Three indicted

Glena Faye Williams of Livingston has been indicted by a Rockcastle Grand Jury for wanton endangerment in the first degree.

The indictment states that on or about May 1 she committed the offense by shooting a pistol into Clinton Setser's car while he was inside. She posted a $2,500, 10 percent bond.

Wilma Lee Furman of Scaffold Cane was indicted on charges of receiving stolen property over $100 and obscuring identity of a machine.

The indictment states that on or about April 23 she committed the offense of receiving stolen property over $100 by receiving a 1988 Chevrolet pick-up truck that had been stolen from Owens Chevrolet in Danville.

Also, she is charged with removing or defacing the manufacturers serial number on the truck. She is under a $5,000 unsecured bond.

Vernon Wade Graves was indicted for driving under the influence (DUI), resisting arrest and menacing.

The indictment states on or about June 12, the defendant was found to be driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol after having been previously arrested for the same offense at least three other times and all offenses were within five years of each other.

He is also charged with resisting arrest of officer Barry Adams for DUI, and intentionally placing officer Adams in reasonable apprehension of imminent physical injury.

His bond was set at $3,000 in 10 percent and was filed.

Fire destroys Miller home

Two fires between Sunday afternoon and early Monday destroyed the home of Tom Miller on Town Hill in Mt. Vernon.

The fire started Sunday afternoon when Miller was not at home. It burned the living room and kitchen areas but Mt. Vernon firemen contained the blaze.

About 2:30 a.m. Monday the fire rekindled and firemen returned to the scene but the house was totally destroyed. Because of the earlier fire, Miller was not at home.

Firemen said the flames were coming through the roof when they arrived the second time. They fought to save the garage, a nearby building.

Miller's pet dog died in the fire. Firemen contributed its death to smoke.

Break-ins reported

Tully Parsons of White Oak Stables, on Brindle Ridge reported to the sheriff someone stole $1,460 worth of items from his property.

Stolen were: Two English saddles, one western saddle, 6 bridles, 6 bit sets, one horse hair clipper and five miscellaneous items.

A break-in occurred over last weekend at Roundstone Elementary School.

Taken were two air conditioners and an IBM computer.

They entered the school through a back door.

Withur Thomas of Livingston, reported a yard tractor was stolen from his home.

Jack Dailey of Mt. Vernon reported a Stihl saw was stolen from a building on his property. He valued it at $350.

State may put black bears in forest

Seen a black bear recently? You may soon, several state and federal groups are considering releasing black bears into southeastern Kentucky.

If they decide to, a dozen bears could begin roaming more than 200,000 sparsely settled acres in Kentucky and Tennessee sometime next year, according to a story in the Herald-Leader.

They will eat berries in the summer and acorns in the fall.

They will hibernate in the rock shelters that are common in the rugged terrain.

It could be a lot like it was when bears lived in the area 100 years ago, except these will wear radio collars so college students can keep tabs on the bears.

If they cause problems, out they go, but problems aren't expected. Unlike the bears that usually get publicity -- such as the 200-pounder that was eating peanuts put out for squirrels at an apartment complex in Ashland last month -- officials say these will be wild, and therefore shy.

Most people won't know they are there.

"Bears usually have nighttime feeding habits and don't want to be around you," said Tom Edwards, a biologist with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

"It's the ones that have switched over to daytime feeding that cause the problems and they're probably no longer legitimately called wild black bears."

The bears for the experiment would be trapped in remote parts of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park where they do not associate people with food.

They would be released near the Tennessee state line in the Big South

The home of Tom Miller on Negro Town Hill Rd. just north of Mt. Vernon was completely destroyed by fire very early Monday morning. The residence first caught fire on Sunday afternoon when the living room and kitchen were heavily damaged.

Candidates report costs to state

Candidates in this May's Rockcastle primary election spent in excess of $44,000 to nothing at all, according to final campaign spending reports.

The reports were filed in Norma Houck's office thirty days after the election.

Incumbent Commonwealth Attorney James H. Lambert outspent all other candidates in his bid for a fourth term. Lambert spent $44,824.44 on everything from signs, gas and radio advertising to pot holders and newspaper advertising.

See spending chart on Page A-11

His opponent and the winner in the two man race, Jeffrey T. Burdette spent $18,184.12.

Incumbent Commonwealth attorney Benny Ham spent $8,085 in his bid for re-election. Because his race was in Lincoln, Rockcastle and Pulaski Counties he did not have to file a report in the Rockcastle clerk's office but a copy of the report was sent for local records. His opponent and the victim Ray Carmichael did not send a copy of his report. It was filed in Frankfort.

The winner of the local Judges/Executive's race, Buzz Carloufs spent $5,547.15 in his bid to unseat incumbent Roland Mills who spent $2,951.99 on his campaign.

In the circuit clerk's race, the incumbent and winner, Denver Miller spent $3,000 as did one of his opponents, Jean Chuteelle. His other opponent, Cedric Thacker spent $1,007.72.

Former Sheriff "Jib" Hasty spent $4,609.41 in his effort to reclaim his office from incumbent Shirley Smith, who spent $2,020.41. Smith won easily.

Joe Howard, who was appointed judge to fill Billy Kirby's unexpired term spent $2,306.83 in his successful effort to stay judge, while Buck Farthing spent $1,876.02 and John Bullock $900.00.

Incumbent first district magistrate Charles Holbrook spent more than any other magistrate candidate, dropping $2,814.21 on his unsuccessful campaign. The winner, Shannon D. Bishop spent $462.

Jack Bradley spent more in the second district than any other candidate in his bid for re-election. Bradley spent $1,173.76 compared to Benton Bullock's $957.69 and Lorella DeBorde's $733.62. Bradley won.

More money was spent in the district three magistrate's race than any other magistrate's race, mainly because there were more candidates.

Bentley Durham spent $2,173.21 on the Republican side and Gary Scott

By Ike Adams

There's an old saying to the effect that the only things on which you can count on happening while you're on this earth are death and taxes.

I'm of the opinion that there are three things I believe that crab grass should also be added to that list. Back in the spring I paid over thirty dollars for the largest container of RoundUp concentrate they had in the gardening section at one of the big discount stores. Enough to make about fifty gallons of spray. I was plagued with wild geraniums, Japanese clover and crab grass in my garden, so a couple of weeks before planting time I wet it down with RoundUp, a weed killer that loses its potency after a couple of weeks without doing any damage to whatever you're planting.

Sure enough, it wiped the weeds and grass out after six or eight days so I sprayed it on our walk where crab grass was coming up between the cracks. In fact, I sprayed it on every sprig of crab grass I could identify as such on the place. In a few days our premises was dotted with little brown patches of dead grass which I dutifully reseeded with a lawn mixture.

I honestly believed that I located and killed 95 percent or more of the crab grass on our place. Even the roots were dead because I dug what was up to make sure. But guess what came back up in those little brown spots. Crab grass. Crab grass with vengeance and determination. Crab grass that I sprayed again.

