

Bucky Johnson

Attends Basketball Camp

Bucky Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Johnson of Mt. Vernon, attended the Rick Robey Basketball Camp at Cumberland College in Williamsburg, June 25-30. Bucky placed third in his age division in the Free Throw competition and participated on the Runner-Up Championship team for the week.

The camp was beneficial in teaching the fundamentals of basketball and helped build a foundation toward being more competitive, confident and unselfish. Rick Robey and Joe Dean served as co-directors for the camp and the week proved to be a very exciting experience.

Highlights of the week for Bucky were meeting and talking with Kevin Grevey (of the champion Bullets team), Joe B. Hall, Jack Givens, Kenny Davis, Kyle Macy and of course spending the week with Rick Robey.

Joe Dean informed the Johnsons that plans for the two-week camp are being made for next summer and he is hopeful that more Rockcastle County boys will attend.

Short But Severe Hail Storm Friday Damages Brodhead-Maretburg Area

A 10-minute hailstorm last Friday tore through Brodhead and Maretburg, damaging some tobacco crops and gardens.

The plants were flattened to the ground in the storm whose violent winds broke apart several small trees in Brodhead. Some homes had damage done to their shingled roofs.

However, soil conservationist Greg Stephens said that he believed that the crops would recover.

He surveyed the storm area Friday and said that in his opinion, only about 1% of the tobacco would be lost.

"The plants were young enough to recover," he said. "I think most of the gardens will come back also."

Judge - Tommy Clay Howell, Athens, Tennessee

Lee Johnson shows how tobacco was flattened by a hailstorm at Frances Thompson's home on Hwy. 150 near Brodhead last Friday. The 10-minute storm produced hailstones the size of golf balls which damaged property and crops in the Brodhead-Mareburg area. (See other photos and story on page A-3).

School Board Hires Football Coach

Larry Keith Woods, a native of Lancaster, Ky. was hired by the Rockcastle County School Board Monday night at their regular meeting to be head football coach for Rockcastle County High School.

Mr. Woods will be paid $2,000 in addition to his regular teaching salary. Two assistant coaches, Jim Cox and Larry Travis, will receive $1,000 each.

School superintendent Charles Parsons said the bonus money was needed to attract a good coach.

"Bigger schools are offering more," he said, "sometimes an extra month's salary."

He explained that coaches work one month longer than regular teachers and incur extra expenses such as transportation to and from games.

Mr. Woods is 25 years old, a graduate of Berea College, and working toward a master's degree in biology from the University of Kentucky. He has had two years experience in football and basketball at Lancaster and Lexington high schools.

Mr. Parsons said the Mr. Woods impressed the hiring committee with his "enthusiasm, faith and dedication. We think he has the technical knowledge to take this team and go places with it."

The Board also voted to open bids for bleachers for the Roundstone School gymnasium, where chairs are now being used during sports events. Bleachers to seat up to 190 people would cost an estimated $6,000, Mr. Parsons said. Roundstone has offered to pay $1,000 from its athletic fund.

The Board accepted the following bids:

—Brock McVey Refrigeration Supply of Lexington, $6,536 for a lunchroom freezer;

—Balfour of Louisville for class rings averaging $73 for a boy's and $60 for a girl's ring;

—$4,975 from Inter Collegiate Press of Lexington for 600 yearbook. The Board took into consideration that the bidders named prices for years to come, which might keep costs down in the future.

Baker Bound Over To Grand Jury

Judge Walter McGuire of the District Court ruled that there was sufficient evidence against Burnam Baker in the shooting death of Earl Smith to send the case on to the Rockcastle Grand Jury, which convenes in July.

At a preliminary hearing June 29, Judge McGuire heard testimony from several witnesses before making his decision.

Mr. Baker is represented by Dale Henley, a Berea lawyer, who agreed to take on cases of some indigent clients in Rockcastle County.

Holds Special Meeting

A special meeting of the Brodhead City Council will be held Saturday, July 8, at 2 p.m. to consider applications for a part-time policeman.

At their regular meeting Monday night, the Council also voted to change the water billing system. According to councilman Ronnie Cash, the cards currently being used do not conform to postal regulations.

The Council paid routine bills.

School aides and custodians were re-hired at $2.75 per hour, a 10c per hour raise. Bus drivers and secretaries received a $25.00 per month increase. Doris Towery was rehired at $10,000 annually as school nurse; Donna Coffey will replace Nannie Lanville, who resigned as a special education teacher at Mt. Vernon Elementary School.

The Board voted to advertise for bids on the high school roof and for items necessary to open school such as milk, coal, etc.

The Board will meet in special session on July 18 to discuss the new roof and basketball programs. New teachers will be hired at that meeting. Mr. Parsons said there were applications from 17 local people for only six openings.

Use of used school buses June 23 netted $2,875, and $550 for a trailer.

The Tiny Steppers, shown above, won the talent contest last Saturday at Benfro Valley's annual celebration of John Lair Day, marking Mr. Lair's 84th birthday. The children are between 5 and 8 years old. They were presented a trophy by Col. Harlan Sanders and Mr. Lair after they appeared on the Old Barn Dance Program. Led by Jeanne Coffman of Liberty, Indiana, the group's next appearance is The June Rollins Show, at a later date.

County Welcomes Rep. Carter, Sen Huddleston, Terry McBrayer to Ground-Breaking Ceremony

July 7 is the "big day" for Rockcastle County, as the area prepares for the visits of two United States representatives and a former member of the Kentucky cabinet.

The politicians will be here to help the county celebrate the start of two important projects—the building of the Rockcastle Multi-county Industrial Park and additions to the Rockcastle County Hospital.

The two ground-breakings will be an all-day event covered by newspapers and television stations from all over the state.

Former state Commerce Commissioner Terry McBrayer will speak at the groundbreaking ceremony for the industrial park, to be held at 10:30 a.m.

Citizens Form Radio Emergency Group, Ask Police to Help Them Aid Motorists

A group that monitors Citizen's Band radio to provide emergency help to motorists in trouble said that the Rockcastle County Police will not cooperate with a spokesman.

Ted Rose, a spokesman for the Rockcastle County REACT program, told Fiscal Court members Friday that, "We are not getting cooperation."

Bill Kirby, who dispatches the local police, denied that he had been any problem.

Mr. Rose said that the group of 14 persons has a schedule for 24-hour monitoring of Channel 9, the emergency station. He said that when there are problems on the road, his group will call the police and ask them to send an officer to the scene, or to call the Kentucky State Troopers in London to cover the situation.

