

Consumer Comments

By Robert F. Stephens
Attorney General

Buying a new car? If you are purchasing a new car this fall, you may wonder why the sales tax isn't based on the amount you actually pay for the automobile. The reason is that the motor vehicle usage tax is computed in a specific manner prescribed by Kentucky law and is not the same as the regular 5% sales tax.

In Kentucky, consumers pay a 5% motor usage tax on 90% of the retail price. The retail price is computed by adding the factory-advised delivery price, better known as the "list price" and shown in the "National Automobile Dealers Association's Official Car Guide," plus the advertised delivery price of any optional equipment and transportation or destination charges. The list price on imported cars is based on the price at port-of-entry, plus the other charges. Thus, if you buy the car for less than the "list price," you will pay taxes on an amount greater than what you actually paid for the car.

The same is true of used cars. The retail price of a used car is based on the "NADA Official Used Car Guide," plus optional equipment, minus the trade-in allowance. The trade-in allowance is equal to the value of the car taken in trade, but may not exceed the fair market value of the used car.

The retail price of older-model used cars not listed in the NADA price manual is determined by taking a percentage of the last value one year after removal from the list, 50 percent for two years, and 25 percent for three years. All other model used cars are computed as 10 percent of the purchase price with the minimum taxable retail value being $100.

Besides the motor vehicle usage tax, be sure that you know exactly what is included in the price you pay for your car. Know the price, finance charges, insurance charges, if any, license fees, and all other costs. Make sure all of these are accurately computed.

If you have a consumer complaint, write to the Attorney General, Division of Consumer Protection, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601. The office has found that it can most effectively deal with written complaints and encourages you to write when you have a complaint. However, if you have an emergency situation, call the consumer hotline, 1-800-372-2960.

85 HEAD HOLSTEIN DAIRY HERD

SAT., OCTOBER 30, 1976, 10:30 A.M.

Wildie, Rockcastle Co., Ky.

8 Miles South at Berea, 7 miles north of Mt. Vernon, Turn East off U.S. 25 at Parsons' Gas and Appliances onto 1786. Follow 1786 approximately one mile to the sale - following the auction signs.

Due to Mr. W.S. Stewart's retirement and his son, Kenneth's, other business interests, they have decided to sell, by auction, this truly fine-grade A herd of Holsteins. The Stewarts have a highly respected reputation for their dairying operation, having been milking for over 25 years. All of these cows have been raised right on the farm and are sired from some of the best bulls in the artificial breeding service. Incidentally, the Stewarts have only used artificial breeding during their 25 years of operation. There are presently 88 cows in full flow of milk with 17 dry cows - some of which are due to freshen in the very near future.

THE FOLLOWING IS A LIST OF THE COWS TO BE SOLD

|-------------------------|-------------------------|------------------------|
| 12-30 month old Heifers | 10-4 year old Holsteins | 5-7 year old Holsteins |
| 7-32 month old Heifers | 23-5 year old Holsteins | 8-8 year old Holsteins |
| 3-24 month old Heifers | 11-6 year old Holsteins | 8-9 year old Holsteins |

These cows, on the last annual test, averaged approximately 18,000 lbs. There are several cows producing 70 lbs. plus at the present. All of the cows have been tested and have necessary health papers.

If you're in the market for some excellent cows to add to your herd or some replacements - be sure to attend this important sale.

Mr. and Mrs. Ricky W. Abney

Miss Renner Weds Mr. Abney At Bethel Baptist Church

The marriage of Miss Beverly Fay Renner and Mr. Ricky W. Abney was solemnized before an arch of gladiolas and greenery and lighted tapers at the Bethel Baptist Church at 7 p.m., September 3. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Earl Vanwinkle of Berea.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Glen D. Renner, was escorted to the altar by her father. She was attired in a satin dress set off by a high neckline and bodies of lace. The fingertip sleeves are also an overlay of lace. Her waist-line length veil was an illusion of lace which fell from pearls and flowers.

She carried cascades of carnation and baby's breath centered with a single red rose attached to her family's bible and carried her mother's wedding gloves.

