Resident clings to roots of musical heritage

by Jeremiah R. Taylor

Modern culture has all but eradicated many of the ways of the Southern artists, and though progress is a thing one can do little to halt, many of us must surely mourn for the loss of much ancient lore and the numerous folk-ways that were intertwined with a seemingly distant era. Amongst these oft forgotten rural traditions is the home-spin music that set the base for much of the entertainment and social life long before the advent of Bluegrass and further still, modern "country" music. The presence of a fiddler was necessary for a dance (sometimes accompanied by a banjoist and occasionally, after the turn of the 20th century, a guitarist) and music often comprised an evening's pleasures after a day of strenuous labor in the fields. Fortunately, there are quite a few young musicians throughout the United States who are "breathing new life" into the musical forms of the Southern highlands, as well as many older generation musicians who continue to play the traditional music of their youth.

H.C. Anglin, Jr., better known to his friends as "Junior," is one such individual who was raised into this culture and its music. Born in 1928 in the community of Three Links near the Jackson/Rockcastle county line, music was an early influence in his life, as all of his siblings (nine sisters and one brother) were guitarists and mandolin players. The greatest motivational element in leading Junior to musicianship, however, was the presence of two local fiddlers, Joseph Mallicote and Bob Whitt.

Both born in the 19th century, Mallicote's and Whitt's styles and repertoires were rooted in an earlier era—a "purer strain" of traditional music, with little if to modern influence. Reflecting upon these two rural artists, Junior recalled them to be fiddlers of a very high caliber with "Old Joe" Mallicote being the best he's "heard in this very day." Mallicote's "show-piece," "Jerusalem Ridge," apparently a rare tune as Junior has heard only one other individual who could play it, was a fiddling masterpiece, executed with much skill in a very difficult minor key. Of Bob Whitt, Junior remembers the days when his father ran a general store/post office near the fiddler's home. On days that the mail came in, Whitt always found a seat in his yard and commenced to fiddle "Going on Down to Town" for sometimes a half an hour on end, well aware that he had the attention of an audience. Like so many other rural Southern musicians, both of these men were overlooked by both talent scouts and field collectors, and unfortunately, were never recorded.

In 1938, at ten years of age, Junior took an old worn-out mandolin, put a high fiddle bridge on it, and applied rosin to a wire coat hanger for a bow. With this first "fiddle," he learned "Get Along Home Cindy," and so began the initial development of his talent.

In his words, "I began to take it to my dad's country store 'harness' the customers, and I guess he got ashamed of that ugly old thing, so he soon bought me a fiddle."

From the playing of his grandfather, Sherman Cooke, Junior also learned the lap dulcimer, an obscure, but fascinating little instrument of the Southern mountains. According to Junior, his grandfather would note and pick the instrument with nothing aside from goose quills. Cooke frequented the Berea Celebration of traditional Music for many years, and was recorded in 1940, with Junior on guitar, by Bascom Lamar Lunsford (a prominent field collector of old-time music) for the Library of Congress.

In years to come, Junior would also learn the banjo (he has developed his own unique two-finger-picking style), mandolin, harmonica, "dog house" bass, and guitar.

Of course, another considerable influence on his music was radio. (Two of the favorite stations of his youth were WJJD and the WLS barn dance in Chicago.) He can recall hearing broadcasts (over an old-fashioned two-piece battery radio) of Roy Acuff, Uncle Dave Macon (an early banjo-picking comedian of Grand Ole Opry fame), and many others from what is now referred to as the "Golden Age" of old-time music. He also enjoyed listening to 1920's and 30's recordings of Gid Tanner and his Skillet Lickers, a Southern string band from north Georgia.

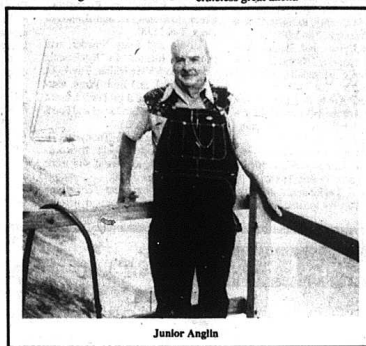

"I always thought that was quite a name for a band," chuckles Junior.

In his high-school days, he performed square dancing with a group on stage at John Laker's Renfro Valley.

Over the years, Junior has traveled extensively with Renfro Valley personalities like Old Joe Clark and Pete Stamper, and has had the opportunity to perform with some of the memorable names of old-time music. Among these are Sam McGee (an original member of the Fruit Jar Drinkers, an early commercial string band that recorded many classic 78 rpm records with Uncle Dave Macon), and Lily May Ledford, one of the founders of the original Coon Creek Girls.

Though Junior is versatile, and can perform Bluegrass as well, he relishes fiddling tunes of his childhood like "Bonaparte's Retreat," and "The Eighth of January". His love of the music is as monumental as his talent, and may be quite infectious as he inspired my own traditional banjo and dulcimer playing. I dedicate this article to that often unsung, but nevertheless great talent.

Tasha Harris: A Sweet Soulful Dream

By Anne Brosnan

Her family always knew she could sing.

When she was three years old, using a hairbrush for a microphone, she sang for them. And, at three years old, she wasn't singing her ABC's. She would stand in front of the tape recorder, singing "Don't It Make My Brown Eyes Blue."

She told them she wanted her hair to grow as long as Crystal Gayle's.

"Down to the floor," she said. She has never wanted to do anything but sing. After a year at Eastern Kentucky University, she decided that school just wasn't her thing. When most of her peers were cramming for tests and worrying about their majors, Tasha Harris was busy negotiating with her record label, Polydor.

Tasha first came to the Valley in November, 1991. At that time, she was working with Richard Jeti, a talent scout who organized some of Renfro Valley's guest acts and clogging troupes at the time of Tasha's

"He told me he already had enough people, and he didn't really need anybody else. I was like, 'Well, how about letting me come over and try out anyway so then if something happens to someone, I could fill in?' So he said okay. I went over there and I tried out and he wanted me to join right then," said Tasha.

When Tasha reappeared in the Valley for a second performance, in November of 1992, she was immediately hired to become a regular member of the Renfro Valley family. She now lends her incredible talents to the Best of Both Show on Thursdays and the Barn Dance on Friday and Saturday nights.

Tasha's first musical inspiration came from her grandfather. Growing up in Beattyville, KY, she spent a lot of time with her grandparents, and country music was all they listened to.

"I liked country and rock, but I always sang country," Tasha said. "As the years would go by,

I'd listen to other kinds of music. I like all kinds of music, but as far as the career I want to go into, it's country."

Tasha remembers her grandfather playing "Rose Colored Glasses" to her when she was little. "He played it all the time," she said. "Loved it. And he always said, you know, a woman needed to do that song, and that I was the one."

