Brothers and Sisters

In Memory of Clarence Tussey who departed this life September 10, 1976.

Dear Husband,
Years of time go on but I still don't know the pain you may have had before the Angels took you away.
No one knows the heartache, only those who have lost a loving husband. The vacant chair reveals the love, the voice and smile of a loving husband who once sat there, and the flowers will lay on your grave and decay, but the love we have for you will never fade away and some day we will meet you in a better world to part never more.

Sadly Missed By
Wife and Husband

CARD OF THANKS
Our heartfelt thanks to all our friends and neighbors, the coal truck drivers, Sheriff Manuel Shepherd and others for their support and help in searching for our wandering son last Wednesday, And to the Rescue Squad for being prepared to help.

The district is composed of Pulaski and Rockcastle counties.

The project had received a favorable recommendation from the Kentucky Crime Commission during its February meeting in Lexington and was submitted to the Governor for final approval.

Local Authorities Apprehend Bank Robbers

Two men, charged with bank robbery in Alabama, were apprehended near here early last Wednesday morning after being spotted on the Interstate by State Trooper Greg Ennis and City Policeman John Gridler.

According to Trooper Ennis, the men were involved with two other men in a bank robbery in Alabama about a month ago. No charges were placed against any of the men until Monday a week ago when one of them was arrested. The other two, hearing about it, fled the state, kidnapping a man in a pick-up truck and going to Tennessee. In Kingsport, Tennessee, the first man, having been released, unharmed, the men kidnapped another man at gunpoint while the man was waiting for a red light. They forced this man to drive them to the outskirts of Corbin where they loaded him in the trunk of his car and, about 11:45 p.m. Tuesday night, hired a Yellow Cab to drive them to Richmond.

About 12:10 a.m. Wednesday morning, Trooper Ennis received a call from State Police headquarters asking him to be on the lookout for a possible kidnapping of a Yellow Cab driver. Ennis obtained the assistance of City Patrolman John Gridler and they began patrolling the Interstate south of Mt. Vernon in the southbound lane. Trooper Ennis used his spotlight on the northbound lane so that Gridler could check out the make of oncoming cars. At the 54 mile marker, Trooper Ennis said they spotted a 1974 Chevrolet fitting the description of the cab and they crossed over to the northbound lane and fell in behind the car which had Yellow Cab written across the rear. Ennis immediately radioed for assistance - a call picked up by off-duty Trooper Jack Lawless who also came to Ennis' aid - and by the time the men reached the Madison County line, there were three State Police cars waiting with a roadblock in addition to Trooper Ennis and Lawless behind the cab. The men were taken into custody there and arraigned in Federal Court in Lexington. Federal authorities returned the men to Alabama to face bank robbery and kidnapping charges among others.

DENNY RECEIVES DAMAGES

A Rockcastle Circuit Court Jury awarded $26,801.96 in damages to Roger Denny this week as a result of an auto accident in June of 1976 in which Mr. Denny's auto was struck from behind by State Policeman Harold Mullins on U. S. 25 in Mt. Vernon.

Mr. Denny was awarded $4,921.96 for damage to his automobile and medical expense; $10,400 for pain and suffering and $7,640 for future loss of work.

ABNEY CHILD FOUND SAFE

A frantic search by family, neighbors, coal truck drivers and Sheriff Manuel Shephers, last Saturday, was brought to a happy ending when a four-year-old boy, Chad Abney, returned to his grandparents' home at Buffalo and told his parents that he had been taking a nap in the woods.

The child's mother, Mrs. Charles Abney of Mt. Vernon, said that her son had been playing outside at about 11:50 a.m. when she checked on him and was gone from the yard about 12:10 p.m. A cab brought several searchers to the scene and the search went on four about two-and-one-half hours until Chad decided to return home. He was unharmed.

Mr. and Mrs. Abney expressed their thanks to everyone who joined in the, thankfully, fruitless search including the Rockcastle County Rescue Squad who were preparing to join in the search for the little boy.

BI-CENTENNIAL CANTATA TO BE PRESENTED APRIL 4TH

A Bi-Centennial Cantata, entitled "I Love America" will be presented by the Rockcastle County High School Chorus, under the direction of Mrs. Johnny Wilcox, on Sunday afternoon, April 4th (Cont. 'd to P-4)

County To Receive More Money From Coal Severance Tax

Depending on the final figures in the Governor's Economic Development Plan for 1976-78, Rockcastle County stands to fare quite well from funds collected under the state coal severance tax.

This plan, which increases the amount of tax collected and returned to the coal counties, takes place of any plan which individual counties might have for taxing industries in the county and, in fact, prohibits the collecting of the tax

Flu Affecting School Attendance

According to Charles B. Parson, Superintendent of Schools, the flu virus has been waging its attack against both students and teachers over the past two or three weeks.

Mr. Parsons said that attendance has been about 6 percent below normal for several days. Normal attendance is around 94 percent and during the flu epidemic, the percentage has dropped to around 88 percent. However, at this time attendance at some schools has improved, Mr. Parsons said.

Mr. Parsons also said that with the epidemic spread over such a long period of time, it did not seem feasible to close schools especially considering the fact that schools are already 12 days behind schedule as a result of sick road conditions.

School officials are hopeful that attendance can be above normal for the balance of the school year since epidemics such as this hurts both the learning-teaching process and financially. The school system loses about $4.25 in state revenue for each day a child misses school. And, even though several students may be absent on a given day, the high cost of operation continues - salaries must be paid, buses must run, buildings must be heated, etc.

Baptist Churches To Observe Bi-Centennial

A Prayer Breakfast Saturday morning, March 27th at 8:30 a.m. will kick off the Bi-Centennial Observance of Baptist Churches in the county. Attending the breakfast will be representatives from all the Baptist Churches and special guest speaker will be Rev. Bob Jones, State Director of Missions.