Back it came between the rocks in our walk. Back to the garden, piled it up, poured kerosene on it and burned it to no more that a quart of ashes which blew back onto the garden. At this writing it's back thicker than molasses in January and over ankle high as a result of all the good rain we've been getting on Fairview Ridge. The only thing I can figure is the ashes must have sprouted.

And speaking of gardening, right now is a good time to start thinking about a fall garden. You can plant some cabbage, broccoli, Brussel Sprouts, cauliflower and stuff like that in flower pots or trays and they'll be big enough to transplant by the middle of August. Not only that, but most discount stores have the seed on sale for a fraction of what it cost back in the spring. You might want to sow enough for your friends or even to sell.

Last year we set out a few of all the plants mentioned above on Labor Day weekend and they still had plenty of time to mature.

You can also plant beans, cucumbers, okra and most other things you normally associate with spring gardening up until the middle of August and you will find they do better in the fall than the summer.

Two years ago we picked beans, tomato bell peppers and cucumbers on Thanksgiving Day because we covered them with a five dollar piece of clear plastic to keep the frost off. Last year we didn't quite make it that far into cold weather because we had a hard freeze.

We also had spinach, kale, lettuce, mustard, collards and pak-choi until late in November. In fact, Siberian Kale requires little care and in a mild winter like we had last year, you can pick it all winter. The stem gets tough and you have to tear it out of the leaf, but my goodness anything fresh in the dead of winter is a treat. Our kids even like it!

Last weekend I planted two rows of Merit Sweet Corn (available at Southern States) and I intend to plant two more rows of early golden bantam this coming weekend. If the wind doesn't get it, there's still plenty left to plant. I've been telling me that their gardens are about gone already. I tell 'em to flag somebody with a bush hog down and start again.

It's also a good time to be watching the big city papers for a good deal on a big Troybilt tiller. Lots of city slickers invest heavily into gardening without taking the reality of crab grass into account. Along about now they start figuring they ought to be getting as much out of the tiller as they can and you may be able to find one for about half what it cost new. And a Troybilt is, in fact, worth about half what they ask for 'em.

I bought mine, for example, for $600 and it costs over $1,500 if you buy it new. And if the one I have now ever tears up, I'll take a break from gardening till I find a replacement.

In the meantime, I have a preacher looking over my shoulder as I wind this column down and he doesn't want his name associated with mine in the newspaper. He has, however suggested that everybody who gets to heaven will have a Troybilt at their disposal and he's also pretty sure that all the crab grass will be in hell.

Now there's a sermon I can relate to.

Heresay

By John Norman Meadows

John Norman, bad teeth will stunt your growth. And worse, they'll poison your brain. So Momma said, trying to coax me into visiting the dentist, which I wasn't about to do.

My resistance waned, however, when I became a freshman in high school and began to attach some importance to my personal appearance, due to a foolish affection I developed for some lovely misses with whom I sat in "study hall."

Every morning, I spent ten or more minutes combing my mane with an ample portion of Wildroot Hair Oil, pushing up wave after wave, until I got it just right. This'll stay for sure! Then I doused myself with "Aroma of Casanova" cologne from my parents' store, and made sure there were no gray stains on my shirt (Momma had hot biscuits and gravy ready every morning when I returned, from my Courier-Journal route).

Off I went to school—little John Juan. "Little" is right! For all my newspaper wealth, impeccable grooming, and enchanting presence, I lacked one attribute essential for making time with the "ladies in waiting" at my table—stature. Forsooth! I was one inch shorter than Elizabeth Ann Gay, the shortest girl in the freshman class.

Momma's admonition put me to thinking. If I get these teeth pulled, maybe I'll get taller! But everytime I thought this, my cerebral computer retrieved from its memory sector the frightening specter of the last time I saw the dentist! And I chickened out, again and again.

A few years prior, Momma had dragged me up the stairs between the KU Office and Miller's Drug Store to the Henderson dental "chamber of horrors"—my first visit ever. I had a problem that a stung tied to my tooth and the door knob couldn't cure.

There he stood—tall, gnat, wispy-gray hair, wearing gold-rimmed spectacles and a dark vest, his white sleeves rolled up to the elbows of his long arms—Dr. John D. Henderson, Sr. Mister Pain himself. The Inferior!

"Why, come right in, John Norman! Sit right here, son," he said, patting the black leather of "the chair." From my perspective, it was silhouetted against a large window and looked like "the electric chair." "We'll see what's been keeping you awake every night," he said. Heard Momma had been talking.

After fastening a "bib" about my neck—which portended a bloody mess of some sort—he pried my mouth open and poked around with a spoon-like, sharp-pointed, metal shaft, picking here and there, chipping now and then.

I was immobile, nearly petrified. But when that probe touched my throbbing tooth, I flinched. "Did that hurt?" he asked and went right on delving about in my mouth.

Dr. John D. walked over to Momma and said, "Lucinda, the tooth should come out right away." "Out" was the wrong word! He smiled again, sorta like a shark, and said, "Now, John Norman, you just lie back and relax. We'll have you out of here in no time."

"Relax? Don't tell me to 'Relax'! I'm scared you couldn't. . . I can't recall explicitly the rest of the thought I had, but I think it had to do with something you couldn't do to a ten-penny nail with a sledge hammer.

Roamin' Rockcastle

By Hilda Payne Gabbard

We have been having some hot weather, I tell you. It makes a fellow want to run to Clear Creek water holes and jump in with his birthday suit!

Cecil Abney on Lower Clear Creek has a good swimming hole below the high land where he lives and he takes a swim often.

We took a drive up Big Hill and over into Upper Clear Creek country where so many of the Dees family live all around Jim and Fabra Dees, who are the grandparents of all living there.

As someone said to me not long ago, these are some of the best people. We reached the home of Jim and Fabra just as they were going to a birthday party for one of the grandchildren.

Jim insisted we go to look at the nice concrete porch that he had made and the walkway they had made also.

William K. Bullens came up as we were leaving. Some of the Dees work for him in whatever crop he is raising from strawberries to tobacco, Fabra said.

Coming on down the long hill where all the houses are set, we stopped at the home of Johnny Dees and Peggy who were having the birthday party for their 12 year old daughter, Shana, who is at the beginning of life, at that age.

A table was spread in the yard and a crowd gathered around it.

Their Clear Creek Baptist preacher, Brother Sherman Hill, was there and he was making movies of the happy occasion. Jim and Fabra were coming but had to stay with Wm. K. until their business was finished.

It seemed like such a happy crowd that I wanted to get out and join them and eat, as well.

Jim's mother is a patient at the Skilled Nursing Facility in Berea Hospital.

I went by to see Stella, and found her, sitting up in bed, having a good looking meal.

"You know I ate at home like a pig," Stella told me.

"Well, I'm glad you have a good appetite," I said.

"Yes, now I eat like a hog!! she said laughing at her joke.

She had a lovely quilt that was put in a frame which she was working on. Stella may be down but she is never out. I think that is the best place Stella could be taken care of for there was no one at home to take care of her.