Tasha sang that song on the Renfro Valley stage, and she sang it for her grandfather, who was watching from the audience. She receives a lot of support from him, although for a while, due to a heart attack two years ago, her grandfather could not come to any of the shows.

"He has really bad nerves. He gets really keyed up and excited (to watch me perform). He couldn't come back for a really long time because they were afraid it would hurt him. That's how excited and nervous he gets. And he hears me all the time."

There is no musical background in Tasha's family besides the music her grandfather enjoys playing and listening to.

"He can't read music, but he can play the piano, and he can play guitar, but it's all by ear. He's just always loved music," says Tasha.

"He is my number one fan." Tasha possesses one of the most soulful voices on the Renfro Valley stage. More than anything else, she wants to be a country singer, and she wants to hit it big. It's not that she wants it more than anything else, there just isn't anything else. Not for Tasha. Her singing talent comes to her naturally, and she has the poise and the charm to put her songs across to the audience in a way that is truly genuine. She adores country stars Patty Loveless and Pam Tillis, but she doesn't try to sing like the next Loveless.

"I want to just be me. I like singing a lot of other people's stuff, and at Renfro you can do that. But I don't pattern myself after any of them."

She has recently finished her album here at Renfro, which will soon be available from the Country Music Store in Renfro Village. But she's also been spending a lot of time in Nashville, doing studio time with Polydor Records, that will eventually lead up to her cutting an album with them. She's excited about the future, and there is a sense of confidence within her. But, she says, even if she does "make it big," she'll always love other country music entertainment to come and sing at Renfro Valley.

Tasha drives to Renfro from her home in Richmond, arriving in the Valley for rehearsal with her little Pomeranian dog Dakota, or "Cody," for short. Up until a couple of years ago, before the arrival of clogger Kaliessa Robinson, Tasha was the youngest member of the Renfro Valley Barn Dance. She feels the sense of family that makes Renfro different from ment complexes.

"You know, you hear commercials, and people say 'Oh Renfro has such a family atmosphere' and you think, yeah, whatever. But Renfro really is like that. Everybody's real nice, genuinely nice. (They'll say)

'Hey! How're you doing? Car broke down? Let me help you! You know? It's that kind of atmosphere. You can joke with everybody and, if something's not going right with your music, you can ask for help,'" Tasha said.

Renfro Valley has proven to be a learning experience for Tasha, helping her grow as a singer and a performer. Shortly after becoming a member of the Barn dance, she received Renfro Valley's award for Most Improved Performer at the end of the 1992 season.

"Renfro has definitely been the single experience that has and will continue to help me musically—the way I perform, and how I handle myself in front of people. If it wasn't for Renfro, I'd probably be stuck in a rut somewhere," she said. She enjoys working with the other Renfro Valley entertainers, who do their best to help her sound great when she's on stage.

"Everybody really works hard to make it all come together really good," said Tasha. "Everybody works together. Renfro is really close-knit. It's got that family kind of feeling. It's a comfortable place to be."

Renfro Valley Welcomes Back Ronnie McDowell

Ronnie McDowell will perform in Renfro Valley on July 15, 1995, and tickets are already on sale for this long-awaited concert.

McDowell performed to an enthusiastic crowd when he last appeared at Renfro in 1993. Since then, he's performed regularly on TNN's Music City Tonight, and has continued to hold his own among the new country artists who are breaking their way into the country music scene. McDowell is a popular artist with a string of hit songs to his credit, helping to keep him in the midst of today's fast-paced venue of country music entertainment.

McDowell can be heard singing his songs at clubs and casinos of Las Vegas and Reno. Long known to be the best singer of Elvis Presley's songs, McDowell has frequently been chosen to replicate Elvis' voice in movies and television. Originally from Portland, Tennessee, McDowell has had nearly twenty of his singles climb to the top ten positions on the charts. His albums continue to make and break records, and the song he wrote as a tribute to Elvis entitled "The King is Gone," is undoubtedly McDowell's best-known endeavor. Co-wrote with the late Lee Morgan just hours after Elvis' death, the song became an overnight hit and sold over one million copies.

This Tennessee native knew from an early age that he wanted to be a singer. His first band, formed during his service in the US Navy, was called "The Reminiscent." But it was not until one of McDowell's original songs became a hit for Roy Druskey that McDowell's career gained a running start. That song, called "Deep in the Heart of Dixie" will always be special to McDowell.

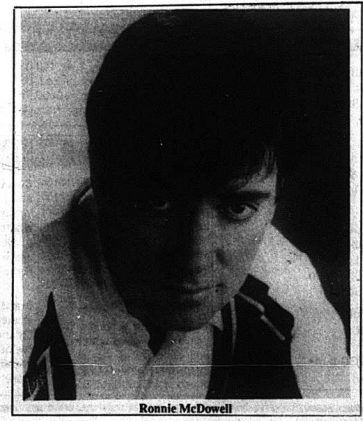

"Hearing that song over the radio for the first time will always be one of the biggest thrills of my career," he says.

Other self-penned songs that became hits for McDowell include "I Love You, I Love You, I Love You", "World's Most Perfect Woman", "Watchin' Gitts Go By," and "All Tied Up." McDowell's artistic talents abound in many aspects of his work. He is not only a recording artist but also a sculptor, water-color artist and an animation artist. In fact, McDowell created the first animated country music video, which he made out of one of his singles, "American Music."

At the beginning of the decade, McDowell was chosen to be an entertainer for several prestigious performances. He has sung for President Bush, and entertained the homecoming troops of Operation Desert Shield. His humanitarian efforts were honored with a House Joint Resolution by the Tennessee General Assembly. McDowell takes his song writing seriously, and uses his talents to do his part to better the world. One of his most recent songs, "What It's Gonna Take", was inspired

"What Saith the Scriptures"

John the Baptist came on the scene and preached, "Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," Mt. 3:2. Jesus next came on the scene and preached, "Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," Mt. 4:17. The apostles in the limited commission preached, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand," Mt. 10:7. The term "at hand" suggests that the time was near, soon to come, to those who would desire to become a part of this kingdom.

The term "at hand" does not mean something that will come in hundreds or thousands of years, as the premillennialist erroneously teaches.

The term kingdom suggests the idea of rule or reign. Thus we are talking about the rule or reign of Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ, after his death, burial and resurrection ascended back to heaven to sit at the right hand of God, Ac. 2:34-35. There he has been ruling as king of kings and Lord of Lords, I Tim. 6:15.

Jesus desires to rule and reign in our hearts. "And when he was demanded of the Pharisees when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation: neither shall they say, Lo here or Lo there! for behold, the kingdom of God is within you," Lk. 17:20-21. The rule of Christ is in the hearts of men and women who must submit their will, to the will of the king. That is why men and women "can't" see the kingdom of God, for it is spiritual rule of God, in the hearts of his people. Paul said of the Colossian brethren, "Giving thanks unto the father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light, who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear son," Col. 1:12-13.

