Consumer Comments

By Robert Stephens

A senior citizen wrote the Attorney General's Division of Consumer Protection about her newly purchased hearing aid. She had spent $150 for hearing aids which were not helping and the door-to-door salesman who sold her these devices refused to do anything. She wanted to know if anything could be done to help her.

Through the work of the Governor's Consumer Advisory Council, a hearing aid law has been enacted by the Kentucky General Assembly to protect consumers from unreliable hearing aid salesmen. First, the door-to-door sale of hearing aids is now prohibited. If you need a hearing aid salesperson to come to your home, he must have your written request. Should a salesperson come to your home without your written consent, he is doing business illegally. You should report him to the Attorney General's Office, Consumer Protection Division and not do business with him.

Before purchasing a hearing aid, you must obtain a written medical clearance from a licensed physician and have your hearing tested by a physician or licensed audiologist. This will insure that you have no medical problems that could be affected by a hearing aid. Also, it will protect you from false claims made by the seller concerning your need for a hearing aid and the safety of his product. But if you desire, you may waive this requirement in writing. When you are buying the hearing aid, make sure that the purchase is through a hearing aid dealer approved by the Kentucky Hearing Aid Licensure Board. Read your contract and make sure it includes the make and model number of the hearing aid, whether it is used or new; where complaints should be directed; an explanation of the cost, interest and finance charges; and a 30-day cancellation notice.

This cancellation clause allows you to cancel the purchase of the hearing aid, for any reason, within 30 days. To cancel the buyer must notify the seller by writing him at the address given on the contract. After notification, the seller has 15 days to return any money to the consumer and terminate all financial obligations.

If you have any questions about the sale of hearing aids or want to know how to cancel a contract, contact the Office of Attorney General, Division of Consumer Protection, Frankfort, Ky. 40601 or call, toll-free 1-800-372-2960.

"Have You Hugged Your Kid Today?"

The familiar slogan now seen on everything from T-shirts to billboards is the brainchild of the Kentucky Department for Human Resources Bureau for Social Services.

At the outset Commissioner Jack C. Lewis said that the bumper sticker was an effort to "provoke parents to take positive action in expressing their feeling of love and care for their children."

Now he said that what started out as a Kentucky bumper sticker has mushroomed into a popular worldwide request item.

The response has been "overwhelming and totally unexpected," he said.

Commissioner Lewis has answered more than 1,000 written requests for the stickers and has distributed more than 120,000.

The Bureau has received "letters, copies of editorials and news articles and other forms of comments," said Lewis.

Now the bumper sticker is in all 50 states and also in 16 foreign countries—Australia, Canada; England, Europe, Balboa, Canal Zone, Panama Canal Zone, Germany, Italy, Japan, Korea, New Zealand, Okinawa, Puerto Rico, Saudi Arabia, Spain and West Germany.

No matter the form hand written or typed on ~~note~~ paper or stationery—the message is always the same: I love your bumper sticker and would like to have some.

Gospel Meeting at Church of Christ

A Gospel Meeting will begin May 7th at the Eubank Church of Christ with services each evening at 7:30 p.m.

Brother Alton Bailey will be the guest evangelist for the services and everyone is cordially invited to attend.

Some typical responses:

From Monrovia, California, came a request for 15 bumper stickers to be posted on the police cars for the city.

One woman wrote, "If that sticker makes even one parent take the time to give their kids a genuine loving hug, you (Commissioner Lewis) surely must have a special place reserved for you in the hereafter."

Another woman wrote that she was not in the habit of putting bumper stickers on her car, but that this was one she "couldn't wait" to have on her bumper.

One of the most regular public relations efforts for the bumper sticker has come from a West Coast reporter, George Robeson of the Long Beach, California, Independent.

In one story he wrote that in his eagerness to carry out the message on the bumper sticker, he lovingly but accidentally "nearly strangled" his 10-year-old son.

Another, story of his says that California's react to the bumper sticker because many of them would like to "bring back hugging to stamp out mugging."

We appreciate the interest by Mr. Robeson, Lewis said. "It is most gratifying to have this kind of unsolicited publicity."

Some of the requests even include a small stipend—ranging from a low of 20 cents to a high of 20 dollars—to assist with the cost of reproducing and mailing the stickers said Lewis. The bumper stickers are free.

The most recent reference to the bumper sticker was a story in the February issue of Reader's Digest, which suggested the message as an acceptable child-rearing method.

A successful spin-off of the bumper sticker is the T-shirt which carries the same message. These can be obtained from local foster parents throughout the state for $2.25, or by writing to Audrey Fields, Bureau for Social Services, Department for Human Resources, 403 Wapping St., Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Written requests for the bumper stickers should be addressed to Commissioner Jack C. Lewis at the same address.

Down on the Farm

BY ROY G. BROWN
ASSISTANT VICE PRESIDENT

Looks like the politicians are still at the same old game, tax, tax, tax, again. To bring the money through Washington and by past records show that any money goes through Washington by the time the politicians and bureaucrats get their part the taxpayers lose 95 cents to every dollar.

If we need to conserve energy and I believe all us Americans know that we must be more saving with our natural resources not only for ourselves but other generations coming on after us, why not ration our energy supplies so that every American will receive his share whether rich or poor. Just by increasing taxes would be unfair to the farmers saving those who work and produce food. And farmers are already hard hit with high cost of everything that goes into producing food, not only for Americans but for the rest of the world. The secretary of state and defense use food to trade with oil producing countries for fuel and other trade items at the farmers expense.

They plan on raising the cost of energy to reduce the use of it, in other words they are going to get the wealthy will be able to own a car or heat their homes in a modern way. The rest of us will go back to coal and wood for heat, as the old saying goes the rich get richer and poor, poorer as the profit on oil goes up.

It would not take much more administrative help to handle rationing than it will to handle the tax money by the politicians and bureaucrats and it would be fair and just for everybody whether rich or poor.

Farmers if you are concerned about still higher cost of fuel, freight and all other things that you buy to produce food, write your senator and congressman, from "Down on the Farm."

Ingredients For Investment

Housing prices have gone up steeply since the mid-60's for two basic reasons. First, the shortage of new savings made it difficult to finance private housing and the number of new housing units built each year was far below that what it should have been. Since there is a steady growth in population, this puts pressure on our housing reserves and prices rise.

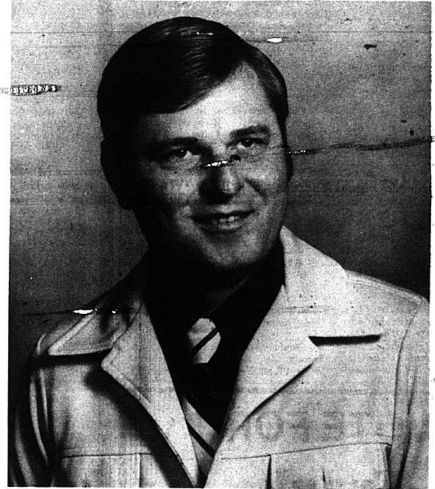

Second, there have been inflationary increases in the labor and materials costs that go into building a house. In most urban areas, land values continue to go up each year, too. Historically, real estate values have always increased faster than the cost of living. Thus, it is an excellent inflation hedge.

