Kentucky Supreme Court Upholds Baker Conviction And 20-Year Sentence

The Kentucky Supreme Court Tuesday upheld the first degree manslaughter conviction of Burnam Baker in the shotgun death of Earl Smith.

The case was first tried in the Rockcastle County Circuit Court, where Mr. Baker was convicted and sentenced to 20 years in prison. None of the legal claims of error were considered grounds for a reversal of the conviction or a hearing on the 20-year sentence by the Supreme Court.

Mr. Baker claimed that the Smith shooting was the result of an accident, and that the gun was pointed out his truck window and discharged when his truck slipped off the clutch and the truck lurched forward. He drove away without seeing the victim.

He argued that when a detective testified at his trial that he made no statement after his arrest, the silence was used against him. The appeals court said Mr. Baker made several statements and had consented to a house search.

Grand Jury Recesses

The Rockcastle County Grand Jury returned eight criminal indictments, according to county clerk, Money Ed Cummins. The names cannot be released until those indicted have been served with warrants.

The Jury is currently in recess until August 13.

Foster Parents Needed for Teens

The Department of Human Resources is looking for people willing to open their home on a short-term basis to teen-agers in trouble. The home would become a "foster care emergency shelter" for a teen-ager who needs a place to stay up for 30 days for one reason or another.

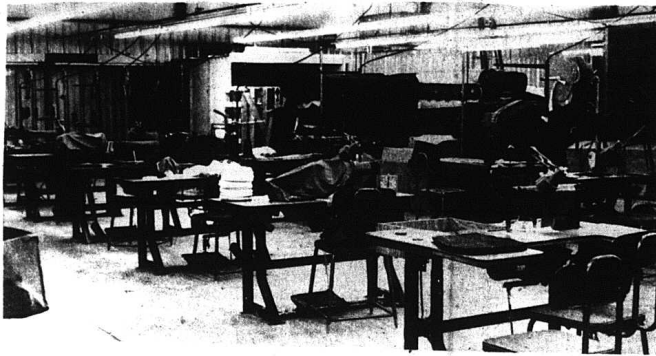

Mike Bryant, at the Mt. Vernon office of the Kentucky Department of Human Resources, said that two homes are needed in an eight-district area that includes Rockcastle County.

A teenager may need temporary shelter because his parents have deserted him, or because he is in some trouble with the law. The alternative to a foster home is jail, in some cases.

The child would stay sometimes as short as 24 hours, or up to 30 days while the Department of Human Resources social workers find a permanent home, either with his parents or relatives or in a state-operated residential treatment center.

Foster parents would have to be on call seven days a week, 24 hours a day, but Mr. Bryant said it was unlikely that the services would be needed all the time. One day the foster parent may be taking care of three teenagers, and then have none for several weeks.

Homes must meet certain standards before being licensed as shelters. There is some reimbursement to the foster parents for their expenses. For further information call Mr. Bryant at 256-4416.

Council Hosts Kentucky Highlands Corp. For Tour of Rockcastle County and Dinner

The Rockcastle County Improvement Council played host to the Kentucky Highlands Investment Corporation last Tuesday, with a tour of the county and a dinner at Renfro Valley Lodge.

Afterwards, the KHIC held its annual Board of Directors meeting at The Bank of Mt. Vernon. KHIC is an investment company partly financed by government money, whose goal is to create more jobs for eastern Kentucky by investing in new companies. KHIC has invested $585,000 in the Rockcastle Manufacturing Company project, the first factory to be located in the Rockcastle Multi-County Industrial Park.

In addition, KHIC has invested in the Quail Community Park and the Lake Linville Park, the Rockcastle Steel Corporation, and others. Wayne Stewart, who lives in Mt. Vernon, is chairman of the KHIC board of directors, and William McClure, of Sand Springs road, is a board member. The company has headquarters in London.

About 70 local people attended the event Tuesday. Some were members of the Improvement Council or had been involved in community projects or held county offices. The group toured the county on two school buses. Stops included the new factory, the high school, Quail and Lake Linville parks, Rockcastle Steel Corporation, Brodhead Fairgrounds, the Family Life Center, and the hos-

Renfro Valley Gets First Priority As Local Choice for State Park

The Rockcastle County Improvement Council considered several proposals Monday that would encourage tourists to stay here and spend money, "not just drive by and wave at us," as John Houston put it.