Miss Valerie Henderson, of Somerset, cousin of the bride, was the matron of honor. She wore a gown of mint green polyester. She carried two long-stemmed red roses with greenery and baby's breath with green streamers.

The bridesmaids were Miss Barbara Bullock, cousin of the bride, of Mt. Vernon; Miss Susan Oliver of Berea and Mrs. Alecia Wynn, sister of the groom of Conway. Miss Bullock was dressed in pink flowered dotted swiss. Miss Oliver and Mrs. Wynn wore blue dress identical to that of Miss Bullock.

Each wore hats in matching colors with ribbons matching their dresses. The bridesmaids carried a single long-stemmed red rose with greenery, baby's breath and streamers.

Mrs. Rita Shouse kept the guest book.

Misses Carrie Abney and Tammy Abney, nieces of the groom, were the flower girls. They wore matching yellow dresses identical to the bridesmaids and each carried a basket of rose petals.

Mr. Eddie Abney of Berea, brother of the groom served as Mr. Abney's best man. Groomsmen were Mr. Ronnie Abrams, Mr. Danny Dooley, and Mr. Kenneth Shouse, all of Berea. Ushers were Mr. Ralph W. Cummins of Mt. Vernon and Mr. Wayne Powell of Berea.

Brian Abney and Darren Wynn, nephews of the groom served as escorts for the flower girls. Chad Abney, nephew of the groom, served as ring bearer. They all wore blue suits and each wore a white carnation.

Pre-nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Loretta Hunt of Berea and Dr. John E. Gump of Richmond, vocalist. Vocal selections chosen by the bride and groom were "Whither, Thou Goest," and ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED - Mr. and Mrs. Corey Stewart of Orlando went to announcement the engagement of their daughter, Sandra Jean, to Donald Edward Bishop, son of Mr. Edna Bishop of Brodhead. No date has been set for the wedding.

"Because". The traditional "Wedding March" was played by the pianist as the bride was escorted to the groom by her father. After the last prayer by Rev. VanWinkle, as the couple was still kneeling, the "Wedding Prayer" was sung.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Renner chose a peach polyester dress with matching jacket with brown accessories. Mrs. Gill wore a turquoise formal length dress with white accessories. Both the mothers wore white carnation corsages.

A reception was held in the basement of the church following the ceremony. Serving at the bride's table were Mrs. Dorothy Clark of Richmond, Mrs. Lucy Cummins of Mt. Vernon and Mrs. Wanda Henderson of Somerset.

The bride's table was covered by a lace table cloth. A crystal punchbowl was on one side and the three-tiered cake was on the other. In the middle of the table was a candelabra and greenery. The wedding cake was topped with a miniature bride and groom with a white plum and doves.

Rice bags were distributed by several people.

For her going away outfit, the new Mrs. Abney chose a peach floral dress with white accessories.

After a wedding trip to Nicholasville and Corbin, the couple are residing in Mt. Vernon.

ANNOUNCEMENT
WILLIE J. TAYLOR

FOR

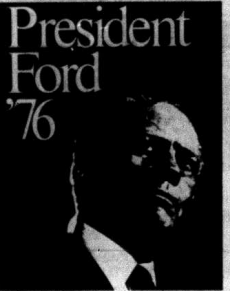

SCHOOL BOARD MEMBER

I wish to announce that I am a candidate for re-election to the Rockcastle County Board of Education subject to the November General Election.

Educ. Dist. No. 2
West Broadhead, North Broadhead and Brown

Your vote and influence will be greatly appreciated.

pd. for by Willie J. Taylor

"Any reasonable American who compares President Ford and Jimmy Carter on the issues can understand why I said that there is no substitute for a victory by The President."

Ronald Reagan

Compare and beware

President Ford

Jimmy Carter

Gun Control

Supports the inalienable right of Americans to keep and bear arms. Wants to punish criminals, not gun owners.

Favors federal registration of firearms. His aides pledge to "break the National Rifle Association within six years."