Mr. Rose said that the police have not been dispatching local officers or making the calls to London.

Court rules for Ernest Mason; Says Election was 'Irregular'

Ernest Mason—not Joe Clark—won the 1977 election for county magistrate from the Fifth District, according to an eleven-page decision handed down in Circuit Court this week by Judge Phillip K. Wicker. Judge Wicker said that 40 votes in the election were illegal, and sharply criticized "Rockcastle" County election officials.

"The wrong is this case is a wrong done the voters," Judge Wicker wrote. Mr. Mason, represented by Charles Coy of Richmond, proved only one of the many allegations made against Mr. Clark and six other defendants. The Judge wrote that Kentucky law requires an election officer to file a "voter assistance affidavit" each time he helps someone to vote. At least 34 voters in the precincts of Orlando and East Livingston received help from officials, who did not fill out the affidavits.

These 34 votes would be enough to throw the election to Mr. Mason, who had lost by only 22 votes.

Joe Clark, represented by Carl Closs of Mt. Vernon, has thirty days in which to appeal. This week he was still serving as magistrate at the regular Fiscal Court meeting Wednesday.

Mr. Mason won the Republican nomination in May, 1977, beating Mr. Clark. However, Mr. Clark went on to win as a write-in candidate in the fall election. Mr. Mason filed suit in Circuit Court and demanded a recount. The case was tried December 29, 1977, and about 20 witnesses appeared, including voters, election officials, newspaper editors and a handwriting expert.

Judge Wicker relied heavily on the testimony of the handwriting expert, who had been hired by the plaintiff. The expert said that only eight persons had written in 42 votes—making at least 34 illegal.

The Judge rules that these 34 voters had been helped by the election officials, who may even have written in the name of Joe Clark for them. Yet the election officials themselves, testified that they had not filled out the proper affidavits.

"The voters permitted to vote openly had no bad or illegal purpose. Each intended to vote. Each was misled by an officer so that his suffrage in this instance was destroyed. By their actions, the election officials led numerous voters to believe each could receive assistance without (the affidavits)," the Judge wrote.

"After more than 60 years of persistent denunciation of it by the highest court in Kentucky, such open voting in Rockcastle County today is inescapable."

The plaintiff was not able to prove that election officials actively solicited votes for Mr. Clark, or that they rigged the voting machines to make it impossible to vote for anyone but Mr. Clark. The Judge also ruled there was no evidence to show Mr. Clark placed newspaper ads illegally, or that there was proof enough to name any other illegal voter.

Judge Wicker admitted that there may have been some votes illegally cast for Mr. Mason, but since his votes were

Rockcastle Folks See Nixon, Call His Speech 'Wonderful'

A group from Rockcastle County went to see former President Richard M. Nixon Sunday in Hyden, Ky. He was there to dedicate a gymnasium named in his honor. It was his first important public appearance in four years.

County Judge Executive Hubert Thacker and his wife left Mt. Vernon at 8:30 a.m. to arrive early enough to avoid some of the crowd. Judge Thacker said Pres. Nixon's speech was "just fine."

"He talked about everything from foreign policy to revenue sharing," Judge Thacker said. He said he was impressed by how healthy and fit the former president appeared, and that he was a "rather tall" man.

Judge Thacker said although the gymnasium where President Nixon spoke was not air-conditioned, it was not uncomfortable. He said Pres. Nixon spoke about 30 minutes, and spent as much time later mingling with the large crowd.

Bernice Cummins said she and her husband left about 4:30 a.m. with a picnic lunch and said the whole event was "just wonderful."

"President Nixon seemed very happy with the crowd, which was filled with supporters, not sympathizers," she said. "I was amazed at his energy and the dedication of people here, mentioning some by name."

Mrs. Cummins said "Happy" Chandler, the former governor of Kentucky, was in Hyden. She said they sunburned and tired, but it was worth it."

Among those from here attending were Carl Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Brook, Donna Hopkins, Clyde Barnett, Ruby Larson, Doc Wolfe, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wynn, Manuel Shepherd, Garland Cummins, Jerry Morgan and some of the crowd. Judge Thacker said Pres. Nixon's autograph.

County Gets Funds For Road Repair

Four miles of road in Rockcastle County will be surfaced this summer by Carey Adams, Inc. of Lexington. The company was awarded $98,000 from the state of Kentucky to surface the following:

—Brodhead-Spiro-Wald Road (Ky 1250) between Hamm Road (CR 1290) and Ky. 618.

—Old Gum Sulphur-Conway Creek Road from US 150 to the end of the road at the railroad right-of-way.

—Lewis Road, south, west and northeast from US 150 for nearly one mile.

Rockcastle was one of the five Eastern Kentucky counties that shared nearly one-half million dollars in road contracts this week. McCreary Co. received the most money, $159,568; followed by Bath County, $101,623 and Leslie and Clay counties which shared a $128,464 contract.

Fiscal Court Meets

Sheriff Henry Abney requested three radio scanners for county police cars at the regular meeting of the Rockcastle County Fiscal Court Wednesday, July 5.

Sheriff Abney explained that the scanners would enable county police to better communicate with state troopers in London. The Court okayed the project.

Talmadge Clary, president of the Minnie Bee Coal Company, asked the Court to accept a road built by his company and connecting Brushie Ridge and Dry Fork near the old Brushie Ridge School. The Court agreed to the request.

Verla Scott asked that a dumpster on Purr Rigby Road be removed, and the Court agreed.

The Court paid routine bills and re-hired Anna Mullins and Carrie Doan as secretaries.

Legislative Report

By Rep. Harold DeMarcus

Industrial Park and hospital ground-breaking Friday.

County Statistics

Many of you are aware that laws passed by the 1978 Legislature have become effective. Laws to protect our environment are vital because as you know we must exist within it. The most important environment enactments involved solid waste and strip mining.

Senate Bill 136 identifies resource recovery and energy generation from solid wastes as important state goals. It authorizes the use of state funds for these purposes and sets forth conditions for obtaining these funds. The legislation grants the administrator of the Kentucky Center of Energy Research (Bureau of Energy Research) the authority to contract for the design, construction, or operation of solid waste demonstration projects. Finally, the administrator, with the cooperation of other state agencies, must conduct a paper recycling project within state government.

Senate Bill 301 designates the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection as the principal state planning agency for solid waste management. The department is required to promote guidelines for waste management plans, with counties responsible for plan execution.