The group wrote letters to the state Departments of Tourism and Parks about getting a state park in the county; heard progress reports on the Renfro Valley Molasses Festival; and talked about having Morehead University prepare a promotional brochure about Rockcastle County mostly for tourism.

State Park: The Council decided to rank the four areas under consideration for a state park as follows: Renfro Valley, Fort Sequoyah, Salt Petre Veave and Wildcat Mountain.

The state Department of Tourism is looking for an area in eastern Kentucky for a new park, and several other counties are competing for the same funds, Gina Lee King, a member of the Governor's Tourism Council, said. The Improvement Council is trying to locate it in the county.

Wayne Stewart suggested that Renfro Valley be given top priority because it is nationally known, easily accessible to I-75, and easy to promote. His motion carried.

The proposed state park at Renfro would have the theme of "Kentucky Heritage", and may include rides and a lodge. Mrs. King said that the concept of a state park at Renfro or the other areas had been endorsed by the Kentucky Highlands Tourism Council, the Cumberland Valley

Tourism Council and the I-75 Tourism Association. Chairman Bill James said that a representative from the state park system would come to an Improvement Council meeting to discuss the proposals.

4000 lbs. Tobacco Destroyed Monday In Brief Hailstorm

A 30-minute hailstorm Monday night damaged tobacco crops in an area about one-half mile wide and three miles long near Scaffold Cane.

The worst damage was reported by Tipp Reppert, who lost his entire tobacco crop, about 4000 lbs. The storm occurred about 7 p.m.

"Every leaf was broken or stripped," according to Harold Ballinger, of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation office. "He lost it all."

The crop was leased to Billy Ramsey. Mr. Reppert said they planned to disk up the field and plant a cover crop, probably soybeans.

Other farmers who reported some damage were Everett Thomas, Herb LaIr, Tommy Harold Mink and Coleman Mink.

Anyone else whose crops were damaged and who are enrolled in the Feed Grain (corn) Program should call Mr. Ballinger at the ASCS office.

First Factory at Park Starts Manufacturing

By Jane Kundtz

The first factory in Rockcastle County Industrial Park went into operation this week, as forty people reported to work at the large cream-colored building.

Rockcastle Manufacturing Company is a subsidiary of Cintas Corporation, a large uniform rental company located in Cincinnati. The Rockcastle plant is Cintas' first venture into the manufacture of uniforms.

The plant may expand in the future to include up to 200 employees, Mr. Glushen said.

The forty employees will be turning out 100 dozen pairs of dark blue work pants a day, according to the plant's manager, Lee Glushen.

That may seem like an incredible number until you consider the special equipment that the new factory is housing.

As you walk into the factory, you see rows of what at first glance look like some sewing machines. But they are heavier and each one is modified for a different job.

The one with a long table at its side is used for sewing pants seams. Another does nothing but make pockets, and has a special basket to catch them. The operators do not have to stop the machines to cut the threads. After repositioning the cloth, they can start the machine with a pedal and do not have to turn the wheel-thus saving time.

There are machines for putting on buttons, making button holes, making pocket facings, putting in zippers, making the zipper 'foots', and even one that does nothing but the leg seams. These complex machines are very fast and efficient; buttons go on with 32 stitches, in less than a second, as the machine cuts its own thread afterward, and lifts itself up for the next job.

A huge oven, with thick walls like a bank vault, is where the permanent process takes place. By baking the oven at high temperatures, the pants become permanently creased.

There is a cutting table with a gigantic blade that cuts through 120 thicknesses of cloth at once. Instead of finishing seams with stitches to keep them from unraveling, certain cloth edges are sprayed with a special glue, then hung on large hooks and shaken dry. When dry, the edge of the cloth is hard and will not unravel.

The current employees were trained in a building in Mt. Vernon rented by Cintas. Conditions were very crowded in the training plant, and Mr. Glushen said he was glad to get into the new building.