I'll bet Henry Voltmer is feeling tough after his birthday party on the 10th of July, chasing all those pretty girls? Why don't you see your age, Henry, but he may be!

Sitting in my summer office (front porch) last Saturday doing my column, when a car pulled in my driveway. A very pretty woman got out and came in asking if Hilda lived there.

She said, "I know you don't know me but I know you well. I read the Signal at my home in Lexington and enjoy all the things you tell about. I am Gladys Bradley Mullins. I want some honey and I'd like to see you. I'll be driving all over this part of the county looking for Menelaus Road and you."

"My husband does sell honey. He is between the robbing and selling. I told her," and has honey promised to folk when he does. I'll take your name and he'll save you a quart."

Gladys talked of her life in Rockcastle where she once lived in Brookhead and played with my nieces, Barbara Owens and Virginia Nunn, Another one of the men in my life, Chesley Dion Cornett, my grandson and he has just finished 10 years in the U.S. Navy. He is now ready for anything and that includes "girls" too, he tells me, but one has already put her brand on him.

Then I saw it! Dr. John D. had fetched the dreaded, infamous "needle." I'd heard folks say they preferred he yank-away without "that needle." He showed his point into the rubbercup of a small bottle and drew a dose of "deadner" into the syringe-smackdab in front of my widening eyes! That device was even bigger than the one I had seen Dr. Burdette use to inoculate Ernest Bullock's bull, a fox and a half long-or more!

"We'll just use a little of this so you won't feel anything when that old tooth comes out," Dr. John D. said, comfortingly! But I thought, You ain't about to put that thing in my mouth! I said, "All right, let me get something out of my coat to hold on to while you do it." I got up, and nonchalantly walked toward Momma. I took my coat from her, and put my hand into a pocket. Then, suddenly, I took off at warp speed, clacked the light of the telephone couple of bounds, burned rubber careening around the corner of the Rockcastle Hotel, streaked out Richmond Street in a Captain Marvel moment, made a mean left turn just past Oscar Hilton's house, blazed down the hill past the "old-school-house" apartments, zigged to the right just before the fertilizer shed, zagged left near the bottom of the hill, leaped the fence into my grandpa's piggish hog pen, and took up residence in the pig's house until sundown!

So, precious souls, you understand why Momma never got me back to the dentist. But when I reasoned I might add inches to my stature and be welcome to the fair damsels at my table, I relented.

This time, I went to Dr. Joe Henderson, who had begun his practice alongside John D., his father, and Jack, his older brother. Dr. Joe's quarters were bright. His chair was light green with soft, tan leather. I never saw the needle, so adept he was at keeping it hidden. And he "stuck" me so deftly, a little at a time, that I felt only a pinch of pain. Dr. Joe—just "Joe" to us in Richmond—had expertly filled a mouthful of my decaying molars, over several sittings, and coated all my teeth with flourine to ward off decay.

And did I grow! Within one year, I sprouted upward eleven inches. But black and alas! These were genuine fatues at my table had graduated!

Not all was lost, however. Ever after I never feared "the chair and the needle." Thanks to Joe.

dressing up in growup clothes and walking up the street.

Gladys married Shelle Mullins and made her home in Lexington.

She sees and talks with Virgil Mullins whom I have written about in "Climax."

Gladys told me some funny things that had happened to her over there in Lexington.

One day while walking in the Mall, she saw a negro man sitting by some other mannequins out in front of a store and she walked over to see him closer for he was a mannikin and looked almost like life.

Gladys said, "I took hold of his arm for he looked so real. He started up and jumped backward with a scream for he was the most lifelike mannikin I had ever seen. That was the last mannikin I ever tried to touch."

John and Clay Gabbard are trying to get all the supplies that they might use in their "molasses making business."

We've taken a lot of names to hold molasses when they begin in September.

I'm going to get John to make me some small paddles from the cane stalks to use in eating molasses.

Myron Seals don't want to buy any molasses but just eat some "skimmings."

There are some nice looking gardens but unless rain comes soon we will all be pulling up bean vines as one man says he has done to his crop.

John has three rows of the "little greasy beans" to pick and sell.

Saturday morning, Charley Lamb, with son, Donald Ray, came to our house to get John to take them to Union to the home of Burley Barger and see about the job of putting a new roof on his house.

I'm looking for chigger remedies as the season is almost here.

Some say, "Well, stay out of the patch if you don't want to scratch." Herschel Logdon, deceased, used to raise a money plant and give me bunches of it or I'd go to the Senior Citizen Bazaar and buy a bunch from him and use for a dried bouquet with other flowers.

I had an odd plant about two or three bunches which have come out as a mystery plant and they have started in my flower box and are making a money plant.

So I haven't lost, as mine are making the silvery money plant pretty, used for decoration. You can use with pine, cedar, hemlock or redbud berries branches for dried bouquets.

John and I went to Mt. Vernon to deliver some of his white clover honey. We stopped at Sue and Glen Cromer's Restaurant at Burr. She had bought a quart of honey and talked about how good it was and how pretty it looked.

We went on to Ottawa where Preacher Bill Hammond lives and John was taking him home.

Brother Bill came in from his work as superintendent of a construction group, was not looking like a preacher but more like a man who had gotten in the way of the blasting crew!

But we were glad to see him and talked awhile on the porch, while he beat dust and dirt off himself.

He said he had baptized six in the Rockcastle River near to the church. One man was so happy as he was raised from the water, there was no mistaking his words on how he felt. We were disappointed in that we meant to come to Pleasant Run and see the baptizing.

We came back by the Signal office to get an early paper but the office was locked.

Well, I'll go to Berea and get a copy, I said to myself. It comes out early in Berea.

We've been offered a lot of garden food like white runner beans, yellow squash and had a large cabbage about the size of a man's hand, brought to us, new potatoes, yellow and red tomatoes, until I said no more.

Till next week, which is the last one in July and you are beginning to scratch, and take a look at my handsome grandson in this column. I shut the door on yesterday and threw the key away. Tomorrow has no fear for me since I have found today!

Back Home

I don't think there is a Kentuckian anywhere in the world who doesn't use the expression, "Back Home" when he or she speaks of their birthplace. There is something about the soil or air in Kentucky that stains the image of anyone born there a glowing color and always seem to bring one "Back Home" to revive memories or seek for remnants of an almost forgotten past.

And so it was with me last week. My brother Ish and I went back to Olive Hill, in Carter County, where we were born and roamed through old grave yards where ancestors and kin folk we scarcely remember are buried.

We were accompanied by Polly and Chuck, for it is also Polly's ancestors that are buried on the hill-sides close to where they once lived.

The first grave yard we visited was where my grandpa, Tom Tackett, and grandma, Polly Ann Hicks Tackett, are buried. The grave yard is on a steep hillside across the road from where they had lived and all my memories of them are of things that took place there.