The Baptist Association will observe the Bi-Centennial in several ways this year including an all-day preaching and special singing on the courthouse grounds on Saturday, April 10th beginning at 10 a.m. This will be preceded by another Prayer Breakfast at the Holiday Family Restaurant at which Rev. Calvin Fields, State Director for the Royal Ambassadors, will be the guest speaker.

Tentative plans also call for special non-denominational services July 4th, possibly at the high school. More information on this will be given at a later date.

VFW Trap Shoot Is Sunday, March 28th

There will be a Trap Shoot, sponsored by the VFW Post 6938, held Sunday, March 28th at the residence of Donnie Lewis on Winding Blade Road at East Bernards.

The shoot will begin at 9 a.m. and everyone is welcome.

Carter For President

A Jimmy Carter organizational meeting and rally will be held for 5th District Democrats Thursday night, March 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the Lake Cumberland State park lodge.

Glenn Wilcox, President of Henderson State Bank and member of the Kentucky Center for President Steering Committee will be on hand to assist 5th District Democrats in organizing their district for the May primary.

All Democrats interested in working in the Carter campaign are urged to attend.

just as Rockcastle was ready to implement their own tax plan.

According to preliminary figures in the governor's plan, Rockcastle will receive about $2,760 in 1976-77 and $2,990 in 1977-78 for road work. In the past, Rockcastle has received $2,100 per year under this fund and the money could not be used to repair roads - a limitation lifted under the new plan. These new monies are in addition to $5,449 already accrued in Rockcastle's share of the fund and any or all of these monies may be expended by the Fiscal Court on road repairs in the county upon approval of Frankfort. Actual payment for projects will be made through Frankfort.

In the flow-through program portion of the plan, Rockcastle will receive about $48,000 for 1976-77 and a like amount for the next year for use in such areas as industrial site development, recreation, etc.

In order to obtain the use of this money, a five-man development committee must be set-up to approve projects and these will, hopefully, in turn be approved in Frankfort and paid for through Frankfort. Members of the committee will be the County Judge, the Mayor of the principal city in the county, a member selected by the School Board and two members appointed by the governor.

Of course, at this writing, the bill has not been signed into law by the governor, although it is expected to be with no trouble, and therefore, guidelines as to its use have not actually been written.

Other monies from the plan in which the county might share, include approximately $374,000 allocated to the Cumberland Valley Area Development District, a district of which Rockcastle County is a member, in each of the next two years. This money may, in fact, be used as matching money for projects in any of the eight counties with the approval of all the counties.

Also included in the program is about $30,000 in additional monies for the school system.

House GOP Casts Vote For Rep. DeMarcus

(Reprinted from the Ashland Daily Independent issue of March 19, 1976)

By Maria Braden Associated Press Writer

Kentucky House republicans have cast a vote of confidence for House Minority Leader Harold DeMarcus after an effort failed to oust the Lincoln and Rockcastle County legislator from his political post.

DeMarcus' delivery of a poetic satire on the House floor Wednesday on House Majority Leader Bobby Richardson's political ancestry prompted the ouster move.

Using Edgar Allen Poe's "The Raven" as his literary base, DeMarcus recited the tale of how Richardson - a strong Democrat - was a Johnny-come-lately to his party's ranks and actually comes from a solid GOP background.

Now in his fourth term as Minority Leader, DeMarcus made his remarks in jest, but several Republicans used the speech to criticize him.

A special Republican caucus was held during the legislative session and Rep. Ray Overstreet, R-Liberty, one of the leaders of the move to oust DeMarcus, tried to close the meeting to the press. But only five of the 17 present supported Overstreet's effort.

Overstreet told his colleagues he "didn't mind getting the knife," but felt "Harold gave Bobby the knife to stick me with."

He was apparently referring to Richardson's response, in which he recited off a series of Democratic accomplishments over the years.

But the Liberty Republican backed off from making any motion to oust the Minority Leader.

Only one other Republican criticized DeMarcus and the others came to his defense.

Perhaps the strongest defense was made by Rep. Lavey Floyd, R-Poynter, who said he didn't think "anything could hurt us worse than last year's election."

If you'll unite and stop this back-biting, you'll build the Republican Party, Floyd said.

Rep. John Ackerson, a first term legislator from Fern Creek, said the fault did not lie with DeMarcus, who had the courage to stand up and speak, but with those who criticized him but did not stand to defend their own party.

Cedar Rapids Sets Dues For Coming Year

At a stockholders' meeting of the Cedar Rapids Recreation Center Tuesday night, dues for the coming year were set for regular members - single members, out-of-county members and swimming and golf members.

Jerry Hamm, president, said that the $150 stock fee will be waived this year for new members, who will have to pay a $200 membership fee for the year. Single memberships will be $115 while out-of-county people wishing to belong will have to pay $125. Any of the above memberships purchased will guarantee full use of the club's facilities.

The club also decided to reinstate swimming memberships at a cost of $100 each with no usage fee while golf memberships will be sold for $50 plus greens.

Memberships sold on this basis will be limited and anyone desiring to join or purchase swim or golf memberships may do so by contacting Mr. Hamm at Jerry's Tire Center or by going to the Bank of Mt. Vernon.

Mrs. Cheryl Witt, Extension Agent for Home Economics for Rockcastle County, is presenting a certificate of merit from Mrs. Donna Manning, President of the Henderson-Triad Association of Extension Home Economists, for having the best entry in the circular newsletter category in state competition. FRANKFORT WATCHLINE

If the 1976 General Assembly can be summed up in a phrase, it would be that never has a governor so controlled a legislature.

Even in a state where executive control of the legislative branch is ordained by the Constitution, it is generally conceded that Gov. Julian Carroll has been nothing "short of awesome."

It began with his hand-picking the leadership and ended three and a half months later with the administration's malpractice legislation getting approval on the last day.

In between, about the only thing that changed was that Carroll and his crew ceased denying influence and control and began openly admitting it.

And why not? No one believed he had taken hands off the leadership race, and as the legislature progressed, such details would have become harder and harder to believe.

