"CONSUMER COMMENT"

by auto manufacturers, oil companies or related industry organizations, or the state.

Next, before authorizing any work to be done, get a written estimate that lists each repair to be made separately and the cost involved. Make sure there is a notation on the estimate that advance approval must be made if additional work is necessary. Have the estimate signed and keep a copy of the signed paper for yourself.

While the repairs are being performed, it is a good idea to stay with the car and observe the mechanic to make sure he is actually performing the repairs you requested. Ask for the old parts from your car in advance of repairs, and a list of the new parts that were used for the replacement.

If upon returning home from your vacation, you are unsatisfied with any car repair work you have had done while on the road, contact the service repair shop where the work was done and complain. If satisfaction is not met, notify the national dealer, the national trade association, or the agency certifying the mechanic or the repair shop. Call the Consumer Protection Office in the state where the repairs were made. If you still are dissatisfied, then contact the Kentucky Attorney General's Office; they may be able to help you contact the proper agency to seek a solution to your troubles.

For further information on car repairs, contact the Office of the Attorney General, Consumer Protection Division, Frankfort, Kentucky, 40601. The office has found that it can most effectively deal with written complaints, and encourages you to write to us however, if you have an emergency situation, call the Consumer Hotline at 1-800-372-2960.

Gift-Giving IDEAS

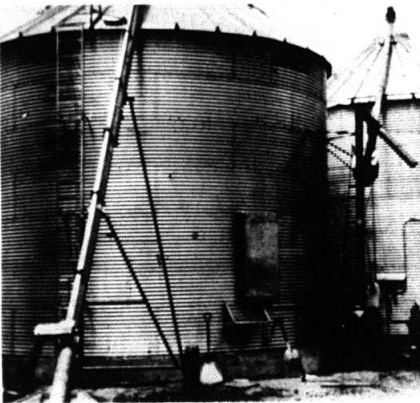

Day is King on Father's Day, so why not give him gifts with a real touch? Here are some suggestions on how to treat him royally.

1. Buy the best of a small item, rather than the cheapest grade of a large one, if your budget is very limited.
2. Find a unique or unusual version of something that he uses for recreation or a hobby.

Severe Heat Wave Grips Area; Humidity High

Residents of Rockcastle County and the entire Eastern Seaboard have been sweltering under high temperatures and high humidity for almost the entire month of July. Local weatherman, Bud Cox, said Wednesday that the average high for July thus far has been 91 degrees with an average temperature for the month of 79 degrees. This compares with an average temperature of 73.5 degrees for July of last year. Thus far, 94 has been the highest recorded temperature in Mt. Vernon although the bank time and temperature mechanism on Main Street has shown 100 degrees more than once this month. Mr. Cox said that the temperature had been in the nineties every day this month except for six. Local merchants report the complete sell-out of air conditioners and fans and this report is also coming in from surrounding towns, including Lexington. According to forecasts, there is no relief in sight either, at least not through Thursday which is as long as they care to commit themselves and rumor has it that the temperature will hit the 115 to 120 degree mark in August. Maybe it's like the cold weather we experienced last winter when the temperature was a few more degrees one way or the other makes little difference.

Low-Income Families May Qualify for Utility Payments

Low income Kentucky families may qualify for up to $250 in payments for fuel and utility bills incurred during the past severe winter. Through the Special Crisis Intervention Program enacted recently by Congress, the Kentucky Department for Human Resources was allotted $4.6 million from a national pool of $200 million for distribution among low-income people burdened by high energy costs. In most instances, Human Resources will forward payments for eligible families directly to the utility company or fuel supplier. The application period begins July 18 and ends Aug. 31. Available on a first come, first served basis until the funds are exhausted, the payments will be made for households with incomes no more than 25 percent above the national poverty index. The program will provide assistance to two classifications of needy households, emphasizing the special problems of the elderly and other persons living on fixed incomes. Those people whose utilities have been shut off or are faced with a threat of discontinuance or are currently unable to obtain service may be eligible for payments of up to $250, said Commissioner Gail S. Huecker of the department's Bureau for Social Insurance.