So here are the ready-made ingredients for a good investment. We all need housing of some kind, and, according to the experts, the price of housing will continue to go even higher, though perhaps, not as dramatically as in the past few years.

They Could Save Your Family's Lives
They are inexpensive and easy to install, yet they could save your family's lives. They are the single most effective piece of equipment ever devised to prevent fire deaths.

Chicago may require them in about 235,000 of that city's 1.2 million apartments.

The Federal Government will not approve VA or FHA new housing loans unless structures have them.

A number of states require them in new consumer housing and Montgomery County, Maryland, will require all homes to be equipped with them by July 1, 1978.

A growing number of families whose lives were saved by their often enthusiastic testimony to their effectiveness.

"They" are fire and smoke detectors, new products being sold like appliances but with a key difference: they literally can save lives by sounding a peering 85-decibel blast when they detect fire or smoke.

About 7,000 people die in residential fires in the United States each year, about three-quarters of them at night. Many of those lives could have been saved had their homes had fire and smoke detectors.

But not all fire and smoke detectors are alike, and consumers would be well advised to spend a little time in comparison shopping before entrusting their lives to the unit or units purchased.

Some detectors are plug-in, others are battery operated. The battery operated units don't rely on house current but are being interrupted by a fire and can be installed anywhere, whether there is a nearby outlet or not.

When the battery gets too weak to power the unit, the horn "chirps" once a minute to alert the consumer to replace the battery.

A key point is whether the unit being considered meets various safety and performance standards. The current Underwriters Laboratory standard becomes much tougher on July 1, 1977.

The California State Fire Marshall has standards for fire and smoke detectors as does the National Fire Protection Association under its Standard No. 74.

For maximum protection, a unit that complies with all those standards should be chosen.

Federal and State radiological health agencies have advised that investigations indicate that home fire and smoke detectors do not present radiation hazards to health.

Finally, choose a unit that has readily replaceable low cost batteries from a specialty store.

One caution: if over the instructions should be read and followed for any product, this is that instance. The better units describe proper installation and testing of the detector and even list the type of UL listed batteries that should be used when the battery provided finally gets too weak for safety.

Experts estimate up to 60 percent of the lives lost due to home fires could have been saved if fire and smoke detectors were present.

QUESTION NOT

I question not the winds that blow,
Or where the sparrows come to go.
Nor do I ask the time or place,
Why fassles set the form or pace,
To cause a moral undertow.

I could not guess why every spring,
Causes birds to nest and sing,
Why insects mate with swan like grace.
I question not.

SUN BEAMS

They tinkle the curtains with obvious

And prance across the floor like a bright

The bring part of the golden,
From the outside to within.

And dance before my gazing eyes,
As if in me, they've found a friend.

The twirl in front of my windows,
They flutter through the glass in my

But when a cloud hides the sun for a moment,
They vanish through an enchanted floor.

Quail Homemakers Meet at Mrs. Martin's Home

Mrs. Martin's Home

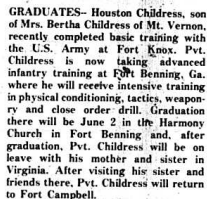

The Quail Homemakers regular monthly meeting was held Monday, April 18, at the home of Mrs. Carol Martin.

The nine members that were present answered the roll call by naming their favorite spring flower.

Our lesson that was scheduled to be on "Inexpensive Weekend Excursions," was not available to us due to the recent flooding in the southeastern part of the state. We discussed several items of business both old and new. Some of the club plans to motor to Lexington and Booneville on May 3rd as a part of the National Homemakers Week.

The hostess served a variety of delicious congealed salads with wheat toast and club crackers.

Next month everyone plan to go to the home of Mrs. Glenda Riddle on May 16th, at 7:30 p.m.

Over 600 youth throughout Rockcastle County are gardening in the 4-H SUI Garden Projects. Fourth, fifth and sixth grades and special education classes in the elementary schools are growing beans, tomatoes, peppers, marigolds, cucumbers, and cabbage in their window gardens. Each youth learns by keeping a record of the growth of the vegetable plants. This program was sponsored by the Rockcastle County 4-H Council. Seeds were donated by the Rockcastle Farm Service. Shown are members of Marysue Esping's third and fourth grades at Roundstone: Christine Cope, Chris Manzi, and Donnie Coffey.

Rockcastle Recollections

by John Lair

Can any reader give us specific information on the various fording places on Rockcastle River, from pioneer times to the present? History is not very definite in pinpointing the actual crossings. It is well established that Boone's road-cutting crew in laying out the trace to Boonesboro crossed at the mouth of Parkers' Creek, near the Lamero post office on old U.S. 25. The crossing at Crews Ferry, north of Lamero, was not definitely established until a much later date.

Another crossing of long standing was at Livingston, Kentucky, a short distance down river from the rail road bridge. I can remember when this ford was used by wagons and was also the crossing for the old stage coach road to the Wildcat-Battle Grounds. Near here a wooden bridge was once erected for horse and wagon admin livestock traffic. Earlier, I believe, there was a tollgate established here.

These are the two best established crossings of the Rockcastle. Further downstream the fording places frequently changed. For awhile there was a shallow crossing just below the confluence of Rockcastle and Little Rockcastle Rivers, and some distance below that was what was known in earlier days as Horse Ford, used frequently by packhorse caravans carrying the belongings of pioneer families coming into Kentucky to establish their future homes. These fords were shallow places in the river, caused by the accumulation of silt and sand being deposited by receding flood waters. The next flood which came along might wash these deposits out and move them down stream, thus deepening the water at the old ford and causing the formation of another. We cannot say definitely where the original Skaggs Trace crossed the Rockcastle but presumably it was at either the ford near the mouth of Little Rockcastle or else Horse Ford, which was nearer to where Skaggs Creek entered Rockcastle River.

The main travelled trail north from Cumberland Gap terminated at Hazel Patch. From that point other trails originated, branching out in different directions. The original Hazel Patch got its name from a large patch of hazelnut bushes. After the coming of the rail roads a station near this location was named Hazel Patch and the location of the original Hazel Patch was more or less forgotten. Russel Dwyer, in his very informative history of Laurel County, published in 1954, says that at that time the original Hazel Patch was "still a hazel patch" and to the east of the railroad station of the same name. This was the site of Woods' Blockhouse, erected in 1793, and the earliest permanent building in the Wilderness. If in going from the Hazel Patch on his way to discover Skaggs Creek, in 1769, Henry Skaggs followed Little Rockcastle he must have crossed the main Rockcastle River at the ford near present Ft. Sequoyah; if he went down Woods Creek he very likely crossed the river at Horse Ford, or whatever shallow place in the river was near there and the mouth of Skaggs Creek.