GOP Women to Meet

The Republican Women's Club of Rockcastle County will meet Monday, July 30 at 7:00 p.m. at the Bank of Mt. Vernon's Community Room. Fred Abney, first vice president of the club will lead the discussion on the Louie Nunn campaign in Rockcastle County. Regular business will also be discussed. All republican are urged to attend.

Fred Best (middle) and his wife, Polly, talk with Bill Ballinger during a coffee hour before the tour of the county. Mr. Best is business director of Kentucky Highlands Investment Corporation.

The building is air conditioned and very bright, as it is lit with low fluorescent lights.

Rockcastle Manufacturing Company opens a little more than a year after the dedication of the industrial park, located two miles west of Mt. Vernon on US 150. There is space for 11 companies.

Once the Rockcastle County Industrial Authority had located a factory here, then the state became willing to help pay for a railroad spur, roads and sewer lines. Among the groups helping to finance the project are Kentucky Highlands Investment Corporation ($585,000) Ky. Industrial Development Finance Authority ($165,000), the Cumberland Valley Area Development District ($40,000), the Appalachian Regional Commission ($138,000), and individuals and The Bank of Mt. Vernon.

Miss Shashawna Patrick, niece of the bride, served as flower girl and wore an off the shoulder gown of white organza with a full princess skirt edged with an eyelet ruffle. She carried a basket arrangement similar to that of the honor attendant.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Smith chose a floor-length gown of platinum qiana, enhanced with a sweetheart neckline covered with a sheer chiffon capelet held by beads and pearl at the raised waistline. She carried a corsage of miniature carnations, baby's breath, delphinene and miniature asters.

Don't soak wood items in water because wooden salad bowls and wooden handles may warp or crack. Prolonged soaking can also mar their finish. Instead of running through the dish water or dishwasher, wipe them clean with paper towels. Wipe lightly with salad oil from time to time to keep wood from drying out.

Molasses Festival - Renfro Valley has scheduled a festival October 12-14 and is seeking the help of the community. According to Wayne King. The festival will have continuous entertainment of crafts demonstration, horsehoe contests, turkey shoots, bingo and music. Organizers are asking community groups such as the Scouts, Jaycees, or Woman's Clubs to set up booths where they might sell cakes or other items, with proceeds going to their organization. Renfro Valley is also looking for local people to demonstrate soap making, quilting, leathercraft, weaving and other crafts. Mr. King said, "We want to make this a real community affair."

Other plans include the Kentucky Historymobile and an ice cream social.

Brochures about the County: The Council invited a staff member from the Morehead State University to its next meeting to explain Moreheads offer of preparing a promotional brochure about Rockcastle County. The university will write and produce the brochure free, and get it printed at half price, through the Appalachian Development Center.

Road Bank Seeding: The Council voted to endorse a proposal by the Soil Conservation Service that would get 17 acres of road banks seeded in the county as a measure to impede soil erosion and beautify the county. The Soil Conservation District pays for everything, but it must be approved by the county Fiscal Court, according to Gov. Stephens, SC official. He will be presenting the proposal to the Court next month for the second time, as the Court turned down the idea several months ago.

Everett Brown Award: The annual Everett Brown Memorial Award will be presented next month to the person who has contributed the most to the development of the county last year or over a period of years, according to Gatliff Craig. Last year it was presented for the first time to Clyde Linville.

Cattle Grub Control

Cattle grubs are pests on beef and dairy animals every year. These large grub-like larvae are the maggots of the cattle grub fly. Most cattle producers are familiar with the large grubs found under the skin of the back during the late winter but by the time the grubs get to this stage it is really too late to control them and benefit the animal.

Adult cattle grub flies look much like bees and their egg laying activities are frightening to cattle. It is not uncommon to see cattle fleeing from these flies in the spring. This panic is unjustified since these flies can neither bite or sting. Egg laying takes place from the first warm days of spring until mid July.

The larvae bore through the skin and enter the body soon after they hatch. They spend the next 8-10 months in the body wandering through the connective tissues of the animal. The larvae spend about 2 months of these months in the tissues surrounding the gullet, or the spinal column. From this area they move up under the skin of the back where they do most of their growing and create the access-like warbles.