All counties in the state are required by S.B. 301 to adopt solid waste management plans by 1981. These plans, as submitted, must be based upon waste management areas, which may take one of three forms: a county in liaison with cities within the county; two or more counties combined; or districts, as defined by existing law. The bill vests in these bodies the powers necessary to construct and operate waste management facilities.

Senate Bill 281, among other things, creates the Bureau of Surface Mining and Reclamation and Enforcement within the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection to regulate strip mining. The agency consists of three divisions: a division of permits, a division of standards and specifications, and a division of operations and enforcement.

The law also adds several other provisions to the Kentucky Code. It requires (1) the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection to adopt procedures rather than regulations for issuing permits; 2 sets an average fee for mining; 3 sets criminal and civil penalties for operating a strip mine without a license; and 4 deletes the penalty for perjury when a person makes false statements or charges in a citizen's suit against a public employee for failure to enforce laws or regulations.

Senate Bill 273 also affects strip mining in Kentucky. Specifically, it designates the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection as the surface mining agency for the state. As such, the department must promulgate the initial regulations for the state's compliance with the Federal Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977. Among other things, the legislation also modifies the conditions for operating a strip mine and for reclaiming the land once the mineral is depleted.

Kentucky's 1978 General Assembly was obviously concerned with the protection of the Commonwealth's environment. I believe that the aforementioned laws and some others are worthy and will help make Kentucky a better place to live and work for the future.

Dear Editor:
 After writing this to send to our native guide, I thought my former students would enjoy knowing that I finally got to Philadelphia. I'll just send it to the Signal and maybe they'll print it since its Liberty Week.

A Visit to the U.S.A.'s Freedom City

History came alive to me the last week of June, 1978, when I visited Philadelphia, Pa.
 "Proclaim Liberty throughout all the Land unto all the inhabitants thereof." These words from Leviticus inscribed around the crown of the Liberty Bell cast their spell upon me as I read them. They reminded me of the freedoms for which the patriots fought in Revolutionary War. It was the Liberty Bell which was rung on the first reading of the Declaration of Independence to the citizens of Philadelphia in Independence Square on July 8, 1776.
 The Franklin Court reminded me of all the years that I had studied with my students about Benjamin Franklin, a printer, publisher, civic leader, statesman and world renowned scientist. Yes, man who could have been our first President if he had been younger.

 At Two Street Tavern, with 200 year old hand hewn oak beams, our group had lunch. We read our menu from a small chalk board and were served by girls dressed like Quakers. Most of our group ordered fresh sea food, but I wanted to try their scrapple that our colonial ancestors made of meal and small pieces of pork, sliced and fried. It was delicious.
 Walking on 18th Century brick sidewalks, we stopped often to see and cheer the many street entertainers that can always be found on down-town streets in Philadelphia.
 We stopped at shops displaying hand made articles and at antique shops at Head House Square.
 At the New Market, I bought a miniature Liberty-Bell I bought to hang with bells I have collected, from many places.

We watched boats go by at Penn's Dock while we sipped a frothy drink of pineapple juice and coconut milk at one of the many modern restaurants near the river. I could picture the boats of the 18th century passing by. Probably the majority of the boats were fishing boats, out to catch perch, rockfish and catfish that were plentiful then. Now, tourist boats were prevalent.

Thanks to my sister, Lelamae Gaines, her husband, John Gaines, their daughter Jill Scott, and her friend, Christine Browne, a native of Philadelphia, who was our guide. I finally got to see Independence Hall, walk where Benjamin Franklin and William Penn might have walked, and to touch the Liberty Bell, the most cherished and revered symbol of American freedom, and an emblem of liberty throughout the world.

"Time Is Money" Says Frances J. Mills

State Treasurer Frances Jones Mills' motto—"Time is Money"—has paid off for Kentucky taxpayers. During the past fiscal year, overnight earnings on the surplus monies in the General Depository Account that were invested amounted to a total of $6,591,940.50. This averages $17,786.14 per day.

Overnight investments alone, this is an increase of $1,828,419.76 over the previous highest earnings for any fiscal year in the history of the Kentucky Treasury Department. There are two basic factors for this increase—the elimination of the $20 million compensating balance, and a system that was devised in cooperation with the Department of Revenue whereby their monies are deposited almost immediately upon receipt by them.

This is typical of the innovative techniques and improvements which Mrs. Mills has implemented in the operation of the Treasury Department. This increased income for the Commonwealth of Kentucky has helped to avoid increased taxes.

Supt. Parsons Comments on Issues Concerning Schools

School topics have been in the news lately—things like asbestos causing cancer in children, schools selling "junk foods", and other issues have been current in the national press.

The Signal asked Charles Parsons, superintendent of the Rockcastle County Schools, to comment on some of these issues.

Asbestos

Asbestos is a cause of concern, particularly in the New Jersey area where many people in their 30's and 40's have come down with cancer after being exposed to asbestos as children. The asbestos was used in school insulation and roofing.

"Asbestos, as far as I know, was never used in this county," Mr. Parsons said. None of the schools are over 30 years old when the substance was being used most frequently. He also said that it is no longer used in the schools and the new high school roof project would not contain it.

Junk Food

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has proposed that children not be permitted to purchase candy, soft drinks, frozen desserts or gum until after the last lunch period of the day.

The state of Kentucky has a similar recommendation, but does not enforce it.

"We have not allowed the sale of these foods for some time now," Mr. Parsons said. "Soft drinks are available at the Vocational School, but that is not under our jurisdiction."

Kindergarten

At a hearing this week at the Kentucky Department of Education, several changes in the kindergarten program were criticized by teachers. The rules for the 1979 school year require a "kindergarten unit" to be 50 pupils, instead of 40, as it was last year.

"This will effect Rockcastle County," Mr. Parsons said. He explained that some of the small schools do not have 50 kindergarten-age students for their programs, and in this case, the state of Kentucky will reduce the amount of money it funds accordingly. For example, if only 30 students register, only 3/5 of a "unit" is funded by the state.

Mr. Parsons said that Rockcastle has been able to work out a solution by having the teachers who have small classes teach remedial reading part-time. That way the county is partially state-funding for kindergarten work, and partial salary from the federal government. The Title I program. Teachers elsewhere in Kentucky have complained that the changes in the kindergarten program do not assure sufficient equipment and materials in the classrooms, but Mr. Parsons said that equipment and space had not been problems here.

Fire Hazards

State Chief Deputy Fire Marshall Clell Upton, who oversees inspections of schools, said last week that his department is going to "crack down" on violations of the fire codes, taking schools to court, if necessary, to get them to comply with rules.