Several reasons account for Carroll's influence. First of all, Carroll was, himself, a skilled legislator. He often found it difficult to manage House of Representatives and, as lieutenant governor, the preceding officer over two sessions and a special session in the Senate.

Carroll gained something more than experience from his time in the legislative branch: friends, lots of them.

The fact that Carroll had a year in office before his first legislature gave him a distinct advantage as well.

For most governors, their first legislative session comes only a month after they take office, leaving the new executive faced with building up his own staff and developing a budget and getting ready for the legislature all at the same time.

By the time this legislature began, Carroll had in operation a smooth running administrative system, the complexities of state government well in hand.

Then there was Carroll's landslide victory in November following his easy primary campaign for the office.

Combining his record victory margin with, for the first time in many years, a substantially unified Democratic party, Carroll had the absolute respect of most Democrats and even some of the Republicans, that latter group decimated in the elections by the Carroll machine.

But beyond all that, as this column has commented on so many times before, is the usual reluctance of legislators in Kentucky to stand up and fight for independence.

For all his talk, Carroll did little to encourage legislative independence, but, then, why should he? From the beginning of the session on to its end, in fact, from the December races for the leadership positions, Carroll was overwhelmed by legislators coming to him to vote. "Who do you want? How should I vote? Should I introduce this bill? Should this bill be killed?"

Should Carroll and his leaders refused answers to those questions? Should they have turned over the control to legislators who did not want the control?

The answer is obvious. If past patterns hold true, Carroll's strength will diminish somewhat during his second regular session.

It would, however, take a tremendous slackening of power before Carroll's second session would drop to the par of previous governors.

There is yet a further aspect to Carroll's control over this session of the General Assembly.

Out of some bruised egos within the General Assembly, few groups are finding things to complain about. While his control was awesome, so was the magnitude of what was accomplished, in the view of many observers.

Enacted was the broadest consumer package ever, as severance tax return package that surprised even some of the most militant coal county legislators, upgrading of teacher salaries, and more money to education in general, to name but a few.

Not everyone was satisfied, but hardly anyone went away empty handed. As a legislator, Carroll had a reputation for being a good compromiser, an attribute that appears not to have lessened particularly since he shifted roles.

TAXPAYERS CAUTIONED TO USE CORRECT TAX TABLES

Significant numbers of taxpayers are making errors in their 1975 income tax returns by failing to follow a tax table which continues to a subsequent page, according to Internal Revenue Service.

IRS District Director Paul Niederecker for Kentucky, said the problem involves taxpayers using the tax tables provided for persons with incomes under $15,000 who do not itemize deductions. Apparently, these persons are overlooking the fact that a tax table may continue to another page.

For example, in the tax tables included in the 1975 Form 1040-A Instructions most of tax table 4 appears on page 12, but the last part of table 4 appears on page 13 along with all of table 5. A taxpayer using table 4 with an income between $14,550 and $15,000 would have to consult the top of page 13 to determine his/her tax.

"In skipping to the next page," said Niederecker, "some taxpayers are overlooking the continuation of the same tax table and are figuring their tax liability from the next tax table, resulting in an incorrect tax."

When an error is discovered, the IRS must contact the individual which, in turn, causes processing delays and unnecessary inconvenience to the taxpayer.

The IRS cautions taxpayers to carefully follow the tax tables to insure the correct tax is determined.

The ozone shield that protects the earth from harmful solar radiation has thinned slightly over the United States and Great Britain during the last four years. But federal scientists believe that decrease may be caused by nature - not man. Researchers with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration suggest that the two per cent decrease in ozone between 1970 and 1974 might be from solar activity, rather than the introduction of man-made fluorocarbons and nitrogen oxides into the atmosphere.

L&N - C&O Depot
Winchester, Kentucky

For commerce as well as travel, the waterways and trails were the first (and for many years the only) travel routes in Kentucky. The eastern third of the state was almost completely cut off and isolated.

As trade developed, the most prosperous towns were located along the Ohio River: Limestone (Maysville), the Falls (Louisville), Yellowbanks (Owensboro) plus others along the river or in some cases its navigable tributaries.

The railroads made great pattern changes in Kentucky's travel routes, for both trade and settling. The first railroad west of the Alleghenies was the Lexington & Ohio, now a part of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. It was chartered in 1830 and ran from Lexington to Frankfort. The L & N secured a charter in 1850 for a route between the two cities designated by its name.

Following the Civil War, railroads became an obsession with towns over Kentucky. Some of the lines built in the flush era of railroad fever have been abandoned and their names forgotten. The new transportation system reached virtually every part of the state, and depots were established at every town or village along the line. Some of these were the most elaborately designed buildings possible for their utilitarian purpose, others were simple structures which represented the style and feeling of the country folk they served.

Some structures were lavish (typical of their time) because they were a frontispiece for the town to any visitor or newcomer. By the 1920s there were more than 3,500 miles of track in Kentucky, owned and operated by more than twenty Class I railroads.

With the decline of the railroads, most of the depots were abandoned or continued in use strictly for office and freight stations.

The drawing is the beautiful L&N - C&O passenger station at Winchester.

With the Legislature In Frankfort

By Rep. Harold DeMarcus

Have you received any doctor or hospital bills in the mail lately? Were you unhappy and disillusioned at their amounts?

I can remember a few years ago when doctors' bills were four or five dollars for an office call. Now, an office call is eight, ten or twelve dollars per visit, even double that of a few years ago.

I can imagine that most of you, like myself, have complained and blamed these increases on greedy doctors and hospitals.

But, little do people realize that these rapid increases are not the result of greedy doctors or hospitals raising their fees. The simple plain truth is that the doctors' bills and hospital bills had to be raised in order to permit the doctors and the hospitals to stay open and serve our communities.