Pardon Draft Dodgers

Strongly opposes a general pardon for draft evaders and deserters.

Has pledged that his first act as President will be a blanket pardon for all draft dodgers.

Home Owners Tax Deductions

Will continue supporting tax deductions for interest paid on home mortgages.

Would raise your taxes by doing away with the tax deduction that homeowners get for the interest paid on mortgages.

Abortion

Against abortion on demand.

Supports abortion on demand.

Defense

Supports real growth in the defense effort. Has worked to insure America's military superiority over the Soviet Union.

Advocates cutting the defense budget by $15 billion. Such cuts would weaken America's military strength and force layoffs in defense-related industries.

Taxes and Inflation

Has worked to increase take-home pay and keep the lid on inflation. Will reduce taxes for families with incomes between $8,000 and $30,000.

Would increase taxes on families with incomes above $14,000. Has endorsed spending programs that would destroy the buying power of your salary.

Big Brother Government

By vetoing a wild Congress, he is cutting back the massive federal government. Realizes the overpowering government is destroying American freedoms, businesses, and family homes.

Supports huge new give-away programs. Five of his 62 new programs would cost $103 billion the first year and will give federal bureaucrats more power to meddle in our daily lives.

Leadership By Example

A good and decent man; an example for your family.

Uses filthy language in an x-rated magazine to tell America his views on morals.

Keep President Ford in charge.

Rockcastle DAR Meets

The Rockcastle Chapter DAR met Friday, October 8, at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Raymond Towery at Conway.

Regent, Jane Ramsey was assisted in the ritual by Mrs. Lyle Owens. The President's Message was read by Mrs. Wallace Williams, and the National Defense was given by Mrs. Elbert Eversole.

After the business meeting, Miss Frances Moore of Berea, fourth District director KSDAR, was introduced as the speaker.

Miss Moore reviewed the growth and development of the National Society from the time of its organization in 1890 by four ladies in Washington D.C., one of whom was Mary DeBess of Lexington, Kentucky. The aims of the founders then, as now were to perpetuate the memory and the spirit of the men and women who achieved American Independence, to promote the development of an enlightened public, and to foster patriotic citizenship, or more briefly, to pursue history, education and patriotism.

Less than twenty years after the society was founded, the Daughters had purchased a site and completed Memorial Constitution Hall, the first of three magnificent buildings which occupy the block bounded by 11th, 18th, C and D Streets in North Washington D.C. By the time it was completed the membership exceeded 100,000. About ten years later the Administration Building for national officers and the clerical staff was completed. Then in another ten years the Constitution Hall was completed. Continental Congress met there for the first time in 1930. Upon completion of Constitution Hall the original Continental Hall became a Geological Library. It is now one of the outstanding geological libraries in the nation.

Building was not the only interest of the ladies. They began work in Appalachia in 1908, and have continued that interest until today they consider to do such work in the Indian Schools and among the foreign-born.

For the bi-centennial project the National Society refurbished the Governor's Council Chamber and Assembly Committee Room on the second floor of Independence Hall in Philadelphia. They have commissioned murals to be painted in the East corridor of the House Wing of the United States Capitol.

BROADCAST CONTROLLED COLOR TELEVISION

YOU'VE GOT TO SEE IT TO BELIEVE IT!

Many TV programs are now transmitted with a special color reference signal called VIR. When the VIR signal is present, new sophisticated computer-type circuitry, in selected General Electric color models, uses this signal to automatically adjust the color and tint of the television picture; this means you won't have to fiddle with those color control settings; instead, this truly automatic VIR system makes the adjustments for you.

GE's Broadcast Controlled Color System consistently gives you color and tint automatically adjusted by the VIR signal from the broadcasters themselves.

Which Side Are You On ?

America now imports more foreign oil than ever. And experts estimate that our supply of oil and gas will be exhausted within 25 years. Yet, some people insist there is no energy crisis.

