Rose Winter Care

How many roses do you lose each winter? Disregarding a particularly cold season, the answer should be none.

Special winter protection applied at the right time is the key to success with hybrid tea and floribunda roses. Unfortunately, predicting the right time for winter protection, or delaying treatment too long, sometimes causes winter injury.

Generally, apply protection in November about the time the ground starts to freeze. However, the work can be done later if the weather is still warm.

Many protection methods work. Mounding the soil around the canes with 8 to 10 inches of soil is a successful and widely used practice. It is best to bring in soil from another part of the garden. If you dig it from the rose beds you may injure the roots of the plants.

After mounding with soil, tie all the canes together to keep them from being blown about and loosening the root system. The plants can be topped at about 30 inches to facilitate tying. Six to ten inches of coarse straw or hay can be placed over the soil for added protection. Straw or hay mulch is beneficial if winter temperatures dip below zero.

The styfoam rose cone is a more recent winter protection innovation.

Some growers experience good success with cones, while others have gone back to simple mounding. If a cone is used it is still advisable to mound the soil. The rose stems should not be placed under the styfoam cap until temperatures are in the twenties.

Placing the cone on the plant too early can lead to problems. If the temperature climbs, so does the air within the cone. This new micro-climate situation provides an excellent site for disease growth and spread.

Some cones have removable tops that are taken off when the temperature rises and replaced when it falls. These work, but there is always a chance that the gardener will forget to replace the top when it gets cold. When spring comes the cones should be removed when night temperatures are above 32 degrees. The soil mound can be left on longer and removed about March 15.

Rose cones provide excellent homes for mice. Mice extensively damage rose cones by gnawing the stems. It is best to place a poisoned bait under each cone to eliminate this problem.

Short Calving Season Makes Beef Cow Herd Management Easier

Beef cow herd owners who have shortened up their calving season to 90 days or less say they wouldn't have it any other way and for a good reason because it makes many of the jobs of managing a cow-calf operation easier.

Not only does a short calving season make cow-calf management easier, it is a big step toward a more efficient, more profitable operation. Year-around calving is the biggest bugaboo that keeps many cattlemen from doing the jobs that lead to profit when they need to be done to be effective.

When cows are in all stages to production at any time during the year, implanting calves, dehorning, castrating, vaccinating and weaning have to be done over and over. With a short calving season, you do each of these jobs once a year. Brood cow vaccination, pregnancy test and herd culling also become annual events in your management schedule.

Other profitable management practices are made possible by a short calving season. For example, cows in the same state of production can be fed as a group according to their nutritional needs. This reduces costly underfeeding and overfeeding of cows in each production phase. Crop residues, which do not provide sufficient energy for a milking cow with a calf at her side, can be utilized to advantage by the dry, pregnant cow after her calf has been weaned.

An added incentive for shortening the calving season is in the development stage—estrous synchronization—and now is the time for a cow-calf operator to get ready for it. So called heat-synch products may appear on the market within the next year or two, making "appointment matings" a reality.

When such products are available, the brood cow herd can be inseminated at a pre-determined time. This means that a large percentage of your calf crop can be bred by a genetically superior bull, opening the way to faster herd improvement and better doing, more saleable calf crops.

For estrous synchronization to be feasible in a herd, however, a short concentrated calving season will be a necessity. The advantages of this new herd management tool cannot be exploited if your brood cows are in all stages of production.

Converting a herd from year around calving to a concentrated calving season of 90 days or less, takes advance planning. The Extension office has information to help you work out a breeding schedule to make the shift without culling more cows than is profitable. Best way to proceed varies from one herd to another depending on how far calving is spread out now and when you want your calves to come.

Attic Flies a Winter Nuisance

Those medium-sized "buzzing" flies commonly found spinning around in circles on attic floors or on window sills during fall and winter are a nuisance but pose little or no threat to home furnishings or your family.

These pests usually are the face fly and the cluster fly. Both species enter homes and other buildings to overwinter and accumulate between walls, in window casings, dark corners, unused rooms, under curtains and behind furniture.

Using a caulk to fill cracks around windows, doors, loose siding and eaves will help keep the flies out of the house. Windows, ventilators and louvers should be covered with light fitting screens.

Once the pests are inside the house, controlling them is frustrating. Using a vacuum cleaner probably is the simplest way to get rid of the flies, or a swatter if there are only a few around.

Aerosol sprays can be used to knock down or kill flies, but their effects are short-lived if new flies are allowed to enter. The bright yellow insecticide-impregnated plastic strips used to control flies in homes are also acceptable for controlling attic flies. But don't use the insecticide strips in kitchens or rooms where infants, the sick or aged are confined.

Regardless of what control method you use in your home, attic flies will be a nuisance every winter until you close the openings that let them get inside.

Freeze Christmas Roll and Cookies

Give yourself a Christmas present of extra time by mixing up rolls and cookies now to thaw and serve—or thaw, bake and serve—during the holidays.

It's good management, too, to put that vacant freezer space to work for you. A full freezer is more economical to run than one that's half empty.

Storage Limits

Be sure to label, date, and keep a good inventory of those Christmas goodies. That way, you'll be sure to use them up while they're still at their best.

Yeast rolls—ready baked ones are best for freezing—will keep their high quality from 4 to 6 weeks.

Baked cookies will keep 2 or 3 months. Unbaked dough will keep about the same length of time—the advantage is that they'll be fresh-baked.

Yeast Rolls

Bake, then cool them quickly. Wrap in heavy-weight aluminum foil, label and freeze immediately. Before serving, reheat them in the foil package for 15 to 20 minutes at 250 to 300 degrees.