What has greatly contributed to this situation is something that very few people understand - medical malpractice insurance premiums. But, let me state that the increase in medical malpractice insurance premiums is not the sole cause of the increased fees. Inflation, which has hit us all, has also hit the doctors and hospitals - their costs of operating have soared; equipment, medicines, personnel etc., etc. have all increased. Advanced technology has added to the increase as equipment becomes more advanced and more expensive. But, let me assure you that medical malpractice premiums do make up a substantial portion of these increased costs.

Medical malpractice insurance is professional liability insurance which protects a health care professional (that is, doctors and hospitals) against liability (that is, law suit) for improper or negligent treatment of a patient. No doctor can practice and no hospital can operate without this insurance - it's their only protection against going bankrupt or in debt to defend and/or pay a claim brought against them for improper treatment.

The number of malpractice suits filed in 1974 was 70 percent higher than in 1973, and the average size of the awards has increased 20 percent. Even though the patient is unsuccessful in nearly 90 percent of all such suits, it usually does not cost the patient anything to sue as most of these malpractice suits are covered by a contingent fee arrangement with the attorney (that is, the attorney will get paid only if the patient wins the suit). But, the doctor or hospital must defend this suit, and such defense costs at an average of $15,000 every time regardless of whether the suit ever goes to trial.

As a result, the situation is that doctors and hospitals must have this insurance to protect themselves - pay for the defense to such a suit and pay for any awards made to the patient's suit is successful. Insurance companies provide the insurance coverage, but with the increase in lawsuits against doctors and hospitals, they have to charge high insurance premiums in order to provide the necessary coverage for doctors and hospitals. As the number of lawsuits increase, so do the premiums - with the result that premiums have increased by as much as 100 percent since 1973 and 1974 (some doctors pay as much as $10,000 to $15,000 a year for coverage).

Since the insurance premiums must increase to provide the needed coverage the doctors and hospitals must also increase their fees in order to pay these high premiums. The doctors and hospitals have only one place to get their much needed increased fees - from me and from you.

So, it's ironic that the people who are paying these added costs of doctors and hospitals are the very same people who have contributed to the need for the increase (that is, by filing suits which result in increased premiums for insurance coverage).

The result of this situation is that doctors are doing several things to avoid liability.

(1) Some doctors will practice "defensive medicine" in an effort to guard against suits by using every possible measure to insure that they do not treat a patient improperly - additional tests and treatments as additional doctor visits are used to assure the doctor that proper treatment is being used (tests and treatments which he does not pay for).

(2) Some doctors are limiting their practice to avoid the high risk areas of medicine, and some doctors are even retiring early to protect themselves.

The final result of all of this is that a shortage could develop in the area of health care treatment.

The situation in Kentucky is not yet at crisis proportions, but unless something does now, Kentucky will be unable to get young doctors and new hospitals; and other doctors and hospitals now in Kentucky could go to rest in the final days of the single most time-consuming issue of the session, the proposed rescission of Kentucky's Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) ratification.

The House Committee on Election and Constitutional Amendments made a final attempt at rescission when it amended a Senate bill calling for a state ERA. Action on the bill by the full House, however, required a suspension of the rules, which a majority of the members voted not to grant, and so the issue is dead.

Other bills which died in the last week included one to license physician assistants for the first time in Kentucky; another to establish a Land Use Coordination Council to review local land use plans and set priorities for spend state and federal land use planning funds; and a "professional negotiations" bill for public school teachers, requiring school boards to negotiate over wages and working conditions.

The most emotional defeat came on the last day when the lawmakers failed to accept an amendment by Rep. Glenn Freeman, D-Cumberland, to add safety inspectors to deep coal mines. Freeman offered the amendment to a bill to regulate mine blasters following the recent deaths of 29 miners in eastern Kentucky.

The sponsor wept as he left the House chamber after the amendments were rejected. His proposal is expected to be studied in the next several months, however, and be reconsidered at a forthcoming special session this year.

Key bills passed in the final week included:

—Senate Bill 208, to increase the standard state income tax deduction, provide additional tax credits for the elderly and blind, increase inheritance tax deductions for surviving spouses and provide several exemptions from the state sales tax.

—SB 68, to compensate crime victims up to $15,000 for lost wages and medical expenses.

House Bill 138, to guarantee public access to virtually all government records not specifically closed by law.

—HB 4, to introduce the concept of "power equalization" in public school financing.

—HB 842, to stagger terms of Public Service Commission members and provide for improvements in the commission's staff.

—SB 1, to base farm land tax assessment partly on a property's income producing capability.

—HB 143, to make a victim's reputation and sexual history inadmissible as evidence in a rape case without a judge's approval.

—HB 201, to have a statewide referendum in November, 1977, on whether Kentucky should have a constitutional convention.

—HB 602, to bring state deep mine safety laws into conformity with federal

The General Assembly also laid to rest in the final days the single most time-consuming issue of the session, the proposed rescission of Kentucky's Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) ratification.

Key bills passed in the final week included:

—Senate Bill 208, to increase the standard state income tax deduction, provide additional tax credits for the elderly and blind, increase inheritance tax deductions for surviving spouses and provide several exemptions from the state sales tax.

—SB 68, to compensate crime victims up to $15,000 for lost wages and medical expenses.

House Bill 138, to guarantee public access to virtually all government records not specifically closed by law.

—HB 4, to introduce the concept of "power equalization" in public school financing.

—HB 842, to stagger terms of Public Service Commission members and provide for improvements in the commission's staff.

—SB 1, to base farm land tax assessment partly on a property's income producing capability.

—HB 143, to make a victim's reputation and sexual history inadmissible as evidence in a rape case without a judge's approval.

—HB 201, to have a statewide referendum in November, 1977, on whether Kentucky should have a constitutional convention.

—HB 602, to bring state deep mine safety laws into conformity with federal —HB 458, to increase maximum bond requirements for strip mine permits and to increase penalties for violations of strip mine regulations.

—HB 477, to increase the coal severance tax from 4 to 4.5 percent and the minimum tax from 80 to 90 cents per ton.