Mr. Parsons said that schools have been inspected annually here in Rockcastle, and that "we always pass." He said children are trained to vacate schools in two minutes after a fire signal.

The Ten Commandments

House bill 156, passed during the 1978 General Assembly, says "It shall be the duty of the superintendent of public instruction to ensure that a durable, permanent copy of the Ten Commandments shall be displayed on a wall in each public classroom, provided sufficient funds are available." The law also specifies that the copies be 16"x20" and "purchased with funds made through voluntary contributions to the state treasurer."

Mr. Parsons said that the key to this law is the funding, which would have to come from private groups paying the money to the state for the purpose of displaying the Commandments. Mr. Parsons said Rockcastle would put up the Commandments if the money became available.

Rockcastle Is

Serving As Model

Rockcastle County is being a model for other counties and will experience a growth in the next few years, according to Ike Adams, director of Community Development for the Kentucky Highlands Investment Corporation.

The corporation is a private firm that helps fund community projects throughout southeastern Kentucky. Mr. Adams, a resident of McCreary County, has been director for four years but has a special enthusiasm for Rockcastle, he said.

"My greatest ambition is to become a resident," Mr. Adams said.

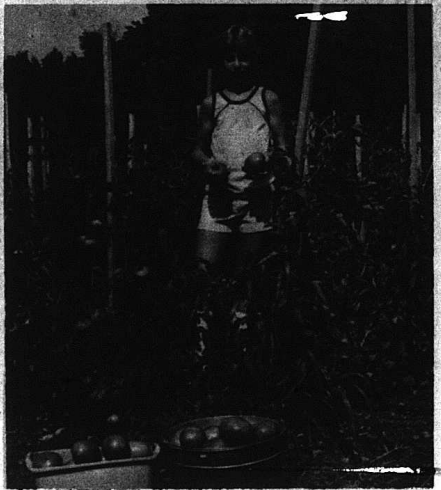

Mr. Adams was active in helping the Quil Homeowners secure a $5,000 low-interest loan for a community park, and for helping the Jaycees receive a similar loan from the Corporation for lights for a baseball field.

Adams said the efforts of the two organizations receiving the loans were indicative of a change he had witnessed in Rockcastle County over the last four years.

"There has been a tremendous growth in Community spirit and enthusiasm here over the last few years, he said. Rockcastle County has started to become a model for what Communities can do if they set their minds to and demonstrate some initiative."

"The Industrial Site, the new Hospital Wing, and The Mount Vernon Recreation Park simply demonstrate that a little determination coupled with a lot of persistence and hard work are the key ingredients of Development," he said. "Eastern and Southeastern Kentucky has become accustomed to simply sitting back and saying amen to whatever whims and fancies the Federal and State Governments have for us. The Government has been trying new programs, building new buildings and so forth for so long that we just kind of sit back and expect them to do something new every year or so whether we believe it's good or not."

"Rockcastle County has started looking at what it wants and needs and then going out and getting it, according to Adams. "The same initiative that has gotten three new and major developments going simultaneously will also have two or three new manufacturing companies located on the industrial site within the next two years, he said. The lesson here is that nothing can help an Eastern Kentucky Community anywhere near as much as it can help itself. I'm awfully proud of my Association with this county, he said, and when I am in a position to give advice to other county groups, I will simply say look at what's going on in Rockcastle County and look at the reasons why."

Willie "Tomato" Hiatt, who has taken a lot of kidding from his classmates and teachers about his tomato crop, has harvested over 100 pounds of ripe tomatoes. At the present time he is selling them in his father's store. Not bad, Willie "Tomato."

battle against the elements, classmates and teachers. He harvests the first ripe tomato on June 16. By July 1, he had harvested over 100 pounds of ripe tomatoes. At the present time he is selling them in his father's store. Not bad, Willie "Tomato."

Farmers Reminded To Report Crop Acreages

"Rockcastle County farmers who have planted corn, barley and wheat are reminded that now is the time to report the sizes and intended uses of their 1978 program acreages," Delmer New, Chairperson of the county Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) committee, said.

Final acreage certification dates for each crop, are July 31.

"This acreage report is a little more detailed than others of recent years because the program assistance for farmers is more extensive," Mr. New said. "The benefits also are available to farmers who are growing the crops but not participating in, the set-aside programs, if they will report their acreages."

Needed in the report at the ASCS county office, are:

The 1978 crops and acreages planted and the uses to be made of these crops.

Crops and acreages of set aside and those diverted for payment.

Wheat crops for haying or grazing for payment.

Mr. New said: "The County ASCS office will make random checks of farms to check that acreage reports are accurate and also make aerial photographs available to farmers to identify their fields."

Accurate certification is necessary before the farmer receives the benefits of price support and disaster, deficiency, diversion, or grazing and hay payments.

Homemakers Make Tour

Eighteen women from various Homemaker Clubs throughout the county went on a tour of Berea last Thursday. The group had lunch at Boone Tavern, a well-known restaurant specializing in Kentucky food, and toured the crafts industry of Berea College. Among the crafts seen were weaving, metallurgy, pottery, and furniture-making. The group also went through buildings at Berea College.

The group was led by Cheryl Witt, County Extension Agent. Other members included: Barbara Watson, Charlotte Bullock, Diane Daber, Rachel James, Rachel Griffith, Cheryl Witt and Deborah Newland.

water for fruit juice. You won't be as satisfied, probably, with the shape and flavor of the fruit.

Sugarless dry pack: This is especially good for blueberries, cranberries, currants, figs, gooseberries, and rhubarb. Pack firms, clean, whole or cup-up fruits in containers and seal and freeze.

"RADIO EMERGENCY GROUP"

(Cont. From Front) ... us to be calling London all the time, and that the dispatcher should relay the message," he said. Mr. Kirby said that the police do everywhere they are needed, and that he did not like to send them on "wild goose chases." Mr. Kirby, who was not at the Fiscal Court, said that REACT had not talked over the problem with him.

REACT stands for Radio Emergency Associated Citizens Team, and is a national organization of radio operators. The Rockcastle group became Team 4183 this May. Also present at the meeting were Ernest and Loretta Bryant. They said the group is planning some fund-raising projects this summer to benefit motorists in trouble.

"COURT RULES"

Fairview

By Mrs. Hubert Chasteen
Worship services were well attended at the Fairview Baptist church July 2nd. Sunday School attendance was ninety seven.