Baked Cookies

Use cookie recipes high in fat and low in moisture. Add dried fruits and nuts if you like. Bake them, cool them, pack in freezer containers, label and freeze immediately. Before serving, thaw at room temperature.

Unbaked Cookies

Get out and mix up your favorite refrigerator cookie recipe. Then wrap that long roll of dough in freezer wrap, label and freeze.

When ready to use, partly thaw the dough at room temperature, then slice onto greased baking sheets. Bake according to recipe directions.

Decorate

If you want to decorate cookies for a holiday, look, sprinkle partly-thawed cookies with green or red decorative sugar before baking. Or you could thaw and roll out cookie dough and cut into stars and other Christmas shapes, then sprinkle with green or red sugar and/or decorate with candied fruit, raisins or nuts.

Volume 90 - Number 13

Thursday, December 1, 1977

The parking brake somehow failed on an O'Nan transfer truck, loaded with 34,000 lbs. of tobacco. Tuesday night allowing the truck to run over an embankment near the Red Top Restaurant on U.S. 25 north of Mt. Vernon. According to the driver, Jerry Prewitt, he had parked in front of the restaurant and was drinking a cup of coffee when the incident occurred.

Local Churches Come to the Aid of Motorists Stranded Here by Storm

Three inches of snow Sunday blanketed highways and caused motorists, particularly on Interstate-75, all sorts of trouble. The highway department was unable to handle the sudden snow storm and traffic was tied up on the interstate for miles north and south of Mt. Vernon.

Several motorists experienced car trouble and several ran out of gas while marled in traffic. One service station owner at the Renfro Valley Interchange characterized that area Saturday night and Sunday as being like downtown Cincinnati with the amount of cars coming and trying to go.

When all the motels in the area filled up, which they did very quickly, service station owners and members of the Rockcastle County Rescue Squad began trying to help make arrangements for motorists stranded for the night.

Two churches in Mt. Vernon, First Christian and Our Lady of Mt. Vernon were contacted and agreed to provide whatever they could in the way of a place for people to spend the night.

Bro. Ernie Johnson, pastor of First Christian, reported that 39 people spent Sunday night in the church where they were fed with sandwiches and cookies provided by Central Vending Co., with coffee donated by church members out of cups and other eating utensils provided by The Bank of Mt. Vernon. About 20 persons spent the night at Our Lady of Mt. Vernon where they were likewise fed and cared for.

The Rescue Squad brought mattresses and sheets from the hospital to the Christian Church for people to have someplace to lie down and from what can gather, everything was very much appreciated.

Bro. Johnson said that people from as far away as Canada spent the night in the Christian Church with several cars from South Carolina also in the group. One man and some students from a school in South Carolina evidently didn't mind the lay-over too much, Bro.

Johnson reported, as they still had spirit enough to decorate the lawn of the church with a snowman.

Wreckers in Mt. Vernon and surrounding areas were kept busy all day Sunday pulling people in off the Interstate and local people out of the ditch. Phillip Argenbright, owner of Renfro Valley Standard, reported that the stations on the Renfro interchange did not run out of gas but pumped steadily through Sunday. Several stations north of Lexington did experience a shortage.

People who were here then tell us that it was the worst traffic tie-up since December of 1966 and even we remember that time when traffic set almost all night on U.S. 25 through Mt. Vernon and didn't move an inch.

The snow also forced the first day of schools being closed in Rockcastle County due to the weather. However, they were able to reopen Tuesday without any difficulty.

Rockets Lose

On behalf of the Rockcastle County Improvement Council, Sam Ford, left, is shown presenting C.T. Huffines, president of The Bank of Mt. Vernon, with the Council's Improvement Award. The award was given to the bank in recognition of the improvements made to the bank's building on Main Street with the recently completed remodeling and renovation. The bank will hold an Open House on Sunday, December 11 to show their customers over the facility.

TG Tournament

Last week was not one of the Rockets better weeks as they lost two out of three - falling to Clay County on Tuesday night and losing to Lone Jack in the finals of the Thanksgiving Tournament Saturday night.

The game with Clay County would have probably been a different story had the Rockets not been without the services of starting guard Jack Farthing. Farthing was injured in the Annnville game the previous week and 9 stitches were required to close the head wound. Also, early in the game with Clay County, starting forward Larry Harmon was injured and had to be helped from the floor. He was later taken to the local hospital for x-rays because of a severe blow to the face. Harmon was able to return to action on Friday night of the Thanksgiving Tournament.

The Rockets played very sluggish ball but, so did Clay County. Clay County did dominate most of the inside game after the loss of Harmon.

One of the high points of the Rockets in their 11 point loss was junior guard David Penson who scored 17 points in what amount to two quarters of play. Penson picked up 3 fouls early in the first half and had to set out the rest of the half. He returned to action in the second half and picked up his other two allotted fouls right quickly and had to leave the game.