Fishing Report

Several days of rain have dropped the surface water temperatures on most major lakes back into the 60's as fishing is now generally fair across the state. The lake-by-lake rundown, as compiled by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources:

Cumberland: Crappie fair still and drift fishing minnows over submerged cover; black bass fair on the lower lake on crank and spinner baits of shallow banks; white bass and crappie fair at night on the lower lake in clear water in large tributaries; in headwaters, white bass good on Laurel and Rockcastle Rivers at backwaters of Cumberland; in tailwaters, crappie and trout good; clear to murky to muddy, stable, 21 feet below the timberline and 67 degrees.

Laurel: Black bass good on surface lures and spinner baits in inlets and bays; crappie good around submerged cover; clear to murky, rising slowly, 22 feet above summer pool and 69 degrees.

Barren: Black bass good on the lower lake on surface lures, crank and spinner baits; clear to murky, stable at power pool and 66 degrees.

Boone: Black bass good on the lower lake on surface lures, crank and spinner baits; clear to murky, stable at power pool and 66 degrees.

Boone in making his hurried journey to warn survivors of the dangers of approaching Indian troubles, in 1774, must have followed Skaggs' Trace, crossing the river wherever the trace then led. It is impossible that he, may have followed the same route in coming into Kentucky on his trip of exploration in 1769, although indications are that he could have used the Parkers Creek crossing since he established his first hunting camp on the west branch of the Rockcastle River not far above where Parkers Creek enters the river and was the scientific father of the degree of wilderness in the earlier days. Boone must have travelled it more than once and it was the principal route followed by the Long Hunters in their hunting excursions at the time when he was making his most extensive explorations of the Kentucky Country.

At any rate, the Skaggs Trace, was the first and most travelled way into the Wilderness in the earlier days. Boone must have travelled it more than once and it was the principal route followed by the Long Hunters in their hunting excursions at the time when he was making his most extensive explorations of the Kentucky Country.

I have given much of the history of Skaggs Trace in earlier articles in this series, but I am now indebted to D. Graves for a particularized account of the Skaggs Trace, or the Crab Creek Road, as has known it from childhood. In this account, he says the Skaggs Trace from Rocky Bend went up Big Trace for some distance, then crossed by the Little Trace, then up Skaggs Creek to Walnut Cove, across another Ridge and back to the creek again, near the Craig Cromer Hill and around a hillside John H. Cromer's to the bend of the creek near the Henry Rowe place. Crossing at the bend of the creek, it went up another ridge and followed to about the Dade Smith place then down a branch near the John Nichols house and across a small ridge where Howard Bullock's barn stands and down to the creek and crossing just below the McKinney Cemetery. Just below the cemetery, it went around and up the hill to near the Red Jim Bullock house place then to the top of the ridge and around to Low Gap. From the Low Gap the trace crossed Jones' Creek and on to near Skaggs Creek Church through where Spiro now is, to Painter's Hill to where James Davises' Station was, then across Dug Hill and crossing Negro Creek near where the school house was and on across Bowling Ridge to Turkey Creek. After Davis' this station was run by others. Probably Langford was the last to run it, then moved to Mt. Vernon. In Lewis Craig's Journal their coming to and crossing Skaggs Creek about 2 miles up from Rockcastle River was noted. The Old Camp Ground was near here, near the mouth of Little Trace Branch. About 1779 a new trail was cut, turning off Skaggs Trace near Low Gap. This went west of the old trail. The new trail crossed Skaggs Creek then up by McMullen farm, around the hill and down Lawrence Hill, and to Rock Springs, north of Quail and near Ottawa, then to Turkey Creek. This trail through the Glades was not used much, apparently because of so much mud.

To The Citizens And Voters In The Rockcastle County Primary Election May 24, 1977:

In last week's newspapers, I said I would tell you how we disposed of the $240,000.00 indebtedness and how we paid it off. This debt was made over a period of years, commencing 15 years or more before my term, by the judge and magistrates in office during that time; and, it was all done for political purposes. For instance, if a magistrate had some road work done, he would give a voucher to some individual for a certain amount, whether it was legal or not, and for anything else that the judge or magistrates needed or wanted until a debt of $140,000.00 accumulated illegally.

The law is that you cannot spend more than the amount of revenue or money collected during the year beginning July 1st and ending the last day of June of the next year which is called a fiscal year. Anything over this amount is illegal and has been so from the time of our present constitution.

The defaulted interest on the above amount over the years amounted to $100,000.00 making a total of $240,000.00. I wanted to do something about this debt and got in touch with a bonding company in Maysville, Kentucky, by and through Lewis Miller, a drug salesman at that time. The bonding company agreed to buy bonds for $240,000.00 less the accumulated interest of $100,000.00 provided it could be done legally.

Our next step was to file a friendly suit in Federal Court to be approved by the court. Robert Bird, County Attorney at that time, filed the suit and, in due time, it was approved by the then Federal Judge.

The bonding company advertised and sold the bonds of $140,000.00 in 140 one thousand dollar bonds with coupon attached with an interest rate of 3% graduating up to 4 1/2% and callable in 5 years. If any were called, the last or 4 1/2% would be the first called. The bonding company agreed to buy any or all of the bonds that the public didn't buy.

At the time these bonds were issued, we were right in the middle of the depression years, but after 4 or 5 years, World War II was on and county revenue began to pick up. We started having a surplus of money and commenced buying these funding bonds until they were all bought up in about 12 years. They have long since been paid and burned according to law.

Everybody that had these vouchers were glad to sell at the stated agreement because they were not getting anything the way it had been going.

You see, I had to do a lot of work and thinking to get this matter taken care of. You can't just sit on your fanny and expect somebody to do and think for you. You have to be up and about tending to the things people elect you for.

Next week, I will take up our present road system, how and when it was started.

You can do many, many things as judge of a county that will be beneficial for the young people and all concerned if you will work at it.

The people don't elect a judge just to sit in an office and pat you on the back and say I'll see about it.

"Mental Health Matters"
The Over-Aggressive Child

Is your child exhibiting over-aggressive behavior? A child who frequently hurts other people seriously, without an apparent reason, is crossing the line between ordinary childhood behavior and over-aggression.

Physical "punishment" will not provide the remedy for overly-aggressive behavior. What it will do is cause the child to become angry at the adult. It also actually teaches him to resort to physical violence in order to cope with his problems. An alternate way to handle excessive aggression, is to teach a child other, less explosive, more constructive ways to handle his differences with people.

Adults should demonstrate or model the techniques of negotiation, and reward children as they learn to use them. For more information or help, contact your mental health center.