Vacation Bible school was conducted at Fairview last week with Rev. Mike Bryant as director. Enrollment was 78. Commencement exercise were held Saturday night. We enjoyed the program and thank God for the fine children and teenagers. We commend everyone who taught or took part in any way. Children are very precious and we should love them and help them in any way we can, especially to teach them about the Lord and His goodness.

Rev. Ray Dean remains about the same in the Berea Hospital. God bless him.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Tinch of Franklin, Ohio visited her mother, Mrs. Edith Mullins and other relatives here over the weekend. They had brought their daughters down the previous week and and they attended Bible School last week at Fairview. Also visiting Mrs. Mullins and other relatives were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wright and daughter Lori, and Mr. and Mrs. Mike Wilson also of Franklin, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were married on June 17 and had spent a week in Florida and several days here with relatives. Both Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Wilson are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Tinch.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Reppert of Crossville, Tenn. visited Mr. and Mrs. Tip Reppert, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Alexander and Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Chasteen Sunday, June 18 and spent the night here in our home and left the next morning to visit his sister and brother in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

Mrs. Lucille Lakes of Franklin, Ohio recently spent a few days here with her daughter, and family, Mr. and Mrs. Doug Ponder and Scotty. Mrs. Ponder and Scotty took her mother home Sunday and are visiting with her a few days.

Mrs. Willetta Swinford of Snider had the misfortune of getting her leg broken when she was struck by a car in front of her home, recently. After a short stay in the hospital she is now at home and we all wish her a speedy recovery. May God bless her to be up and around soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Knapp and daughters, Johnene and Traci of Wellington, Ohio visited her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Chasteen from Sunday until Thursday of last week. On Tuesday, the Knapp family, accompanied by Mrs. Chasteen, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Vaughn and Mr. and Mrs. Ira Reppert of Crossville, Tenn.

Mr. Bill Stephens of Rockford, celebrated his birthday Friday, June 30 at his home. Evening guests were three of his four children: Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Harold Mink and three children of Brindle Ridge, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Reynolds, Billy and Heather of Macedonia, and Mr. and Mrs. Donnie Stephens, Bennie and Michelle of Rockford. Cake and punch were served and they all enjoyed a good time together. Their other son, Benny and family of Taylor Mill, Ky. visited his parents the previous weekend. We wish Mr. Stephens many more years of health, happiness and all of God's greatest blessings. We, as a family have known, and lived near Bill and Flossie most of our lives and count them as some of our dearest friends and thank God for them.

Mrs. Eugene Alexander and daughter, Jewell and Mr. Albert Powell were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Powell and family of spring Valley, Ohio.

Miss Dorothy Lambert of Augusta, Ga. has spent the past few days here visiting Mrs. Della Lambert and family and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Sorah and daughters Esther and Paula of Elyria, Ohio spent Sunday night with her sister, Mrs. Hubert Chasteen and Mr. Chasteen. They attended church at Fairview Sunday evening. On Monday morning they left for Tennessee and Virginia to visit relatives there.

Mrs. Edith Mullins celebrated her birthday Sunday July 2nd. Guests for the occasion were her children and grandchildren. Her eight and nine year old grandchildren were many more years filled with good health and happiness. You are a dear sweet lady and we love you.

On June 15th, Mrs. Lloyd Pickle, Kenny, Gary and Michael, Mrs. Lonnie Pickle and Nicole, Mrs. Luther Isaacs, Jennifer and Carol went to Rural Retreat, Virginia to visit Mrs. Lloyd Pickle's father, sisters, relatives and friends. On Saturday they were joined by Luther Isaacs and Sherwood Pickle. They all enjoyed a large family picnic with 25 family members. On Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Isaacs and children, Mrs. Lonnie Pickle and daughter and Sherwood returned home. The others remained until Wednesday and enjoyed a wonderful visit.

Please remember church and Sunday School. I hope each of you enjoyed the July 4th holiday. And I hope too that you took time out to thank our wonderful country that we live in. I know we have disappointments, failures and problems but what country doesn't? I thank God for America and for being an American. I wouldn't trade it for any other place in the world. God bless you all.

Canning Without Salt
Q. Do you have any suggestions or improving the flavor of vegetables being canned for a salt-restricted diet?
A. Try adding 1/2 to 1 tablespoon of lemon or orange juice and a time piece of peel to each pint of carrots, beets or asparagus.

Perk up the taste of green beans and peas by adding a bit of mace, nutmeg or curry powder. Give green vegetables a taste lift by adding a spoonful of chopped celery and a silver of pimiento to each jar.

Remember to process all of these vegetables in a pressure canner!

Canning Tips - Peaches
Q. Is there any easy way to remove the peel from peaches?
A. A reliable trick is to scald the peaches by dipping them in boiling water for 1/2 to 1 minute. Follow this with a quick dunk in cold water. The loosened skins will slip right off.

Note: Peaches prepared for freezing are less ragged if you omit this hot dip and peel them with a knife.

Q. Is there a quick, neat way to remove the peach pit?
A. Cut both sides through to the stone, beginning at the stem end and following the "crease". Hold with both hands and twist gently. For cling stone varieties, use a special peach pitter.

Q. Must I scrape off the red or pink fiber left in the cavity after the pit is removed?
A. Many people consider the brownish discoloration this fiber produces after storage to be unsightly, but it is not harmful.

Q. How can I prevent peaches from darkening during preparation?
A. Drop cut and peeled peaches into a salt-vinegar solution. Use 2 tablespoons of each per gallon of cold water. Rinse off before packing. Or use ascorbic acid dissolved in water, following directions on package.

Q. My canned peach halves are full of air bubbles. Any suggestions?
A. In most cases, boiling water bath processing will remove the air bubbles. Peach halves are an exception, since air held in the cavities remains trapped. To remedy this problem, run a knife gently around the inside of the jar before adjusting lids for processing.

Q. How many peaches do you need to make a quart?
A. It takes approximately 2-3 pounds of fresh fruit for one quart of canned peaches.

Preserve Fruits Without Sugar
For Special Diets
Sugarless "dietetic" canned and frozen fruits for the diabetic or the weight-watcher are expensive at the grocery store. There's no reason you can't preserve your own at home for less, according to Mrs. Witt.

Following are her directions and suggestions:

Canning Fruits
Use full-ripe, firm fruit. Prepare according to reliable and up-to-date canning instructions, leaving out the sugar. Add a little water and cook fruit just until boiling.

Put hot into hot jars: If necessary, add boiling water to cover. Adjust caps and process as recommended in a boiling-water-bath canner. If you like, add an artificial sweetener (approved by your doctor) when you serve the fruit.