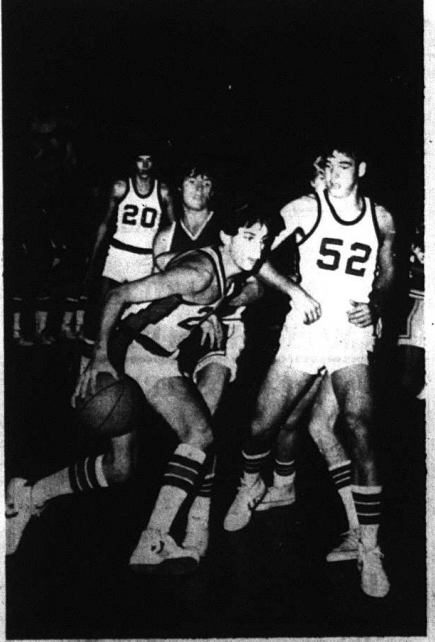

Steve Center, another one of the Rockets juniors, also added 17 points to the cause but it was enough as Clay County slowly pulled away in the fourth quarter. Others scoring in the Clay County game were Walter Browning and Warren Cash with 7 each, Jeff Hammonds added 5, Eddie Thompson got 3 and Larry Harmon scored 2 points before having to leave the game.

The Rockets then opened their Thanksgiving Tournament on Friday night by defeating Model, last year's tournament winner, 66-53. The Rockets didn't have much trouble with Model as the game was not close at any time. One of the reasons for the 15-point runaway was the return performance of Larry Harmon. Harmon got 23 points and led all scorers in the game. Other scoring were Warren Cash with 12, getting them all from the outside perimeter, Center got 11 (and has thus far been in double figures every game), Penson 7, Browning 6, Farthing 4, Hammonds 3 and Thompson 2.

The Rockets then played their poorest exhibition of basketball on recognition of the improvements made to the bank's building on Main Street with the recently completed remodeling and renovation. The bank will hold an Open House on Sunday, December 11 to show their customers over the facility.

Jack Farthing, No. 23 for the Rockcastle, drives for the basket in last Saturday night's Thanksgiving Tournament championship game. Farthing, who was injured in the Annnville game and required stitches, got 5 points on the night. Also in the photo is No. 52, Walter Browning and

No. 20, Steve Center. Browning snagged the most rebounds for the Rockets in the game, picking off seven in a strong effort. Tuesday night, the Rockets took their first road trip of the season to McCreey County and came away with one for the win column, 48-46.

Problem Weed Creates Economic Loss in Kentucky

Johnsongrass has been a problem weed in Kentucky since before the turn of the century, but it has only been in the past decade that its spread has reached alarming proportions. In a weed survey conducted recently by the University of Kentucky, johnsongrass was overwhelmingly rated the number one weed problem in the state. It is estimated that one-quarter of the state's corn and soybean land is infested sufficiently to reduce yields 30 to 50 percent or more. This represents a state loss of production for these two crops of over 40 million dollars.

If proper control measures aren't used against johnsongrass, this perennial weed can take over a crop within three years causing sufficient damage to cut yields in half. In some severe infestations, growers find their crop not worth harvesting because of weed density, harvesting is an impracticality. It is commonly believed that there are more cornfields abandoned because of johnsongrass than any other single weed.

For this reason there is an intensive effort now underway in the state to check the spread of the weed and reduce infestation levels. Current recommendations call for an integrated program of cultural and chemical control techniques. The first step to johnsongrass control is to identify the weed early, then treat it promptly to prevent spreading. It is relatively easy to recognize since it usually lowers above crop plants. Johnsongrass typically grows to a height of ten feet, has a seed head one and a half feet long and produces root-like reproductive rhizomes often as thick as a man's thumb. In cropland, fall and winter tillage by plow or disc is recommended to break up the rhizomes and bring them to the surface where they are subjected to winter-kills from drying and cold temperatures. If not broken up by tillage, the rhizomes (which serve as the weed's food storage organs) can remain dormant in the soil, resistant to chemicals and capable of sprouting new shoots and rhizomes.

In heavy infestations or for spot treating, Kentucky weed specialists recommended a foliar spray application of a contact herbicide such as Dowpon, Basfaron or Roundup to destroy existing johnsongrass plants and rhizomes. Foliar sprays have no effect on later germinating seedlings, however, so they must be followed by preplant seedling control herbicides. Those currently recommended include Sutan plus and Eradicane in corn, and Tolban, Treflan and Vernam in soybeans.

The days when people bragged about attic treasures are all but gone. Today's concerned homeowners make certain that adequate insulation is stashed overhead—along with those "we can't bear to part with" items.

Insulation is an absolute necessity if you plan to keep this winter's heating bills down, and, there are many kinds available. Some insulation is in short supply now, but, it's important to make plans now and install it when it becomes available.

Christmas Dinner Table Radiates Festivity When Elegant Beef Roast Is Featured

Foods often symbolically suggest a variety of pleasant things. This is especially true at the holiday table when, in keeping with tradition, a handsome beef roast provides the pièce de résistance. Happy memories are kindled of Christmases past, and reminiscences are exchanged.

Selecting the Roast

Whether you're planning dinner for a family of four or for a larger group of relatives and friends, there's a beef roast to fit your need. The most popular holiday selections are a 3 to 4-rib beef rib roast, a rib eye roast, tip or rump. Consider, too, a boneless beef top round roast for a large number of diners or a tenderloin for a few.

When deciding how much meat to buy, figure two to three servings per pound for a roast that includes bone. If the roast is boneless, you can count on three or four servings per pound.

Follow Roasting Directions

The roasting procedure is basically the same for all beef roasts. Place the meat, fat side up, on a rack in an open shallow roasting pan. The rack will allow for the circulation of hot air under the roast and will keep it out of the drippings. Do not add water or cover the roast for you want to cook the meat with dry heat. If you cover the meat you will be cooking in moist heat and turning a tender roast into a pot-roast.

The suggested oven temperature for most roasts is 325°F. The exceptions are 350°F for rib eye; and 375°F for the tenderloin. These slightly higher temperatures provide for browning these roasts that, because of their shape, require fewer minutes per pound. Use an oven thermometer to check the oven thermostat.