Most scientists say that coal and nuclear power must carry us for at least the next two decades. Yet rigid air standards have been set on the basis of inadequate information and a misleading environmental report. And reliable equipment has not yet been developed to meet those standards at coal burning power plants. On the other hand, a great array of nuclear science and engineering specialists advocate immediate steps to increase the use of nuclear power. Only a handful of their colleagues disagree. Yet construction of nuclear power plants has almost stopped.

The restrictions on burning coal, the delay in developing nuclear power, the fast diminishing supply of oil and gas, and our increasing dependence upon foreign countries for oil combine to threaten our economy. Industry shutdowns and massive unemployment would threaten our ability to meet the needs of education, government operation, defense, food production... everything we hold important. Your cooperative urges you to listen carefully before you choose sides.

Bluegrass Seed Production

Once Big Business in Old Kentucky

P-9 The Mt. Vernon Signal Thursday, Oct. 21, 1976

"The little Kentucky bluegrass plant has contributed more to the reputation of Kentucky than any other product." That was the statement made by Harrison Garman in 1930. Garman was an entomologist and botanist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, the observation being made in Experiment Station Bulletin No. 87.

The bulletin was entitled Kentucky Forage Plants—The Grasses. In the section on bluegrass, the scientific name of Kentucky bluegrass, Garman began with a poem by Alfred Montau:

"Ever smell Kentucky grass
As heard about in blazes?
Seems as if the whole blazed world
Was bursting out with newness.

"Skies and folks alike all smile,
Gracious you are lucky
If you spend a day in June Down in old Kentucky."

"In what is known as Bluegrass Kentucky, the wealth and consequent leisure for education and other means of self improvement of a large part of the population is derived from stock raising, a vocation rendered easy and profitable by the abundant pasture which blue-grass affords throughout much of the year. Kentucky would not be Kentucky without it," Garman wrote.

He noted bluegrass is not peculiar to Kentucky and grows throughout much of the Northern Hemisphere, "constitutes the bulk of the pasture of the middle and northwestern states and is everywhere at the North used as a lawn grass. . . . While blue-grass occurs everywhere in the State from the Big Sandy to the Mississippi River, it does not grow well in any but limestone soils."

Bluegrass is described as a variable plant in open pasture of long-established turn, often having a pure green color with rather short stems bearing panicles less covered with plants have blades darker in color, wider and with taller stems. "Where the soil is specially good and moist, the blades assume a bluish cast from a gray bloom which coats them," he wrote. He said the blades can be from 12 to 18 inches in length, but that a plant discovered in the midst of a rose-bush at his home in May of 1897 measured 40 inches "to the top of its panicle." "The fact that a pasture grass is leaves little to be desired," Garman said in extolling the virtues of bluegrass. "It is nutritious, persistent, furnishes a dense turf and thrives under the cropping and trampling of stock."

Kentucky is still known as the Bluegrass State—and its rolling pastures still abound with the nutritious bluegrass. But no longer is Kentucky the foremost producer of bluegrass seed.

The production of the seed was an important farming factor around the turn of the century and continued to hold that importance for about four decades, after which production began to decline.

The seed was "stripped" from the plants in a bluegrass field by stripping equipment that cut off the seed-bearing stalks.

In 1916 Garman and E.C. Vaughn, the latter an assistant in the department of entomology and botany, collaborated on Bulletin No. 198 on The Curing of Bluegrass Seeds As Affecting Their Viability.

According to that bulletin and Bulletin No. 247, written in 1923 by Dana C. Card, a marketing assistant in the farm economics division, the harvest or stripping of the bluegrass seed, took place the latter part of May or the early part of June—the stripping season lasting only five or six days. The shortness of the stripping season makes it necessary to obtain a supply of extra labor and results in some seed being stripped green in order to prevent other seed from getting over-ripe," Card wrote.

Originally the seed was harvested by workers breaking the seed heads off by hand. There a scoop sort of implement was fashioned that nipped off the seed heads in multiple numbers. The hand-stripper, it was replaced by a horse or mule-driven two-wheeled stripper. It required two men, one to hold the horse or mule and the other to sit in a "box" underneath the driver to move the seed heads back in the box away from the blades. The machine was known as a "comb stripper" and was commonly used in Kentucky. Then came more sophisticated strippers, such as the McCormick stripper, developed and manufactured by the big disadvantage of curing in the open was rain. The ricks in the warehouses had to be turned more often than in the open, gangs of men being kept busy night and day turning the seed during the curing process.