We must be born again to enter into the kingdom of God, Jn. 3:3-7. Being born again involves the same process as what men and women must do to be saved, Ac. 2:34-41. When one believes with all their heart and obeys the gospel's commands for salvation, one is forgiven and is translated into the kingdom of God. Let us know if you would be interested in studying further on these matters.

It's almost time again for our Summer Reading Program. We hope to have many more children involved this summer. We will have marvelous prizes, a pizza party and even Ronald McDonald will visit with us again this year.

The theme of the program this summer is "Solve Mysteries, Read." There are lot more mysteries in the library than just mystery stories. For instance, how does a magnifying glass work? How do planes and bees fly? Who was King Tut? Where buried treasures are hidden, how to dig up fossils, and all about dinosaurs. Help your children find out the answers to these questions and many more.

The program starts at the library June 19th and will continue until July 15th with the pizza party planned for July 18th. The children do have to be registered to enjoy all our special programs.

Don't let your children be bored this summer. Keep them active and I think they will gain a great deal of knowledge without even being aware of it.

Call the library for more information. The number is 256-2388.

The bookmobile will also have a reading program, so please check with Pam for information on this.

Please come to the library and enjoy the summer with us. I am assured you will not regret it.

The library will be getting a lot of new fiction and non-fiction books for the adults this summer. We continually get the best sellers and this should be an enjoyable time for the adults as well as the children.

Some new fiction books just received are: THE LAST COYOTE by Michael Connelly... Mr. Connelly's fourth novel cuts to the very core of Harry Bosch's character, as he is drawn to investigate a thirty-year-old unsolved crime, the murder of his mother.

Harry's life is a mess. His new house has been condemned because of earthquake damage. His girlfriend has left him. He's drinking too much. And he's even had to turn in his badge, he attacks his commanding officer and is suspended indefinitely pending a psychiatric evaluation.

At first Bosch resists the LAPD shrink, but finally realizes that something is troubling him, a force that may have shaped his entire life. In 1962, when Harry was twelve, his mother was brutally murdered, no one was ever even accused of the crime. THE LAST COYOTE is that rarest of novels, a moral thriller, a breakneck-pace that opens up the heart's most secret wounds. No one who reads it will remain unchanged or forget the passion of Harry Bosch.

DON'T CRY NOW by Joy Fielding... In this powerful domestic thriller, Ms. Fielding delivers a chilling story in which terror and devotion spar for a place in a mother's heart.

Happily married with a beautiful young daughter, a handsome husband, and a sprawling house in one of Boston's most comfortable suburbs, Bonnie Wheeler has an enviable life. Even her husband's ex-wife, Joan, with her tendency toward bad timing, is merely a nuisance.

But one morning Bonnie must grasp the fragility of her perfect world. When the finds Joan shot through the heart, it becomes terrifying clear that someone is also after her—and her exquisite child.

DON'T CRY NOW is a stunning psychological thriller from the bestselling author of SEE JANIE RUN and TELL ME NO SECRETS.

We have two new non-fiction books that should be of interest to many of our patrons. A STRANGER IN THE FAMILY by Susan Naifeh and Gregory White Smith... This is a gripping, intimately detailed story of a serial rapist-killer.

For too many unsuspecting and unlucky young women in Georgia and South Carolina in the late 1980's, a knock on the door could announce a dangerous visitor—Richard Daniel Sturatt—answering "for sale" ads in the classifieds. This buyer, however, was hunting for victims, not bargains, and he paid in grim coin: rape, kidnapping, and in at least one case, murder. Sometimes, because of his good looks, charm, and articulate intelligence, he formed an emotional bond with them. But the result was always the same—and always horrible. After a nationwide man hunt, the police finally caught Danny Sturatt, and he confessed to a two-year rampage of rape and murder, plunging residents of this quiet corner of the Deep South into paroxysms of horror, fascination, and fear.

CLOSE ENCOUNTERS OF THE FOURTH KIND: Alien Abduction, UFOs, and the Conference at MIT by C.D.B. Bryan... One might expect that a "scientific conference" devoted to people who have reported being kidnapped by "little green men" would be dismissed out of hand. But C.D.B. Bryan, the greatly admired journalist and author of FRIENDLY FIRE, did not dismiss it, the conference was to be held at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and would have as its chairman a Pulitzer Prize winning Harvard psychiatry professor and a professor of physics from MIT.

Bryan attended the conference throughout its five days. He approached the subject with no prior stand, no agenda, and an open (if slightly skeptical) mind. As the conference progressed, he was astonished by the quality of the stories told by the hundreds of men and women who came forward hesitantly and reluctantly with their utterly amazing accounts of having been abducted and then examined aboard extraterrestrial space craft by spindly limbed, telepathic gray creatures with outsized foreheads dominated by huge, compelling, tear-shaped black eyes. This is a richly explicit, serious, and riveting book.

Poet's Corner Spring Storm

by Lavone Dyer

The clouds grew heavy and dark
Roaring claps of thunder rumbled
And bolts of lightning darted
Fiercely across the sky.
Violent wind howled
While I sat huddled nervously
On a corner of the couch.
I gazed in wonder
Through the rattling window panes

At the rapid falling rain
And flying debris scattering over the land.
Shaking and trembling, I tried desperately
Not to be afraid.
Suddenly, everything grew quiet
Like someone had turned off the storm
A glorious rainbow appeared.
I knew, without a shadow of doubt
It was by God's powerful hand
That I shouldn't fear
For the Master was near.

Storm Damage

When Polly called and told me to turn the T.V. on and listen to the weather news, I did so without reason to worry or, so I thought. But here it was, warnings of strong winds and perhaps tornadoes heading into our area. And advising people to take cover in a safe place and stay away from windows. Sure enough when I looked outside, I saw black storm clouds rolling overhead and lightning was beginning to flash along with the wind bending trees and rain beating fatness on the windows.

I checked out the basement to be sure there was a chair and pillow there if I really needed to seek safety but continued to pace the floor from room to room and window to window for signs of imminent danger. As usual, I was alone but, so what, wasn't I always alone in times of stress and danger? Being alone gave me the freedom to wander from place to place without hindering by others who were afraid of storms and sought safety in the basement. But, it also gave me the eerie feeling of being all alone in a time of danger when other people were being caught by the presence of someone else being near to help out if a tragedy did occur. All the time I was wandering around, I remember the big storm I had been through on the farm and wondering if the same thing was happening again down there. The damage from that storm, five years ago, will take many years to heal and things will never be quite the same even after the healing takes place. I remembered the roar of the storm coming over the hill and the total darkness that enveloped the house even though it was mid-afternoon. This storm I was witnessing was a baby in comparison to that one. The lightning and thunder of that one was so constant it was like one was in a battlefield. And the water accompanying it was not sheets of rain, it was like a solid waterfall. The noise and darkness was so great I never saw nor heard any of the timber falling that later covered my whole yard plus acres and acres of woodland. I was alone through that and came through without harm so why should I be afraid of this one? Then I remembered the ice storm a couple of years ago. That storm was one of glittering crackling beauty instead of howling noise and blackness but the damage was as great or greater for it got acres and acres of timber the big storm had missed. Now I was wondering what was left for this one to destroy.