"The law enforcement ticket"

First of all, I would like to talk to you about my eligibility for the Sheriff's office. When I first got interested in the Sheriff's race it was as a deputy with Mr. Shelley Mullins. Mr. Mullins, after a while, felt that his age would not permit him to be the kind of Sheriff that he would want to be. So he came to me and told me that if I would run for Sheriff he would not run. So I had an attorney to write the Attorney General's office and explain the circumstances about my eligibility and he advised me that I would be eligible and to file, now I am on the Ballot and will be in the No. 1 position.

Since announcing for Sheriff my deputies and I have been to many homes throughout the County. We have received an awful lot of encouragement and have been asked a lot of questions concerning the law enforcement of our County. They wonder why they can't leave their homes to go to church, and other places, like a vacation, or visit friends and relatives, without coming home and finding their homes looted. People say that they are selling their antiques and anything of value so that they will be of less risk to being burglarized.

People are scared to death to leave their homes for any length of time. I have chosen two sober men to be Deputy Sheriffs with me and if we are elected I promise the people of this county that we will enforce the law. I want every voter to know that we are a "law enforcement ticket". I pledge that we will be present at all school functions, such as ball games and anything where the public is in attendance. We will assist our funeral homes whenever they need us. All three of us will be subject to call 24 hours a day. We will have at least two radio equipped cars and we will answer all calls that are legitimate. We will cooperate with all law enforcement agencies such as K.S.P. and local police investigators in such crimes as they are of need. One of our top priorities is to try our very best to stop your homes from being burglarized and I know we can if we all cooperate in this.

FROM THE OFFICE OF DEE HUDDLESTON-U.S. SENATOR

Senator Walter (Dee) Huddleston says the Federal Grain Inspection Act Amendments passed this week by the Senate will benefit Western Kentucky grain farmers and operators of country grain elevators in the state. The legislation, which Huddleston floor-managed, is designed to correct deficiencies in the bill passed last year by Congress setting up the Federal Grain Inspection Service. This month agency will provide grain inspection services at major Gulf Coast ports.

First of all, the legislation passed by the Senate will eliminate the supervisory fees that would have been levied by the new service—fees which the Agriculture Committee felt would have been passed on to the grain farmer, thus reducing the profit from the sale of his grain," said Huddleston, chairman of the Senate agriculture subcommittee on marketing, production and stabilization of prices.

Reed Brothers Garage & Auto Salvage

Jack and Arvel Reed - Owners

For used auto parts go to the REED BROTHERS GARAGE & AUTO SALVAGE located West on Hwy. 80 in London, Phone 864-6990.

All Jack and Arvel Reed's employees are familiar with automobiles and trucks and are courteous and accommodating. We have examined the Revenue Sharing Fund Statement of Revenue, Appropriations, Encumbrances, Expenditures and Balance and Statement of Obligations Incurred of Rockcastle County for the year ended June 30, 1975. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards and the "Audit Guide and Standards for Revenue Sharing Receipts" issued by the office of Revenue Sharing, U.S. Department of the Treasury, and accordingly included such tests of the accounting records and such other auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

As part of our examination, we made a study of compliance matters as prescribed in section V. D. of the "Guide" for the year ended June 30, 1975. Our study of conditions, which relates to the requirements cited above, disclosed no conditions which we considered matters of non-compliance.

In our opinion the Statement of Revenue, Appropriations, Encumbrances, Expenditures and Balance, and Statement of Obligations Incurred present fairly the revenue, expenditures, obligations incurred and status of revenue sharing funds of Rockcastle County for the year ended June 30, 1975, in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

Honorable Hubert Thacker, County Judge and Members of the Rockcastle County Fiscal Court
Mount Vernon, Kentucky

We have examined the Statement of Assets, Liabilities and Fund Balance Arising From Cash Transactions of Rockcastle County as of June 30, 1975, and the related Statement of Operations From Cash Transactions for the year then ended. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards, and accordingly included such tests of the accounting records and such other auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

The County did not operate in accordance with provisions of the Uniform County Budget Law. The County overspent (see Schedule B) the General Fund Budget by $4,818.

We recommend that the County Treasurer keep a Ledger to include all disbursements by the County. This Ledger could make available to the Fiscal Court better financial information during the operating year.

At the time of this audit there were no inventory records being maintained for County owned equipment. However, the County Officials are now in the process of preparing an inventory of their equipment.

In our opinion, the financial statements mentioned above present fairly the assets, liabilities and fund balance resulting from the cash transactions of Rockcastle County at June 30, 1975, and its revenue collected and expenses paid for the year ended on the cash basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

Antidote and Treatment For Parquat Poisoning

Parquat, like most agricultural chemicals, is poisonous and if swallowed in sufficient quantity can cause death. However, there is an effective treatment involving an antidote, which had resulted in a complete recovery in several recent cases. This treatment program must be carried out by a physician, and it is essential that treatment be started as soon as possible. If you know or suspect that someone has swallowed parquat or spilled a large amount on the skin, follow the first aid instructions on the label and take him straight to a physician. Bring a parquat container with you and show the label to the doctor. Ask him to contact the Chevron Poison Information Center at (415) 233-3737 for professional assistance and to arrange for a supply of the antidote if necessary.

Massie Recommends Rotation

Tobacco diseases are normally more common in fields with a history of continuous tobacco cultivation, said Ira Massie, UK extension tobacco specialist. For that reason, he advises tobacco growers to rotate their crops on a regular basis. He recommends a six-year rotation program in three to five years in tobacco in a field and four years out. He said such a program is an expensive precaution against many of the diseases common to tobacco. Massie pointed out about two percent of Kentucky's cropland is used annually for tobacco with that two percent returning about a third of the total agricultural income in the state. "So it behooves us to take care of our tobacco land potential and the best way is to rotate the crop," he said. He noted field rotation provides other advantages to the burley grower. "Research has shown that burley tobacco grown in rotation with sod crops, such as orchardgrass and fescue, produces a higher yield per acre of better quality burley than when the tobacco is grown continuously on one field," he said.

Massie urged growers to be sure to make a proper selection of crops grown in rotation with tobacco, because some crops appear to encourage the development of certain tobacco disease problems.

The recommendations to use three fields in a six-year rotation program is to allow the grower the opportunity to build the desirable pH level, phosphorus and potash.

As soon as the tobacco rotation is completed a soil test should be made to determine the nutrient levels. The required nutrients should be added to produce good stands of grass and legumes and to provide the proper balance of nutrients needed for the tobacco that will follow the grasses.

The grasses and legumes on the fields in which they are out of tobacco cultivation should be used in rotation to increase their efficiency. By using grasses and legume fields properly, the tobacco diseases become less pronounced and bare production of forages will be realized.

Since the tobacco grower is interested primarily in what is happening in the soil more in the production of the forages and legumes indicate to the grower that the soil is being properly conditioned for return to the tobacco rotation.

