during the more crowded summer months. So, it's a good idea to tell a family member or the dock operator the general area where you'll be fishing and the time you expect to return. This could prevent a chilly night on the water in case of motor failure or other trouble.

And, there's one other safety device which belongs on every fishing trip—just good of fashioned common sense. Know your own capabilities and those of your equipment, don't take unnecessary risks and think safety.

The Week at Livingston

By Mrs. Eva Black

Miss Genette Burdine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Burdine of Corbin and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Burdine, has been chosen to take an examination in science for a four year scholarship at the University of Kentucky in April. Genette, a student at the Simon Kenton High School, along with seven other students took the examination and she and one other girl tied. Genette won the tie-breaking test.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Webb attended a family dinner at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Burke, at Broodhead Sunday.

Mrs. Virginia Ball Mulahey and granddaughter, Rebecca of Nicholasville, visited Mrs. Eva Black last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Fordyce and four children of Louisville visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Fordyce over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Kitchen of Elizabethtown, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Taylor and sons of Richmond, Ky. and Mr. and Mrs. Basil Moore visited Mrs. Effie Thomas over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Waddle and children of Louisville visited their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Waddle and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis McFarquhar of Darlene over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Barrier of Hendersonville, Tennessee spent the week end with her mother, Mrs. Lula McClure.

Mrs. Jerry Howard and two sons, Jeffrey and Kim of Louisville, spent the week end with her mother, Mrs. Carrie Loudermilk.

Mrs. Martha Rankin of Cynthiana and daughter, Mrs. Fred Landrum of Robinson, Ky. visited Mrs. Eva Black one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Taylor and sons of Richmond, Ky. visited Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Taylor over the week end.

Mrs. Phillip Argentrich, who underwent surgery at a Richmond Hospital recently, is improving nicely.

Mrs. Carrie Loudermilk spent part of last week with her son, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Loudermilk, Mark and Ryan of Mt. Vernon.

BRIDGING THE GAP
—Bill West, paroled in December, 1974, after serving a sentence at Kentucky State Reformatory, LaGrange, knows what it's like to be an ex-offender looking for a new life. That's why he's natural for his job with the Department for Human Resources PROJECT PROVE (Placement and Rehabilitation of Offenders through Vocational Experience). Much of his time is spent phoning employers to help find jobs as he does here. He bridges the gap between the inside and the outside for many Kentuckians. The program is coordinated by DHR's Bureau for Manpower Services.

Down on the Farm

It almost Spring and fields of grass and small grain are becoming green, along with the trees and bushes putting forth. The flowering Dogwood and Redbuds and other flowers are showing the beauty of God's making for us to enjoy. But, what about man's part? Are we doing anything to add to the wonders of Nature?

As I travel over our country, I see many beautiful things to admire, but I also see something that makes me heart-sick and that is the trash, garbage, cans, bottles, junk cars, papers and just about anything you can think of on our roadsides slowly working its way into our fields. This is an outrage, an eyesore, a disgrace to the good people of Rockcastle County.

What do our tourists think of this littering - we depend on tourists for a good portion of our income in the county. What do industrial prospects who might want to locate here think of this display of trash? I know from conversations with them - they would look further down the road for a cleaner place to locate.

I would like to urge each and every person in Rockcastle County to think many times before dumping trash or throwing cans, bottles and paper from your car or truck.

We now have containers located in areas convenient to every home in Rockcastle County. Please let each and everyone of us use them in the right way by putting trash inside the boxes and not throwing it beside them.

I would ask all citizens interested in making Rockcastle County a beautiful place to live and drive in to help in carrying this out by reporting anyone who is dumping or littering to the County Judge so we might enjoy the beauty and fresh air Down on the Farm.

Kentucky's coal production for the first half of 1975 ran one-half million tons above the comparable period last year. Through June, Kentucky production totaled 10,600,000 tons. Of that, eastern Kentucky produced 40,790,000 tons and western Kentucky 29,810,000 tons.

No county in the nation produces more coal than Muhlenberg - 21,897,984 tons last year.

The beautification office in the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection reports that a research project sponsored by Keep America Beautiful, Inc., on litter control indicates that people tend to litter where litter has already accumulated, where they feel no sense of ownership for the area and where they believe someone else will clean up after them.

OSHA Pamphlet Available

"Some Nuts and Bolts Facts," a pamphlet answering 27 questions frequently asked about the state's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) program, has been prepared by the Kentucky Department of Labor.

Labor Commissioner James R. Yocum noted that virtually all employers and employees are required to follow OSHA regulations, adding, "This pamphlet has been compiled in response to the many questions handled by the department concerning these requirements."

In scanning Kentucky's job-safety program, the pamphlet explains that OSHA permits several types of inspections, including random, those that result from an employer's complaint and those cases in which imminent danger is suspected. The identity of a worker reporting an OSHA violation will not be reported to the employer if that person reports anonymously.

Investigations are also made of workplaces where a death or "catastrophe" has occurred in which five or more people are hospitalized from an injury or illness.

Current "target industries" in Kentucky include building construction, general construction, the lumber and wood products trade, the meat products trade, and roofing and sheet metal construction. These businesses are selected on the basis of injury frequency and are thus subject to change, Yocum said.

"Some Nuts and Bolts Facts" is available, free of charge, upon request from the Kentucky Department of Labor, OSHA* Division of Education, FINAL CLEARANCE OF WINTER MERCHANDISE INCLUDING 1/2 PRICE LADIES' JEANS...

