Counties may get three years to pay off KACo deficit

According to a recent story in the Lexington Herald-Leader, Kentucky Insurance Commissioner George Nichols III said counties might be given more time to pay off the deficit of the Kentucky Association of Counties All Lines Fund.

"We're trying to look at the impact of the deficit on the counties. We don't want to put the counties in a bad situation," Nichols said last Wednesday. "We might be able to give them some time to pay."

"We are holding the program responsible for eliminating this deficit... But part of the process going on now is to see how we can protect counties from suffering too much pain."

A total of 112 counties bought liability coverage last year through the fund. But more than two dozen counties dropped out of the program after Nichols declared it to have a $9.4 million deficit.

Department of Insurance examiners concluded that new premiums had been used to cover previous-year claims for at least three years. Nichols said July 17 that a special assessment fee charged to the program's members would be necessary to erase the deficit.

That would be in addition to rate increases of 10 percent to 70 percent that were already imposed for the fiscal year that began July 1.

Gov. Paul Patton said Monday he wants to give local governments three years to erase the deficit in their combined insurance fund, but he offered a warning to counties unwilling to pay the assessments.

Patton said that counties must understand they are responsible for paying the assessments imposed by the State Insurance Department to cover the deficit in the Kentucky All Fund.

The fund, operated by the Kentucky Association of Counties insures most counties and hundreds of local governments and agencies. Some counties no longer in the fund question whether they are legally obligated to pay.

Rockcastle County has bought insurance from KACo since the late 1970's and renewed their contracts with them last month for the fiscal year 1996-97.

Rockcastle Judge-Executive Buzz Carlofus said this week he doesn't know how much Rockcastle will be obligated to pay, but Gov. Patton made it very clear on Monday that each county that has participated in the fund will pay their share.

"I expect counties to pay their fair share, and any county that thinks it doesn't have to pay is going to find state government awfully hard to deal with," Patton said in a public meeting in Livingston County.

Patton also told the crowd in western Kentucky that KACo would be able to use $5 million from another program to soften the impact of the $9.4 million deficit.

Nichols also said Monday that he is also willing to give individual counties two to three years to cover their part of the deficit, depending on their circumstances. But he said they must have a "legitimate plan" and the insurance fund must remain stable.

The program has until Aug. 15 to present its plan to Nichols to eliminate the deficit.

But, Nicholas said he is examining whether such a transfer can be made from one KACo fund to another and that, "everybody is going to have to understand that if claims were to come in quickly," Nichols said, "the time frame may set itself."

Nichols was referring to the time counties will have to pay off the deficit.

Legislative Update

By: Rep. Danny Ford

While Kentucky's growth in employment and personal income has outpaced the nation over the past seven years, state financial officials advise that lawmakers use caution in dealing with the economy, an approach I have endorsed throughout my years of service as your legislator.

In the July 25 meeting of the Appropriations and Revenue Committee, the Governor and Finance and Administration Cabinet officials reassured lawmakers that Kentucky is in good financial state, and even has several million dollars in unbudgeted funds. Two officials, however, said that although the outlook is favorable, there are some factors that could cause Kentucky's economy to slow down.

Analysts with The Standard & Poor's Creditweek Municipal reviewed Kentucky's financial and economic data and published its findings on July 15. The report basically applauds our efforts in managing the state's finances and balancing the budget. Since this has been made a priority, our fiscal year-end positions have steadily improved. The report attributes the state's steady growth to an economy that has become more diversified and less dependent upon certain industries, such as coal and heavy manufacturing.

State finance officials told committee members that while there has been a decline in receipts of coal severance and corporate income taxes, the road fund enjoyed good growth from 1995 to 1996. There was a 4.4 percent increase, or $39.3 million. Regarding the coal market, no further decline is foreseen.

Legislators also learned that there is enough money to fund several projects. At the close of this fiscal year, there is money in our budget for 27 projects initially approved during the regular session. These projects total $103.4 million.