Grandpa was a man of great stature, not only of body but of mind and reputation. My memory of him is of a big man with a shock of snow white hair and mustache and clear blue eyes that always seemed to be looking into the future. His quick wit and ability to compose a limeric on the spur of the moment gave him the reputation of always being one jump ahead of all the jokesters in the county and endeared him to one and all. The front porch and dining room of their home was a wayside retreat to all who passed by. Grandpa's ready invitation to "come on in and have a bite to eat with us" always kept the table filled with friends and grandma and my aunts busy preparing the meals. Grandma's compliance with his wishes was the proof of her love for him and of her gentility.

I have been told after a short courtship grandpa decided he wanted Polly Ann for his wife and one morning went to the back door of her home where he found her making biscuits for the noon day meal and without preamble asked her if she would marry him. The story goes, she said, "when?" He said "now" and she dusted the flour from her hands on her apron, took it off and said, "I'm ready." And so they were married and this union lasted and prospered as they produced a new generation of Kentuckians.

The old log house that stood across the road from where I was now standing had been their home for as long as I could remember. It has long been gone and the well that furnished cool water for every passerbly has been filled in. The old store house that was later fixed for a home for grandma after grandpa died and where I spent a night with her when I was ten or twelve years old has also been torn down. That visit with her was the only one I remember but the memory is a good one. She was known throughout the county as being the best biscuit and gravy maker in the area. And I heartily approved her reputation when I sat down to breakfast the next morning. The taste of those golden fluffly biscuits and gravy made from the meat drippings will linger with me always.

As I stood by their graves I remembered, and had to repeat a story I had heard about an incident that happened

Two quarts water
2 tablespoons bottled lemon juice
4 pounds firm ripe pears or peaches
1 tablespoon Sweet N Low granulated sugar substitute

Canned pears or peaches

In large pot, combine water and lemon juice. Peel, halve and core pears or peaches, adding them to water-lemon juice mixture to prevent browning. Drain off liquid. Add water to cover. Over medium-high heat, bring to a boil. Reduce heat to medium low and simmer 5 minutes.

With slotted spoon, remove fruit to hot sterilized jars, allowing 1/2 inch head space. Reserve 1 cup liquid and discard remainder. Add Sweet N Low to reserved liquid. Pour 1/4 cup liquid over fruit in each jar. Wipe rims with clean cloth dipped in hot water.

Screw on lids. Process in boiling-water bath 25 minutes or in pressure canner 10 minutes at 10 pounds of pressure. Make 4 pints. Calories: 135 per cup

Applesauce, unsweetened

Select apples that are sweet, juicy and crisp. An average of 21 pounds is needed per canner load of seven quarts. Wash, peel and core apples. If desired, slice into water containing one teaspoon (3,000 mg.) ascorbic acid per gallon of water to prevent browning. (Or use suitable commercial anti-darkening product, following package directions). Place drained slices in an eight- to ten-quart pot. Add 1/2 cup water, stirring occasionally to prevent burning, heat quickly until tender (5 to 20 minutes, depending on maturity and variety). Press through sieve or food mill, or skip the pressing step if you prefer chunky-style sauce. Reheat sauce to boiling. Fill jars with hot sauce, leaving 1/2 inch headspace. Adjust lids and process. Processing Time: Boiling-water canner--Hot Pack: Process pints for 20 minutes, quarts for 25 minutes. Dial-gauge Pressure Canner -- Hot Pack: Process pints 8 minutes or quarts 10 minutes at 7 pounds pressure. Weighted-Gauge Canner--Hot Pack: Process pints 8 minutes or quarts for 10 minutes at 10 pounds pressure.

Freezing and canning with low or no sugar

Most Americans consume approximately 30 pounds of sugar each year. Sugar provides virtually no benefit to our diets other than calories. Many commercially canned or frozen foods contain too much sugar for persons who must restrict their intake of sugar.

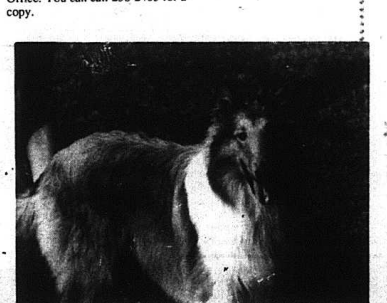

The sugar acts as a preservative in some foods or it may give the desired firmness or crisp texture to the product. In many cases, sugar is used for the sweet flavor it imparts to a food. In that situation, the amount of sugar may be reduced or omitted altogether.

Fruits and berries can be frozen without sugar, but some feel that they are lower in quality than those that have been sweetened. The best results in unsweetened fruits are usually for blackberries, strawberries, blueberries and peaches.

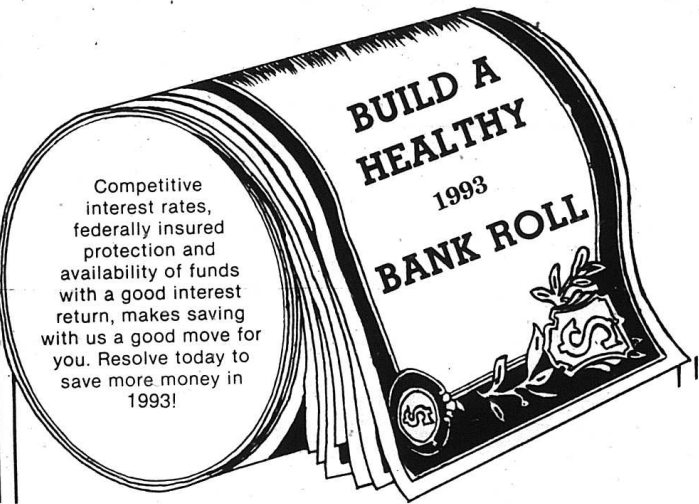

Regular recipes for jellies, jams and preserves cannot be made successfully without sugar because sugar is a necessary ingredient for fruit pectin to gel. Several new pectin products which make satisfactory reduced-sugar or sugar-free jams and jellies are available on the market. Instructions and recipes are often furnished with these products.

If you would like to try canning without sugar, here are two recipes for unsweetened applesauce and pears or peaches. Other recipes that are low in sugar or contain no added sugar are available at the Extension Office. You can call 256-2403 for a copy.

Alcorn

Dewey Alcorn, 73, of Mt. Vernon, died July 15, 1993 at the Rockcastle Hospital in Mt. Vernon.

He was born in Rockcastle County June 2, 1920 the son of the late Sollic and Lula Hunley Alcorn and was a member of the Northside Baptist Church.

Abused Dog
By: Mayzell Ries

Why do people abuse animals?
It broke my heart one day.
To see a dog I watched grow up,
Abused to my dismay.

It was half starved,
No decent water to drink.
Beaten and down in his leg.
In pain, right on the bank.

It kills me, to see him this way.
Tears came to my eyes as he recognized me.
How I wanted to gather him up and take him with me that day.

People that abuse animals, should be treated the same way
If anyone knows the address of a Humane Society, please send it to me today.