Well, there is always something left like the maple trees in my yard and a few of the tougher ones in the forest. A neighbor called late that night and said the road was blocked with downed trees and it looked as though the maple tree in the yard was down. So, by daylight the next morning, Polly was there to see if anything was left. Of course, there was, but it would take a lot of hard work to just get the yard cleaned up and there was nothing we could about what was down in the woods. The first day she had a chance to go down, we headed for the farm to see what we could accomplish at clearing up the yard. At first, it looked impossible for two women to do what had to be done. But, faint heart never cleaned up such a mess so we rolled up our sleeves and got to work. The big maple tree in the front yard was split in half and we couldn't do anything about that except haul off all the loose limbs that we could handle along with all the other limbs from the other trees. Debris was everywhere. The yard was littered with leaves, not the pretty colored ones that cover the lawn in the autumn but big green ones with portions of the limbs left on them. They couldn't easily be raked but had to be picked up one by one and carried away by the arm loads. The beautiful blue spruce Polly set out that Christmas had died was lying flat on the ground and, to save it, it had to be pulled up and tied firmly to the plank fence and posts that were close by. Using a ladder as a prize pole and new rope she had brought along to secure the tree to the fence as it was eased upward, she doing the prising and I the rope work, we finally had this fourteen foot tree upright and fastened securely to the fence. It is somewhat crooked now but, hopefully, the sun will do the rest of the remedying.

We had been steadily at work for a couple of hours and were both feeling the results, me especially for I haven't been used to his kind of work for years so we went to the house for a break and a good cold drink from the well. The big old soft couch in that big old living room with opened windows letting the spring breezes clear away the stale smell of storm and winter was just too much for my tired and aching body to resist so down I plopped and stretched out to full length. Polly took a chair close by where she could catch her breath for a few minutes. The next thing I knew, I was aroused by the sound of a soft humming noise in the distance and the sweet odor of new cut grass came drifting in. That sound brought me fully awake and I realized I had been shirking my duty and Polly was doing more than her share of the cleanup.

When we had arrived that morning, we were greeted by a welcoming party of those pesky little gnats that love to feast on me. Thousands of them had fed for every inch of uncovered skin they could find and that horde of hungry little boogers were waiting outside the door for me if I dared to leave my haven inside the house. To thwart their onslaught, I donned an old bonnet, a remembrance of days gone by tied it securely under my chin, the ruffie on the back protecting my neck and the bein protecting my face and once again joined in the effort of cleaning up the mess left by the storm. Polly laughed at the strange apparition she saw coming from the house for I have never been one to wear bonnets and it was perhaps the first time she had ever seen me doing it. But so what, if I looked like a scarecrow maybe that was what it took to keep those little vermin away. Soon, Chuck joined us and the place was back to normal. All leaves picked up and on the compost heap, yard mowed and limbs hauled off.

Once again, quiet and serenity reigns in and about the homestead. The house that my children were raised in and the grandchildren have known as "the farm" and my nieces and nephews remember as the place they always had blackberry dumplings or cobbler. And the house that always welcomes me "home" when I need a place to think, write, remember the past and wait for the tomorrows.

We are much more than a long-term facility. Are you aware of the other services offered by your community hospital's Respiratory Care Department?

There are EEG (electroencephalograph) services for all ages. These tests allow a physician to detect any abnormalities in the brain waves. These tests are transmitted to Lexington where they are read by a neurologist.

Pulmonary Function testing is also available. This type of test helps determine if lung function is impaired and to what degree. Another use of these tests is to determine eligibility for Black Lung Benefits. You can also see the amount of improvement achieved after using a bronchodilator.

Stress testing is a very important step in evaluating cardiac function. The patient has lead wires hooked to electrodes placed at various spots on the chest. He/she will then be asked to walk on a treadmill while the technician and physician carefully monitor the function of the heart during the "stress" of walking.

These are just a few of the services offered by our fine hospital's Respiratory Care Department.

After two week search Poplar Gap man found dead in Ice Cave Hollow

By: Richard Anderkin
A Poplar Gap man who had been missing for almost two weeks was found dead in Ice Cave Hollow Saturday afternoon.
Lentil, Tensley, Robinson, 46, was found dead by Duke McIntosh around 4 p.m. on Saturday, McIntosh, also a herb digger, was hunting for Gensing and for Robinson at the same time, according to Rockcastle County Deputy Coroner Roy Martin.
Martin said that preliminary autopsy reports indicated that McIntosh had been dead since May, 29, Memorial Day.

Martin said that Robinson probably died from a heart attack, but final autopsy results will not be available until later this week.

Robinson's brother, Murrell, who helped rescue squad members hunt for his brother for nearly two weeks, said that his brother had suffered a heart attack about ten years ago and had often complained of chest pains.

"We don't expect any foul play because of the way Tensley's body was positioned when they found him, and the fact that he knew those woods probably better than anybody in the area," Murrell Robinson said. "If someone was after him and he did not want them to find him they wouldn't have," he said.
Robinson's brother said the motorcycle his brother was riding has not been located but Robinson said his brother often parked it and walked for long distances looking for herbs.

According to Robinson his brother was down on his knees leaned over a log, when he was found. "It appeared he was trying to use the log to help himself up," Robinson said.
Robinson said that he was very grateful to all the people who helped search for his brother, especially members of the Rockcastle County

Rescue Squad, who walked miles of rough terrain searching for his brother.

Robinson, who was a highly decorated Vietnam veteran, is survived by his parents, Chester and Ada Mae Robinson of Copper Creek. His body will be at the Dowell and Martin Home, once it is released by the state medical examiner's office.

In last week's story concerning Robinson it was reported that he received a $1,000 check each month when Robinson actually received only $89.00 a month.

Court delays 911 action

by Ray McClure
Betty Castro came to the Rockcastle Fiscal Court Tuesday to plead for a 911 emergency telephone number to keep her alive.
But, the court did not step up the process or make any changes in its intentions awaiting more information on who would best and cheapest to set up the complicated job.

Mrs. Castro stressed time and again the cost on telephone bills would not be a tax. "If that's what people think then we have a big problem," she said.