Currently there is $64 million in unbudgeted funds, and plans for the surplus will be discussed during the upcoming months. There is speculation that the money could be appropriated if the Governor calls a special session on the budget. However, this money is likely to be used to cover the loss of revenue in the General Fund over the next three years. The General Assembly passed legislation that exempts state income tax on pensions, and raises the standard deduction on state income tax.

As a member of the Appropriations and Revenue Committee, it will be important for me to know your views as we continue to meet. To leave a message for me, you may call the legislative message line toll-free at 1-800-372-7181. For an up-to-date schedule of committee meetings, call 1-800-633-9650.

Fairview News

By Mrs. Hubert Chastean

Hello to all.

Hope all is well with you, and you are at peace with God, with yourself and with others. Love is a wonderful thing, and I hope and pray that each of our hearts is filled with it. Today we see love, honor and respect disappearing from the lives of our people. Our Heavenly Father loves us so much, and He expects us to love one another, but some don't.

Rev. Harvey Pensol filled his regular appointment at the Fairview Baptist Church over the weekend. 96 attended Sunday School with several more for worship services. Summer time is vacation time so our attendance is usually lower during this time.

We extend our deepest heart-felt sympathy to the families who have lost loved ones recently - including Mrs. Angie VanWinkle of Fairview and Wanda Marcum of Berea. They were both good Christian ladies and had many friends who loved them.

They will be greatly missed. May God bless and comfort their loved ones who are left behind.

Congratulations and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Scottie Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Mike Alexander who were united in marriage, Saturday, August 3rd. All their friends wish them a good and happy life together.

Mrs. Nancy Williams recently spent a week in Augusta, Georgia with her sister, Dorothy Lambert and friend, Mary Lou Reynolds. They enjoyed the time spent together.

Mr. and Mrs. Billy Cope and daughter, of Dayton, Ohio visited his grandmother, Mrs. Mary Cope, Sunday. They spent a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Cope of Eubank.

Rickels - Noe Reunion

July the 27th we had our family reunion in the Family Life Center at Renfro Valley. There was 79 present, coming from Kentucky, Ohio, Tennessee, Arkansas, Illinois, Pennsylvania and Florida. Mabel, our mother and eight of her nine children were there, along with grandchildren, great grandchildren and one great great grandchild. Games were played, including basketball, horseshoes, and bingo. Lots of food was enjoyed by all and we met some new relatives and some old friends. Our reunion was in love and honor of our brother,

Gene, who recently underwent surgery for cancer and is doing good. He insisted we not cancel the reunion because he was in the hospital, but because of prayers from family and friends being answered, he went home the day of the reunion, three days earlier than expected. We are thankful for all the prayers that went out for Gene and the most thankful to our Lord Jesus Christ for answering those prayers.

We thank all who attended our reunion and invite you all back again next year.

Getting the Most from your Bread Machine

By: Hazel Jackson County Extension Agent
for Home Economics

Bread machines have become one of the fastest selling kitchen appliances. There are more than fifteen brands and over fifty models available for sale. Basically, all bread machines are the same: they have a motor, bread pan, kneading blade, and built-in computer that controls the essential operations. Bread machines automatically mix the ingredients, knead the dough and allow the dough to rise, and then bake the loaf of bread—all in the same unit.

Making homemade bread has never been easier. Whether you are a seasoned baker or a newhomemaker, it is still important for everyone to read the bread machine's owners manual before making even the first batch. While the end result may be the same, the method used is very different from conventional bread making.

Most bread machines will make both basic breads and sweet breads. Here's one sweet bread recipe for you to try in your machine.

BLUEBERRY LEMON BREAD

- 3/4 cup plus 2 TBSP milk
- 1 large egg
- 1 TBSP butter or margarine
- 1 tsp salt
- 3 cups bread flour
- 1/2 cup dried blueberries
- 1 TBSP sugar
- 2 tsp finely shredded lemon peel
- 2 tsp active dry yeast

Add ingredients to bread machine pan in the order suggested by manufacturer, adding dried blueberries with flour. (If dough is too dry or stiff or too soft or slack, adjust dough consistency).

Recommended Cycle: Basic/white bread cycle; light or medium /normal color setting. Makes a 1 1/2 pound loaf.