He emphasized the importance of liming fields in which tobacco is grown. "Liming of tobacco soils is essential to obtain maximum yields of high quality tobacco," Massie said. It's unfortunate so many problems during the summer arise from the lack of lime.

"I would urge you to lime your soils now if soil tests show it is needed," he advised, adding, "Be sure and get a soil test made. It's important to your tobacco crop and essential in a rotation program."

Vegetable Crops - Disease Carried on Transplants

Commercial producers of tomatoes, peppers and cabbage in Kentucky often make use of transplants produced and shipped in from states farther south. In addition many chain stores and garden centers are selling transplants grown in southern states.

Growers of vegetables need to know that some disease can be brought in on the transplants. Disease organisms are carried on the plant material often before established in our fields and result in serious losses. We have observed transplants past their best that had not been certified, were found to be seriously diseased, and were subsequently destroyed to prevent spread of the disease organism into grower's fields.

Transplants produced in many southern states are inspected at regular intervals under a certification program. Certified, disease-free transplants are recommended for use and often will pay dividends in terms of reduced disease incidence during the growing season.

Tomato transplants may carry fungal leaf spots including early and late blights, fungal and bacterial wilts, bacterial leaf spot, root knot, and virus diseases. Cabbage transplants may bear club root, black leg, black rot or root knot.

(Inspect vegetable transplants as soon as they arrive and look for disease symptoms or signs of the pathogens. Look for the following abnormalities: a) Dark brown or black spots or lesions on the leaves or stems of transplants.

ation of internal stem tissue (vascular tissue or pith).

c) Yellowing, mosaic, or mottling pattern on leaves.
d) Swellings or galls on roots.

"An injurious to us is a menace to all," Montesquieu

b) Wiltling of plants, especially if one sided, accompanied by brown discoloration.

STRETCHING YOUR FOOD DOLLAR

Look for the date on perishable foods in the market when you shop especially in the dairy counter and fresh meat sections. Usually the date will be found at the top of the milk carton or at the bottom of the label on a package of meat. Other food products, such as packages of cereal, may also have a date to help you with your shopping. Read the label and let the information provided there help you with your shopping.

Here's a tip that should help once-a-week grocery shoppers avoid waste. Use fresh produce and other perishables first. Then rely on canned and frozen foods to carry you through the rest of the week.

William Frank Adams Charged With Murder in Death of Berea Man

William Frank Adams, 37, of Wildie has been charged with murder in connection with the Friday night slaying of Virgil Eugene Hollandsworth, 20, of Route 4, Berea.

The shooting occurred at the home of Mrs. Ada Martin, 37, on the Copper Creek Road in Rockcastle County. Hollandsworth was shot once in the chest with a 16-gauge shotgun.

State Police detective Colan Harrell said Adams was arrested about 3 p.m. Sunday at the residence of Bruce Chasteen on the Cole Bank Road at Wildie. Harrell said the shooting apparently took place when Hollandsworth and two friends arrived at the front entrance of Mrs. Martin's residence. He said a shot was fired from inside the house, went through the storm door and hit Hollandsworth in the chest.

Adams was also charged with first degree wanton endangerment for allegedly aiming the murder weapon at one of Hollandsworth's friends. Harrell said the shooting apparently was over Mrs. Martin, allegedly a friend of both. Adams was arraigned Monday in County Court where he waived a preliminary hearing to the Grand Jury. Bail was set at $50,000.

Hollandsworth, a native of Rockcastle County, is survived by his mother, Mrs. Barbara Ann Hollandsworth of Route 4, Berea; his father, Virgil Hollandsworth of Cincinnati, Ohio; four brothers and one sister and his maternal grandmother, Mrs. Georgia Mullins, of this county.

Funeral services were held Monday morning at Wray Funeral Home in Berea with burial in the Fobtown Cemetery, Madison County.

Smith Assumes Position With Citizens Bank

Keith Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Smith formerly of Wildie, has accepted the position of management trainee with Citizens Bank in Brodhead. Prior to accepting the Brodhead position, Mr. Smith had been in Moultrie, Georgia where he was employed with Farmers Home Administration.

A graduate of Mt. Vernon High School, Mr. Smith earned his B.S. degree in agriculture and business affairs from Eastern Kentucky University. He also has had additional courses in agriculture financial management at the University of Georgia and studied real estate appraisals at the University of Oklahoma.

Mr. Smith is married to the former Jerri Lynn Nunneley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Nunneley, of Mt. Vernon.

Mr. Smith recently was named a management trainee at the bank.

John Lair, founder of Renfro Valley, is shown welcoming the crowd to Renfro Valley for Founder's Day last Saturday.

Also with Mr. Lair in the photo are, Alpha Smith, left, and Glenn Pennington. The three men own the Renfro Valley entertainment complex, including the Red Barn across the road where modern country music is performed.

Jethro Burns of the team of Homer and Jethro, looked quite different that Mr. Lair's description of the "poor hillbilly boy" who came to Renfro Valley in search of work as a performer for the Founder's Day crowd last Saturday.

Renfro Valley is Now State Historical Site

By: Roger Coldiron

The great, the new-great, faded stars and stars still gleaming with excellence as well as the not yet great all came together last Saturday to pay tribute to the man, John Lair; the place, Renfro Valley; and the story of it's people.

Jethro Burns, Merle Travis, Lily Mae Ledford, Coy Friddy, Cotton Foley, Betty Foley, The Duke of Paducah, and Joe Clark were there in person. Homer Haines, Red Foley and all the others who have passed on, were there in spirit. Mr. Lair introduced each and the stage in the old barn came alive with their performances once more.

Mr. Lair remembered the day that two boys from the mountains of Tennessee made their way to the Valley and asked him for a job. One played a mandolin and the other a guitar. They owned an old Model A Ford and one change of overalls that were at least six inches too short. The team later became famous as Homer and Jethro, and are still known as the greatest of country comedy teams.

The Duke of Paducah forgot his green coat and trousers, but the trappings mattered little when he spun his comical yarns. He still goes to the wagon 'cause his shoes are still a 'killin' him.

Merle Travis came in his Cadillac with a California license plate that reads "16 Tons". He sang "9 Pound Hammer" and never seemed to miss his electric guitar.

Betty and Cotton Foley represented the late Red Foley whose gospel music still echoes in the hollows of Eastern Kentucky. Red is gone but his presence was felt the occasion just seemed to call for it.

Lily Mae Ledford, a woman obviously ill, came and though she couldn't perform, carried herself with the dignity of a queen. The Coon Creek Girl that performed in the Whitehouse for the British Royalty was still there.

Coy Friddy performed real hillbilly music for an audience that was made up largely of out-of-staters. They were a little confused, to say the least, but finally seemed to realize there was no deep hidden meaning of it all; it was just plain fun.

All the sentiment came to head when everybody poured out of the barn to watch the unveiling of a bronze plaque placed in the yard in front of the main buildings! Prayers were said and certificates were presented and finally the plaque was unveiled. Forever embossed on that plaque are a few of the great performers at Renfro Valley and a capsule summary of the Valley's story.