She told the magistrates she was upset because "you have not done more or gone further."

She reminded the magistrates they had voted to put in 911 and as long as it was not in working order she was in danger and had stopped breathing.

"I'd like to see this group of men do something. All the counties have been here and still nothing has been done."

County Judge/Executive Buzz Carlotti told Mrs. Castro "we're all concerned and we're much further down the road than you think. But it's a big step for the county, that's why we're going slower."
He said "there is no conspiracy to keep 911 out but for the county it's a big step. That's why we've been checking around to get the best deal. We're working on it."

The judge stressed the additional money on the telephone bill is a foe, "not a tax." He said he is "concerned about 911."

Sealed bids were opened on the annual housekeeping materials for the county including gasoline, crushed stone, asphalt emulsion and culverts. The court took the bids under advisement. They will be reported in next week's Signal.

The annual bid on county insurance went to KACO All Lines Fund at $24,720. It includes insurance on property, general liability, contractual agreements, auto fleet, public officials, law enforcement liability and boiler insurance.

The court also approved being part of KACO Advance Revenue Program for which the borrows funds so the county "can get money on county money."

Auditors Jones and Ritchie of Richmond will do the 1994-95 county audit at a cost of $2,600.

The judge and court will take costs of air condition repair under advisement and look it over. One bid made to maintenance man James Miller was for $10,000 with possibly the same amount next year because the unit is so old. The court was told they could probably get a new one for about $25,000 with a five year warranty.

The court decided to advertise for bids on hay available in Henderson Bottoms. Bids will be opened next Thursday and bids must be in the court office by noon. It's for a one-time cutting.

The All-American Club reported they picked up 189 bags of litter during May and used $9.65 worth of gas.

Committee set to help board find new school superintendent

By: Richard Anderkin

Rockcastle County School Superintendent Bige Towery, Jr., will stay in charge of the local school system for a month longer than he had originally planned.

Towery, who announced last month that he was retiring, effective July 1, was appointed interim school superintendent for the month of July while Rockcastle County school board members search for his replacement. The action came at Tuesday night's regular monthly meeting.

Applications for the superintendent's position are being accepted until June 22. Applications for the job are going to a Kentucky School Board Association facilitator in Frankfort.

By law, a five member screening committee must be formed to help the board with the employment process.

Members of the committee, include board vice-chairman Dr. G.W. Griffith, RCHS principal Ronnie Cash, teachers Jeannie Gabbard and William Lynch and parent and businessman David Parsons.

The screening committee will interview potential candidates and make a recommendation to the board before the board conducts their interviews. The local board is not bound in any way by the committee's recommendation.

In other business Supt. Towery announced that he had transferred Glen Vanwinkle from transportation director to food services and facilities management director. Vanwinkle will replace retiring E. J. Smith. He is currently facilities manager, but Towery said that he would not fill the transportation post before his retirement. Towery told the board he would leave that to the new superintendent and, in the meantime, other central office personnel, including Vanwinkle, will handle the transportation's directors duties.

Towery also announced that Greg Daugherty had been employed as band director for Rockcastle County Middle School and Rockcastle County High School replacing Bob Pybas, who is retiring. Major David A. Donaham has been hired as senior army instructor for the ROTC program at RCHS.

A broadcast agreement was approved between the Board and Cumberland Media, Inc. (WRVX), for agreement provides air time for athletic events, public relation announcements and other broadcast exposure for the schools, as requested by the Superintendent or Principals, in exchange for the exclusive right to broadcast within Rockcastle County the athletic events or other special events of the Rockcastle County High School. The contract will remain in effect through June 30, 1998.

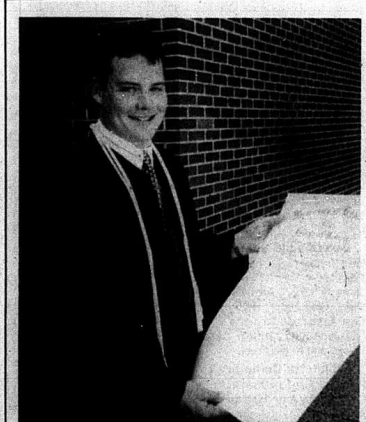

A bid from Does Construction of Berea in the amount of $369,747 was approved for renovation projects at Brodhead Elementary, Roundstone Elementary and the Rockcastle County Middle School.

RCHS principal Ronnie Cash and assistant principal Jim Cox told the board they had increased some requirements for graduating seniors at RCHS. The increased credit requirements include: 1/2 additional credit for English, 1/2 additional credit for social studies, 1/2 additional credit in math and 1/2 additional credit in practical living.

The board also approved a $100,000 expenditure for rest rooms, storage, sockeeping facilities and bleachers at the Rockcastle County High School baseball and softball fields which are currently under construction.

The board also approved the

Points East
 By Ike Adams

If I had it all to do over again, I wouldn't have wasted nearly as many bean and pea seeds, okra and squash and at least a dozen other different kinds of vegetables that I have attempted to grow this season.

Instead I would have gone to the video store and rented a handful of Vietnam war movies and fast forwarded them to the rice paddy scenes to see if I could come up with any information about building a paddy and growing a rice crop. I'm sure that if I put a bit of effort into it I could make my garden hold even more water than it's held all spring. In fact, I believe that with a small dam I could have made a reasonable attempt at catfish farming. Unfortunately Loretta is more interested in tomatoes and cucumbers.

I've dutifully planted cucumbers five times. I have subsequently learned that cucumber plants can't survive more than a few hours underwater. I have three pitiful little rows of sweet corn that are golden yellow. I'm talking about the stalks, not the ears, about stalks that should be dark, blackish green. At this writing we have had lots of cauliflower and broccoli out of our garden and the cabbage seems to be doing remarkably well but if it doesn't stop raining every day, I fear the only usable crop we're apt to have is hog weeds. At least they can be moved down and thrown across the fence to feed to the cattle. Hog weeds also seem to thrive on wet weather land they grow about six inches a day.

If it rains one more time this week, I know where an old pickup bed is that I aim to haul to higher ground and fill it with a few buckets of compost. I intend to wade out and pull four or five of my Molly Helton Sunburst tomatoes and maybe a couple of pepper plants from the swamp/paddy and reset them. While I am no longer under the delusion that I may grow that elusive five pounder this year, we may yet be able to produce a few slicers before the first snow fall. In the meantime, I am busy stuffing envelopes with beans seeds to all you folks who have requested a start of the Bufford Caudill fall beans.

If you haven't already written, please hold off till next year. We're running out of growing time, and I'm also running out of seed. In fact, I may have to find another old truck bed so that I can yet grow a mess or two myself.