Cattle grub control insecticides should be applied in the time period between the end of July and the end of October. This time ensures that no more eggs are laid on the cattle after treatment and kills the young grubs before they get into the area around the gullet or spinal column.

Systemic insecticides have made effective early grub control very convenient and easy. This type of control utilizes insecticides that are absorbed through the skin or gut wall where they are picked up by the bloodstream and carried throughout the body where they kill the grubs.

The method of application used depends on the facilities of the individual cattle producer. If working chutes and head gates are available on the farm-pour on or spot-on insecticides are very convenient and effective. When applying these products, be sure to use only the amount needed based on the weight of the animal. When using pour-ons the proper amount should be distributed down the backbone of the animal. Spot-on insecticide should be applied all in one spot since it is more effective when done in this manner.

Sprays can also be used when chutes, etc are not available. To ensure that the skin is thoroughly wet, use a high pressure sprayer at 250 to 400 psi.

Cattle on pasture can be treated using one feed-through product that is available. This product is available in a loose mineral mix or mineral block. Enough of these materials should be made available to that all the animals can get the proper dosage. Keep this feed through insecticide available for at least 75 days.

August or September are excellent times for cattle grub control. Be sure to follow label directions and use them only on those cattle specified by the label.

Tobacco Samples
When bringing tobacco samples to the Extension office, please include a soil sample. Frequently plants are showing symptoms of an acid soil problem but without checking of pH of the soil, we cannot be sure in many instances.

To the relatives and friends of Sarah Hiatt Craig:

Rockcastle County will always be home to me even though my immediate family no longer lives there.

My sister and I returned July 6th and 7th for a very sad occasion-our mother's funeral service. It was such a comfort being with relatives and friends. The love and kindness shared with us will be a beautiful memory always.

Thank you for being so thoughtful.

What is Baptism for the Dead?

The passage under consideration is 1 Cor. 15:29 which says: "Else what shall they do which are baptized of the dead, if the dead rise not at all? Why then are they baptized for the dead?"

This passage has led to all sorts of speculation and is the basis for some sect's practice of baptizing someone who is alive for someone who is dead with a view to SAVING that dead person. It is always dangerous to base religious practice on the obscure meaning of a Bible passage. Vicarious baptism conflicts with known Bible facts, and is wrong because:

(1) It Makes God a Respector of Persons. One could live a wicked rebellious life here, die and go to hell, and then have someone be baptized for him-and be saved. He would then receive the same reward as a righteous man. God is no respecter of persons (Acts 10:34).

(2) It Teaches A Change of State After Death. But the Bible says that there is a Gulf between the righteous and wicked after death, so that no man can cross over (Luke 16:26) The Bible teaches that after death, cometh judgement (Heb. 9:27), and that man will be judged according to "the things done in his body" (2 Cor. 5:10).

(3) It teaches that man can be saved without faith and repentance. Jesus said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved" (Mark 16:16). Peter taught that repentance and baptism are for the remission of past sins (Acts 2:38). Proponents of the vicarious baptism theory say the man doesn't have to believe and repent, and somebody else can be baptized for him!

What does the passage teach? It is admittedly a difficult passage, but it seems to this writer that the passage may be talking about those who are spiritually dead (Eph. 2:1), and who are baptized to become alive in Christ (Rom. 6:3-7, 2 Cor. 5:17). Why do they die, if there is no physical resurrection? Others have viewed the passage as referring to baptism in the interest of being united in the resurrection with saints who are now dead.

Mr. Mullins said, "I won't do any bragging about our area, because that tour did it all for us."

Mr. Miller spoke about the importance of people in the economic development process. "Development means growth and change, and to do that, you need commitment, effort and money. All of you people have helped bring about change."

"Each new development means convincing people that it's a good idea. Clyde Linville can talk for an hour and give you funny stories about how they got Lake Linville over there. And that's just the funny stories. It takes a lot of effort."

be moving to Richmond in the very near future.

Sergeant Webster is anxious to help the young people of this area to learn more about the training and educational opportunities available in today's Army. He said, "Two of the more popular options available are the new 'two-year enlistment program' and the 'cash bonus program'."