If you would like tips on using your bread machine or choosing one, attend a class offered by the Extension Service entitled "Bread-Making By Machine" at 6:00 p.m. on August 20th. The class is FREE OF CHARGE and will include samples and numerous recipes. For more information on the class, contact the Extension Office at 256-2403.

Back-To-School: Keep spending and sanity in check

If it weren't so hot outside, you might mistake it for Christmas.

It's the annual late-summer, back-to-school shopping rush. Weeks, sometimes months, in advance, stores herald the first symbol of the impending fall: the start of school. As if on cue, school-age youth and parents packing checkbooks crowd the aisles of stores and malls.

Many parents and children face the prospect with dread, but some preparation can help ease the strain on the wallet and on the parent-child relationship.

"Before you even get in the car, develop a game plan, cautions Maria Thompson Okorley, assistant professor of apparel and textiles in the University of Kentucky College of Human Environmental Sciences. That plan should start with a look at influences on your children's clothing styles—magazines, TV shows and movies.

"I want my children to tell me or show me what they want before we ever go shopping," said Okorley, a mother of two children. Getting to know what your children like means even when they aren't shopping with you, you might be able to find something to match their style.

Some other tips:
* Establish a clothing budget for each child. Okorley estimates that 75-90 percent of the back-to-school wardrobe should be basics, with 10-25 percent fun things, such as vests or accessories.

* To reduce potential conflicts, be sure to take children some place you can afford to shop.

* Don't forget about consignment stores for children's clothing bargains. Keep in mind that your child probably is still growing, so prepare for more clothes-buying in a few short months.

Uniforms—a parent's dream and a teenager's nightmare—are becoming the rule at some school's particularly in the Northeast, Okorley said, as schools try to erase barriers among children. "It takes that status element away from the school environment and helps eliminate teasing," Okorley said.

Back-to-school shopping can have a positive effect. It's a good time to involve children in the workings of the family budget, suggests Kim Townley, UK associate professor of family studies. By adolescence, children should learn about the family budget and how their clothing purchases fit into it, she said. It also can teach them about value for their dollar. "For example, if your children are shopping with you, you can show them how they can have three of one item for the same price as one of another, and let them make the decision," Okorley said. "Explain to Students shouldn't be afraid to ask for help. Whitlow said hall directors and resident advisers are hired for their ability to interact with students and serve as a resource.

"They should not be afraid to utilize those individuals - even for small things." Whitlow said, such as when to do laundry or how to use a meal card. They can also help students find out how to add or drop a class or find a tutor, Whitlow said.

Beyond developing friendships, nothing takes the place of old-fashioned studying to achieve success. Preparation can begin in high school: Students can take foreign language and math classes to fulfill college requirements in advance, Byers said.

Wright, a senior who is a student adviser this summer at UK, said students should make it a priority their first semester to earn good grade point average as a foundation. Byers recommends students balance their course load with a mix of classes that are difficult and not so difficult.

When final exams approach, don't discount the importance of extra effort. Byers said skipping parties and studying "almost to the exclusion of everything else" prior to exams can make a big difference in grades.

Holding down a job can interfere with studies if a student works too many hours, Byers said. "They probably shouldn't exceed 15 hours week," Byers said.

Academic resources for first-time students including their advisers, the associate dean for undergraduate studies at their college, and the counseling and testing center.

Wright offers these study tips:

"Sit in the first couple of rows in a large lecture class instead of the back so you aren't distracted from the instructor by the large group of people there."

"Form study groups of four or five people to prepare for a test."

"Talk to the instructor if you have questions about homework." "I fully utilize the instructor's office hours," Wright said. "They don't mind at all. I think it's made the difference in a few grades."

"Don't procrastinate studying."

"It's not so much a time management thing as motivating yourself to do it," Wright said.

Civil War singer will perform at Holly Bay

Nationally acclaimed singer and storyteller, Sparky Rucker will present a performance of "The Civil War In Black and White" Saturday, August 10th at the Holly Bay Amphitheater. The amphitheater is located in Holly Bay Campground at Laurel River Lake. The program begins at 8:30 p.m.