In other news, and speaking of pickups, you may be interested in learning that a frequent subject in this column is no longer in my possession. I no longer own the lemon jeep. In return for all the spankings and other forms of punishment that she didn't receive as a child, I have signed over the title of the lemon to my daughter Carol. And now that I think about it, I believe I know where that other truck bed should be available in a couple of weeks.

I now own the reddest red, full-size Chevrolet pickup in Garrard County, compliments of State Representative Paul Mason and the Central Appalachian People's Federal Credit Union. I did in fact drive over 150 miles to Whitesburg from Paint Lick to make the deal with which I am very well please, Paul wouldn't take the lemon in trade because I had written too many bad things about it in the paper. It didn't matter that I had editorialized so eloquently about its recent trouble-free trip to Kentucky Lake. Paul didn't even want the lemon on his lot because he was afraid the rest of his vehicles might catch a contagious disease. I still got the deal I had been looking for over the last several months and I'm convinced that you shouldn't trade cars until you at least talk to Paul Mason.

and rather run-down, but inside it was as clean as a soldier's spit-shined boots. So were the eight children who sat in a semi-circled and stared now and then at the bulging suitcase I had set on the glistening, linoleum floor. By the time I had them talking and giggling their father was home. We moved into the dining room where I sat at one end of the table and heard his wife sat at the other. Then the children crowded around.

As I made my presentation, which involved the use of a "prospector" containing pages from all thirty volumes of Britannica, the father and mother looked more at the children than at me. Their expressions never changed, making it difficult for me to "read" how the "pitch" was going.

I went into the "close." Assuming he would and having explained the prices and methods of payment, I asked him to choose a binding. He pointed to the least expensive cover.

PRECIOUS SOULS, CHILDREN OF AN EVIL AGE, greetings and illuminations from the ever memorable and usually cordial world of Wadd, where we don't worry about having all the answers because no one is smart enough to ask all the questions.

Speaking of knowledge, I used to peddle it now and then—Encyclopaedia Britannica, that is, the most complete and authoritative reference source in the English-speaking world. With the advent of the computerized, multimedia encyclopedia, however, the days of those space-eating, dust-collecting volumes are numbered. (Whoa there, World Book advocates, don't vex your vitals. WB is okay but has far less data and depth than EB.) Last week I read an article in Computer Life entitled "The Death of the Encyclopedia Salesman," the gist of which can be put in the form of a question: Why pay $700 to $2,000 when you can get a quality encyclopedia on CD for about $100? (Such as Groliers, my favorite, or Encarta and Compton's. If, however, you're really into research, Britannica is now on CD—for a thousand bucks! But wait until the interaction kinks are worked out.)

No, I don't hawk EB anymore. Nowadays, I write religious books, like my best-seller, Did Adam Have a Navel? and its sequel, *Did Eve? Presently, I am hard at work composing volume on The Book of Revelation. It surely will hit the top of the charts. Preachers, teachers, laymen, and laywomen will find it an indispensable text. For example, I trace a myriad of interpretations of Revelation from the days of the early church (FBC in Jerusalem) up to Hal Lindsey's The Late Great Planet Earth. You will enjoy my explication of the "dispensational-pre-millennial Rapture" theory versus the "historical-pre-millennial-No-Rapture" theory.*

And you will revel in my evaluations of the last book of The Bible in the light of concepts that pre-occupy your mind almost daily, concepts such as Amillenialism, Post-millennialism, Calvinism, Arminianism, Apocalypticism, Neo-Orthodoxy, Apoplexy, and Neo-Sprominism. It will be titled What Saith the Isms? I hope to have it in bookstores by Halloween, where the cost will be only $19.95. Look for my first day special!

(You were talking about Brianica, John!)

Not only did I earn as much as twenty thousand in a year's time, I also garnered several good tales about that most bizarre work here, absolutely unembellished, are a few. When I worked for EB, door-to-door was out. Salesmen were given "leads" generated by the company, such as you see in TV Guide or a Visa statement, etc. EB sold the leads to us for a little as one dollar or as much as ten. The leads indicated some measure of interest in EB by the person who sent in a coupon. Often it meant they only wanted to "free" in the ad. But many want "more information." It was my challenge to turn their interest into desire—and an order.

Dollars leads from certain zip-code areas usually meant "I want the gift" or "I want the books but have no credit." One evening in early April I drove to the "05" sector of Indianapolis, the part that was nearly a ghetto. I stopped in front of a really dilapidated house. Christmas lights were still strung across the porch. I double-checked the address. It was the right residence. No sale here, I thought, and knocked on the door.

Curtains in the windows on both sides of the door were pulled back. Curious little faces filled the panes. The door opened, and a middle-aged woman asked what I wanted. I introduced myself, explained the lead, and asked if her husband were home. "Come in," she said. "He ain't here, but I'll call him. He's the one that sent that thing in."

Dear hearts, that house was old that in itself was a close! (But I thought, He can't afford it!) "How much interest would I be paying over three years?" he asked. When I told him, he shrugged and muttered, "I don't like payin' interest. I'd rather pay cash." That was usually an "excuse" that was hard to overrule, but it was a way of letting people off the hook with calling attention to the real issue—no money. I waited for the next time: "Why don't you give me a few months to save up the cash and I'll call you."

But he didn't say that. He pulled up on that matter, glanced at his wife, and back to me. "You got anything like ninety days same as cash?" "Yes, I do, sir, but the company likes to have a third of the cost of whole set up front. Then you can pay the balance in three, interest free, installments.

The children, who obviously wanted the books, watched silently as their daddy mused some more. I said nothing. Then he turned to his wife. "Momma, go get the money."

While she was away in the bedroom to which she had closed the door, I showed the children some more pictures in my "pros" and chatted with the father about the NCAA basketball championship game that would be played later that evening.

The bedroom door opened, and the misfit came out holding her apron filled with wrinkled bills. I sat there amazed as they pressed out $300 in ones, fives, tens, and a few twenties. And they paid off the balance in ninety days!

That was a pleasing sale to me, not only because I earned a good commission, but also because I left there knowing the books would be used. The father would see to that. But I don't think he had to do much ongoing. The older children's eyes told me so.

On another occasion in Indy, on a cold, snow-blowing night, I approached a door and was about to ring the bell when I spotted a note taped on the inside of the storm door. It read: "You are being watched. You have no reason to be at my door. If you are still standing there after two minutes, you will be shot." No sale that night. I went straight home with out even passing GO. And that was a $10 lead!

One Saturday afternoon, I presented Britannica to a professor at DePauw University in Indiana. Both he and his wife were experts in world literature. Quite a few things he told me. I already knew, but I feigned

To Remember Me

Life can go on in the organ dona-tion of your loved one to families who are waiting for an organ of Life. The greatest gift is a gift of yourself to help others.