The new two-year option is available only to high school graduates or to high school seniors. "Serving two years is an excellent opportunity for a young person who hasn't made up their mind about attending college or a technical school to travel in the Army. A lot of kids want to take a year or two to 'find themselves' before continuing their education. With the Army they have the advantage to gain some maturity and valuable training and work experience while being paid a good salary," he explained Sergeant Webster.

"On the other hand, if the applicant wants to invest four years in the Army, there is the 'cash bonus' program that offers up to $3,000 for enlisting in certain career fields, he continued. "This is a very good way to start a 'nest egg' for the future."

For more information on these and other options available in the Army, or to meet Sergeant Webster, visit him in his office at the Robbins Motel in Richmond, or call him at (608) 623-1270.

Freezing Corn-on-the-Cob

If you have the freezer space, freeze your fresh corn this summer for pleasurable eating this winter.

When freezing sweet corn any style, work with small batches. Pick, husk and process quickly for that fresh-from-the-garden flavor in the frozen product. Using a vegetable brush on the ear of corn, under cold running water, helps clean off the silks that cling.

Choose the best ears you can find, with plump tender kernels and thin sweet milk. Husk, remove silk, wash and sort ears according to size. Heat them in boiling water for 7 minutes for small ears, 9 minutes for medium ears, and 11 minutes for large ears.

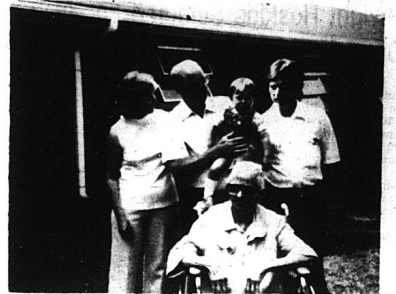

Cool the ears of corn promptly and very thoroughly in ice water and then drain. Pack into freezer containers-freezer bags are especially handy for ears of corn. Seal, label and freeze immediately.

For the best flavor, eat within 12 months.

Feeding Whole-Kernel Corn

Choose ears with plump, tender kernels, and thin, sweet milk. If the milk is already thick and starchy, save these ears for fresh eating right away.

Husk ears, remove silk and wash corn. Heat ears in boiling group consists in feeling comfortable about yourself! This implies looking as personable as possible and paying attention to grooming habits.

Do you, the aging person, want to be loved and physically touched by relatives and friends? An uncared for, ungroomed, or neglected body makes it difficult for some people to give the affection you may crave. To counteract this, pay attention to your appearance. You'll feel better about yourself and others will feel better around you.

Wear clothing that is well-fitting and consider color. Nobody ever said that older people have to wear drab colors. You may want to have someone style your hair in such a way that you will be able to manage it easily.

Insist upon shoes that are comfortable and supportive. They will help you feel and look better. All of these measures will bring you compliments and personal pride.

Children Should Be Informed To Alleviate Insecurities

Financial worries can be distressful to the point where they preoccupy adult thinking, hindering creativity, productivity and peace of mind. How does this affect the children in the family? Children are sensitive to any serious situation or crisis in the family. Parents do well to share as much of the truthful aspects of a situation as the child can understand. If children are deprived of the truth, they may collect fragments of the situation, then imagine things that are far more worrisome than the truth.

Children feel honored to be taken into the confidence of their parents. When told that there won't be money for a bike like Jimmy's down the street because it will be needed for groceries, to buy oil to heat the house, or to pay for mother's medicine, the child is usually very willing to forego the desired object. For most children it will be a very valuable experience to learn early in life how to live within the family's financial situation.

Mike Hancock's Job Is Promotion of Sheep Raising

Mike Hancock would like to see more sheep in Rockcastle County.

"Sheep would bring more money into the county, as there is a real good market for lamb and wool," he said. "They are efficient forage consumers. They do take more labor than cattle, but they can be more profitable."

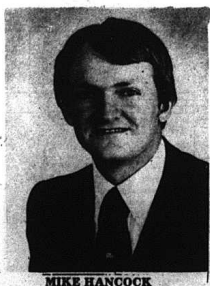

Since June, Mr. Hancock's full-time job is to promote sheep in this county and 10 others. He plans to organize meetings, hold seminars to teach sheep techniques, an adpublicize sheep as much as possible. As project director of the Southeastern Kentucky Small Farmer Sheep Project, Inc., Mr. Hancock has set up an office in London and begun work. The project is funded through the Rockefeller Brothers Fund and the United States Dept. of Agriculture.