—HB 674, 675, 676, 678, to channel more money into coal counties for development projects.

—SB 248 and 249, to guarantee that doctors and hospitals in Kentucky will continue to obtain malpractice insurance.

—SB 220, to abolish the so-called holder in due course doctrine which allows a finance company to hold a credit agreement without being responsible for the performance of the product sold.

—HB 571, to regulate hearing aid specialists.

—NB 644, to prohibit fair trade agreements.

—SB 346, to place citizens members on state professional and occupational licensing boards.

—SB 188, to guarantee free repair or reimbursement for mobile homes that are defective.

The only bill in Governor Carroll's consumer package which wasn't approved was HB 571, the so-called new car "lemon" bill.

The environmental effects of augering, as well as other forms of coal mining are controlled by the division of reclamation in the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection. Augering - boring or drilling into a coal seam - is often combined with strip mining.

Well, have you noticed the water lines going in, out in the county? Progress on the lines is moving along at a rapid pace, and water in some areas will be turned on in the next few months. All of the 75 miles of water lines will be delivering water to 500 homes by the end of 1976.

The contractor will need to know where to set your meter and you can help him and yourself by driving a stake where you want them to put your meter. Try to do this at once.

I know many people remember several years ago before electric and telephone services were used, when we carried water from a spring and usually when we wanted a drink the water bucket would be dry, therefore, we would do without a drink waiting for someone else to go carry water. We also used the spring to keep milk and butter cold before we had better means to keep it cold. Those that didn't have spring water had wells or cisterns with a hand pump or well bucket to draw water.

Electric came along about 35 years ago and telephones a few years later. Now we will soon have pipe lines running along the roads with the electric and telephone lines. These pipe lines will be bringing water to many farm homes. This is another step toward progress for country people DOWN ON THE FARM.

The stone cabin attached to the rear of the Jack Jouett house is the original structure. It was built in the 1780's by the Craig family. Jouett added the front brick section in the 1790's. The frame dog trot between the cabin and the brick structure was enclosed later. The 32 by 17 foot structure is located in Woodford County, five miles from Versailles off of McCoun's Ferry Road.

Rick Wilson, Kentucky Heritage Commission archaeologist, dug two test pits which showed the top layer of soil under the floor contains a high concentration of artifacts. Wilson cataloged and identified each artifact and the exact location in the pit where it was found.

Bone and shell buttons, an old pocket watch, clay and glass marbles, thimbles and bone toothbrush handles are some of the items found in the excavations. Wilson placed the date of the artifacts as being in the late 18th century and the 19th century.

Elixirs, cure-alls, and probably in most instances, alcohol, filled these bottles during the days when traveling medicine men peddled their nostrums from town to town. EKU HONORS BELL'S INVENTION WITH OLD TELEPHONE EXHIBIT

One hundred years ago this month, Alexander Graham Bell was given a patent for his "principle of the electric speaking telephone."

In commemoration of the telephone's birth, the Jonathan Truman Dorris Museum at Eastern Kentucky University is displaying a collection of early communication instruments, by courtesy of Dr. Robert Grise, EKU professor of education foundations.

In the display is a 1920 "long box" wooden wall phone that can be used by museum visitors to talk to anyone who might answer the ring of another instrument nearby in the museum, a 1915 Kellogg upright desk stand telephone.

The period of the exhibit ranges from the time when the telephone's batteries were glass jars containing diluted acid that sometimes spilled on the rug, through the time of dry cell batteries, to the central energy system.

The telephone exhibit does not go as far back in time as an exhibit on prehistoric man in Kentucky on the opposite side of the museum, nor as far back as the life-sized log cabin just a few feet away, with its rope bed, shuck mattress and iron utensils in the fireplace. But the telephone did come to Richmond at the very beginning of telephone history.

In 1878, a chemistry and physics professor caused Richmond to become the second city in Kentucky to have a telephone. Thomas W. Tobin made reproductions of Bell's magnetic telephone and ran a line from his laboratory in the old Central University Building on Eastern's campus to a store downtown, to three banks, the depot and back to Central. It was the first party line.

The exhibition telephone has only one line. Don't ring up Number 13, though. It was the fire department's number but regardless of what number you get, consider the rule printed in the 1895 directory card on the wall above the wall box - "The limit of time for the use of this instrument is three minutes."

If the telephones are in use, Miss Jane Munson, curator of the museum, will be happy to demonstrate carding, drop spindle spinning, wheel spinning, and weaving in the original style of the pioneers. She can also explain the why of such expressions as "dyed in the wool."

Bible Facts

"You must be ready to wash one another's feet," Jesus told his disciples as he finished washing their feet. He said: "The servant is not greater than his master and the messenger is not greater than the man who sent him." This lesson by Jesus about serving one another is one we should heed now.

People have found identity, meaning, and purpose for living in Jesus Christ. They can "see" themselves for what they really are by "seeing" Jesus. He is their mirror.

The 1976 Easter Seal Telethon will be broadcast by four Kentucky, or Kentucky-area, television stations. The stations include WKYT-TV, Lexington and WKYH-TV, Hazard. At Huntington, W. Va., television station WSAB-TV will carry the show.

At Cincinnati, WKRC-TV will broadcast the telethon with Kentucky and Ohio Easter Seal societies programming the local portions of the show.

Local Easter Seal leaders will appear on the local portions of the telethon. The show originates in Hollywood with Wayne Rogers, as host emcee. Upwards of 100 movie and television personalities will appear on the 20-hour show beginning at 11:30 p.m. EST.

Viewers of the telethon in Mt. Vernon and nearby areas will be able to call in their pledges by telephoning 256-2825 at Mt. Vernon, according to Ruby Stewart, Easter Seal telethon chairman for Rockcastle County. Contributions to the Kentucky Army National Guard's campaign and to the telethon will be used to provide rehabilitation services for children and adults.

Combs encouraged all Kentuckians to contribute and to participate in the activities this week end.