Before you place the roast in the oven, insert a roast meat thermometer so that it is centered in the thickest part of the roast, advises Reba Stagg, National Live Stock and Meat Board home economist. Be sure it is not resting in fat or on bone. Use of a meat thermometer insures that the roast will be at the desired doneness when served. Overcooking, which robs the meat of its tenderness and juiciness, will be avoided.

Remember that roasts continue to cook after removal from the oven. So when the thermometer registers about 5 degrees less than the desired doneness, remove the roast from the oven and let it stand 15 to 20 minutes before carving.

Carving and Serving

Today there are few rigid rules and regulations for carving and serving meat. Both men and women accept the assignment on occasion. When carving keep in mind the number of servings that will be obtained from the meat. This precaution prevents the embarrassment of being overly generous with half the guests, only to discover that the remaining meat won't provide the same size portions for the rest of the plates to be served.

Eastern Offers "Back-To-School" Session for Adults

Eastern Kentucky University's Division of Continuing Education is offering a unique two-hour session December 12 and 13 aimed at assisting adults who desire to begin college or who want to return after being away from school for some time.

Many adults often remark, "With a little help, I'd go back to school." Eastern is now answering the call for help through this cost-free session designed to give adults a brief introduction to the University and an orientation to the wide range of educational opportunities which are offered.

Persons may attend on either day from 7:30 p.m. in Room 216 of the Stratton Building, located on the southern edge of the main campus on Kit Carson Drive.

Topics will focus on the problem of adult part-time student returning to college. Discussion will include the adult as a learner, the variety of program options, admissions procedures, how to register for classes, credit for previous college work, financial aid and career planning. Each campus office will bring the participants on the function of that office and how it can serve adult part-time students.

Additional information about the initial session scheduled for December may be obtained by writing to Kenneth D. Tunnell, ECU Division of Continuing Education, or calling him, telephone (606) 325-2903.

This has been offered before and was successful.

Donnie Stephens and two children of Rockford.

Mrs. Collie Scott spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Tip Reppert and Melody of Scaffold Cave.

Hope everyone had a wonderful Thanksgiving Day. I also hope you took time to thank God for all the blessings of life. Please remember church and Sunday School. Remember the sick in your prayers and pray for one another. God bless you.

MILITARY COLLECTION KEEPS GROWING

Literally hundreds of items have been donated to the Kentucky Historical Society Military History Museum during 1977, according to Nicky Hughes, curator. The museum's collection traces Kentucky's role in American military history from the days of the last Indian skirmishes to the war in Vietnam.

This year's donations include a cadet nurse's uniform, dating around 1945, and an experimental communications helmet from the 1960s. William S. Stewart, a retired Shelbyville sales manager, contributed around 200 documents of correspondence, diaries and other material, which belonged to Lt. Joseph Allen, his great grandmother's brother, Allen, a Union soldier, described his participation in the Civil War in the documents which the Historical Society will microfilm and printback for the museum.

Farmers Warned Concerning Correct Usage of Marketing Cards

November 21 began what some 142,000 Kentucky farmers have spent all year for marketing of their Burley tobacco crop. "Each year farm operators have to pay penalties and possibly receive quota reductions," says Beverly G. Yeiser, Sr., State Executive Director of the Kentucky Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

"Simply because they did not thoroughly understand marketing quota regulations," ASCS is the agency within the U.S. Department of Agriculture which is responsible for regulating the production and marketing of certain commodities. During the marketing of the 1976 Burley tobacco crop, 141 violations were cited, according to Yeiser. "Not only do producers have to pay a severe penalty, but usually will have their subsequent year's quota reduced," Yeiser pointed out.

According to Yeiser, "Burley tobacco marketing cards are issued only for identification of tobacco grown on one farm, the farm number in which the card is issued under. Producers are not to sell tobacco on their card that was grown on another farm. If a tobacco marketing card is used to market tobacco from a farm other than the farm on which produced, the subsequent year's quota may be reduced for both farms and each producer may be liable for penalty and criminal prosecution," Yeiser emphasized. Violation of the U.S. Criminal Code provides for a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than 5 years.

Yeiser also pointed out that to transfer a quota between farms, a proper ASCS lease must be filed and approved by the local county ASC committee. "Operator's are held solely responsible for the tobacco sold on that farm's marketing card," says Yeiser, "and for this reason, every county ASCS office is responsible to see that all producers are made aware of marketing quota regulations." The per pound penalty for the 1977 Burley tobacco crop is $3.86. Yeiser requested that each producer should examine his marketing card and sale bills after each sale to see if the sale was correctly recorded. "Any error should be reported to the ASCS marketing recorder at the warehouse or to the local county ASCS office," comments Yeiser. According to Yeiser, "We are counting on 100 percent cooperation from our Kentucky Burley tobacco producers."

Should producers have any questions concerning the proper marketing regulations of Burley tobacco, they should contact their local county ASCS office.

All programs administered by ASCS are eligible for any qualified person, regardless of race, color, religion, sex or national origin.

Gift Ideas

What was the number one gift item for Christmas 1977? That has stayed a top gift choice ever since!

If you answered "the digital watch," go to the head of the class. Because the solid state digital, both the constant read-out model and the type that lights up at the touch of a button, is at once novel, practical and fashionable—qualities that add up to a surefire gift idea.

Who wears a digital watch? Studies from Sears, Roebuck and Co., a company that's been in the business of selling watches since 1886, suggest that the male wearer is apt to be young, outspoken and aggressive. The woman who wears a digital watch is usually creative, well-informed and self-assured.