Abandoned
By: Mayzell Ries

This is for all the men out there, that have abandoned their wives and kids.

Why would a man leave his family to starve?
Why would a man just walk off without a care?
It didn't matter to him if they lived or died,
Because he wouldn't be there.

No wonder his kids hated him so.
No wonder they don't want him around
They hate and despise him.
For what he had done.
To them he is hell bound.

Money Matters

A Series Of Informative "Plain Talk" Thoughts Regarding Your Money Matters

FDIC Insurance

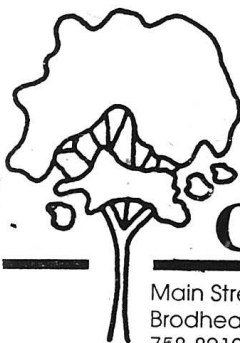

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is the agency of the government which insures our deposits. Because of the FDIC, the security of a bank investment cannot be equalled anywhere in the financial community.

By definition the money invested in a bank is classified as a deposit. Money invested in other types of financial institutions is in many cases considered to be a "share." This makes a bank customer a "depositor" and customers of these other institutions merely shareholders.

This is an important difference which may never be noticed by the customer unless of course he needs to use the insurance. To find out more about the differences in regulations governing the insuring agencies of financial institutions, stop in and see one of our officers.

Have you changed your address lately?

Want to save time, money and avoid potential stress? Actually, you have no choice-it's the law. Whenever Kentuckians change addresses or a name, the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet must be notified within 10 days of the change or take the chance of being cited for a class B misdemeanor. As those who have failed to can attest, not fulfilling the requirement can result in a lengthy stand in line at a Circuit Court Clerk's office while the confusion is cleared up. Any mailed notification concerning Kentucky driver's licenses such as suspensions, point accumulations from traffic violations, traffic school enrollment or attendance, outstanding fines, and renewal notices will not arrive at a new address unless the cabinet has been notified in writing. Further, a Kentucky Revised Statute provides for citation and a possible fine for license holders who don't comply. To avoid all this, people can choose to either visit their county's Circuit Court Clerk's Office to complete a change of address name form or send in a letter including full name, date of birth, social security number, old and new address and/or name to Kentucky Transportation Cabinet, Division of Driver Licensing, 501 High Street, 2nd Floor, State Office Building, Frankfort, KY 40622. Any questions may be directed to the local Circuit Court Clerk or to the Division of Driver Licensing in Frankfort at (502) 564-6800.

Poynter a U.S. National Merit Award winner

The United States Achievement Academy announced that Stephen Edward Poynter has been named a United States National Award winner in English.

This award is a prestigious honor very few students can ever hope to attain. In fact, the Academy recognizes less than 10 percent of all American high school students.

Poynter, who attends Bryan Station High School, Lexington, was nominated for this National Award by Mrs. Ward, a English teacher at the school. He will appear in the United States Achievement Academy Official Yearbook, published nationally.

Stephen is the son of Bennie and Arlena Poynter. The grandparents are Glen and Geneva Elder of Brothard and Lindsay and Ruth Poynter of Somerset.

to grandpa when he was beginning to get old age pains in his back, they called it lumbago then.

He hadn't been able to get around very well and was getting impatient with his idleness and decided to try to do a chore that needed doing, marking a new litter of pigs. The pigpen was about where his grave is now and all he had to do was cross the road and climb the steep bank to get to it.

With the help of a stout cane he climbed the bank then laboriously climbed over the fence and picked up a squealing pig to clip his mark on its ears. Mama sow didn't like the sound of one of her babies squealing and came to its rescue with a ferociousness that bodded ill to anyone harming one of her offspring. It seems grandpa forgot about his aching back and jumped the fence to make his escape then discovered he no longer had the problem. He laughed with everyone else when he was kidded about his magic cure of a bad case of lumbago.

On the hillside across the valley from where I was standing was where we lived when my dad would gather us kids on the porch and tell us to be quiet and we could hear my mom and grandpa leading the singing at the little church close to where the graveyard is now. Their voices would ring out and echo from hillside to hillside when the services began. No music of today can ever match the clear tones of their voices as the melody of Amazing Grace, or In the Sweet By and By, came to us across the valley. After wallowing in a few memories of this set of grandparents he went seeking the burial site of my other grandma, mom's mother, Mary Magdelene Eldridge Holbrook. It was a bit harder to find. But "going home" is finding people who love to help someone seeking their roots. This happened in the Dairy Dart where we were having lunch. After questioning people at several tables, all of whom were friendly, I found one man who remembered the cemetery I was looking for and told us how to find it. Sure enough there was the simple stone I was looing for marking my grandma Holbrook's resting place. Polly was taking pictures of all the gravesites and this was the last on her as she headed back to Mt. Vernon I had many things to tell them about the memories I treasure of my relationship with that grandma.

Don Williams: Songwriter's singer to perform at Renfro Valley Aug. 15

Don Williams has been called "a songwriter's singer." Not only does his deep, mellow voice bring to life a song's melody, but he also uses his vocal talents to bring life, emotion to the song's lyrics. He'll be at Renfro Aug. 15 at 2 p.m. and 6 p.m.

"When I do a song, I like to think I'm talking to a person who's experiencing that situation in their life. I believe in what I sing and I hope that it strikes a chord."

Don Williams brings this philosophy to his recordings and to his concerts, creating an atmosphere of intimacy, where the audience is like a loved one he is singing to.

"People don't pay enough attention to each other, don't truly listen," Don says. "People have so much trouble with being able to sit down with someone whom they really should be close with and talking to. That's a real important issue with me. I guess that's why I take my music so seriously. I always hope that what I say is going to make someone feel something - either about themselves or about the people that mean the most to them."

During a career that has spanned a quarter century, Don Williams has recorded 23 albums, five of which have been certified Gold. His list of singles totals more than 40, including 28 which have reached the top rungs of the national charts.

Don has come a long way since his childhood in Portland, Texas but in spirit he has not strayed far from his small town, country roots. His music endures because it has credibility, dignity and warmth that never passes out of fashion. "To me, matters of the heart are the spiritual core of a song," says Don. "It's what it's all about."

Japanese beetles are active in Kentucky

Those troublesome green and bronze pests are present in Kentucky's landscape again. Japanese beetles can be controlled, however, through careful and effective methods. They made their appearance last week on the University of Kentucky's campus, said Mike Potter, Extension Entomologist at UK's College of Agriculture.

seriously damage overripe or wounded fruit. These beetles prefer roses, grapes, purple-leaved Norway and Japanese maples, linden, purple leaf plum, and most varieties of flowering crabapple.

"Japanese beetles prefer plants in full sun and usually feed in groups on upper foliage," said Dan Potter, ornamental and turfgrass entomologist at UK.

Adult Japanese beetles begin to emerge from the ground in late May and June, and are abundant throughout most of the summer. The grubs, or larvae, then feed on roots of grasses and other plants during the late summer and fall.

"From a management standpoint, it is important to realize that both adults and larvae cause damage," Mike Potter said. "However, we focus on adult control during this time of year."