The second category provides direct cash allowances of up to $50 for households which prove they are enduring financial hardships as the result of having paid energy bills since Oct. 1, 1976. To qualify for the special payments, households must meet specific income standards which begin at about $300 a month for a single household with $100 increments for additional family members. The maximum monthly income standard for a family of four is approx. $600. Farm households may qualify at a slightly lower income level.

Partial Hospitalization Program Can Help With Mental Illness

By: Roger Caldwell

area in southeastern Kentucky of which Rockcastle is a part.

By contacting the local Comprehensive Care Center, Johnny could be placed in a therapy program known as Partial Hospitalization. Partial Hospitalization is a program of scheduled daily therapy which helps the patient to identify and cope with the problem that is causing the symptoms.

Partial Hospitalization can also serve as a sort of medium care for those who have been recently released from a mental hospital and are working their way back into the community. It can also serve to keep people out of mental hospitals by treating them daily and allowing them to remain in their home setting. It is, in this way, part of a real comprehensive program covering all phases of mental health.

The Partial Hospitalization program is open to people of all ages and all economic standings. Whatever specific type treatment is needed, it will be sought out and instituted promptly. The service also promotes mental health by preventing mental illness and serves, in many cases, to prevent the development of mental illness to the extent that institutionalization is needed. Patients in Partial Hospitalization see a psychiatrist on a regularly scheduled basis. However, other professionals deal with patients on a day-to-day basis. Full-time staff members are the Day Care Supervisor, who is an R.N., and a Day Care Assistant. In addition to the psychiatrist, patients are seen, on a part-time basis, by psychologists, social workers and occupational and recreation therapists among others.

Program treatment is tailored to meet the needs of the individual. Content of the program can include day care from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., Monday through Friday plus additional time in more extreme cases. Lunch and transportation are provided by the Comprehensive Care Center. Treatment plans can include short-term psychotherapy, family therapy, group therapy, play therapy or a combination of several treatment types. The program is centered around the individual rather than an individual being forced into a treatment series.

If you have a Johnny in your family, the Comprehensive Care Center's Partial Hospitalization program can help. Mental illness is like a cancer - if you don't treat it, it just gets worse. If neglected long enough, it can become incurable.

(Ed's Note: This is the first in a series of articles dealing with state and federal agencies in Rockcastle County with service programs for the people.)

Johnny is 16 years old, his mother notices that for the past couple of weeks, Johnny has become more and more withdrawn. He sits in his room for hours staring blankly. He is no longer interested in his school work, his friends or any of his hobbies. He emerges from his room long enough to sit through a meal and gently poke at his food with a fork, occasionally eating.

Johnny's mother and father have both asked him a number of times if something is bothering him. He simply answers, "no" and cuts off all other communication. The mother knows that Johnny has a deep, serious problem and probably needs some professional help but his father thinks it is just a "stage" he is going through. But, instead of moving toward normalcy, Johnny slips into a deeper and deeper depression daily. He becomes more withdrawn, it seems, by the hour.

Professional help is available to Johnny or anyone else who appears to have a psychological disorder, particularly if they live within an eight-county

Tourism is the third largest income producing industry in Kentucky; yet there is a legitimate concern that state government is not doing enough to develop the tourism industry here. More than 100,000 Kentuckians rely on tourism for their livelihoods. Tourism produced well over $1 billion in 1976 almost by accident. Except for maintenance of the state parks and some promotional work by the department of Public Information, state government has put little emphasis on the tourist trade.

Unlike minerals and agriculture, the state's two largest industries, tourism does not have its own agency within state government. Promotion and a limited amount of research are handled by the Department of Public Information. One top state official wants a change.

Kentucky Commerce Commissioner Terry McBrayer will send the 1978 General Assembly proposal to create a Division of Tourism within the Department of Commerce. "We need to do something in the area of research, in the area of development and do something more than just promote the tourism field," said McBrayer.

"We need to assist the people of Kentucky in the organized development of the tourism industry," McBrayer suggests. He favors government incentives such as low interest, deferred payment loans to individuals or groups willing to develop major tourist related facilities.

Initially, McBrayer's Division of tourism would concern itself with research of tourism trends. "We need to know what impact the gasoline shortage is going to have on the people in Michigan, Ohio and Ontario. We need some type of research into areas of traffic flow and the feasibility of whether or not a development should be placed near the state park," says the commissioner.