You won't have to guess at the right gift, then, for anyone you know who fits this profile. With the selection of a solid state digital watch, chances are you'll have made a "timely" choice.

Meaty Things to write for

A Butcher on Your Bookshelf!

Even the most discriminating shopper can find the trip to the meat counter a cause of confusion, frustration and sometimes irritation. Usually well informed about a few familiar cuts, the average consumer doesn't know about all of the other over 300 cuts of meat and how to shop for and prepare them, as well as other important meat facts.

Since the meat-wise state of knowledge isn't bred into us we have to work at it. If you shop for, prepare and eat meat there's now a book that belongs in your kitchen library. The Meat Board Meat Book is the most authoritative book ever published about meat. It was developed by the National Live Stock and Meat Board, the organization the meat industry itself looks to for training and information. The Meat Board Meat Book goes vastly beyond being a recipe book—it's an encyclopedia reference! The book contains a 48 page section of full-color retail meat cut identification, the first time ever published for the consumer. Included are beef, pork, lamb and veal as well as sausage and variety meats.

Distributed by McGraw-Hill, the book is available in hard cover for $9.95 and soft cover for $4.95.

If you want to put a butcher on your bookshelf, get The Meat Board Meat Book through your local bookstore. If unable to obtain it there, send a check or money order to Meat Board, Meat Book, Room 1800, 444 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, IL 60611. (This special offer includes postage.)

Tips Make Carving Beef Roasts Easy

Boneless beef roasts are especially easy to carve, and a rib roast is not at all difficult. In carving there are several important points to be considered, the most important being to use a sharp knife. First anchor the meat firmly with a meat fork. Then slice the roast across the grain. Beef tip, rump, rib eye and top round roasts are carved down from the top of the roast toward the carving board. In carving a rib roast, when necessary, remove a slice from the large end so roast will stand firmly on this end. Insert the fork below the top rib and carve across the "face" of the roast to the rib bone. Then cut along the rib bone with the tip of the knife to release the slice. Slide the knife back under the slice and, steadying it with the fork, lift the slice to the side of the platter or to an auxiliary platter.

Kentucky Afield

By John Wilson

Kentucky could be well on its way toward a record harvest of white-tailed deer.

During Nov. 12 and 13, the first two days of this year's gun deer season, conservation officers in 102 counties checked 7,955 hunters who had taken 2,170 deer. For the opening weekend last year, the officers checked almost the same number of hunters (7,941) but only 1,400 deer were taken.

But with this year's split season,

Kentucky's deer hunters have another opening weekend ahead of them. Should the results from the December 3-5 hunt come close to those from November, we could possibly see the highest deer harvest in modern times in Kentucky.

Hunters in nine counties will be able to take either bucks or does on the first day of the December season (Dec. 3) and this could increase the harvest in those counties even more.

(The other six counties on Dec. 3 are: Ballard, Crittenden, McCracken, Livingston, Barren, Hart, Edmonson, Gallatin and Owen.)

It isn't surprising that the deer harvest should be increasing. There are more deer in Kentucky now than at any other time in the 20th century, and perhaps even more than in Daniel Boone's time. Biologists estimate that the statewide deer population is growing at the rate of about 10 percent annually.

What this could mean for future deer hunters is perhaps a longer season (this year saw an increase of one day in the gun season length), more either sex hunting and a higher success rate among hunters. Wildlife biologists feel that Kentucky has yet to reach its full potential as a deer hunting state.

One factor that is keeping us from reaching that potential is poaching. Biologists estimate that the deer herd would grow at about 30 percent annually, except for year-round illegal shooting.

To stop this illegal harvest will take the cooperation of all honest sportsmen and rural landowners. It's sad to think that some outlaws probably took your deer long before the season opened, but it could well have happened.

While on the topic of deer hunting, just a reminder that small game and furbearer seasons will close for the duration of the Dec. 3-5 gun deer season. Trapping must also cease during this period, but trappers do not have to remove their traps from the field, just make sure they are sprung during the gun deer season.

Also remember that all deer taken during the December gun season must be checked, either by a conservation officer or at an official check station. And if you have already got your deer, remember that one deer per season (whether taken by gun or bow) is still the rule, except a second deer may be taken at Ft. Campbell.

After the gun season, bow hunters can take to the woods again beginning Dec. 10. The archery season will continue through December 31, when all deer hunting will cease until next fall.

Of the 45,400 new cases of blindness this year, 50 percent will be needless.

About 66 persons attended the luncheon last Wednesday at the library which was prepared in pot-luck dishes by the county's senior citizens. A hot luncheon is served to members of the organization, which is directed by Mrs. Janet Bradley, each day in the Community Room of the Rockcastle County Library and meals are taken to those physically unable to attend.

To commemorate his 700th parachute jump, British Army Sergeant Hector Macmillan made a leap in full Scottish national dress, including kilts, while playing "The Road To The Isles" on his bagpipes!

Create Gourmet Treat With Ground Beef And Sour Cream Sauce

Those gathered at the table will congratulate the cook when they sample Bavarian Beef Balls baking in a delicious sour cream sauce, says Reba Staggs, National Live Stock and Meat Board home economist.

Inspired by the famous flavors of the Bavarian table, the ground beef is combined with sauerkraut and caraway seed to make moist, tasty meat balls. For a splash of contrast and a dash of zip, the balls are topped with a delicious creamy sauce.