Sheep production has declined in Kentucky since the 1940's from one million to 25,000, and this is a mistake, according to Mr. Hancock. Lamb prices have exceeded cattle prices for the past four years and world wide demand for sheep meat is also increasing, due primarily to the OPEC nations in the Middle East. Long range prices for wool should continue to improve due to limits in supplies and increasing costs of petroleum feed stocks—the raw material required for most synthetic fibers.

Mr. Hancock, who is a graduate of the University of Kentucky and was active in UK's sheep research program, said that many of the problems traditionally associated with sheep production have been solved by new methods. The three major problems of internal parasites, foot rot, and dogs are under control through new medications and technology such as electric fencing systems developed in Australia.

Farmers interested in learning more about sheep production should contact Mr. Hancock at 864-7311 or 348-4084.

Businesses Cooperate With Plan for 78 Degree Temperature

Temperatures in stores and offices around Rockcastle County have already begun to rise because of President Jimmy Carter's mandate that air conditioning cannot be run lower than 78 degrees.

A check of buildings on Main Street revealed that many are that warm or warmer not because of the mandate, but because air conditioners won't cool the rooms any lower when the outside temperature is over 90 (as it was the day the Signal made its survey.)

Stores with thermostats turned low but still registering 78 degrees or more included Bryans, Mt. Vernon Restaurant, Rush Jewelry Store, McBees', Dollar General Store, Hen House and Hiatt's. Mt. Vernon Bargain Store, Cox Hardware and Young's Pharmacy had no air conditioning at all the day of the survey.

The Bank of Mt. Vernon's inside thermometer registered a cool 70 degrees, but vice president James Smith said the lower temperatures was necessary because of sensitive equipment stored in the building.

The Mt. Vernon Post Office was up to 80 degrees in compliance with a federal order special to post offices, according to James Smith, postmaster. He said he is required to keep the heat down to 65 degrees in winter, go "have been wearing our long johns the past two winters and sweating all summer."

The courthouse building had uneven temperatures. The basement was significantly cooler than the middle and top floors, although the thermostat for the entire building was set at 78 degrees, county Judge-Executive Hubert T. Weathers said. At 2 p. m., it was well over 85 degrees in the Social Security Disability Protection Discussed

Bob Anderson, manager of the Richmond Social Security Office, announced today that since its beginning 25 years ago, the social security disability insurance program has become the average American family's major protection against the loss of income due to severe illness or injury. Four out of five workers are insured for these benefits. And some 3 1/2 million workers, widows, and widowers, and persons disabled since childhood receive payments due to disability, as do 2 million dependents of disabled workers.

The original legislation in 1954 only established a disability "freeze," which protected a disabled worker's future insured status and retirement benefit amounts (much like a waiver of premium under private insurance). Program changes in the next 6 years provided cash payments for workers and dependents.

Among later liberalizations were these: The required duration for an impairment was reduced from "long-continued and indefinite" to a minimum of 12 months or the impairment must result in death. Medicare was added for people on the disability rolls 2 or more. The waiting period was cut from 6 to 5 months. And increased emphasis was placed on rehabilitating beneficiaries.

Starting in 1974, the Federal supplemental security income (SSI) program added more security for many disabled and blind (as well as aged) people in financial need. About 2 1/2 million disabled and blind people now receive these monthly payments from the Social Security Administration, and some receive both social security and SSI. SSI is financed from U.S. general revenues while social security is financed from payroll contributions.

People can apply for social security and SSI disability payments at the more than 1,300 local social security offices throughout the nation. Determinations of disability are then made by a State agency, usually the one handling vocational rehabilitation.

About three-fourths of all disability decisions can be made on the basis of medical evidence. A "Listing of Impairments" sets out for each major body system the level of severity—according to the signs, symptoms, and laboratory findings—which can support a finding of "disability." When a person's condition is at least as severe as outlined in the listing, he or she is presumed disabled if he or she is not working.