For protection of adult Japanese beetles in trees, shrubs, and flowers, Mike Potter and Dan Potter suggested landscape owners follow these tips:

Initially, select plants that are not preferred by Japanese beetles. Contact the county Extension agent for publication ENT-5, "Japanese Beetles," for a list of tree and shrub species that are relatively unattractive to these pests.

For most owners, however, susceptible plants are already established in the landscape and other tactics must be used.

When plantings are small and beetle numbers are relatively low, then hand removal may suffice.

"One of the easiest ways to remove beetles from small plants is to shake them off early in the morning when the insects are sluggish," Dan Potter said.

Beetles may be killed by shaking them into a bucket of soapy water. Small plants, such as roses, can be covered with cheesecloth or other fine quarter-inch netting for further protection.

Some insecticides, when used properly, can be effective against adult Japanese beetles.

"Sevin is quite effective and is the product of choice for homeowners," Mike Potter said.

For any insecticide application, follow label directions carefully, avoid spraying under windy conditions or when honey bees are foraging.

Insecticidal soaps will control beetles that are hit by the spray, but will provide no residual protection.

How to store silage successfully

Farmers who harvest their crops at the right time and use the right silo design can reduce yield loss and improve labor efficiency.

"Choosing the right practices and type of storage now, in early summer, can determine the success of feed quality and storing efficiency later in the harvest and feeding season," said Larry Turner, Extension agricultural engineer at the University of Kentucky's College of Agriculture.

Producers should consider proper harvesting techniques and moisture content to ensure fewer losses.

"Try to target a moisture content of 60 to 70 percent, depending on whether the silage is grass, alfalfa, or corn," Turner said.

Producers also must decide which storage system to use: upright, bunker, or trench silos.

An upright storage system has been the traditional silo choice of many producers. Bunker and trench system store silage flat or horizontal to the ground. Bunker silos are above ground and trenches are below the ground.

Other available options include silo bags, either individual round-bale size bags or large capacity bags containing several tons.

Turner suggested producers consider the following factors in choosing the most appropriate system for their situation: installation cost of facility; labor involved in handling silage; management required for repair and maintenance of silo.

Blue mold activity slows, while black shank heats

As much as $40 million worth of Kentucky's tobacco crop may succumb to a fungal disease that strikes when plants are under heavy stress.

"Black shank disease exploded during the two weeks of hot, dry weather we had earlier this month. In some counties, as much as 15 percent of the crop may have been lost," said Bill Nesmith, Extension plant pathologist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Nesmith said that while the black shank fungus was becoming more damaging during the dry weather which put the growing plants under stress, blue mold, which had earlier attacked tobacco in at least 30 central Kentucky counties, was slowed significantly by the heat.

"Blue mold requires moist, cool environmental conditions to thrive. When hot, dry weather occurs the blue mold fungus stops reproducing," Nesmith said.

Although blue mold activity slowed during the hot weather, Nesmith said that it could reappear in force should environmental conducive conditions return after the plant canopy closes in fields.

In addition, he said, cultures from 11 sites indicate insensitivity to the only approved fungicide for controlling blue mold.

"We have 11 isolates in which the fungicide Ridomil is ineffective, even in large doses. We are assuming that both the Ridomil-resistant strains and sensitive strains will become active if weather conditions favorable to blue mold return," he said.

Nesmith said that black shank fungus has become a rather common fungus in tobacco fields and damage from earlier attacks increases as the plants become stressed.

For fields where the disease is present, producers need to minimize stress and avoid spreading it within the field. For those whose fields are not infested with black shank, following strict sanitation procedures will reduce the likelihood of it becoming infested, he said.

When farmers irrigate infested fields, they need to use only enough water to sustain the plants for a few days. Irrigating deeply or with enough water to cause pooling encourages the spread of the fungus if any of the fungus is in the field, Nesmith said.

nessee, studied the area for two years. He thinks bears do all right there.

There is plenty of room, he said, and many berries. Acorns might be a problem because many oak trees still are young.

Officials say they will decide in the next month or two whether to go ahead with the experiment.

So far they have been testing public reaction. Most of it has been favorable, they say, but there have been concerns from people who hike or ride horses in the Big South Fork.

"We're trying our darndest to explain what a black (bear) does and how it behaves," Edwards said. "I've only seen one black bear in the wild and that was for a fraction of a second. That's what you can expect."

Changes in our Schools

A Commentary

Family Resources/Youth Services Centers serve communities and schools

By Marilyn Bailey

Director of Communications

The Richard Committee. In January a student at East Carter High School walked into a senior English class and shot his English teacher and a school janitor in front of 25 students.

Within minutes after the arrest of the student, the East Carter Youth Services Center had responded to the tragedy by setting up a crisis center through the help of local mental health agencies and the school system.

Students who had been held hostage and had witnessed the shootings were provided with counseling to deal with the aftermath. The 24-hour-crisis center was also opened to the entire community as counselors were brought in from surrounding counties.

Before the 1990 Kentucky Education Reform Act this kind of help probably would not have been so swift and so organized.

While KERA addressed changes in school finance, governance and curriculum, it also addressed the physical and emotional needs of students. The creation of Family Resource and Youth Services Centers has been the link between schools and social service agencies.

Family Resource Centers, which serve children under 12, and Youth Services Centers, which serve older students, are set up in or near schools where 20 percent or more of the students are eligible for free lunches.

As of July 1 there are now 226 Family Resource Centers, 88 Youth Services Centers and 50 combined centers across the state.

Family Resource Centers are required by law to provide services such as preschool and after-school child care, prenatal education for new parents, parent and child education, training for day care providers and health services.

Youth Services Centers provide referrals for health and social services, employment services, summer-part-time job development, drug and alcohol abuse counseling as well as family crisis and mental health counseling. They are prohibited from counseling or making referrals for abortion.

In Muhlenberg County FRC coordinator Myra Bender was instrumental in putting together a plan with the local health department to create satellite health departments in local elementary schools.

While the local health department was a well-used facility, a study revealed that 85 percent of those people who had scheduled appointments failed to show up because they lacked transportation.

"I thought why not take health care to the people. The school is the center of many communities. It's where baby showers and receptions are held so why not make health care available there too?" said Bender.

The director of the county health department was able to get permission for staff flextime which enabled the department to extend its hours beyond 4:30 p.m. Health department personnel moved into three elementary schools with hours of 2:30 p.m. to 6 p.m. Every service available at the health department is offered at the schools.

Addressing a community's needs is one of the main functions of the centers. To do this the Dayton Independent Family Resource Center last year put together a back-to-school festival called Readfest.

"At the beginning of every school year we were finding there were children who simply didn't have the basic necessities to start school," said Dayton Independent Youth Services coordinator Debbie Scholer. Readfest provided an opportunity for children to get free shoes, socks, underwear, tee shirts and school supplies in a festival-type setting.