- Bavarian Beef Balls
- 2 pounds ground beef
 - 1/2 cup water
 - 4 teaspoon caraway seeds
 - 1 cup drained, chopped sauerkraut

 - 3 tablespoons flour
 - 2 tablespoons cooking fat
 - 2/3 cup dairy sour cream
 - 1 tablespoon milk
 - 1/2 teaspoon caraway seed
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt

Pour water over 1 teaspoon caraway seeds and let stand 5 minutes. Combine ground beef, sauerkraut, egg, salt, pepper and caraway seed with water. - Q. What is this cut of meat?
A. Beef Cubes for Kabobs
- Q. Where do they come from? How are they identified?
A. Kabob cubes are lean pieces of meat cut from the beef round. They are most frequently taken from the tip of the round, but can also be cut from the top round. The correct label identification is BEEF ROUND—CUBES FOR KABOBS.
- Q. How are they prepared?
A. The cubes can be threaded on skewers (often with pieces of fruit or vegetables) and broiled for kabobs, or they can be individually fried in deep fat and served with accompanying sauces as fondue. To prepare fondue, pour cooking oil into metal fondue pot to depth of 1 to 1 1/2 inches. Heat oil to 375°F. (or until bread cube browns in 1 minute). Carefully place pot on stand over ignited denatured alcohol burner or canned cooking fuel. Spear kabob cubes, one at a time, with long-handled fondue fork; dip in hot oil and cook 1 to 3 minutes to rare or medium.

Report From Congressman Carter

Congressman Tim Lee Carter has returned from a formal congressional visit to Egypt and Israel with a firsthand account of President Anwar Sadat's historic trip to Israel.

Rep. Carter was part of a 15 member delegation from the U.S. House of Representatives which met with Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin.

Sadat's visit to Jerusalem Nov. 19 was the first formal recognition by an Arab nation of the existence of the State of Israel.

Rep. Carter, who sat in one of six seats in the Israeli parliament's chamber reserved for U.S. lawmakers during Sadat's address to the Knesset, said, "I was pleased and gratified to be present at this historic event which hopefully will prove to have been the first step toward a lasting peace in the Middle East."

"None of the substantive issues have been settled yet, but at least now the two sides are talking rather than fighting. In an area which has suffered four wars over the past 30 years, this is a significant step toward a peaceful solution to the differences," Rep. Carter added.

It was through the U.S. congressional delegation, according to the Fifth District Congress, that Sadat conveyed the seriousness of his desire to speak before the Israeli parliament.

The delegation, headed by House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, visited Sadat on Nov. 15, at the Barrages, the presidential palace outside Cairo. Egyptian and foreign reporters were allowed to cover the meeting.

District 9 Nurses Association to Meet December 1st

The Kentucky Nurses' Association, District #9, embracing nine area counties, is sponsoring a meeting on the night of December 1, 1977 (tonight), to discuss and obtain information about the proposed revision of the Nurse Practice Act. The meeting will be held in the Danville City Hall, starting at 7:30 o'clock and all registered and licensed practical nurses in the area are urged to attend. State senators and representatives from this area have been invited.

At the 71st annual convention of the Kentucky Nurses' Association, held in Louisville last month, the apathy of nurses regarding support of and participation in activities of their professional organizations was one of the areas of discussion. The Nurse Practice Act, which will be submitted for revision at the 1978 General Assembly was deemed foremost in importance in matters before that meeting.

It was pointed out that the Nurse Practice Act affects all registered and licensed practical nurses in Kentucky and that the present Act was passed in 1966 through the combined efforts of the two groups. In the state, there are 21,311 registered nurses and 9,491 licensed practical nurses and the number actively engaged in nursing is 11,384 registered nurses and 6,050 according to Rep. Carter.

Two days later, during a similar face-to-face meeting with Begin, the Israeli prime minister chose the occasion of the lawmakers' visit to announce that details of the visit had been worked out and that Sadat would arrive in Israel on licensed practical nurses. Among the revisions that will be asked in legislation before the General Assembly are changes in the definitions of registered nurse, licensed practical nurse and advanced nursing practice. Mandatory continuing education for licensure will be required to insure that nurses keep abreast of new procedures and skills. The composition of the Kentucky Board of Nursing Education and Nurse Registration to include licensed practical nurses is another proposed change. It has been stressed that the primary purpose of the Act is protection of the public.

The sponsoring group of the December 1 meeting in Danville is composed of nurses in Boyle, Mercer, Lincoln, Garrard, Marion, Washington, Anderson, Rockcastle and Casey counties. The committee on arrangements is Gaynor Hatfield, Virginia Godel and Faye Kreider, all of Boyle; Ida Hurt, Garrard and Lincoln; Betty Brinkley and Dorothy Cunningham, both of Mercer; and Betty Hupman, Marion. Donations of $1.00 to help defray the expenses of the legislative effort are being solicited from every nurse in the state. Nurses may send their donation to: Ann G. Taylor, RN, Director of Nursing Services, Rockcastle Co. Hospital, Inc., Mt. Vernon, Ky. 40456.

Saturday, Nov. 19.

Been invited Rep. Carter and his colleagues to be his guests at the Knesset session of the following day.

Steve Center, No. 20, goes for two of his 26 points against Lone Jack Saturday night. Center's effort wasn't hardly enough to defeat the Mustangs as the Rockets lost the ball game, and their third consecutive Thanksgiving Tournament, 61-59.