Renfro Valley is now officially a state historic site. Thank you John Lair; Thank you, Red Foley; Thank you, Homer and Jethro; Thank you, Merle Travis...

Frankfort Watchline

By Ferrell Wellman

Throughout the marble halls of the Capitol, two topics dominated conversation: the energy crisis and the increasing number of confrontations between Auditor George Atkins and the members of the Carroll Administration.

First, the energy crisis. While President Jimmy Carter's far-reaching energy proposals were capturing the April news headlines, the state of Kentucky was releasing its own energy conservation plan. Unlike the president's, the state blueprint relies more heavily on voluntary conservation rather than imposed taxes and penalties to control usage.

For one of the first times in a month filled with energy related developments, state energy czar Damon Harrison was able to settle behind his desk on the ninth floor of the towered Capital Plaza complex to explain his five page plan.

Harrison's proposal meets the requirements of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act of 1975. After it's put together in its final form and approved by Governor Julian Carroll, it will be submitted to the Federal Energy Administration for funding. It should be on its way to Washington no later than mid May.

Kentucky homeowners appear to get the most from the proposal. Energy conservation audits will be done over a period of three years for all existing homes. Homeowners will have a choice of doing their own thermal efficiency computations on forms distributed by the state, or they may fill out an information form and the computation will be done by computer in Frankfort.

In addition, within three years new thermal efficiency standards will be implemented by the state fire marshal. Tough, new insulation standards could save Kentucky homeowners as much as 10 percent in fuel bills.

It's also possible the state fire marshal will be telling new business to cut back in their lighting. Under the Kentucky plan, all new and existing public buildings will have mandatory thermal and lighting efficiency standards.

A product efficiency data bank will be established for state government. It will assess a product's energy efficiency. In agriculture, an energy efficiency program will stress proper machinery, irrigation, grain drying and fertilizing techniques.

Existing carpool projects in the state's urban areas will be continued.

and in some cases expanded. Energy curriculum material is being developed by the Kentucky Department of Education for use in the public schools.

For commerce and industry, selected buildings will be audited for energy usage and efficiency. After the audits, they will be utilized as field laboratories for energy studies.

Looking to the future, a tax incentive program for solar installation will be drafted.

Harrison says the plan will cost an estimated $5 million in the next four years, by the energy saved could reach seven percent.

This spring, Kentucky's Auditor of Public Accounts, George Atkins, has intensified his attacks on the administration.

The latest headline on the newspaper column which Atkins sends across the state reads: "The Highway Commissioner Gets a Road." The column deals with a $350,000 project to pave only 2.5 miles of Woodford County road which cuts in front of property owned by John Roberts, once Carroll's transportation chief. Citing health reasons, Roberts resigned from his highway post in March to become Carroll's secretary in the less demanding Public Protection and Regulation Cabinet.

Some Carroll insiders still consider Roberts innocent of any wrongdoing. Innocent or now, a few in the Carroll camp will admit that Atkins' facts certainly make Roberts look bad. Atkins has also continued his pressure on state finance boss Russell McClure over the issuance of personal services contracts.

The auditor's split from the governor first became public last spring when Atkins, without Carroll's okay, became state chairman for Sen. Henry Jackson's presidential effort in Kentucky. Carroll's people saw this as an attempt by Atkins to begin setting up his own statewide organization for later use. That Jackson's a close political ally of Sen. Wendell Ford wasn't lost on the Carroll camp, either: Atkins had earlier served as a campaign official in Ford's 74 Senate race, and he was generally thought to be a member of the Ford faction in the Kentucky Democrat Party.

Since the spring of '76 the split has become wider with the cracks coming much faster.

What bothers some Carroll people is not so much what Atkins is saying, but rather that he's saying it at all. "You don't bite the hand that feeds you," is a political truism in Frankfort. Carroll clearly fed Atkins during the 1975 election.

Atkins had ambitions for higher office, but was dissuaded by Carroll who convinced him to try for auditor. Atkins easily whipped George Herman Kendall in the primary, but the real story, according to a Carroll supporter, was in who didn't run. Whom did the governor keep out of the race? "You can bet there was several," says one member of the Carroll team. While this Carroll insider considers Atkins an ingrate, he also thinks Atkins could be quickly becoming the frontrunner in the 1979 governor's race.

Atkins is playing a dangerous political game. So far, he seems to be winning.

To the Voters of Rockcastle County

By now, most of you are aware that I am a candidate for Jailer.

I have never before asked for your vote and support. I am very much concerned about the safety of the people who are put in jail.

Only the people who are interested can help make the jail a better place.

Vote for a man who is concerned about these things.

WHERE WAS HE?

It may come as a surprise to most of you to walk into the voting booth this primary election and find that you are not going to elect a District Judge for Rockcastle County who is from Rockcastle County.

The Legislature gave two judgeships for the Pulaski and Rockcastle District - not for the counties. The result is that these two judges for this District are both from Somerset. The police courts are gone. The Magistrates Courts are gone. The local courts have been replaced. Where was our elected representative to speak for us and to get us a Judge from Rockcastle County to serve the people of Rockcastle County?

The report is that spurred on by fears of vegetable shortages occasioned by winter weather conditions and rising prices of groceries in general, record numbers of Americans will put out home gardens this spring. As a matter of fact, the prestigious Time, News and World Report, states that roughly half of all U.S. households will plant at least a few vegetable this year. To help these gardeners, especially those who will garden for the first time, UK Garden Specialist, Mary Hotze, offers this piece of advice: Control insects and plant diseases. The accomplishment of this objective can mean the difference between satisfactory success and abject failure.

And how can this be done? First contact your local extension agent, talk the situation over and then follow his advice.

One of the keys to successful gardening and control of insects and diseases, is correct materials. Most insect pests can be controlled with Sevin and Malathion. Both are relatively safe and very effective in inhibiting the nefarious activities of most garden insects. To control most plant disease, use one or more of the following "medicines": Maneb, Zineb, Captan, or one of the coppers. In case of disease, the trick is the identification, or diagnosis of the disease. In this instance, the advice of an extension agent can prove invaluable. An expert in plant medicine, the right dosage and the right method of application.

Something else important: Don't wait until your bunch beans are dying from root rot, your tomatoes suffering from early blight or blossom end rot, or others of your vegetable plants are about eaten up by tiger beetles, flea beetles, earworms, or Mexican bean bugs. Check with your extension agent, find out what problems to expect and start control measures early. For example, Captan used at the time of bunch bean planting may mean the difference between a good stand of healthy plants and a few sickly plants that will bear no crop at all.

Most insect and plant disease control measures involve dusting or spraying and whatever measure the extension agent recommends, it should be thorough. With either treatment, cover the entire portion of the plant and shows above ground.