CURING BLUEGRASS SEED IN THE OPEN—Years ago it was a common sight to see parallel ridges or ricks of raw bluegrass seed curing in Central Kentucky fields. The rows were wide enough apart so that workmen could move between the ricks to turn the curing seed with pitchforks. When the early tobacco warehouses came into existence, much of the seed was moved to the warehouse floors for curing so as not to be hampered by the weather. But under ideal conditions the outdoors curing was considered the best method.

After the seed cured, it had to be cleaned. Card in his 1923 bulletin wrote: "In cleaning, the rough seed is first broken up by a beater, then dropped into a bottomless box, out of which it is taken thru a pipe by suction. This removes sticks, stones and considerable dirt which have become mixed with the seed. The seed is then passed over a cylinder which rotates it inside a closely fitting wire mesh sleeve and rubs over the seed heads, liberating the seed. After this is accomplished it is run thru regular seed cleaning machinery which has been adjusted to fit bluegrass seed. During this process, most of which is done in phosphorus like in Kentucky, but that bluegrass "can be used successfully for lawns and golf links in all parts of the country."

The Bluegrass Region of Kentucky is composed of about 15 counties in Central Kentucky, of which Fayette, Woodford, Clark, Bourbon and Jessamine counties are the most prominent, said John B. Huston and E.L. Langford, both assistants in farm management, as they compiled Bulletin No. 259 in July of 1925. The bulletin was entitled "Farming With Bluegrass." At that time 40 per cent of the farmland in the five counties was held in tracts of 260 acres or larger, with about 20 per cent in tracts of 500 acres or larger, and a great portion of the land was in bluegrass.

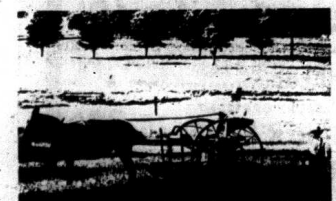

In the area of the first half of the 20th century, Central Kentucky was the major producer of bluegrass seed, although there was a limited area in northwestern Missouri that produced the seed. A considerable amount of cured Missouri seed was shipped to Kentucky for cleaning, the major cleaning facilities being located in Georgetown, Lexington, Paris and Winchester, the location of the largest seed dealers. Bluegrass seed was also grown in abundance in Canada. But Kentucky was the bluegrass capital, with the majority of the Missouri and Canada bluegrass seed coming to Kentucky for distribution and marketing.

Actually the seed was merely a byproduct of bluegrass pasture—but it was a very profitable by-product.

Today Kentucky has moved out of the bluegrass seed picture because of the excessive labor and production costs. There is still a limited amount of seed produced in the Bluegrass State—but most of the seed now is "imported"—although bluegrass pastures still abound over all of Kentucky, particularly in Central Kentucky. For a considerable span of years in the period around the turn of the century, those few days each spring when bluegrass seed was harvested produced a hustle and bustle that is still unmatched. That era is now a part of the agricultural heritage of Kentucky—the Bluegrass State.

Leo Bremer
UK College of Agriculture

HAND STRIPPER—The earliest device to strip bluegrass seed was the tool pictured, the heads of seed on stalks of the bluegrass plants were raked off as the stripper was swung over the plants. The stalks bearing the seed were caught between the "teeth" and the seed "stripped" from the stalks.

takes place in closed, box-like compartments, the dust and chaff are removed by a current of air and caught in long canvas tubes. This material is blown into the fit-box in the boiler room and used for fuel, sometimes furnishing operation to one-third of the fuel necessary for operation. Then thoroughly cleaned of all foreign matter which wind and sieves can remove, the seed is run over a gravity grader which removes heavy weed seeds and grades the bluegrass seed."