Freezing Fruits
There are several possible methods here—wet pack with fruit juice, wet pack with water and dry pack.

Wet pack with fruit juice: Choose only the soundest ripe fruit for freezing. Extract juice from the good part of less-perfect fruit. Add ascorbic acid to juice to prevent fruit from darkening. Pack fruit in the juice, following the same packing and head space directions given for sirup pack in your freezing manual. Use a moisture-vapor-resisting freezer container and freeze immediately.

Wet pack with water: Use the same method as above, substituting cold

Story Hour children gather around their teacher at the Rockcastle County Public Library. They also see movies and play games each Wednesday.

There is a Variety of Things To Do For Children Attending Story Hour at Library

Children attending Story Hour at the library, no longer just sit and listen to someone read a book aloud to them. Instead they watch movies, play games and win prizes.

The Rockcastle Co. Library now has three "teachers" for its Story Hour, which takes place every Wednesday between 2 and 3 p.m. Peggy Mitchell, Aneta Herrin and Kelley Moore are in charge of the group, which ranges in age from two to nine.

If the weather is good, the teachers take the children outside to play. They do listen to stories being read aloud, but afterward, they watch Walt Disney movies like Donald Duck, 10001 Dalmatians, and others. A prize for the child who attends most often will be given at the end of the summer.

Children attending Story Hour included: Alicia Sowder, Aneta Sowder, Regina Benge, Barbara Hopkins, Mindy Sargent, Becky Burkett, Sherri Rowe, Roger Cottencin, Chris Newland, Robin Shivel and April Shivel.

Don't Misuse Pesticides

Every year we receive many samples of crops with injuries caused by negligent use of herbicides and other pesticides. There are undoubtedly many cases we never hear of.

The most common cases are those in which a neighbor borrows a sprayer which has been contaminated with 2,4-D or some such material, or he actually uses the borrow sprayer to spray with 2,4-D and then returns it contaminated.

Another common mistake is to apply too much of a pesticide. Sometimes the damage is only minimal, but in other cases, the plant may be killed or ruined. Be sure and follow directions exactly!

Many times the wrong material is used for a particular pest. The result is no control at all, and damage by the pest goes unchecked. Be sure you are using the correct material for the pest concerned.

Another common mistake is improper application of a pesticide. For instance, herbicide drift on windy days to susceptible crops such as tomatoes or grapes (2,4-D) or volatilization of a herbicide on a hot day, may cause damage to susceptible plants. The application of any pesticide on a food plant closer to harvest than is recommended may render the produce unfit for consumption. The combination of incompatible pesticides may also result in plant damage. Always read the label and follow directions.

Most pesticides deteriorate with age. Some become ineffective, but others become toxic to plants. In either case, injury to the plant may result. Try to keep pesticides relatively fresh. Don't buy too far ahead.

Don't forget about those plants grown in large pots and containers. They require more water and because of this, more fertilizer is leached out. You should plan to add at least some complete fertilizer one that includes nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium early in the season. Then, every 4 to 6 weeks add a nitrogen fertilizer. Buy one of the soluble nitrogen fertilizers, mix with water and apply according to directions.

The first specimens of garden beans showing damage from bean yellow mosaic-virus infection were received in the plant disease diagnostic laboratory late last week. Infected bean plants were most commonly showing yellowing and mosaic patterns on leaves with dead veins or areas near the veins of these infected leaves. Some crinkling and downward cupping of leaves was observed. One white half-runner bean specimen had a vine tip that had been killed back the entire several inches of its length. Symptoms of this disease may vary depending on the time of infection, the type of bean, and the strain of virus involved.

Bean yellow mosaic virus is carried to garden beans by aphids. These insects pick up the virus mainly from white clover growing near the garden. The following suggestions may reduce the damage caused by bean yellow mosaic virus in the garden:

1. Avoid planting beans near white clover or other legumes.
2. Desoey legume weeds in fence rows or other areas in the garden.
3. A barrier of sweet corn or other tall-growing crop on the windward side of the beans may reduce disease.
4. Plant bush-type beans, if possible. It appears that Kentucky Wonder Pole beans and white half-runner beans are more susceptible to the virus.
5. Plant successive plantings may escape infection, so keep on planting!

Logging Roads

By Greg Stephens
Soil Conservationist
Rockcastle County

The major source of sediment from erosion in logging operations is from logging roads. So as a management plan is developed for your woodland tract, consideration should be given to road location and roads can be designed to minimize erosion and to avoid problems in the future.

Most of the potential erosion problems are caused by one or more of the following factors:

1. Removal or reduction of vegetative cover; 2. destruction of natural soil structure and fertility; 3. increased infiltration rates on parts of the road; 4. concentration of runoff water; and 5. interception of subsurface flows by road cuts.
- Immediately following your logging operation, the haul roads and skid roads should be smoothed and seeded. Drainage structures should be cleaned. Well maintained road systems are not only aesthetically pleasing, they protect the area from erosion and siltation while they increase the value of your land.

Speciality Products and Benefits

By Duane Bristow
Ky. Division of Forestry
Pineville, Ky.

Besides the obvious possibilities for forest income such as timber and minerals, there are several side benefits which the average landowner is likely to overlook. In planning for maximum benefits from the woodland, consideration should be given to all possibilities. Thousands of Christmas trees are purchased in Kentucky each year. Although some of these are artificial trees, and a large number are "wild" trees, the majority are Christmas trees grown for this purpose on Christmas tree plantations and shipped into Kentucky from other states. The market potential is enormous. The profits from an efficient operation are comparable or better than those usually obtained from agricultural field crops. In the Cumberland Valley area alone, over 25,000 households buy a Christmas tree annually. Larger markets exist in nearby urban areas. Growing Christmas trees requires management and labor for planting, weeding, shearing and harvest. Land on which a farm tractor can be used is required and the landowner must wait five to eight years after planting for harvest of the first crop. Sales methods include retailing, wholesaling, or a cut your own operation. Many people enjoy the type of work required in this enterprise.

A minor enterprise, but one not to be overlooked, is sale of nuts, such as walnuts. And greenery, including hittersweet, mistletoe, holly and pine Regal or lease of property for recreational use such as hunting and fishing are other possibilities. This is most feasible if recreational facilities are developed on the land. These might include lakes, ponds, hunting cabins, vacation homes, fish, and wildlife stocking programs, riding trails, picnic tables, and camping areas.