PROCEEDS FROM MERCER COOK BOOK GOING TO THE DOGS

By: Helen Price Stacy

In a land much addicted to Kentucky country ham and red-eye gravy, it makes you wonder how Chincoteague oyster pie ever got to Mercer County. But a recipe for such a pie and other strange and exotic foods is included in a bicentennial cookbook published by the Mercer County Humane Society. The book was compiled by Ms. Ruth Payne of Harrodsburg.

"A cook book to end all cook books" is the way the book is described. "It includes over 600 carefully chosen combinations of ingredients that should cater to every taste, from the dainty sweets for the petite elite to the good old country rib-sticking vittles such as molasses baked beans generously laced with country ham hocks and garnished with thin strips of fried sow bosom."

The cook book is the second project of the humane society, all proceeds going for "feeding, medical and general care of the animals." The first project by the society was a history book, "Through 200 Years," which sold out in five weeks and helped provide funds with which to construct a modern animal shelter.

The new structure replaces "a tiny building near the rock quarry which had no provision for water and virtually no ventilation or exercise," according to the society. In 1971, after the county no longer provided duties of a dog warden, individual citizens volunteered to act as wardens and animals were kept on a private farm.

This concern for dogs and other stray and abandoned animals resulted in the new building. "The building was constructed solely with funds from generous members of the society and proceeds from the sale of Bicentennial books and coins. Volunteers spent many guest list has reached as high as 60 to 90 animals on hand."

When citizens respond to need of animals in such manner, the fringe benefits are many. In addition to providing shelter and care for dogs, kittens and other animals, the Mercer County shelter was so well designed that it is "being duplicated statewide, and the cruel methods of solving animal problems are a thing of the past and we intend to keep it that way."

The recipes for baked beans and ham hocks, recommend a side dish of "corn bread topped off with blackberry cobbler." Some recipes are for fancy seafood dishes, but more are of dishes prepared by farm women of old when they "tried to fill the bottomless pits of Kentucky thresher hands."

Books are $5 each and may be ordered from the Mercer County Humane Society, Box 473, Harrodsburg, Ky. 40390.

BY H. LEE DURHAM

WILD ONION IN THE HOME LAWN

In Kentucky the best time to treat with a herbicide to control wild garlic (also called wild onion) in the home lawn is usually in late March or early April. This will vary somewhat, depending on the season. To treat with any herbicide for wild garlic control, the temperature should be at least 55 degrees or above. If we have a late spring and the temperatures are below 55 degrees, treatment with a herbicide for wild garlic should be delayed until warmer weather. Wild garlic plants will die more slowly at the lower temperatures than at higher temperatures.

By treating with 2,4-D, Banvel, Silvex or combinations of these chemicals before April 15, better control of the wild garlic will be obtained than when the treatment is delayed until after new bulbs start to develop. After new bulb initiation begins, the chemical will move into the old "mother bulb" but it does not move from the mother bulb into the very young developing bulb, which will continue to grow to maturity and be viable.

Banvel, 2,4 D and Silvex are available to the home owner under different trade names and in various combinations and formulations. Banvel should not be applied in the root zone of desirable trees or shrubs or injury may also occur to leaching of the chemical. Treatment with 2,4-D, Silvex or Banvel will also control many other broadleaf weeds that are actively growing at the time the chemicals are applied. These products will not control grasses.

For rates to use read and follow directions on the label of the particular product purchases. Most problems occur when individuals do not follow directions because they think they know more about the herbicide than the manufacturer who make product and writes the label."

HOW TO RENOVATE GRASS FIELDS

Keeping legumes in a grass-legume mixture is a major grassland problem in Kentucky. Researchers at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station have worked on this problem for many years. Experiments and farmer experience show that legumes can be put back into grass-dominated fields without destroying the sod by plowing.

Conventional tillage may be used to disturb and weaken the grass, prepare a seedbed, slow the legume seed, and cultivate the field. Also a renovation seeder can be used to prepare a seedbed, sow the legume seed in cutbacks in one trip over the field. Conventional tillage tools usually leave the field surface rough, but renovation seeders leave it smooth.

Moisture and temperature are two important factors in establishing legumes in old grass sods. In the long run, early-spring clover seedlings in February through March are more likely to be successful than late-spring or late-summer seedlings. Alfalfa may be planted from mid-March through April. However, with adequate moisture in August and September, late-summer seedlings may be successful.

The following five steps are "keys" to successful renovation:
(1) Graze or mow the grass closely prior to renovating. This will let tillage tools tear into the sod more easily. Don't plant legume seed into tall grass. The grass competes with legume seedlings for sunlight.

(2) Test your soil and apply needed lime, phosphate, and potash. For convenience, you can apply these materials ahead of tillage. If possible, lime should be applied several months before renovating. Don't use nitrogen when you renovate old grass fields. Nitrogen increases grass competition to the legume seedlings.

(3) Disturb 40 to 50 percent of the grass for sowing clovers, 40-100 percent for alfalfa. A disc, field cultivator or field tiller will do a good job. Broadcast seedlings of lespedeza, white clover or red clover made on top of the ground will often result in good legume stands if seedlings are made in late winter, the grass is grazed extremely short and proper fertility is supplied.

(4) Sow certified seed of adapted legumes at the rates recommended for seeding alone. Just before seeding, inoculate seed with proper nitrogen-fixing bacteria. Be sure that some inoculant is stuck to all seeds.

(5) Renovated fields should be kept grazed until the livestock begin biting off the young legumes. At that time remove the pastures recommended for grazing 4-6 weeks and alfalfa 8-10 weeks to become established. Thereafter, mow and/or graze the field to best suit the particular legumes that you planted.

If an on-crop renovator is used to till, drop legume seed, and cultivate the seedbed, special attention must be given to grass management.
After planting legumes, the grass should be kept grazed or mowed very closely to control grass competition.