The principal uses of Kentucky bluegrass was listed in the 1923 bulletin as being for lawns, golf links and pastures. "The golf links in this country, which have been increasing in number so rapidly during the last few years, are taking large quantities of bluegrass seed," Card wrote. "These links often are reseeded heavily several times a year."

He said Kentucky bluegrass thrived much better on limestone

COMB STRIPPER—A comb stripper (top photo) was the most commonly used "mechanical" stripper in Kentucky. The old photo shows the stripper being used in a field. It was powered by a single mule or horse, requiring one man to drive and another to be in the "box" beneath the driver to move the seed back to the box. At the right in the old photo another workman is operating a hand stripper.

McConnell Co. of Winchester. Pulled by one mule or horse, it required only one man to operate it.

Seed yields had a variable range from five to 25 bushels per acre. The average yield in Kentucky was about eight bushels to the acre. The yield depended on the weather, excessive rainfall capable of causing a complete failure, for example. The seed had to be sown after the stripping. Initially the curing was all done out-of-doors, the seed being placed in big burlap bags after the stripping and then transported to a site where the bags were

Rockcastle Recollections

By John Lair

Was there one possibly two native-born Rockcastle County boys at the Alamo when it was besieged by Mexican troops under the command of General Santa Anna. This has long been a question with me and one I have been particularly anxious to see answered. A little more intensive research in the neighborhood of Springfield, Kentucky might prove most helpful but, to date, I have been unable to conduct it.

We learn from perusal of certain records pertaining to the Mexican War that a Peter James Bailey was numbered among the slain at the Fall of the Alamo. He was 24 years of age at the time of his death, which means that he was born in 1812. In the Rockcastle census of 1810, both John and Peter Bailey were living in Renfro Valley with their respective families. Neither appear in the 1820 census, so apparently, they had moved away before the latter date. Old deeds now in the possession of Jones Bennett Hiatt make reference to land owned by John Bailey, Peter Bailey, Harmon Bailey and a widow Bailey, although there is no indication that any of these were occupying their property at that time.

he had played in deserting his companions and leaving them to their fate. According to Allensworth's account, he had endured a considerable portion of the siege but when survival appeared to be hopeless made his escape from the building. He said that James Bowie had told him and some of the men that there was absolutely no hope for survival, that any of them could surrender (although he warned them they would meet a fate worse than death) or do anything they wanted to.

He said that every time the Mexican soldiers would attack, a lot of them would be shot down and the defenders of the Alamo would allow the Mexican women to approach to drag away their wounded and dead. He said that since he could speak Mexican fluently, he waited by one of the cannon embrasures and called to the first woman who approached the wall. He had at the time seven hundred dollars, which he offered her to bring him a woman's dress and bonnet. When she passed these garments to him through the embrasure, he put them on and, being small in stature, he hid in a square hole alongside the cannon and make his escape.

After his escape, he joined a band of two hundred and twenty five Texas Rangers. Later they were surrounded by a superior force of Mexicans and forced to surrender. The captives tied ropes around their necks and they were led, dog-like, toward the City of Mexico by the mounted troops. The only water they got was when they had to cross a stream, and then the Mexicans would spur their horse and drag them through without giving them time to drink, but they would suck what water they could from their wet clothing. Only twenty-five of them survived the terrible ordeal of this trip.

A short time after reaching Mexico City, Allensworth and four of his companions made their escape. While wandering through the mountains in a defenseless condition, they were captured by Indians, who were making preparations to put them to death when a party of Mexicans arrived on the scene and purchased them from the Indians for three ponies. They were taken back to Mexico where they were condemned to die but were given a chance for their lives by drawing beans from a piece of poultry. A white bean meant a return to prison, a black bean meant death before a firing squad. Drawing a white bean, he was returned to prison with the lucky few who had also drawn white beans. He was kept there until after peace was declared and finally released through the intervention of the American president.