McBrayer would like to see the division become a cabinet level department. When that occurs, he envisions the Travel Division moving from Public Information to the Department of Tourism.

"Public Information is doing a good job of promoting the state park system, and there's no reason for an immediate change," McBrayer contends. "Ideally though," he says, "Public Information should be just that; public information. It should be assigned the job of letting people know about the operation.

Consumer Comment

By Robert F. Stephens
Attorney General

Kentuckians on the road this summer should be wary of dishonest mechanics that perform improper car repairs. A Kentucky motorist recently vacationing in the South experienced steering difficulties, and stopped at the first mechanic's garage he spotted on the highway. The mechanic insisted on resigning the front end and replacing all of the ball joints for a cost of over $100. Encountering further difficulties with the steering on his return trip home, the motorist took his car to his local repair shop and discovered that the realignment had been done improperly, and that the ball joints had been unnecessarily replaced.

There is little that can be done if you have car repairs performed while vacationing away from home, and later are dissatisfied with the repairs. Avoid being in this predicament by having your car serviced before you leave on vacation. Have your mechanic or local dealer check the car thoroughly and replace worn parts and bald tires.

However, if you find yourself in another state with car problems, there are several precautions you can take to avoid dishonest repair shops. First, check the reputation of the repair shop with local citizens, if possible. Ask if the garage is affiliated with the national trade association or a national dealership. Check to see if the mechanic who is working on your car is certified

Eternal Truth

IN OUR CHANGING WORLD

Five farmers procured a bag of seed together and began to plant their respective fields with the seed they got from the bag. The bag of seed was represented as pure and good, tested and perfect. Each farmer agreed to plant only the seed he got from that one bag.

One day the five farmers came together to report the yield of their crops. One man reported that his seed had produced fifty bushels of oats. Another, surprised at such a statement, stated that the seed he planted from the bag had grown corn, and corn only. The third farmer was astounded. He declared that something was wrong with the other men, for he had planted his seed from the same bag as the others, and the result had been a fine crop of cotton. The amazement of the others was equally as great. Radishes and rice has been the result of their planting.

Now what do you think of these farmers? Each one claimed to know what he was doing, to be an expert at planting and reaping. But how could such things be?

There are four possible explanations: (1) The seed was not pure; (2) The farmer's lands were already sown to other seed which choked out the seed that came from the bag; (3) The farmers misnamed their products; or (4) The farmers got their seed from some other place than that of the bag they all professed to plant from.

That is just the way it is in religion. "The seed of the word of God" (Luke 8:11). Preachers are the farmers who go out to plant their seed in their various fields. All profess to plant the same seed; to get their seed "from the same bag." But some report that the seed they plant produces one thing; others report something else. How can these things be? Well, the same four things about the spiritual seed must be considered.

(1) Is the seed pure? (2) Were the preacher's field already sown to other seed which choked out the pure word? (3) Did the preacher misname their products? (4) Did the preacher get their seed from some other source than the Word of God? This is the very thing the Bible warns against: "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word it is because there is no light in them" (Isa. 8:20). "Speak thou the things that befit the sound doctrine" (Titus 2:1).

Always remember this: Jesus said, "Every plant that my Heavenly Father has not sown shall be rooted up" (Matt. 15:13). The only plants that God has in the religious world are Christians, be very sure that you are the product of God's word, unmingled with "weeds" of men. His word produces Christians, nothing else.

Sunday School attendance at the Fairview Baptist Church July 10th was ninety seven with several more for worship services.

I thank God (as I'm sure everyone does) for the wonderful rains we've received the past few evenings. We receive so many blessings from God and I hope you will always take time to blow your head and say "Thank you, Lord."

Our pastor, Rev. Ray Dean, of Boone, led the ministers of breaking his right arm June 28. He spent a few days in a Lexington Hospital but resumed his duties as pastor as soon as he returned home. He is progressing very nicely for which we are so very thankful.

Vacation Bible School was held at the Fairview Baptist Church for two weeks, July 20-July 24 with commencement exercises Saturday night July 22nd. The enrollment was 78. We are so glad to work with children. They are precious and need all the love and understanding we can give them.