Most insect and plant control measures involve dusting and spraying, but whatever measure or measures the extension agent may recommend, it must be thorough, and, in most cases, it must be continued. The main thing is, don't give up. This is one place where perseverance pays off. A world of effort and research and plant disease control, controls important to even the professional gardener. Your local extension agent is abreast of all this

Small Watershed Projects Under Review

At President Carter's request USDA's Soil Conservation is conducting a review of all small watershed projects information and to have a good garden this year, consult with him and use him.

In Kentucky under construction or approved for construction, SCS State Conservationist Glen Murray said today.

Projects under review include those administered by SCS under Public Law 566, which limits the size of watershed areas to no more than 250,000 acres. The multi-purpose projects always call for land treatment to reduce soil erosion and siltation. They generally include such flood prevention structures as earthen dams and water impoundments. Many projects also provide local people with domestic and industrial water supply, irrigation water, recreation, and fish and wildlife habitat.

Glen Murray said the review will be made in two phases.

"The first screening," he said, "will be to identify those projects that are unquestionably sound—environmentally, economically, and from the standpoint of safety of structures. This phase is to be completed by April 29."

final examination of grower and cigarette industry reports by a four-member Kentucky Farm Bureau oversight committee.

William Balden, Boyle County tobacco producer who heads the committee, told an April 15 meeting in Lexington that a final decision on whether to recommend bales or sheets, the two experimental packages, would be made in four to eight weeks. More than 500 farmers, warehousemen, researchers and manufacturing representatives attended the hour-hour session, held on the University of Kentucky campus.

After the package selection is complete, Balden told the group, every effort will be made to gain approval for loose-leaf burley sales from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Federal Grading Service.

Although Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland first indicated he would oppose giving farmers a choice between hand-typed bundles and loose-leaf, Farm Bureau leaders now are hopeful he can be convinced of the cost savings potential in the new methods. Bergland had said he would meet with loose-leaf proponents at the conclusion of the experimental program.

At the April 15 meeting, several tobacco companies indicated they could accept loose-leaf burley, but asked for up to two years to adapt their processing, handling and storage equipment to the new forms. Reports were mixed on whether bales or burba sheets were preferred, with R.L. Reynolds picking bales, Brown and Williamson asking for sheets, and Philip Morris and Universal Leaf giving no firm preference.

The four firms, all of which have cooperated in Farm Bureau's loose-leaf project, agreed that the final decision on packaging options should be up to growers. None indicated they had found any serious quality problems with bale or sheets during the experimental work.

In an interview following the meeting, Balden stressed that no farmer will be forced to market his tobacco in loose-leaf form, even if loose-leaf packaging is approved. Farm Bureau is seeking to implement either bales or sheets as an optional marketing method, not as a mandatory replacement for the traditional hand-typed bundles, he added.

"I anticipate that some farmers will continue to tie their burley in hands," Balden noted. "But the vast majority who have tried the loose-leaf methods say they wouldn't tie another hand if they get their choice."

Surveyors of farmers in Kentucky and Tennessee who participated in this year's project found that labor savings during the loose-leaf stripping process ranged from 31 to 57 percent, compared to stripping time required for hand-tying the tobacco.

Three Victim Promotes Marking Program

Police statistics citing a dramatic increase in rural crime during the last few years don't exactly come as a surprise to Tom Whitehouse.

The Marion County farmer was victimized by thieves two years ago, and no trace was ever found of the two Massey-Ferguson tractors, then worth more than $10,000 that were stolen one spring night from his barn lot.

Whitehouse is now an enthusiastic supporter of Operation Identification, a program designed to encourage farmers to mark their farm machinery, as well as hand tools and household items, with their individual Social Security numbers.

At an April 18 kick-off of a pilot project in Marion County, Whitehouse and county Farm Bureau President Woodrow Thompson were the first two farmers to mark their tractors and other equipment items with steel marking dies provided by the Farm Bureau, local banks and farm equipment dealers.

Planning is also underway in several other Kentucky counties, as FB officials implement the first phases of a statewide push to promote marking as a theft deterrent. The effort is being coordinated with the Kentucky Office of Crime Prevention, the state agency overseeing Operation Identification programs for households, business and farms.

In recalling his discovery of the tractor thefts, Whitehouse said the robbers drove the tractors from the barn lot onto the road, so no tractors or other equipment items were damaged. The type of truck was used to haul the two machines.

"Of course, by the time I reported the tractors missing the next morning, they were probably already in another state," he said. "And there I was, ready and plant corn and no tractors. The insurance paid for the tractors, but the inconvenience of trying to put out a crop without machinery was the worst part."

Officials say that widespread marking in a given area is a proven deterrent to thefts. The die markings are almost impossible to erase, and use of Social Security numbers of a piece of machinery constitutes proof of ownership, something difficult to legally establish on an unmarked item of standard farm equipment.

Gas Tax Hike Would Raise Food Prices
Higher gasoline taxes, which could result from some of President Carter's energy proposals, would be damaging to farmers and cause higher food prices to consumers, according to Kentucky Farm Bureau President Bob Wade.

In a recent interview, Wade expressed support for Carter's overall plan to reduce consumption of scarce fuel, but noted that "in agriculture," we can't save much more than we're saving now.

"We have to use gasoline and diesel fuel in our farm machinery every day," Wade said. "Any additional taxes on this type of fuel, in the name of energy conservation, would have to be passed

It was announced about two months ago that those persons on Social Security, S.S. Supplement, railroad retirement, disability, blind and others entitled to cost of living increases would no doubt receive a 5% increase in their July checks. It seems now more likely to be a 6% raise. We can sure use it.

The Rockcastle County Senior Citizens (RSC) visited the William Whitley House in Lincoln County last week and enjoyed a potluck dinner on the grounds. 26 members were taken there in three cars driven by Lois Philbeck, Donna Mahaffey and Evelyn Poyner. A van, loaned by the Free Pentecostal Church, was driven by Janet Bradley, RSC Director.

Mrs. Janet Bradley, Director of RSC, reports the following news:
On Thursday, April 28, there will be a public hearing on the aging programs in our area. This meeting is open to the public and will be held at the D. & W.

Cafeteria in Corbin at 1 p.m.
The Rockcastle County Cookbooks have gone to press and we are hopeful of having them to sell at our May Day Craft Fair and Auction. This will be on the 14th of May at the Rockcastle County Library. Also, anyone wishing to donate handmade items for our Craft Fair, please call our office and we will be glad to pick up your items. Proceeds from the Fair will go to our Senior Citizens Program.

Statistics Released Relating to Flood Disaster

As nearly all Kentucky National Guardsmen withdraw from flood-stricken Eastern Kentucky, Guard officials have announced statistics related to the relief effort.

Adj. Gen. Richard L. Frymire said that more than 250 tons of supplies, ranging from food to blankets to medicine, have been delivered by the Guard.