When the grass begins grazing the legumes, remove them and permit the legumes to become established. If one is likely to be unable to properly graze or clip the newly seeded field, paraquat may be used to aid in grass suppression. Apply paraquat at the rate of 0.5 lb. of active ingredient per acre in bands over the seeded row leaving about 50 percent of area unweeded. This assures a good grass stand will remain in the renovated field. Even with paraquat, grass growth should be controlled by a combination of grazing and clipping.

Follow label instructions as to when grazing can be started after use of paraquat is completed.
Legumes in hay and pasture fields in one thing - to keep a stand in balance with the grass is another. Legumes may disappear because of (1) need for fertilizers and lime; (2) improper clipping management; (3) improper grazing management; (4) insect damage; (5) diseases; and (6) drought or other weather related factors.

DO-AHEAD MEALS
When you are having a busy day at home, working away from home, taking the children somewhere, or expecting company for dinner - let a "do-ahead meal" be your rescue.

Look in your favorite cookbook for recipes. Many foods can be prepared early in the day for dinner; others can be frozen 2 or 3 months ahead; still other foods can be cooked and refrigerated overnight.

Planning:
Set aside a few hours each week to plan and prepare main dishes, salads and desserts that you can freeze or refrigerate ahead of time and finish-up at the last minute with little effort.

From the refrigerator: Many casseroles, salads, desserts and even breads can be cooked in advance and refrigerated overnight.

Dishes: From soups and stews to desserts, may be successfully frozen. Quick breads and yeast breads may be stored in the freezer up to two months. Cookies may be frozen from 6 to 12 months. Frozen dishes vary in the length of time they may be frozen and still keep good flavor and texture.

From the pantry: Keep your cupboards well stocked with canned (your own or commercial) vegetables, fruits and soups that you can serve along with your "do-ahead" main dish to make a quick meal.
Packaging and storing:

Store it right. When you get meals ahead of time, you should cool the food and store it as soon as possible in the refrigerator or freezer. If you leave food too long at room temperature, bacteria has a chance to grow. So cool food quickly by turning it into a shallow pan and getting the pan in ice water. Or, cool it slightly at room temperature and refrigerate it while still warm. When the food is cold, package and freeze it.

Packaging:
"Do-ahead meals" must be packaged properly for freezing to maintain good quality, flavor, texture, appearance and nutrition. You may use plastic, glass or metal containers as well as heavy-duty foil, freezer wrap or freezer bags. Be sure that you seal it properly to retain flavor and moisture and keep out air.

Suit the wrap to the way the food will be re-heated. If it can be taken directly from the freezer and baked in the oven, then foil would be the most suitable wrap.
When freezing food in a casserole, line the dish with heavy foil and then freeze. After it is frozen, lift the food in its foil liner from the dish (food will retain shape of dish). Package and put back into the freezer. When you are ready to use it, remove the foil and slip the food back into its original casserole dish for baking or heating.

DO-AHEAD TIPS:
Meat and vegetable recipes that call for marinating are great for "do-aheads". Meats in sauce are also good because the sauce prevents drying out and keeps the flavor in.
Extra waffle batter? Go ahead and make the waffles. Cook, cool, wrap with freezer paper or foil between them and freeze. When you are ready to use the waffles, bake at 325 degrees for 15 minutes or pop in the toaster.

Dishes that include noodles, spaghetti or macaroni or vegetables are best if slightly undercooked during advanced preparation. The final cooking will get them well-done.
For speeded-up tossed salads, chop your firm vegetables like celery, carrots and peppers early in the day. Wrap and chill.

Salads that can be frozen may be made in paper baking cups. Pull out the number you need when it is time to serve the salad.
Chopping onions? Chop some extra and keep in tightly covered container in freezer or refrigerator.

Take extra minute to shred cheese you will use in a couple of days and store covered in refrigerator.
If the freezer casserole calls for buttered bread crumbs for topping, wrap and freeze separately to prevent sogging.

Relishes usually improve in flavor in refrigerator when they are chilled thoroughly. Prepare them ahead!
Leftover bread? Crumble by hand or in blender and store for jiffy toppings.
Yeast and quick breads freeze well. Bake several loaves and freeze the extra ones. Package in foil for easy heating. Prepare your fruit salad early and refrigerate. Use ascorbic acid or lemon juice to keep peaches, pears and bananas bright.

Rockcastle Recollections

By John Lair

Rockcastle is one of the best-watered of all Kentucky counties. A network of spring branches and small streams amply provide stock water for farms and collect finally into the larger streams which drain the countryside. Some of Rockcastle's springs are never-failing, but the majority of them dry up temporarily during summer droughts. During the latter part of an extra dry and hot summer and early fall, many of the larger creeks go dry and even the Rockcastle River turns into a series of potholes, separated by bone-dry shoals and sandbars.

This condition seems to gradually worsen as the water table in the ground is lowered year after year. Another thing contributing to this state of affairs is the clearing of more slopes and hillsides for cultivation, allowing the surface water from rains to get to the streams faster to be carried away and leaving no reservoir to hold up the water and release it into the streams more slowly. This also accounts for more flash floods, which each year do considerable damage along some of the larger streams in the county. As long as the hillsides and ridges were heavily forested, the network of root systems would soak up rainfall and melting snow to be released more gradually and trickle more slowly into the streams. Once the trees were cut and the root systems destroyed, there was nothing to absorb and hold back the moisture and the falling rain quickly ran off as surface water, sometimes giving the streambeds more volume than they could instantly carry, thus bringing about the floods and freshets which ordinarily plague the county during February of each year.

Sometimes these high tides are the cause of much damage, particularly to farmers along the streams where they occur. High water marks along such streams are growing more numerous. Our farmers have made it a point to locate all buildings well above the line so that it is not so difficult that generally suffers most. Floods, by encroaching on soil loosened for purposes of cultivation can carry away rich topsoil and leave great gashes cut down to the clay and gravel base that produces nothing but swamp grass and raw fish holes. Having been raised on a creek bottom farm in Renfro

The Mt. Vernon Signal P-10 Thursday, March 25, 1976

Valley, I can recall how big level fields of growing corn could suffer from flooding even when there was no current to wash the soil away. When the muddy water got over the growing corn, it would sometimes deposit silt in the "bud" - funneled in by the channeling of the two top blades. After the water had gone down, it was often necessary to go into the field to pinch off these top leaves and remove the mud and silt, else the corn would turn yellow and die within a period of a few days.