Rucker's performance gives an account of the Civil War using songs, stories and personal narratives. "I heard him perform this spring and decided I had to get him here," said Steve Kickert information specialist with the U.S. Forest Service. "He plays the blues as he tells the story of the Civil War. His musical ability, story telling and knowledge of the subject combine to create an entertaining and informative program," he added.

Sparky Rucker has appeared at the Smithsonian Folk Festival, Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, and Chickamauga National Battlefield. He toured Europe with the American Folk Blues Tour and performed at the National Folk Festival at Wolf Trap Farm Park. He has been heard on the "Morning Edition" and "Prairie Home Companion" on National Public Radio.

How to succeed in college

When Jackie Sue Wright of Maysville decided to come to the University of Kentucky, her biggest fear was that she would be overwhelmed by the size of the place.

"My entire high school would fit in one of those lecture rooms," she said.

Once she got to know people, however, the university seemed smaller. "Getting into a social group up here is what makes it home," Wright said.

First-time college students often have major apprehensions about college initially, whether they're going to a large university or a small private college. But students who make friends, take a manageable course load and study hard can get beyond those difficult months of adjustment to become successful academically and socially.

"A lot of students get homesick," said Charles Byers, a professor of agricultural education who speaks at parent orientation each year at UK. "But if they can just get to know students in their field, then I think they start to develop contacts, relationships and networks and develop a comfort zone."

Wright believes joining a student group, in her case a sorority, helps students develop that comfort zone. Activities such as intramural sports are also helpful.

She suggests students live on campus for at least a year and stay on campus instead of going home on weekends. "It really makes college your community," she said.

Pat Whitlow, associate director for residence life at UK, said students who live on campus know more about what is going on at the college and meet people more easily.

"It just happens a lot faster for students living in residence halls," she said.

Whitlow advises students to contact their roommates before moving in so they can plan who will bring the refrigerator, answering machine and other items that might be duplicated.

When final exams approach, don't discount the importance of extra effort. Byers said skipping parties and studying "almost to the exclusion of everything else" prior to exams can make a big difference in grades.

Holding down a job can interfere with studies if a student works too many hours, Byers said. "They probably shouldn't exceed 15 hours week," Byers said.

them that it comes out of a total budget. We have 'X' numbers of dollars to spend."

One idea to help avoid possible battles is to have children earn some of their purchasing power. For example, explain to a child that for the price of a packet, he or she gives up going to the movies or the skating rink a certain number of times.

Be sure to keep track of the exchanges. "It's an early lesson in choices in life and lifestyle," Okorley said.

Another idea is for children to earn credit to use toward special purchases by doing chores they don't normally do, such as weeding the garden or vacuuming the car.

So what happens when parent and child get into those common want-versus-need conflicts? The important thing to remember as a parent is to pick your battles, Townley said. "If the kid is baggy pants, and you have that, think about whether wearing them is important compared with things like mowcree curfew and making good grades."

Young people often express their independence through their appearance," Townley reminds. "So dying hair and piercing body parts aren't the big deal when you consider that they may be more important battles, and they suggest the parent to decide."

No one appointed to fill vacant board seat

By: Richard Anderkin

When the Rockcastle County Board of Education meets in regular monthly session on Tuesday night they will still be short one board member.

No one has been appointed to fill the unexpired term of former board chairman Debra Whitehead, who resigned in June because she is moving out of her district, according to Rockcastle County School Superintendent Larry Hammond.

Hammond said on Wednesday that only one person, Teresa Bowling, 29, of Orlando, has applied to fill Whitehead's unexpired term in division four and because she is the only applicant, state regulations require that the application date for potential applies for the seat, Mrs. Bowling will be interviewed by Kentucky's Commissioner of Education Wilmer S. Cody and in all likelihood will be appointed to the seat. Mrs. Bowling would then serve until January when the current term expires. "If Mrs. Bowling or anyone else that is interested wants to serve after January they must run in this fall general election," Hammond said.