Military history supports his story of what took place after the Alamo but I have been unable to find any connection between him and the fighting there. I contacted the historian of the Alamo and searched all military records he could find but his name was on none of the roles or lists of soldiers engaged there. It is possible he could have been there without being an enlisted soldier. Before the battle between visitors and civilians seem to have been wandering in and out of the place at will and at least one man is known to have escaped during the siege.

Linda Ramsey Ashley, who has developed into a very accurate and conscientious researcher and is a descendant of Allensworth Adams, raises considerable doubt when she reports finding in the Garrard County records a statement from his brother, Dr. James Adams, that he left for Texas in February of 1838 and never came back. She thinks it unlikely that he had been in the Alamo in 1836, had come back to Kentucky and left again for Texas by February of 1838. This is a reasonable conclusion, but not positive proof. In his affidavit, James Adams claims that he never came back to Kentucky but remember that statement is dated 1840. We now know that he came back at some later date, as he raised families in Garrard and Rockcastle Counties and for years practiced medicine in both counties. Having, it seems, acquired his medical skill from practicing with Dr. Jones Adams, near Lancaster, Kentucky, in Mt. Vernon, his office was in a building which occupied the present site of the Rockcastle Hotel. He was well known in the county as Dr. Allensworth Adams and is remembered for carrying a little black "doctor's satchel" wherever he went. Much of this information comes from Elizabeth Mullins, Brodhead, Kentucky, who is his great-granddaughter. She reports also that he is buried in an unmarked grave in the Negro Creek Cemetery. She has also furnished me with a good picture of him which I expect to use in the forthcoming book, along with pictures of Devil Bill, his wife and another son.

For the sake of the many descendants of Dr. Allensworth Adams (now living in Rockcastle County) as well as for the importance of adding a new chapter to the history of the Alamo, I would very much like to authenticate this story as told by Allensworth to his descendants. Any help will be greatly appreciated.

Pilot 4-H project in small engine operation Teaches safety in use of riding mower

A pilot project in safe operation of small engines has been launched by Kentucky 4-H.

University of Kentucky College of Agriculture Extension personnel involved in 4-H work discovered increasing numbers of machines operated by small engines around the average household—and more often than not, youngsters, usually in the teen-age category, are involved in the operation of the machines.

A boy or girl operating a power lawn mower is now a common sight—but there's a new trend to having a riding mower, or small lawn or garden tractor about the premises.

With the exposure of more and more young people to the growing variety of small engine machines, 4-H previously set up a project on small engine care and operation, giving 4-H'ers the opportunity of demonstrating their knowledge and skill with the small engines.

Small engine demonstration programs are conducted on the county, district and area levels—the area winners meeting in state competition conducted at the Kentucky State Fair.

But that doesn't go into the depth of operating the larger riding mowers and the tractors, not for the practice of safety.

As a result this year a special competition event involving young 4-H'ers and the riding mowers—was made a part of the 4-H activities at the State Fair. Maryland had previously introduced a project for young 4-H'ers in riding mower operation. With that information in hand, the Kentucky 4-H program was developed—an expansion and refinement of the Maryland plan. Designated as the small engines safe operators contest, it is a part of the 4-H Petroleum Power program. The inaugural event at the State Fair had John Jordan, Monroe County Extension agent, as the superintendent, with George Turner, UK Extension specialist in agricultural engineering, as 4-H consultant.

A driving course was laid out with chalk on a paved area at the Fairgrounds and a pair of riding mowers was brought in for the competition.

The young drivers had to first negotiate a riding mower around obstacles, weaving in and out weighted metal cans

CONCENTRATION ON A "TREE"—Jeff Kenney, 15-year-old 4-H'er from Covington, maneuvers a riding mower around a weighted can (arrow) that simulates a tree in the 4-H Small Engines Safe Operators Contest, the first such event ever held in Kentucky having been a feature of the 4-H activities at the Kentucky State Fair. A series of the "trees" were set up on a special contest course to give the young operators a chance to show their skill at safe operation of the small tractor-type vehicles. The young drivers had to take the riding mower through several situations, all aimed at promoting safety, since more and more youngsters are now operating machines powered by small engines. Kenney was the senior division winner in the competition.