In areas with a good farm market, production of post and poles should be considered. Fence posts may be harvested from naturally growing black locust and red cedar trees. Utility poles may come from natural or planted pine stands. A recently developed and fast growing market at present involves pine and yellow poplar poles for use in log cabin construction. Several companies are now in business buying poles, cutting to patterns, and selling pre-cut poles as a log house kit.

With the energy crisis, there is a fast growing market for firewood. This can give the enterprising landowner an opportunity to market low quality hardwoods which probably should be removed from the stand and are otherwise unmarketable. There are several other markets for low quality trees. Pulpwood buying agents, in areas, buy pine and lesser amounts of hardwoods cut to five feet lengths. Pallet mills can utilize lower grade logs than sawmills selling graded lumber. Charcoal plants also buy hardwood timber cut to short lengths.

With a little imagination, you may be able to develop other possibilities for income from your woodland.

The Management Plan

By Jim Newman
University of Kentucky
Department of Forestry
Lexington, Kentucky

A plan for carrying out forestry activities on your woodland property can be as formal or informal as you wish. While in some cases, it may not even be written down on paper, it is usually desirable for the owner to do so or have it done by a professional forester.

The plan usually describes your goals and a schedule of activities for the woodland. Generally, the larger the woodland acreage and the more different conditions of soils and tree sizes in the woodland, the more details you will need. Where there are major differences in various sections of the woodland, the needed forestry activity will likely be quite different. Therefore, the plan of activity will vary for each different major condition found. Dividing the woodland into sections or compartments allow you to treat them separately. For example, divisions in the woodland may be the separation of large or mature timber areas from areas having only pole size timber or an old field just restocking with pine or hardwood saplings.

A management plan is a tool to help you set goals, and assign priorities to woodland management activities. Systematic planning is a step to productive forests and satisfaction gained from your forest regardless of how large or how small an acreage you own.

Cumberland Valley RC&D

By Jim Geiger,
RC&D Coordinator
Corbin, Ky.

This Woodland Page was initiated and written by the members and technical advisors of the Cumberland Valley Resource Conservation and Development (RC&D) Forestry Committee. The purpose of the woodland page is to help the general public become more aware of the economic and other values of the woodland in the Cumberland Valley and to help woodland owners become better acquainted with the local markets and woodland management practices.

The Forestry Committee is an arm of the Cumberland Valley RC&D Council which is sponsored by the eight county fiscal courts, conservation districts, and three DC's within the eight counties. The committee analyzes forestry problems and opportunities within the Cumberland Valley and gives guidance and recommendations to the RC&D Council on how to solve the problems and take advantage of the woodland opportunities.

The RC&D Forestry Committee consists of one member from each county. The members are: Dr. William B. Wilder, Chairman, Whitley; Lee T. Hopkins, Bell; Bea Burchell, Clay; Clyde Gaines, Harlan; Roy Sandlin, Jackson; Clinton Hammons, Knox; Henry Stoltz, Laurel, and Robert Fields, Rockcastle.

The Responsibility of Land Ownership

By Robert Fields
CV RC&D Forestry Committee

Forestland has been considered as wasteland by many landowners in our area. We have the responsibility of leaving the land in a much better condition than it was left to us. We have the opportunity to accomplish this through the technical information and capital available through several programs. However, a wider understanding of the need of this type of program is necessary before this can be accomplished.

Instead of "cutting out and getting out", today's timber grower maintains timber stands that will be harvested by his grandchildren. His landholdings are so managed as to restore wildlife, to maintain the water-holding capacity of the soil, and to provide green belts for campers and hikers. It is hoped that two centuries of overcutting our timber, begun in pioneer days, has ended. Our forefathers had to clear the land for crops. Today we live in a different time. We have the essential elements to develop our forests, and act responsibly toward the future by managing our forests. It will not only insure timber products for our descendants but forest management is necessary to help regulate stream flow. Good forest soil is a natural reservoir for rain water. A stream in a forest runs clear and steady rather than murky and undependable. One study made in Ohio revealed that a deciduous forest holds 14 times more water than an adjacent open field. Good forests and clean streams are an invaluable legacy to leave to our children.

Timber Sales

Jim Newman, Dept. of Forestry
University of Kentucky
Lexington, Ky.

In order to get a reasonable price, and satisfactory results upon completion of the harvesting, there are some fundamental procedures to follow. After devoting his land to years of growing a crop of trees, the forest owner often sells to the first buyer who comes along. Missing any of the steps listed below will often result in low returns and disappointment.

1. First, have a sound reason for making a sale such as mature trees or converting the land to another use. Too many sales are initiated by a purchaser and the owner is "rattled" into a quick sale.
2. Second, choose the type of sale which best meets your objectives of land ownership or woodland management. Know what the area will look like when harvesting is completed. Each type of sale has advantages and disadvantages. If in doubt, discuss the matter with a professional forester. Some common types of sales are:
 1. Selective-designating only mature trees and others which should be removed for the benefit of the woodland (usually involves) someone marking the trees to be sold.
 2. Boundary or cutting rights-the

3. owner waives all restrictions on trees to be harvested.
3. Diameter limit: all trees larger than a designated size are sold.
- Third, determine volume to be sold and know how many board feet of each kind of tree is involved in the sale.
- Fourth, determine value of the timber-consult with your local forester, agricultural workers, neighbors and others who have made recent sales.
- Fifth, advertise to timber buyers in a several-county area. A list of buyers is maintained by all forestry agencies.
- Sixth, a sales contract covering terms of sale and restrictions desired. Forestry agencies have sample contracts. Select the items which fit your specific situation.
- And finally, consider the possibility of harvesting and marketing your own timber crop. This procedure will allow you to control how your woodland will look after harvesting is completed.

Shop around with several buyers for the best possible sale.

Woodland Inventory - Land
By Greg Stephens, Dist. Conservationist
Soil Conservation Service
Mt. Vernon, Ky.

It is good woodland management to identify the better sites and begin management efforts on them. There are two main factors which influence the productivity of a site.

The soil is probably the single most important factor. Different soils have different levels of natural fertility, depth, moisture holding capacity, and so. Moisture holding capacity and fertility have obvious influences on tree growth. Soil Depth is a limiting factor only when its less than four feet deep. Tree roots rarely go deeper than four feet and most feeder roots are in the top six inches. Slopes are limiting factors to equipment usage and water infiltration rates. As part of a conservation plan, these factors are taken into account and soils are evaluated as to the productivity potential for woodland.

Aspect is probably the second most important factor. Aspect is the direction a hillside faces. Generally speaking, north and east facing slopes. The reason for this is that south and west facing slopes get direct sunlight and are hotter and dryer than north and east facing slopes. This causes trees on south and west facing slopes to experience stress which open them to insects and diseases because of reduced vigor. Northeast facing slopes are the best sites in this area for growing trees.