The Scaffold Cape Baptist Church has performed two baptisms at the Fairview Baptist Church (July 23-24 and July 30). May God bless all those who were baptized and make of them great workers with the Lord.

Several from Fairview attended the Youth meeting this past Saturday night at the Mt. Zion Baptist Church and enjoyed it very much.

Mr. and Mrs. James Thomas Bradshaw

Taylor-Bradshaw Vows Exchanged

Jeleta Kay Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby L. Taylor of Brodhead and James Thomas Bradshaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. James I. Bradshaw of Danville, were wed at 3:30 p.m. May 22nd at the home of the bride's parents.

The Rev. Paul McFarland performed the "double ring" ceremony. Teresa Parrett of Pine Hill provided the organ music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a designer gown of organza enhanced with venise lace. The gown featured a bodice of see-through venise trim and large soft shadow sleeves.

Teh chapel-length train flowed from the empire waist creating an A-line silhouette. Vertical bands of venise trim caught the eye and matching venise medallions adorned the skirt and a double border of lace edged the hemline. Her walking-length veil was attached to a headpiece adorned with seed pearls. She carried a cascade of white roses, white pompons, and baby's breath.

Regina Burton of Brodhead, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a gown of mint green polyester knit, with a horseshoe neckline which was trimmed with white embroidered flowers. Her dress had bell-shaped sleeves and an empire waistline. She carried a colonial bouquet of white carnations and green pompons. She had a cluster of flowers in her hair which matched her bouquet.

Sherry Asher of Brodhead, cousin of the bride, and Linda Bradshaw of Danville, sister of the bridegroom were the other bridal attendants. They were dressed in blue polyester knit gowns which were identical to the honor attendants'. They carried a colonial bouquet of white carnations and blue pompons and had a cluster of flowers in their hair which matched their bouquets.

Garry Bradshaw of Danville, brother of the bridegroom was best man. Johnny Tavapex of Junction City and Mark McFarland of Casey County were ushers.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Hostesses were Brenda Taylor, Patricia Kirby, and La Joy Graves. Sharon Caudill attended the guest book. Tina Bradshaw and Lee Ann Clem, both of Danville and Lori Caudill of Lexington distributed rice bags.

Following a brief wedding trip, the couple resided in Danville.

The bride is a graduate of Rockcastle Co. High School and is a senior at Eastern Kentucky University.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Boyle Co. High School. He is employed at Firestone Wire and Cable Co. of Danville.

Mrs. Eugene Alexander.

Mrs. Christine Nagler of Evans, Ky. is spending this week with her daughter, Mrs. Gerald (Irene) Alexander and Mr. Alexander.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Chastean visited Mr. Willard Todd Sunday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Daugherty of Somerset were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Cletus Peters Sunday. They also attended church at Fairview.

Eugene Alexander visited his father Delbert Alexander and Mrs. Alexander, Sunday. He reported his father feeling very well.

We extend our deepest heartfelt sympathy to the families who have lost loved ones recently: Mr. Bob Lakes of Beres, Mrs. Patricia Johnson of Disputanta, Mr. Kenneth Todd and Mr. Bill Dowell. May God bless and comfort their loved ones.

Mrs. Hebert Chastean entertained her Sunday School Class (young people) with a picnic supper at her Scaffold Cane home Friday night. Attending besides Mr. and Mrs. Chastean were Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Cummins and daughter, Dreama, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Isaacs and daughters, Jennifer and Carol, Miss Doty Williams, Mrs. Debbie McCollum, and sons Roy and Marvin and Mrs. Darleen Church and daughters Tammy and Tonya. Everyone enjoyed the evening so much and many certainly enjoyed the evening so very much and we certainly enjoyed having these young people in our home. They are wonderful people we love them dearly.

Please remember church and Sunday School. God is so good to us and blesses us in many, many ways. We need to respect, honor, and thank Him more than we do. Some people don't take the time to go to church and some don't want to go. They take what God gives them but they give nothing back. But we all must remember He gives us every breath that we draw and He can take our life in a moment of time, and the way we die is the way we will face God, be it saved or unsaved. I hope you will be right with God when your time comes. God bless you all.