By Leo Brauer, UK College of Agriculture

simulating trees—having to drive the course without overturning the "trees." The miniature tractor moved from there into a circular course that represented a driveway, flower bed or sidewalk—with the idea to "trim it close." The course next went to a narrow straight-of-way that had a clearance of two inches on either side. The operators moved the distance of the straight stretch and then had to back out, as though they were squeezing through a narrow space such as between two buildings.

From there the operators backed the tractor to a block and were required to line up a trailer hitch as though a trailer pickup was being made. The final maneuver was to make a sharp curve and park the tractor by backing into a simulated shed.

Fred Watson, Woodford

County youth agent, who assisted with the contest at the State Fair, said as far as he knew, Kentucky is only the second state to have such a program.

"We emphasize safety and skill," Watson said. "It's not a pulling contest—and not a speed contest. It's different from most contests. Prior to the driving, the contestants must take a written test on operating small engines—and must check out their equipment before making their runs."

"Safety is judged on how the contestant checks the equipment and how he operates it. Skill is judged on how the contestant operates the equipment around the course," Watson said. "The more skill the more safety."

The 4-H Petroleum Power program previously had been confined to driving a regular sized tractor and even more recently incorporating small engine demonstrations.

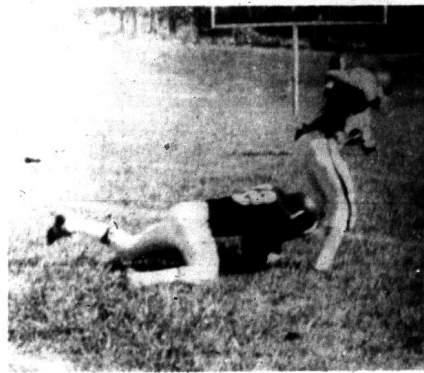

"The kids love it," Watson said of the new program. "The biggest hangup is getting the leadership to teach them."

"The kids like to get their hands dirty and oily—and the program gets a lot more youngsters involved—not just the ones who operate the full-sized tractors in rural areas. This program covers a regular sized tractor and even more recently incorporating small engine demonstrations.

"We think this new program gives the youngsters an opportunity to learn safety and to lead them up to the rudiments of the handling of an automobile," Watson said. "We've limited the starting age to 11 for this program—any youngster younger than that we feel is too young to handle a riding mower."

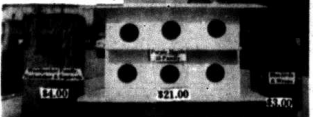

The 8th and 9th grade football team hosted Leslie County last week and defeated them 5-0. The picture above shows Keith Bassall receiving a pass for the two extra points from quarterback David Riddle. The touchdown came on a pass interception by Matt Poynter, who ran it into the end zone for the score. In the photo below, Riddle, No. 12, is shown tackling an Leslie County pass receiver on the last play of the game.

NOTICE TO PUBLIC

Notice is hereby given that Kentucky Utilities Company has filed with the Public Service Commission of Kentucky an Application to modify its retail rate Fuel Clause:

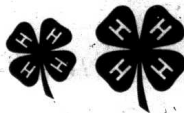

If the average cost of fuel consumed by the Company's generating stations is in excess of or less than 36.492 cents per million BTU, as determined from the Company's most recent monthly operating reports available prior to the beginning of the month, an additional charge or credit will be made on the kilowatt-hours purchased by the customer at the rate of .00113 cent per kilowatt-hour for each 1 cent of fraction there-of variation in the cost of fuel above or below 36.492 cents per million BTU for that month's billing.

The effect of this modification upon its customers would be to reduce the time between fuel expense expenditure and its recovery through Fuel Clause application. In moving from the present three month calculation period to the proposed one month calculation period there will be two months fuel expense eliminated recovery under the Clause. The Company has requested out to recover this amount over the twelve months by a charge. This does not constitute an increase in rates.

This Application is set for public hearing at the offices of the Public Service Commission in the Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, Kentucky, on October 19, 1976, at 9:00 A.M., E.D.T.