More than 80 Guard aviators and maintenance technicians worked during the crisis to deliver vital goods and services throughout the area. Between April 5 and April 15, Guard helicopters flew 580 hours on medical evacuation, rescue, and emergency supply missions. Fifteen people were flown to Aviators also delivered 95 tons of general supplies throughout the 15-county area in addition to 8,500 pounds to medical supplies and more than 109,000 pounds of food and water. Water purification units were

Military policemen assisted state and local police in security and traffic control in several counties, while members of mechanized infantry and engineer

CHARLES D. HOLBROOK For County Judge Executive

While campaigning throughout the county, the people's most urgent concerns are crime, schools, law enforcement and jobs. I have fulfilled one campaign promise even before the election that is the selection of a concerned citizens committee.

Crime: Someone is at fault, court officials or law enforcement officials. Laws cannot be enforced from the courthouse, steps or counting cars from restaurant windows. The people see. They cannot be enforced by turning them loose and throwing them back into our laps. The crime. They have scared the tourist away, they won't be back. The county needs the tourist, not for their fines, but as a livelihood as some of our most outstanding citizens depend on them for a living. The committee feels the courthouse should be mounted on wheels and taken to Florida during the winter months as the people are tired of its dark secrets and half truths. It is us, the taxpayer, who feed and maintain these officials at a standard of living higher than most. We are your EMPLOYER. We can and will determine your future employment in this county.

Homebreakers: Beware: Citizens have armed themselves. One day you will enter a not so empty house. It will be too late, your family disgraced, and you buried standing up branded a misfit for all to see. If elected I will correct this vital problem.

Schools: As most of you know our schools are completely dependent upon federal funds to maintain quality education. I feel we now have quality school personnel. To keep them I will enforce all mandatory school laws, there has been a lack of this enforcement. As a former teacher, I will work wholeheartedly with the fiscal court (magistrates) school board and district judge in maintaining school attendance. If elected I will be the servant of the people, and will maintain this office in a proper and correct manner.

I've told the truth, and I've written it down, I'll not motion and whisper around, I'll talk to the people standing on the ground. You know and I know I'll not see everyone, if you wish come see me, I'm on Brindle Ridge, I'll show you a Ginseng Patch or call 758-8682. No private commitments will be discussed, as mine will concern all county residents written and published. See your Magistrates, if I am elected they will be given a free hand in these matters. I will only require equal district representation and quality personnel.

MR. AND MRS. CECIL KING AND FAMILY
MRS. KING WILL HEAD THE CITIZENS
COMMITTEE DURING THIS CAMPAIGN.

IN CLOSING
I feel the things I have mentioned are vital needs concerning all Rockcastle Countians. I would like to be given an opportunity to achieve these goals, I will do more than try. As I compose this statement, letters are on their way to various companies asking for factories, including the Readers Digest, for help in solving our chronic unemployment problems.

'Fellow Republicans and Friends'

Four years ago, I said that your County Judge should realize that he is elected to be a Public Servant. I promise to continue to be aware of this.

Also, four years ago, I listed some goals that I thought we should strive for and I'd like for you to think about these at this time.

They were:

- (1) I believed that our County government needed more cooperation with the towns and all agencies working in behalf of the County.
- (2) I believed that we needed more leadership and encouragement in getting more JOBS for our people. Our young people need a chance to stay in our home county and make a decent living.
- (3) I, as County Judge, felt a responsibility toward providing ambulance service. With cooperation between our hospital and interested citizens-groups - this can be done.
- (4) I believed that the County Judge should speak out on behalf of educational opportunities for our children.
- (5) I believed that the citizens of our good towns of Mt. Vernon, Brodhead and Livingston should feel that they were welcome to join with the County on a good garbage disposal plan.
- (6) My position was that our agricultural efforts should receive more encouragement. A late survey shows that our county's income from farming is over seven million dollars per year. With help and encouragement, this could and should be almost ten million dollars a year.

Naturally, I realize that there is still much more to do toward reaching these goals but, as of now, I am asking that you - the voters and people consider our cooperative effort towards progress.

There are still other goals for us to work towards for a wholesome County. I will list some of these goals that you are indicating you are interested in in other issues of this paper.

I BELIEVE IN PROGRESS - DON'T YOU? I NEED YOUR SUPPORT MAY 24TH.

Sincerely
Hubert Thacker

Kentucky Afield

BY JOHN WILSON

White bass fishing around Kentucky is about to enter the second phase of its yearly cycle. The fish are returning to the main lake after their spawning runs into the headwaters and tributaries, and they're hungry.

The most productive way to take advantage of this post-spawning feeding spree is night fishing. By shining the rays of a lantern or other artificial light into the water directly beside the boat, the fisherman attracts schools of bait fish. This in turn draws in the white bass and the angler is set for a night of fast action.

The best areas of the lake for night fishing are usually along a deep bank, off a point or beside a hogback. The secret of success is attracting the bait fish. Usually an overcast or moonless night is better than bright moonlight, since the darker conditions seem to cause the bait fish to concentrate around the lights more readily.

Most fishermen make night fishing a dusk to dawn affair. Although most activity seems to take place after midnight, it's a good idea to be on the lake before dark to find a good location, anchor the boat at both bow and stern, get the rods rigged, the lanterns fueled up, and so on.

To find the depth at which the white bass are feeding, lower a baited hook to the bottom and retrieve it slowly toward the surface. When a fish takes the bait, count the number of turns of the reel handle that takes to bring him up, and you'll have a good idea of how far down to fish.

Either spinning or bait casting tackle is suitable for this type of fishing, and the most popular hook is a number four or five Aberdeen. Two or three inch minnows are the usual bait. Some other helpful items are two anchors and plenty of line, warm clothing, rain gear and extra light and several gallons of coffee.

If the fishing gets really hot, don't get carried away and forget that the daily and possession limit on white bass is 60 per person. That's a lot of fish, but when conditions are right, limit or near limit strings aren't unusual for the night fisherman.

After being up all night, that's also a lot of fish-cleaning to be done before you can finally hit the sack. But any confirmed night fisherman will tell you this kind of fishing is worth losing sleep over.

When you are eating your morning cereal, you are paying a small tribute to an ancient goddess, Ceres, who was protector of Roman crops.

Remember church and Sunday School. I thank God so much for the wonderful blessings of life, especially our family, relatives and good friends whom we love dearly and all the other precious things. We seem to take for granted so many things, such as being able to see, hear, speak and walk about and do our work. We talked about this Sunday as we drove through the beautiful hills and countryside of Kentucky and Tennessee. The earth and things made by God are so beautiful if we will only take time to look upon them. But we can enjoy and appreciate them more if we have the love of God in our heart. Think about it. God bless you all.

Someone once said, "We will probably be judged not by the monuments we have built, but by those we have destroyed." Today, preservationists are hard at work erasing the stigma of this epitaph. Thanks to them some of the architecturally important structures are being given a new lease of life. Invest in Kentucky's past.