"ROCKETS"
(Cont. From Front)
Saturday night when they lost to Lone Jack 61-59. The Rockets just looked very, very sloppy in most every aspect of the game except for Steve Center who got 26 points. Other than that, it was just a bad night on the basketball court for the Rockets.
Although they were having such a rough time, the Rockets were ahead by one at half time, 29-28. Then, they literally fell apart and got behind as many as 6 points at one time. They also had numerous chances to go ahead but just couldn't hit their shots. Junior forward Eddie Thompson came in and gave a valiant effort, hitting 5 out of 7 shots for 10 points in the fourth quarter, but it wasn't enough as the Rockets went down to defeat. Besides Center and Thompson, other scoring in the game went as follows: Jack Farthing 6, Warren Cash, Jeff Hammonds and Walter Browning all got 4 each and

Steve Center, No. 20, drives for the basket in the finals of the Thanksgiving Tournament against Lone Jack. Center was high point man in the game with 26

Larry Harmon and David Pensol, 2 each. Tuesday night, the Rockets journeyed to McCreary County and came away a narrow winner 48-46. The Rockets blew a 10 point half time lead by letting McCreary outscore them 14-9 in the third quarter. But, in the fourth quarter, the Rockets came back to hang on for the win.
Center turned in a good game and Larry Harmon is due much of the credit for the win as he calmly sunk 4 free throws in the closing minutes of the game.

High point man was Center with 15; Harmon got 11; Thompson put through 9; Pensol 8, Farthing 3 and Browning 2.
This Friday night, the girls and boys A team take on the Berea Pirates in a home game. On Thursday night of this week, the girls will journey to Anville for a game.
Next Tuesday night, the Rockets will host Somerset.

Educational Processes in Rockcastle Co. are Taking New Approaches

By: Perina M. Anderkin

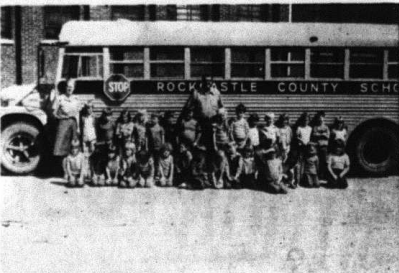

Doug Brock, of Doug's Hair Designs in Brodhead, demonstrates on Timmy

Roberts, a first grader at Brodhead Elementary, his profession as a barber.

explaining his profession.

Frank Martin, school bus driver, visited Brodhead and talked to the students on school bus safety and also gave the children a tour of a school bus.

of the educational system in the county to the children.

In addition to the three R's, elementary school children in Rockcastle County are being taught another subject this year—known as Career Education. Perhaps you might think it's a little early to try to teach first graders about the different vocations available to them but school personnel in Rockcastle County have come up with a way of teaching the subject which has proven of great interest to the children. They do this by inviting persons with varying careers into the classroom to explain to the children their jobs and what know-how it takes to perform them adequately—they are called Resource Persons in the classroom and, for first graders, these people are invited at a time to correspond with each new letter of the alphabet the child learns.

For example, no longer are first graders taught their abc's by rote—they are now introduced as Mr. F and Miss A and are introduced right off as consonants, vowels, etc. This is, of course, all part of the Alpha Reading Program and it seems to be working. Therefore, when Mr. P was introduced to the children at Brodhead School they were treated to a visit from State Policemen Greg Ennis and Stanley Hale. Mr. N brought a visit from Mrs. Carol DeBorde, a nurse at the Sowder Nursing Home. There was a slight problem encountered when Mr. Z was introduced but this was taken care of by calling the teacher's aides "zaides" for a period and they explained their jobs to the children. Taking part in this at Brodhead School were Darlene Cameron, Doris Wright, Charlotte Bullock and Mabel Cash.

According to Bige Towery, principal of Brodhead Elementary, all students in grades kindergarten through eighth are involved in the program. The teachers at Brodhead Elementary have been working for the past two years on a structured plan that integrates career education into the existing curriculum and a basic guide has been completed and supplied to each teacher.

The basic objectives of the overall program are: (1) develop the realization of a positive self-image (2) develop a contributing, participating member of family and society (3) aid in the consideration and selection of a vocation/career.

Among those who have visited at Brodhead Elementary School as Resource Persons, in addition to Mrs. DeBorde and Troopers Hale and Ennis, have been:

Doug Brock for letter person B. Mr. Brock, a local barber, visited the classes and gave a haircut to three first grade students and also showed the students their hair under a microscope.

Frank Martin also visited as an example of letter person B. Mr. Martin, a school bus driver, talked to the children about bus safety and also showed the classes a tour of a school bus. Vernon Sowder, a salesman for Dale Sales Co., talked to the three first grades at Brodhead and let the children see his sales van which was filled with the different merchandise he sells to stores.

Also visiting the children was Superintendent Charles B. Parsons who explained his role in the educational process in Rockcastle County.

Dr. Rudolph Burdette, a local veterinarian, served as letter person V for the children and told the boys and girls what his profession involved.

As letter person A, Sam Ford, local realtor and auctioneer, was invited to talk about his role as an auctioneer and he also did the auctioneering chant for the children.

An ambulance driver and hospital worker were also invited to speak to the children. Mike Barr, an ambulance driver and Mrs. Ann Taylor, a hospital worker, talked to the boys and girls about their different occupations. They also brought an ambulance for the children to see.

An example of letter person E was Greg Hargadon, of Greg's Heating and Cooling. Mr. Hargadon gave a short talk on each of the three first grades about his job as an electrician and showed the children the different tools he uses in his work.

Mrs. Perina M. Anderkin, Editor of the Mt. Vernon Signal, also visited and told the children how a newspaper is put together.