Research continues on the exploits of Allensworth Adams, supposedly another survivor of the fall of the Alamo, and now comes full circle back to Rockcastle County through Mrs. Mary Gregory, wife of attorney William D. Gregory of Mt. Vernon. Mrs. Gregory has just come into possession of a rare out-of-print book in which is found an interesting account of the Alamo as given by an early ancestor of hers, Creed Taylor. Creed Taylor was a well-known participant in many actions connected with the early history of Texas and the brave people who brought into being one of the outstanding states in the U.S.A.

In writing of the Alamo and the events following its fall, he relates some interesting stories, including an account of the fall of Goliad and the massacre of its defenders by Santa Anna's troops some fourteen days after the fall of the Alamo. In reading his account of one particular individual, Mrs. Gregory was immediately struck which his possible resemblance to young Allensworth Adams. Mr. Taylor did not know the name of this young man and never bears him called by any other than his nickname, "Kaintuck". He said he did not believe that he had ever given any of his companions his real name, for reasons of his own.

"Kaintuck" is described as being in his early twenties, of rather small stature, rather good looking and apparently having a little better than average education. He was apparently taken prisoner after the fight at Goliad and, while in prison, was taught by the Mexican soldiers their favorite game of Monte. Taylor says he soon became better at the game than his teachers and consistently won their money.

After being promised their release, three large groups of the prisoners were marched to the river, on which they were to be transported to another city. They were lined up facing the river when their captors fell into line behind them, they wheeled around and instantly saw that they were to be executed on the spot. The Mexican officers sternly ordered them to face the river again, but some of the prisoners, refusing to be shot in the back, ignored the orders and continued to stare into the eyes of the troops lined up to shoot them. This so unnerved some of the executioners that they purposely missed their intended victims and the man who was to shoot "Kaintuck" did not fire his rifle at all. When his companions fell following the volley, "Kaintuck" fell too - fell back into the river and tried to make for the opposite shore before the troops could realize what was going on. Fortunately, the current was strong enough to take him out of range down the river and, after almost drowning, he made the opposite shore and started running. In swimming over to pursue him, the Mexican soldiers sent after him had to leave their rifles and carry their swords only, which meant they would have to get within sword's length of him before they could do him any harm.

And, here's where the story gets interesting. With his new-found ability at Monte, "Kaintuck" had, while a prisoner, won thousands of Mexican silver dollars from his guards and had it all with him, distributed in various pockets of his trousers, coat and overcoat. This money, Taylor says, weighed eight pounds and that weight, coupled with his wet clothing was somewhat of a handicap. In addition, his boots were full of water and also served to slow him down. In twisting and turning to evade his pursuers who were rapidly gaining on him he spilled some of the money from his pockets and the Mexicans stopped to pick it up and scuffle over it. That gave "Kaintuck" an idea and whenever they would get too close to him, he would toss out another handful of silver which they always stopped to fight over. Finally, his money was all gone and, though he had managed to shed his boots and clothing to enable him to move faster, they had just about overtaken him when he came to a large thicket of catclaw and thorn bushes. Plunging desperately into this thicket, which soon tore off his clothing and lacerated his flesh with its barbs, he was finally able to get away from them.

Mr. Taylor says the last time he saw him, some few days later, he was very seriously engaged in a Monte game, which he did not interrupt. He said "Kaintuck" was a very colorful character which he would always remember, and regretted very much that he had never learned his real name or whatever happened to him.

Nowhere in this account is it ever suggested that "Kaintuck" was, in reality, Allensworth Adams, but it is to believe that it might have been. The description fits him exactly. He was 24 years old at that time; like nearly all members of the Adams family he was rather small in stature; a picture we have of him at a later date shows him to have been rather handsome and his education was good enough that he soon became a doctor and - anyone who ever knew this "Devil Bill's" wildest son - would have no trouble believing the story of his proficiency at gambling. If all falls in line - except for one thing, I can find no record of his ever having told anyone of this particular experience and it is hard to think of him as having passed up the notoriety he could have gotten by telling it. Again, we depend on relatives. Does any of his descendants remember ever having heard it told as a family legend?