On June 2, 1995, in the blink of an eye, our lives were changed forever. We lost our 40-year-old daughter suddenly, and without warning, while she was traveling in Alabama.

We received the call at 4 a.m. from the ER doctor at Dekalb Baptist Medical Center, Ft. Payne, Alabama. He asked me if we would consider an organ donation. Our immediate response was to take her body and use whatever organs, tissues and other parts that they could use for others: She believed, as we do, that although death closes one door, another door is opened. We know that two people can now see, several have been helped by her heart valves and pulmonary valves and bone.

After the autopsy the other organs have been transplanted into more people who have been desperately ill. One person's donation can help 100 people. Many people have come to me since the Memorial Service for Cindy and have asked about donating.

We have two beautiful black-haired, dark-eyed little girls to raise. Heather will soon be 9 and Lauren will soon be 8. They have gone to school here previously and will be going to Roundstone in the fall. We deeply appreciate the cards, dona-tions, food and other offers of help to our family. God bless each and ev-eryone. We are leaning on the arms of God and he has been very much a part of our lives.

With all of our love,
Lu Ed and Dean Nielsen,
Cathy Silimon and Edwin and Donald Nielsen and children Michel, Brandi, Heather & Lauren, nieces and nephews, also her special friends,
Bruce Phillips,

Explore every corner of my brain. Take my cells, if necessary, and let them grow so that, someday, a speechless boy will shout at the crack of a bat and a deaf girl will hear the sound of rain against her windows. Burn what is left of me and scatter the ashes to the winds to help the flowers grow.

If you must bury something, let it be my faults, my weaknesses and all the prejudices against my fellow man.

Give my sins to the devil. Give my soul to God.

If by chance, you wish to re-member me, do it with a kind deed or word to someone who needs you. If you do all I have asked, I will live forever.

Hopkins receives Kiwanis scholarship

by Bev Rockwell
It is always a privilege for the Kiwanis Club of Rockcastle County to present the Virginia Gilpatrick Memorial Scholarship to a deserving graduating senior. This year's recipient is a young man who exemplifies the true meaning of the award. Criteria for this $500 grant includes maintaining at least a 3.0 grade average, recipient of no other scholarship at the time of applications, and who has shown, through active participation in school and community service programs, a genuine interest in serviceable citizenship. Kenneth Hopkins certainly has shown that he is worthy of this award.

Kenneth has maintained a 3.4 grade average while participating in a number of sports activities including baseball, golf and basketball. Kenneth is listed in "Who's Who among American High School Students," took a first and third place in the History Fair, and was listed as an outstanding student in English, Anatomy and Physiology. For the last three years Kenneth has been a member of the Future Business Leaders of America, and a member of Fellowship for Christian Athletes. His honors include Youth Advisory Board-Youth Representative. He was awarded second place in the VFW Essay and voted most cooperative and sophisticated senior. His athletic honors include being the Rockets basketball captain, and lettering in the sport and also serving as Team Trainer for the Rockets baseball team.

Kenneth's many church activities have enabled him to expand his leadership skills and develop a spiritual life that will support him in all his future endeavors. As a member of the First Baptist Church of Mt. Vernon, he has served as recreation leader for Vacation Bible School, been a Creative Ministries Team member attending Summer Mission Team conferences in Illinois, Oklahoma, North Carolina and Michigan and participated in his church's summer league softball and volleyball competition for several years.

Kenneth has gladly given time and energy to support a number of service organizations. They include trainer at a skills station for the Rockcastle County Basketball Middle School camps; acted as referee for the Rockcastle County Intramural Basketball program; volunteered as a student worker to the Rockcastle County vocational School; and as a member of the Creative Ministries Team, performed in puppet and drama productions for the Rockcastle County Hospital, the Sowder Nursing Home, and numerous churches in the county.

Career goals for Kenneth include attending Eastern Kentucky University in the teacher education program. He wishes to pursue his goal as a certified health and Physical Education teacher and return to his home town, or community near by, to fulfill that dream. In addition to seeking a teaching position he would also like to do some coaching.

The Kiwanis Club of Rockcastle County wishes to extend our best wishes to Kenneth Hopkins for a future filled with success and happiness. We would also like to thank all the students who applied for this grant.

RHYMING - If your child understands rhymes, try a rhyming game. Give your child an easy word like "hat" or "cake." Ask your child to think of as many words as possible that rhyme with it. Make a rhyme with your child using some of these rhyming words.

Repeating nursery and Mother Goose rhymes is also good for working on speech and language skills. You can make up tunes for these rhymes. Some nursery rhymes include "Jack and Jill," "Humpty

"Dumpy," "Hickory Dickory Dock," "Mary Had a Little Lamb," "Little Miss Muffet," "Twinkle Twinkle Little Star," and "Jack Be Nimble." "One, Two Buckle My Shoe" and "Ten Little Indians" are songs that also develop counting.

MEMORY GAMES - Start a sentence like "We are going on a trip and we brought..." Each person repeats what has been said before and adds one more item. The game ends when the list goes too long. (Cont. to A7)

Clinton and Arlie Thompson do such a nice job mowing and trimming the cemetery. Flowers may be left on the stones, but others will be removed.

Plans to attend the Thompson reunion at Quail Park on the last Saturday in July.

The 21st Crab Orchard Alumni Banquet was held Saturday evening June 10th at the school. Attending from this community was Norcetta Thompson whose class of 1955 was honored and Owen and Marie Duvall Burton and Dorothy Duval. Others attending and visiting Don and Norene Thompson were "Dove" King and Edith (Owens) Smith of Ohio and Harold and Bobb (Smith) Rhoden of Indiana.

ignorance and let him was eloquent. Now Briannica had at the time an offer of The Great Books of the Western World, which, if purchased with Briannica were half-price. It made a nice package for the buyer and a hefty commission for me.

Having examined EB and GB, the professor looked at his wife and grinned, then turned to me and said, "If you can correctly pronounce all authors names on the fifty-four volumes of The Great Books, we'll buy the whole package." He probably figured I would stumble on names such as Apollonius, Epictetus, Augustine, Montaigne, Huygens, LaVoisier, and Berkeley (which is pronounced "Barkley.") I left with a cash-in-full order for an EB&G!

Alack and alas! I no longer have a way to make "mad" money. And Nancy has me on a strict allowance. Wait! I could sell poetry, like the following, entitled "Looney Tune."

listening to a lone singing a mournful tune
weaving a rug for my loon...

Oops! Beloved, I must go. So, until next week—the Almighty willing—consider the wisdom of the late Esther Hester Hargimonty, that beloved and much-emulated general of the Salvation Army, and full-time mixer of metaphors, who, while delivering an address on "Living and Reform" to the Great Whiteboard Society of Philosophers and Metaphysicians, said, "We must be careful not to throw the baby out of the bathwater into the frying pan."