Mr. Towery asked us to convey in this story his public thanks to the many who donated their time and/or services to assist in the development of the Career Education program. Mr. Towery also said that many other local persons and businesses have agreed to work with the school in this program in the future.

The program is, of course, also being conducted in other elementary schools in the county.

Light travels at the astronomical speed of 670,616,825.6 miles per hour—or 186,000 miles per second! Scientists say that this figure is less than 100 years ago, in 1888. Nothing in the universe travels faster than light!

Hopkins' Bill Would Remove

5% Sales Tax From Utilities

At a news conference in Lexington, Monday, November 28th, State Senator-Elect Larry Hopkins (R-Fayette) announced that he is pre-filing a bill which will remove the 5% sales tax from electricity, natural gas, fuel oil, and other fuel used for residential power and water for household consumption.

Representative Hopkins said, "Making ends meet is the biggest problem facing most Kentuckians and taxes are a major cause of today's high cost of living. In 1972 we took the sales tax off food, medicine, and other necessities. Now is the time to take it off certain utilities which are also necessities. Taking the sales tax off utility bills won't eliminate the high cost of living but it sure will help."

Larry Hopkins, who has served six years as a State Representative before being elected to the Senate, introduced a similar bill during the 1976 General Assembly, but the measure was not passed.

Hopkins also stated that passage of this bill would result in an estimated $28 million tax break for the people of Kentucky this year. This is badly needed and justly deserved.

Hopkins explained that now the time is right to remove the sales tax from certain utilities because of unprecedented price increases in electricity, natural gas, and fuel oil. Many people now spend more for home power than for food or clothing. If utility prices continue to increase at the present rate, experts predict average monthly utility bills will soon exceed monthly mortgage payments. As utility prices go up so do taxes and that places an unfair burden on taxpayers.

ELEGANT BEEF RIB ROAST, easily prepared to juicy perfection, is tops in taste appeal on any holiday table.

Holiday meals are apt to be group affairs. When family and guests take their places at the extended table, serve them a dinner to match their festive mood.

A beef rib roast, high and handsome, is an easy as well as elegant choice. Since no sauce, gravy or stuffing is needed, the chef is free to create an appetizing accompaniment. A colorful garnish can be made simply by slicing a v o c a d o lengthwise, brushing with lemon juice and filling with cranberry-orange relish, suggests Reba Stagg, National Live Stock and Meat Board home economist. Heat the avocado boats in a slow oven (325°F.) for about 15 minutes.

Beef Rib Roast
Place a 3 to 4-lb. beef rib roast, fat side up, on rack in open roasting pan. Insert roast meat thermometer so bulb is centered in the thickest part. Do not add water. Do not cover. Roast in a slow oven (325°F.) to desired degree of doneness. The meat thermometer will register 140°F. for rare, 160°F. for medium, 170°F. for well done. For a 6 to 8-pound roast allow 23 to 25 minutes per pound for rare, 27 to 30 for medium and 32 to 35 for well done. Since roasts continue to cook after removal from oven, remove roast when thermometer registers 5°F. below the temperature of doneness desired.

ENERGY-TALK

By 1985, experts predict U.S. natural gas production could reach 22.3 trillion cubic feet.

Energy experts say that if American industry could increase energy efficiency by 10 to 15 percent, we could save about 4 million barrels of oil a day—enough to run the state of California for 32 hours at today's consumption rate.

Experts at International Paper's energy conservation program, Operation Badger—which stands for Better Actions Develop Greater Energy Reductions—predict America's coal production could increase from current production of 640 million tons a year to over one billion tons in 1985.

Consumer Comments

by Robert F. Stumpers
Attorney General

Solicitation From Charitable Organizations

The Christmas season is a time for giving to others. Charitable organizations will be making their appeals for funds during this upcoming holiday season, and will hope that you will be filled with the Christmas Spirit and donate to their worthy cause. Last year alone, over $29 million was given to charities in the United States.

However, this fund-raising season can also bring imposters. These persons collect monies for organizations that do not exist, or are claiming to be a member of a local organization when they really are not a member. Therefore, consumers should be cautious before making contributions to charitable organizations this holiday season.

If a solicitor comes to your door collecting money for a local organization, ask the person for identification and the name of the group and the sponsor who has the fund raising project. Then call that organization, your local community service organizations or the nearest Better Business Bureau to check out the charity's reputation before you make a donation. You can mail a contribution directly to the charity if you decide you want to participate. Should you discover that the solicitor is an imposter or is collecting money without the organization's permission, then contact your local police department and report the imposter.

A great deal of fund-raising from out-of-state organizations takes place through the mail. If you receive literature from a charity asking for money, examine the materials closely to see how your donation will be spent. Check out the reputation of these organizations by writing the National Information Bureau, a non-profit organization that has established ratings for fund-raising organizations based upon examinations of their solicitation practices, management of funds and yearly audits. The National Information Bureau can provide you with a booklet entitled "Wise Giving Guide" that will detail their evaluations of three hundred (300) charities. Request the book by writing 419 Park Avenue South, New York, New York 10016.

The Philanthropic Advisory Service of the Council of Better Business Bureaus also keep records on over eight thousand (8,000) charitable organizations. If you write their headquarters at 1150 17th Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036, they will provide you free of charge with up to three reports on specific charities.

If you have a question concerning a charitable organization and need assistance in locating information about the fund-raising group, contact the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office, Frankfort, Ky. 40601. Our office has found it can most effectively deal with written complaints and encourages you to write if you have an consumer complaint. However, if you have an emergency situation, call the toll-free consumer hotline which is 1-800-372-2960.