Grocery stores, fast food restaurants, health care professionals and hair stylists also donated services. Free personal care products such as shampoo and toothpaste were available. Kids received free hair cuts, a dentist examined teeth. Hearing and eye screens were given. Balloons, refreshments and trinkets were given out to over 600 students from preschool age to grade 6.

In Bowling Green the youth services center has tackled conflicts adolescents have at school.

Bowling Green Junior High School officials were concerned about a rise in the number of suspensions because of student fights.

"What we were finding was this was sometimes a situation where a parent came in and wanted to sue the kids that fighting was an answer to settling problems," said Patty Alford, YSC coordinator.

The center designed a conflict resolution plan using student mediators. Peers and teachers recommended students who then underwent a three-day training session in providing feedback, role playing and confidentiality.

Students involved in disputes meet with the mediator to resolve differences, whether property disputes or boyfriend and girlfriend problems. They write up an agreement that both parties must sign.

Last year Bowling Green Junior High School resolved over 300 disputes with the help of 10 student mediators and the number of suspensions decreased.

"We've found that many kids don't want to fight and this is a way they can save face. And these are skills that they can take with them for the rest of their life. It's a win-win situation."

As one Fulton parent wrote in a letter to Ronnie Dunn, manager of the Cabinet for Human Resources' Family Resources/Youth Services Branch, "When I walked into the resource center you could feel the warmth. It wasn't like an office. It was more like a home."

"They really care about our children, parents and our whole community. Everyone should know what their resource center can do to help them."

Red Cross needs relief donations

By: Lu Ed Nielsen
Red Cross Disaster Coordinator

Many years ago Congress mandated that the American Red Cross provide whatever assistance may be necessary to those who have been in a disaster.

This disaster may be a flood, tornado, earthquake, fire or other disaster. Most people do not know that the American Red Cross does not receive any form of Government assistance. We survive strictly by donations. Many think that the Red Cross is in with FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Agency) and receives money from the government to help people put their lives back in order.

It is important to realize what has (and is) happening in the midst, unless you have gone through a similar disaster.

At this time our local chapter is not planning to send supplies to the area because of the bridges that are out, and the dangerous situation and we have been asked to have people donate money.

Donations can be mailed to the local unit here in Rockcastle. Mark your donation for the "Midwest Flood" and send to American Red Cross, P.O. Box 60, Mt. Vernon, KY 40456.

We have spent close to $100,000 in the six counties that Daniel Boone Chapter covers for the storms on June 4, 1993. In Rockcastle County we will have spent somewhere close to $10,000 which we have to raise money to pay a portion of this back to Red Cross through donations.

We sincerely thank you for our neighbors, and even those in the western part of Kentucky are now going under water and will be needing help.

RCHS reps attend national meeting

Rockcastle County High School teachers and administrators attended the National Alliance for Restructuring Education (NARE) conference in New Hampshire the week of June 28-July 2, 1993. Those attending were: Joy Cooke, Diana Waddle, James Cox, Ronnie Cash and Ed Peterson.

The National Alliance/Break the Mold schools is a unique partnership that is redesigning American schools for high performance. Funding for the Alliance schools include the New American Schools Development Corp. (NASDC); the PEW Charitable Trusts; Apple Computer, Inc.; Harvard Project on Effective Services; the National Board for Professional Teaching Standards; New Standards Project (NSP); Xerox Corp. and others. Ronnie Cash, principal at RCHS was excited about the benefits our students would obtain from the NARE association, especially the fact that funding for this endeavor is through a grant provided by the above organizations and minimal local funding is required.

In 1992, N.A.R.E. worked with 12 schools in three states. This was expanded in 1993 to 52 schools in eight states. Those schools in NARE partner sites are the states of Arkansas, Kentucky, New York, Vermont, and Washington and the school districts of Pittsburg, Rochester (NY), San Diego, and White Plains (NY).

James Cox, Asst. Principal for Education at RCHS said, "The National Alliance will assist our school in reaching that level of student performance required by KERA. The design and implementation of a transformation that will require fundamental changes in our educational system, from state policy to classroom practice, from curriculum and instruction to assessment and school organization." Cox stated further that by being in the alliance RCHS will have access to national resources not available within our district or state.

The work of all the partners of the Alliance is organized to address five major design challenges in one comprehensive effort. They are: Defining the student academic outcomes; connecting schools to the curriculum and instructional resources they need to succeed; improving the planning, financing and delivery of health and

Homeless survey to be conducted for county

The Rockcastle County Community Housing Development Board is working with the Kentucky Housing Corporation to conduct a survey of the homeless population.

This data can be used by the housing board to be competitive in procuring financial resources for more housing in Rockcastle County.

The definition of "homeless" includes anyone who lacks a fixed, regular or adequate nighttime residence; is at risk of becoming homeless because the residence is not safe, decent, sanitary, or secure; lives in a publicly or privately operated shelter designed to provide temporary living accommodations; has to live overcrowded with family or friends or others, not by choice, but because no other housing is available for them.

If the person is "homeless," or if they know someone who is "homeless," please contact Nancy Meadows or Betty Carter of the housing board at the courthouse or call 256-2313 so a survey form can be completed. Lu Ed Nielsen of REAP is also assisting with the survey.

Also, see Mrs. Meadows or Mrs. Carter at the Court House to complete an application to be placed on the waiting list for Section 8 rental vouchers.

Babbage reminds teens to register to vote

"Many Rockcastle County teens may be unaware that Kentucky law permits those who will be 18 on or before the date of the general election, November 2 this year, to register and vote," Secretary of State Bob Babbage said.

An estimated 54,000 Kentuckians will reach voting age this year, according to data from the University of Louisville Urban Studies Center.

Kentucky has set back-to-back records for voter registration. The first record came last year when a total of 184,301 new voters registered between the 1991 and the 1992 general election. That is the single highest number in any single year.

The second record came this spring when a record high of 2,160,192 were registered to vote in the May primary election.

"Additionally, registration trends are being reversed in Kentucky," Babbage said.

Traditionally registration declines following a presidential election," he added. After the 1988 presidential election, registration dropped by 89,229. Between the 1992 presidential election and this year's primary, registration increased by 83,929.

The importance of local elections has contributed to an increase in registration. More programs in Kentucky which make voter registration more convenient have also prompted many to register," Babbage noted.

Since 1991, the state board of elections has approved mail-in voter registration. In 1992 MCI Communications developed and contributed to Kentucky the nation's first voter reg-

Local teen at national FHA competition

Anaheim, Ca. was the scene for over 3,000 teenage boys and girls from across the U.S. who met to address issues of interest to teens at the National Leadership Meeting of the Future Homemakers of America. The meeting was held in Anaheim, July 11-15.

Nearly 1,500 state finalists participated in individual and team competitive STAR Events--Students Taking Action for Recognition. These events enable members to demonstrate proficiency and achievement in chapter projects, leadership skills, and occupational preparation and be recognized for their achievement with bronze, silver, or gold medals.