Mrs. Bowling, who lives at Orlando with her husband Jeff and their 10-month-old daughter said that she intends to run for the seat this fall and will file the appropriate papers this week.

Incumbent board member Terry Burton has filed for re-election in division two and in division five, board member Doug Mullins has indicated that he will not run because he is also moving out of his district.

Burton is the only person to file in any of the school board races as of now.

Anyone else interested in the division four seat must be at least 24 years old, a citizen of Kentucky for the last three years, have a high school diploma or GED and not have any relatives employed by the school district. (Cont. to A12)

Tuesday is filing deadline for November's General Election

Rockcastle County Court Clerk Norma Houk announced this week that Tuesday, August 13 is the last day candidates can file for this fall's General Election.

Seats on the Rockcastle County School Board, and the city councils of Livingston, Brodhead and Mt. Vernon are up for grabs.

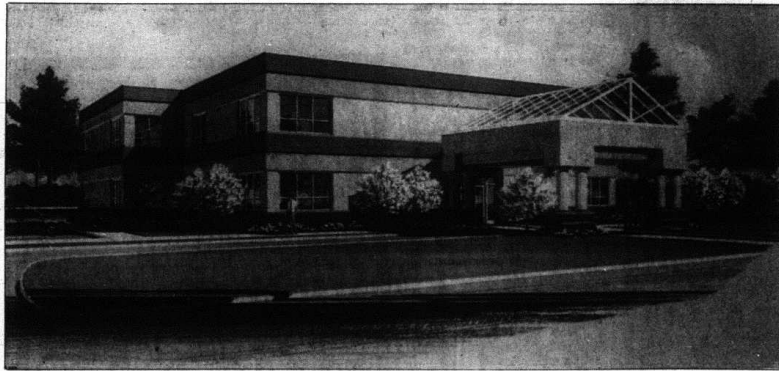

School board races in division two, Brown, West Brodhead and North Brodhead, division four, Climax and Orlando and division five, East Mt. Vernon, Conway and Roundstone, are all on November's ballot.

To be on the ballot a candidate for school board must have twenty signatures from registered voters in their district and pay a $20 fee. Potential city council members must have only two signatures from registered voters in their respective cities and also pay a $20 fee.

Carmichael asks feds to help in prosecution of church burnings

Ray Carmichael, Commonwealth Attorney for Rockcastle announced Monday that he has requested federal prosecution of all crimes relating to the burning of churches within Rockcastle County. Carmichael made the request to United States Attorney Joe Farnularo.

"With the rampant burning of so many churches in the South and with the recent destruction of a church in Rockcastle County last month, I believe we must respond swiftly and strongly against the responsible parties," Carmichael said. "The burning of churches is a particularly heinous crime because it strikes at our most fundamental liberty and lives," Carmichael said. Carmichael further noted, "Historically, churches serve as places of sanctuary, community gatherings and symbols of peace and tranquility." Carmichael has committed to the United States Justice Department his full support for prosecuting responsible arsonists and will coordinate his efforts with federal law enforcement officials.

As a result of state and federal coordination, an Emergency Response Plan has been developed by the Attorney General. Carmichael said he has been assisted by the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF) that the FBI and ATF will serve as lead investigators in church arson investigations. However, Carmichael urges all churches to take certain precautions to prevent or deter an arsonist from striking. The ATF suggests that the following churches are most vulnerable to arson:

- * Churches located in isolated or rural areas.
- * Churches left unattended for extended periods of time.
- * Churches with unsecured doors and/or uncovered windows.
- * Churches without burglar alarms.
- * Churches with heavy shrubs and outside vegetation and the absence of perimeter lighting.
- * Churches can take the following affirmative actions to reduce their vulnerability to arson by:
 - * Installing perimeter floodlights outside the building;
 - * Installing an adequate burglar alarm system;

- * Installing exterior doors with interior hinges to prevent an intruder from removing the door;
- * Trimming shrubs and vines to a height which minimizes concealment of windows and doors;
- * Asking neighbors to keep an eye on the church;
- * Finally the church should be checked daily.