"All Kentucky City" Presentation

Mt. Vernon will be trying again this year to become an "All-Kentucky City" in the Chamber of Commerce's citation program that name. Ike Adams, representing the Rockcastle County Improvement Council, attended a seminar in Danville last week to get advice on how to win the citation.

"Last year Mt. Vernon needed only one additional point to bring home the award," Mr. Adams said. "There were only seven of us working on the program and we got started too late. I'm convinced that we could win easily this year if we had 10 or 12 people willing to begin working and planning right now."

Mr. Adams said he thought the Rockcastle committee should have more women on it, because "last year's winners seemed to have about two women for every man."

Mr. Adams watched winning slide shows and learned about preparation methods at the seminar with representatives from Shelbyville, Bardstown and Richmond-1977 All-Kentucky Cities.

A meeting July 21 at 7:30 p.m. in the PCA Building will be held for anyone willing to help on the All-Kentucky City committee, through the Rockcastle County Improvement Council.

"Good Catch" Was That for Roger Coffey of Valley Station

Roger D. Coffey of Valley Station is $1,002 richer today and all because of a fish or-to be more precise—because of three fish, each of which was sporting a bright orange plastic tag when it ended up on the "business end" of a crank bait. Coffey was fishing in the Skaggs Creek area of Barren River Lake in late May.

And how does all that money figure into what began as a few quiet days of family fishing for the 30-year-old Coffey, his wife, Peggy, and their 4-year-old son, Todd? Well, it goes something like this: Back in the spring, fishery biologist with the state Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, began tagging and releasing black bass in "certain" lakes and streams and in a portion of the Ohio River. Each of the tags was assigned a monetary value, chosen by random selection, ranging from $1 to $1000, with intermediate values of $5, $10, $25, and $100. A fisherman catching a "tagged" bass had only to return the tag, along with several of the fish's scales, a few vital statistics about the fish and tellow and where the fish was caught, to the fish and wildlife department in order to claim their cash reward.

And so Coffey, a native of Glasgow, who was reared in Louisville, proceeded to catch not just one "tagged" bass but three—all taken in the same area within a three-or-four-day period (he can't remember now whether the first was caught two or three days before May 30 when the last two were added to his stringer), and either the second or the third bass was worth a whopping $1,000 (both of the others bore a $1 tag).

"I knew the department was conducting some kind of a tagging program," Coffey said when he, Peggy and Todd dropped by the Fish and Wildlife Department's Frankfort offices to pick up his checks, "but I was amazed when they said I'd won $1,000."

Coffey was presented with the "reward" by Carl Kays, commissioner-in-charge of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, as several department employees, including Ted Crowell, fishery biologist in charge of the project, looked on with obvious pleasure.

"So far we're getting higher returns (of the tags) than we thought we would," Crowell said, adding that the state-wide average is now 13.6% and as high as 40% in some areas.

"Increasing the return rate was the purpose of the cash rewards," he said, "because we must get the tags back if we're to achieve our purpose of learning more about black bass. We're particularly interested in evaluating the effects of the new 12-inch size limit and also hope to more accurately gauge the fishing pressure on black bass."

The study is planned to run for at least two years, according to Crowell and more fish will be tagged next spring. The tags themselves will be honored "from now on," he said.

As for the Coffey family plans, when asked how he would spend the money, Coffey said, "Right now, I really don't know," then added, "probably for a little fishing equipment—Peggy needs some new things and she was one who used the crank bait first that day anyway. WE'D be using surface lures and spinners and hadn't had a bit of luck."

However they decide to spend the $1,002, you can bet the Coffey's will be out there fishing every chance they get. Earlier this spring the couple won a husband-and-wife bass tournament sponsored by the Buckenmouth Bridge, a Louisville bass club of which Coffey is secretary-treasurer, and their prize for

Blood Drive Set for July 14 "Looking Like a Success"

A blood drive to be held July 14 in Renfro Valley is looking like a success, according to chairman Steve Middifff.

Mr. Middifff said that community groups and churches are being asked to send groups to give blood.

"We hope to get about 300 donors," he said. He said that the last time a blood drive was held in Rockcastle County, only 18 persons donated blood, although the poor showing could be attributed to somewhat bad weather.

"The county's record has been bad in this area," Mr. Middifff said, "but we think we might be able to change that."

Some of the softball players at the Mt. Vernon Elementary School Playground have signed up to donate blood, as well as some members of the Rockcastle Jaycees, sponsors of the drive.

Local Lions Club Sponsor Flea Market

A Community Flea Market, Ladies Night, Installation of Officers and the purchase of two pair of eye glasses were the main topics of business at the last meeting of the Mt. Vernon Lions Club.

Robert Robinson, President of the local club, stated that the club will sponsor the third Community Flea Market this summer on Saturday, July 8 at Renfro Valley; the club's main money raising project. Mr. Robinson went on to say that the last club sponsored flea market was perhaps the best conducted by the club as more people attended and sales were good.

The installation of officers and ladies night will be held Thursday July 6th at the Rockcastle Steak House, according to Lee Durba, program chairman and Ed Hunt, chairman of sight conservation committee reported that the club had approved the purchase of two pair of eye glasses for club people who are not able to pay for their own examination and glasses.

The Community Flea Markets have been sponsored by the Mt. Vernon Lions Club for the past three years, and is the main source of revenue for the club in which the profits are used to purchase eye glasses for the needy, and donations to other charity projects. The club charges $5.00 for a table space at the markets from the vendors and sells donated items themselves to raise money.

A center will be set up in the building in front of the Old Barn in Renfro Valley, where people may stop in to donate blood between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. Mr. Middifff said that the organizers are asking people to make appointments in advance so that an orderly schedule can be worked out, but anyone who wanted to give would not be turned away.

Some people cannot give blood for medical reasons, and this is why a medical examination and history of each person is taken before the actual blood donation.

Anyone who wants to register can do so the week of the Blood Drive by phoning Mr. Middifff at the Public Health Department.

There are several advantages to the individual who donates blood:

1. His spouse, children under 18 years of age, parents, and parents-in-law as well as himself will be provided blood transfusion anywhere in the United States if necessary. Most regular insurance policies do not include blood transfusion costs.
2. If at least five members or 20% of a group donate blood, the entire group will get coverage for blood transfusions.
3. It does not hurt, takes only 45 minutes and you help save someone's life.