If you have a severe disability that you feel will prevent you from working at least a year, get in touch with the folks in the Richmond social security office. The people there can give you more information about social security and SSI disability benefits. The office is located in the University Shopping Center on the Eastern Bypass. The telephone is 623-5856.

circuit clerk Money Ed Cummin's office, who said that winter this part of the building does not get its share of heat either.

Pic Pac Store was very cool inside, but manager David King said he was not running any air conditioning. The store is cooled by the open refrigerators and freezers, he said.

Window units are all that are used to cool the Board of Education Building on Richmond Street, so it stays fairly warm there in summer. School superintendent Charles Parsons said that he imagined the Rockcastle County High School would be cooled only to 78 degrees in compliance with the rulings. The other county schools are not air conditioned.

The Department of Human Resources, Carter's Store and the Brodhead Citizens Bank were all about 78 degrees.

In his speech, July 12, President Carter used the powers granted him by Congress in the 1975 Energy Policy and Conservation Act. According to Bill Bowker of the Kentucky Department of Energy in Frankfort, about five million letters to stores and offices will be sent out this month explaining the new law. Some buildings will be exempt for various reasons, including treatment of medical or dental patients, housing special equipment, etc.

The exempt buildings will be required to post a sign saying that they are exempt before they can cool the building below 78 degrees.

The state Department of Energy will be working with the federal Department, unless Gov. Julian Carroll decides not to, Mr. Bowker said. There has been some question whether Kentucky should go along with the new laws because electricity here comes from coal and there would be no saving of oil of turning down Kentucky thermostats.

Mr. Bowker said that any business that does not comply will be subject to fines up to $10,000 from the federal government. There will be inspectors to insure that people follow the instructions, which arrive in the mail the second week in August. For further information, call Mr. Bowker at 502-564-7070.

Nick Hellman, left, and Pat Sheehan, two first-year medical students from UK, have been working at Rockcastle County Hospital for the past eight weeks.

UK Student Doctors Enrich Knowledge By Helping Local Doctors in Practice

Two first-year medical students from the University of Kentucky have spent the last eight weeks helping Drs. Orson Arvin and G.H. and G.W. Griffith at Rockcastle Co. Hospital, as part of the state-funded "Medical Education Community-Oriented" program. MEDCO is designed to encourage doctors to practice in rural areas.

The two men are both from big cities, and said that they had been curious about small life before coming to Mt. Vernon.

"It's not like the stereotype," Nick Hellman said, and his partner, Pat Sheehan agreed. Nick is from the Cincinnati area. Pat is from Louisville.

They both were impressed by the personal nature of medical practice here—the fact that almost everyone knows everyone else or is somehow related.

"I think the psychological aspects of medicine are more important in a rural area," Pat said. When you know someone well, you can better determine how sickhe really is, as people react differently to the same symptoms.

They were also impressed with the long hours that family practitioners work—starting at 7:30 a.m., finishing office hours about 4 p.m., and then having to deal with emergencies sometimes all night long. Ninety-hour weeks were not unusual for them this summer.

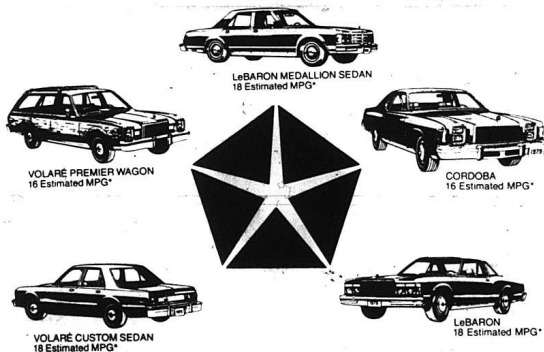

Nick said that rural practice probably involves more routine kinds of ailments—flus, colds, etc.—but there is real challenge in dealing with people.

Both lived at the Griffin Hotel and took the time to visit many communities in the region, including Brodhead, Livingston, Somerset, London and Richmond. Nick went to a Renfro Valley Barn Dance one Saturday.

"It's been quite an experience," Pat said. "This is an absolutely beautiful area. We don't have mountains in Louisville and I really like them."