Food Allergies

By: Hazel Jackson
County Extension Agent
for Home Economics

Consider a newspaper advertisement like this one: "Do you suffer from headaches, stomachaches, sinus problems, skin problems, overweight, stress, fatigue or a combination of these problems? Doctors and nutritionists say that food may be the cause. Our new test will find the foods and chemicals that you are allergic to." That list of symptoms covers just about all of our occasional discomforts. Does that mean we all have allergic reactions to one food or the other? About 17% of the U.S. population has some type of allergy. Only about 6% has allergies to such things as bee stings, drugs and food.

What Is An Allergy? If you are allergic to something, what does that mean? It means that you are overly sensitive to some substance. All substances are made up of chemicals. Substances that might cause an allergy can be chemicals in the air, on the ground, in your clothing, in food or elsewhere. In food these substances are usually proteins. If the substance gets under the skin or into the bloodstream a sensitive person's body may react in a way that is not healthy for them.

Which Foods Can Cause Allergies? Most children or adults with food allergies are only allergic to one or two foods. It is rare for a person to have allergic reactions to numerous foods at one time. The foods most often identified with allergic reactions are: milk, eggs, beans, nuts, wheat, fish, citrus fruits, crustaceans (shrimp, crab, and lobster).

Other foods can produce reactions in some children and adults, but these reactions are probably not caused by an allergy. Some examples are: chocolate, strawberries, corn.

While some children and even some adults will actually have food allergies, most symptoms observed in children are caused by something other than an allergic reaction. Having a qualified doctor make a proper examination is the safest and most accurate way of determining whether a food is involved in a reaction. If a food is involved the only real way to prevent the symptoms from occurring is to avoid the food.

For more basic information on Food Allergies, call 256-2403 for a free publication entitled "Food Allergies & You".

and flower stalks develop. Flowers begin to form in late May to early June.

One reason nodding thistle can be difficult to control is that one plant can produce several thousand seed. A large, mature plant produces over 4,000 seed that can become new plants next year. Some of the seed remain viable for at least 10 years. Also, the seed are easily carried or spread by wind, water, animals, farm equipment, and in hay. Since nodding thistle only reproduces by seed, effective control programs depend on preventing seed production and spread.

Nodding thistle becomes easily established on areas with bare or exposed soil. It is frequently found in overgrazed pastures, areas with poor fertility and disturbed sites. Under these conditions, desirable grasses are unable to grow vigorously and compete effectively against this weed's emergence and growth.

A control program for nodding thistle should involve good management practices that will help establish and maintain productive pastures. These practices include maintaining good soil fertility and proper soil pH and managing pastures to prevent over grazing. It is also important to avoid the spread of nodding thistle seed by keeping fence rows and adjacent lots weed-free and by preventing transport of seed by farm equipment.

Mechanical methods for control consist of mowing or hand removal. These methods may not eliminate this weed problem but should reduce seed production. With mechanical controls the plant should be mowed or removed as close to the ground as possible before it begins to flower. Some regrowth will probably occur, but seed production will be noticeably less than if no mechanical control practices were used.

At this time of year, chemical control is not an option. Mechanical control to reduce seed numbers will be helpful. Also, identify fields for fall or spring spraying.

Thank You

Thanks to the efforts of The Christian Appalachian Project, local businesses, and many individuals, the Rainbow Respite-Caprice dance held in the parking lot of the Dogpatch Trading Center in London on May 12 was a great success.

The businesses of the Dogpatch Trading Center graciously allowed the use of their parking lot for this event—and they even supplied everyone with beautiful weather. Harold Smith made sure the "dance floor" was smooth and clean. Nicole Loynd from the Remfo Valley Volunteer House drew clowns and horses for the Carnival theme, and workers of Rainbow Respite painted them in festive colors. The Daniel Boone Development Council contributed tables and materials for the decorations and games, and Lovelace's Costume and Balloon Shop helped bring Bertha the Clown to the dance. Super Saver of Mt. Vernon made sure there were enough cups for the drinks brought to the dance by the Pepsi Cola Bottling Company, and the Families and Boosters of Madison County made sure everyone had plates and napkins for the delicious pizza from Papa John's in London (he gave them a deal they couldn't refuse). D&W Cafeteria catered to the "sweet tooth" of the participants, and DJ Henry Neesley kept everyone dancing and managed to give a lot of "honeybuns" from London's Griffin Pie Company to lucky dancers. And the A-1 Portable Buildings made sure that a wheelchair accessible restroom was available.

Rainbow Respite, Caprice, and the more than 150 people who dined and danced and enjoyed themselves thank everyone who worked so hard and contributed so much to make this a memorable evening.

to remember. Try other sentences such as: On my sandwich I put _____. For my birthday I want _____. In my closet I found _____. I went to the store and bought _____. I went to the zoo and I saw _____.

GUESSING GAME - Take turn describing something for others to guess. Start by saying "I'm thinking of something _____." You can describe things that you see out the window or make up things. Describe things by using words for color, size, shape, texture, etc.

SINGING - Singing familiar songs or making up songs is a good way to practice language skills while traveling. Traveling may also be a good time to learn new songs.

TV TALK - You can also talk about your child's favorite TV shows. Have your child recall what happened in some of the episodes is good practice for memory skills and telling events in the proper order. Then, help your child make up new endings for the TV shows.

MEMORIES - To help your child remember the places you visit, draw pictures of what you've seen. If you've been to the beach or have been camping, have your child collect samples of sand, shells, leaves, or small rocks. They can be glued to paper to make pictures or designs. Or choose photographs from trips. Write down your child's description of the pictures.

Nodding Thistle

Nodding Thistle is the most widespread thistle species found in Kentucky. Its name describes the large flowers because they bend over and appear to nod or droop. Musk Thistle is another common name for this plant.

Like other weeds, nodding thistle lowers the productivity of pastures. Also, the plant discourages livestock from grazing close by because of its spiny nature.

Understanding the nodding thistle's growth and life cycle is useful for controlling it. The plant is easiest to identify when it is in the flowering stage. Nodding thistle produces a red to purplish flower about 2 inches in diameter. The flower is attached to an erect stem that can be 3 to 6 feet tall and the flower frequently droops or nods. Large plants are capable of producing 50 or more flowers.

Nodding thistle, like other biennial plants, usually requires 2 years to complete its life cycle. However, it can develop as an annual or winter annual depending on environmental conditions. Its only method of reproduction is by seed. Seed germinate in the fall or early spring and the seedling forms a rosette. The rosette is a circular cluster of leaves with the growing point close to the ground.

The plant remains in the rosette stage throughout its first year of growth. The second spring after emergence, the rosette size increases to about 12 to 18 inches across, the stem begins to elongate