Shaunna Stevens, local FHAer, who won regional and state competition, represented Kentucky in the Illustrated Talk category of Star events, came away as a second place winner in the national competition. Shaunna's talk consisted of an explanation of one of FHA's community projects called "Big Buddies - Little Buddies."

The meeting whose theme was "Make It Happen," encourages members to focus on issues facing teenagers and our world today. Youth examined such topics as teens in crisis, balancing friends and family, managing your parents, AIDS, teen pregnancy, and the environment. These concerns and other topics focusing on youth leadership, community involvement and skill development, was examined in sessions presented by both teens and adults.

Future Homemakers of America is a dynamic and effective national student organization that helps young men and women become leaders and address important personal, family, work, and societal issues. The organization has involved over nine million youth since its founding in 1944.

Future Homemakers of America is unique among youth organizations because its programs are planned and run by members. Participation in national projects and chapter activities helps members develop "skills for life" - planning, goal setting, problem solving, decision making, and interpersonal communication.

Library News

By: Geraldine Robbins

The summer reading program "Reading Together" ended with a pizza party July 7th. Approximately fifty children and their parents attended and were served pizza, cookies and a soft drink. Prizes were awarded for the most books read in three different age groups.

The winners of the preschool through age five were Becky and Genia Cummins, ages six to nine were Amanda Cummins and Jessica Artley, ages nine to twelve were Alicia Gay and Denise Clark. All of the Cummins children read over 225 books each. Jessica read 159, Alicia read 143 and Denise read 123.

This year we also had a prize for the family that read the most books together and this was Norma Cummins and her three daughters, Amanda, Genia and Becky. They were awarded four tickets to any Renfro Valley show. Second place winner in this category was Kay Clark and her children, Denise and Eric.

Our thanks go out to all the children that participated in the program and their parents for bringing them to the library for all the special programs and other days just to get books.

Also I want to thank Betty Lindbloom, the children's program director, for helping to make this year's reading program one of the best that we've ever had. Pam, the bookmobile librarian, has compiled all of her reading logs and she will be awarding prizes to the winners on the bookmobile in the next three weeks.

We had donations of money and gifts from the following business places: MacDonalds, Wendy's, Hiett's & 10, Apollo Pizza, Foodland of Broadhead, Bank of Mt. Vernon, Citizens Bank of Mt. Vernon and Renfro Valley Folks. A special thanks to all of these people for helping us to give all the children an enjoyable summer.

America's wealthiest, where dark passions exist alongside power and promise. Her Apparent is a murder mystery of chilling insight and seductive power.

2. Power Key by Leo V. Gordon and Richard Vetterli. Power Key is a tale of high adventure, romance, and political intrigue that takes us from the frozen, windswept reaches of the Utah Territory in winter to the halls of Congress and the office of President James Buchanan, a man haunted by the hobgoblins of secession and determined to leave office with the union intact, no matter the cost.

Others in Washington are equally determined that this should not be. Men who dream of a separate nation, one that will stretch from the Carolinas to California—the Confederate States of America. Foremost among them are three Southern members of Buchanan's own cabinet, including Jefferson Davis, the secretary of war and senior senator from Mississippi. The instrument they choose to bring their dream a giant step closer to fruition is Brevet Brig. Gen. Albert Sidney Johnson, widely acclaimed as the army's finest field commander. On a sunny morning in the fall of 1857, Johnson leads a army of three thousand men out of Fort Leavenworth on an epic forced march that will take them to the Utah Territory and Salt Lake City—a punitive expedition against the "rebellious" Mormon settlers led by territorial Governor Brigham Young.

It is a powerkey that could blow the Union apart!

3. All the Pretty Horses by Cormac McCarthy. This is a modern-day western full of horses, end game play and romance. It transcends the bounds of its genre with rambunctious, high-spirited, bottomless inventiveness. All the Pretty Horses tells of young John Grady Cole, the last of a long line of Texas ranchers across the border: Mexico beckons beautiful and desolate, rugged and cruelly civilized. With two companions, he sets off on an idyllic, sometimes comic adventure, to a place where dreams are paid in blood.

Have you read The Bridges of Madison County? If so would you like to discuss this beautiful love story with friends? An Adult Reading Group will be meeting at the library, Thursday evening, July 22 at 7 p.m. for just this purpose. Sue Hamm will be leading the discussions.

We plan on meeting once a month to discuss popular fiction material. Please join us for an interesting hour!

Demolition Derby to have two nights of action this year at fair

Broadhead--The Wildest Show on the Fairgrounds' returns to the 1993 Little World's Fair for two exciting nights of demolition derby action...with a twist. When the daring drivers of the Dynamic Demolition Derby take to the track on Friday night, July 30th, they will be competing in qualifying heats, with the main event for both nights scheduled for Saturday night, July 31st. This arrangement will give non-qualifiers what they have requested in past years: another chance to make the feature! Derby producer Jerry Castor says all nonqualifiers from the previous night are invited back to re-enter and try their luck again...along with any drivers who did not compete in the Friday night program. Those drivers who qualify on Friday night will sit out the Saturday night action until the main event...when qualifiers from both nights will compete for cash and trophies in the main event. Prize money for the Saturday night feature will be $600 for the winner, $400 for second place and $200 for third.

As always, the Dynamic Demolition derby will attract a capacity crowd, and fans are urged to be on the fairgrounds early in order to gain a prime vantage point when the crashing begins at 8 p.m.

Again this year, competitions are open to anyone who holds a driver's license and has a car which meets Dynamic Demolition Derby rules. Entry blanks and rules for this year's events are available at David's Tire Center, Hwy. 150, Mt. Vernon. Long's Automotive, Hwy. 150, Mt. Vernon, Mike Hamms, Hwy. 70, Broadhead, or by writing to Dynamic Demolition Derby, P.O. Box 5461, Bloomington, IN 47407-5461

Wally also very troubled. Jesse and Wally become friends and the story develops from there.

Jesse gets caught vandalizing the aquarium that Wally, the killer whale, lives in. Wally is also very troubled. Jesse and Wally become friends and the story develops from there.

Jesse's a great story with several morals. It really displays the true meaning of friendship. Richier does a great job. He has the look, the attitude, and the heart to play a troubled kid whose only problem is that he needs someone to love and someone to love him.

The producers and directors of Wally also have a heart, in that no whales were mistreated in any way during the production. When difficult scenes were shot, they used models or special effects. I really admire them for that.

The ocean cinematography, with the Orca whales is gorgeous, and the music is fantastic. The Michael Jackson song over the credits is already becoming a hit, so don't miss Free Willy, not even the credits at the end.

MovieReview

How far will you go for a friend?

By: Paul E. Scanlon

If you have been looking for a good clean movie that the whole family can enjoy, Free Willy is it! I don't mean that it is something that you can take your kids to while you read a book. I mean adults as well as children will enjoy this movie.

James Jason Richier plays a kid named Jesse, whose mother left him at age 6. He is now 12, and is a very troubled kid with a bad attitude, that hangs around the wrong crowd.