While even small streams in flood could cause considerable damage, in many ways it was the big creeks and Rockcastle River that really gutted the surrounding territory when they went on a rampage. While an occasional farm gate or a chicken coop might be seen bobbing along in the quickened current of a small creek running wild, standing on the bank of Rockcastle River the spectator might be treated to the excitement of watching haystacks, barns and outbuildings and even an occasional half-submerged dwelling riding the yellow tide down to the wider expanse of the distant Cumberland.

At intervals of every few years, a real gully washer of a tide funnels its way into the Rockcastle and the loaded freight trains are sometimes left sitting on the railroad bridge at Livingston to hold it in place until the tide has run its course and the waters have subsided.

All in all, this Rockcastle River is the county's most important stream. Dick's River is the largest, of course, but it is with us for such a short time, heading up at Brodhead near the Lincoln County line, with the joining of Negro Creek and Boone's Fork, it has scarcely become a river before bidding Rockcastle County goodbye and hurrying off on its romp through the Blue Grass country to join the storied Kentucky for a grander finale than little Rockcastle could ever hope to furnish. In many histories and else, here in this, the tale has been told how Dick's River was named for an Indian hunter who directed the Long Hunters to the vicinity of what he called "his" river, where game was plentiful. Locally, there is another story to the effect that at an Indian massacre at the junction of Skaggs Creek and a hitherto unnamed stream, a negro slave was among the slain. The new found creek was named Negro Creek to commemorate the event and since the negro's name was Dick, the river of which this creek was the principal tributary, was also named Dick's River. Regardless of which version is correct, later historians have removed all trace of the recognition intended for the unfortunate slave by changing the spelling of Dix River as it now stands.

But, as previously stated, it is the Rockcastle River which is the principal stream connected with the history of our county. For many of its 75 miles in length, it forms the southeastern boundary of Rockcastle County, that portion of the county south of the river having been taken over for inclusion in Laurel County in its formation in 1825. Heading up largely in Jackson County, the river's three principal tributaries in Rockcastle County are Roundstone, Skaggs and Horse Lick Creeks - of which Roundstone is the largest, its feeder streams including Crooked, Brush Renfro and Clear Creeks, together with many smaller streams.

The Rockcastle River, known to Long Hunters, Indian traders and explorers since 1766, was frequently mentioned in early accounts and journals and its various fords and crossings were long considered landmarks while its steep hillsides and narrow valleys offered some of the best hunting in Kentucky. As late as 1914, a famous sports magazine named the Rockcastle River as the best Pike stream in America. With a long-and-stone dam thrown across it at Livingston, just above the present railroad bridge, it formed a huge catch basin for rafts of virgin timber floated out of Jackson County to feed the big band-saw mill that played an important part in the early commercial development of Rockcastle County. An earlier dam across the Rockcastle furnished water power for the first combination saw and grist mill operated in this section of the state.

The first mention of the scenic beauty of the hills along Rockcastle River is found in the journal of Lord Henry Hamilton, former Lieutenant Governor of Quebec, who, after his capture by George Rogers Clark in 1779, was sent as a prisoner under guard to Williamsburg, following Skaggs Trace to the Hazel Patch where Col. Richard Calloway came down from Boonesborough to take charge of prisoners and guards for the rest of the journey.

"The Narrows" of the Rockcastle River, located in neighboring Laurel County offers the most scenic spot for many miles around and were largely instrumental in winning the Rockcastle a prominent listing among the state's Wild Rivers. Unfortunately, local commercial shortsightedness has done much to remove it from the list. Here, for about one and a half miles, huge boulders have tumbled down from the high cliffs on each side of the river and have so obstructed the strambler that The Narrows have long served as a screen to prevent giant catfish and huge "Red Hoss" from getting through on their way upstream. Neither the fabled Red River Gorge nor the chalky palisades of the Kentucky River offer scenic attractions equaling the Rockcastle River Narrows.

"HONEYTREE" TO BE PRESENTED AT CUMBERLAND COLLEGE

"Honeytree," the tender-voiced folk and gospel singer-songwriter-composer, will appear in concert at the Cumberland College Boswell Campus Center March 26-27 at 8 p.m.

A contemporary Christian musician, Honeytree is touted in a news release as a "relevant and refreshing" entertainer. "I'm glad God is letting me do what I enjoy most - singing for other people," offers Honeytree enthusiastically. "Before I met Christ I had music, but I never had much to say. But now, I can tell people how to meet God and have a joyful life. That's fantastic!"

"Honeytree" is accompanied by two musicians who travel with her to the many concert dates on college campuses and at music festivals.

Currently under contract with Myrrh Records, "Honeytree" has released two albums, "Honeytree" and "The Way I Feel."

A Student Activities Board Presentation, the public is invited. There is no charge for the concert.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Friends,

As Kentucky State Hospital would like to provide each of the 400 residents now hospitalized with a small bag of candy at Easter time, we are again appealing to you in this project.

Any club, church or individual who would like to contribute candy at this time, which must be of a soft type, should contact the Director of Volunteer Services, Mrs. Louise Hicks at Kentucky State Hospital, telephone 238-2200, extension 231.

Cash donations would also be acceptable and would enable us to purchase fresh fruit for those residents who are diabetics. Another contribution would be Easter Lilies, to enhance the chapel and ward areas.

Please bring the candy on or before the 12th of April in order that the volunteers can bag the candy.

Your donations in the past have meant much to our residents and any contribution, as stated above, would be gratefully appreciated.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Louise Hicks
Director of Volunteer Services