Smith T. Powell, far left, of Stanford, president of the Kentucky Beef Association, looks on as Gov. Julian Carroll signs a bill allowing cattlemen of Kentucky to conduct a referendum concerning whether or not to assess themselves for the purpose of creating a fund for the promotion of the Kentucky Cattle Industry.

Referendum Bill Signed By Governor Carroll

Signing of the bill to allow cattlemen of Kentucky to conduct a referendum concerning whether or not to assess themselves on cattle sold for the purpose of creating a fund for the promotion of the Kentucky Cattle Industry, was a big step forward according to officials of the Kentucky

Beef Cattle Association. Mechanics for the conducting of the referendum are now being developed by the State Department of Agriculture and the Cattlemen's Association.

This enabling legislation, passed 89 to 3 by the House of Representatives and unanimously by the Senate, will become law 60 days after adjournment of the legislature. It is anticipated that this will allow the referendum to be conducted the latter part of July or early August.

A thorough educational program will be conducted in every county of the state in order that all cattle producers may understand the provisions of the program. In general the program allows 10 cents per animal sold to be checked off and sent to the state association. Any producer objecting can have his 10 cents refunded by writing to the sponsoring association.

A portion of the monies collected will be sent to the National Livestock and Meat Board Beef Industry Council for national promotion of research and marketing of beef. A smaller portion, amount to be announced before referendum, will go to the American National Cattlemen's Association. The remaining amount is to be used in Kentucky to promote the entire beef industry program through research, production, education, marketing, consumer education, etc. Full details of the program will be explained at county meetings through the press, radio and T. V.

LEGISLATIVE ROUNDUP BY THE LEGISLATIVE RESEARCH COMMISSION STAFF

An attempt to rescind Kentucky's ratification of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) to the U. S. Constitution appeared dead for this session when an effort to force a recision resolution out of committee failed in the Senate last week.

The vote was 24-14 against taking House Joint Resolution 7 away from the Senate Committee on Elections and Constitutional Amendments, where lawmakers who support the ERA kept it bottled up.

At week's end, however, the Senate voted to attach the Equal Rights Amendment to Kentucky's Constitution, thereby setting the stage for a statewide referendum on the issue a year from this November.

Two bills to deal with the growing medical malpractice insurance crisis passed in the Senate and subsequently were approved by committee in the House.

Senate Bill 248, approved 37-0, would establish a joint underwriting association if insurance companies no longer provided malpractice coverage.

Gov. Julian Carroll's coal county development package sailed through the House and was expected to do likewise in the Senate. The package includes bills to establish a fund to finance capital construction in coal counties, a separate fund to finance capital projects in area development districts, a third fund to pay for road projects in coal producing counties, and authority for bonds to be sold to pay for coal road improvements.

The House also passed, 88-3, House

Bill 877, to increase the coal severance tax from 4 to 4.5 percent with a minimum of 50, rather than 30, cents per ton.

The House approved House Bill 288 to allow the General Assembly to meet any 60 days during even-numbered years, rather than for 60 consecutive days, excluding Sundays and holidays.

Alice Lloyd College Knott County

Alice Lloyd College, the outgrowth of one woman's determination to educate boys and girls of the Eastern Kentucky highlands, has reached far beyond the aspirations of its founder, Alice Goddes Lloyd.

Bold departures from traditional educational systems took place in the early 1970s with both facilities and program, yet the basic principles and purposes have not changed from the beginning.

Alice Lloyd established the school with "the primary purpose of offering Appalachian students an opportunity to develop purposes and capacities for leadership and citizenship, especially in service to mankind."

Perhaps the most important factor stressed by the founder was individual attention. The current academic calendar combines three principles — personal counseling, small class units and independent effort.

A program of experimental education allows students to take jobs away from the campus, but related to their academic studies at the college. Intensive guidance and counseling are given each student before job placement. The program is designed to introduce the students to vocations and new cultural and social experiences.

The geographical location, socio-economic situation and academic program at Alice Lloyd College make study here a worthwhile experience for students at colleges in other regions of Kentucky and neighboring states. Appalachian semester is a program through which visiting scholars can study regional sociology, geology, biology or political science, or study in courses which parallel offerings at their home institutions.

Alice Lloyd College at Pippa Passes, Kentucky, in the isolated hills of Knott County, has been described as "a light unto the mountains for over fifty years."

Expression of Thanks
 The family of Ernest Robinson wishes to express their sincere appreciation to all the dear people who showed their genuine kindness and sympathy at the death of our husband and father.

A special thanks to Dr. Arvin for his kind attention through all these months, to the entire staff of the Rockcastle County Hospital and the Home Health Service.

There are no adjectives to express our feelings to the wonderful neighbors for every act of kindness, the floral tributes, food brought and sent to the house, their calls and most of all, their prayers.

We will long remember the beautiful messages brought in honor of Dad, by Rev. Lawrence Prewitt and Bro. John Pruitt.

We admire the gracious and kindhearted way Mrs. Lawrence's Funeral Home conducted everything pertaining to the funeral and a special thanks to Allen's Florist for remaining open after hours in order to make up the funeral flowers. Again, a BIG THANK YOU to all of you at this difficult time.

Mrs. Lucretia Robinson and Sons and Daughters

STRENGTHEN YOUR Good dollar...

A Consumer Tip from Extension Specialists at the UK College of Agriculture

It is really worth the time and effort to do a lot of figuring and cost comparing just to save a few pennies on a food item? Those pennies saved add up to a considerable sum over a period of time, according to UK Extension foods specialists. For example, cost studies have shown that you can use inexpensive fruits and vegetables and spend only about half as much a week as would be spent if you bought more costly and out-of-season fruits and vegetables for family meals.