Carmichael is forwarding a Church Threat Assessment Guide to all areas churches which contains additional information.

Interested churches can contact the Commonwealth Attorney by calling 606-677-4100.

Church fire at Burr still under investigation

Federal and state officials are still awaiting results of tests they conducted at the scene of a Rockcastle County church fire last week. Kentucky State Police Public Affairs Officer Gilbert Accardo, Jr., said Wednesday that it may be another week before a determination is made as to what caused the July 27th fire that completely destroyed the Lighthouse Assembly of God Church at Burr.

There has been much speculation as to the cause of the early morning blaze, one of three in Kentucky in the past two weeks. Church fires have also been rampant throughout the southern United States during the past year. In most of those instances, arson was the cause and officials believe that racism has been a factor.

However the Lighthouse Assembly of God Church has no African-American members in their congregation.

Besides the Kentucky State Police, agents from the Federal Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the state Fire Marshall's office are investigating the fire.

Financial assistance available to flood victims

An office has been set up in Stanford to receive requests by homeowners for help with flood damage.

The office will take care of residents in Rockcastle, Garrard and Lincoln Counties. The office is located in the Chamber of Commerce Building at 201 East Main Street. Persons wishing may call (606)365-4555.

The Counties received considerable flooding in June and the Brodhead area was hit hardest on July 19. As much as six inches of rain fell in the Brodhead area.

U.S. Harold "Hal" Rogers said the U.S. Small Business Administration has designated several counties as eligible for SBA disaster loans to families and businesses which have suffered property damages resulting from the severe flooding.

Resident of Rockcastle County may apply to the SBA for reduced-interest loans which can be used by businesses or homeowners to replace or repair damaged property. Businesses and small farm cooperatives may also apply for "economic injury" loans, which will help pay for their operations and expenses during a period of lost income.

"Through the efforts of SBA, families and businesses in need can get help recovering from the damages they suffered as a result of this month's severe flooding," said Rogers.

Applications for physical damage must be filed by the close of business on September 30, 1996. Economic injury applications can be filed until May 1, 1997.

Judge considering street paving ordinance

With the recent request from property owners in Benton Bullock Subdivision fresh on his mind, Rockcastle County Judge/Executive Buzz Carlolitis said this week that an ordinance may be in the future for the Rockcastle Fiscal court on streets in local subdivisions.

Judge Carlolitis said he is studying legislation that would require developers of land areas to put up a performance bond that will insure all subdivision streets are paved by the developer within one year of the sale of the first lot.

"I am seriously considering this legislation to determine if it protects us," the judge said.

He concluded, "the reason seems to indicate that it protects buyers of lots insuring that their property values do not fall."

He added also that it protects other tax payers who do not live in the subdivision from bearing the cost of paving for private developers.

He said in counties where a performance bond ordinance has been enacted, the county used bond money set up by the developer to take care of streets in the subdivision if the developer defaults on his obligation to prove the streets within one year.

The judge said, "if anyone develops a subdivision he should be will" (Cont. to A11)

Burdette asks Mt. Vernon council to pass law

By: Ray McClure
Rockcastle County Attorney Jeffrey Burdette came to the Mt. Vernon City Council Monday night, bringing a parental responsibility and curfew ordinance for the council to discuss.

After talking to the council, Mayor Gary R. Cromer told Burdette the council would talk it over and make a decision by the Sept. 9 meeting.

Burdette told the council to "mirror the county ordinance" namely, he said the council should include most of the county ordinance in the city ordinance.

He told the council something must be done to stop skyrocketing costs to the county to incarcerate juveniles.

He also said the city police could not enforce a curfew unless the council voted to do so. Otherwise, it would be left to the county (Sheriff) to enforce it.

Burdette handed the council the complete ordinance. The ordinance (Cont. to A11)

Points East

By: Ike Adams

Stranger things have happened, I suppose, but here's a partial listing of a few that I have found particularly intriguing over the last thirty days.

I've had three telephone calls in July from folks who want to know how the woolly worms feel about upcoming winter. One call was from a fellow journalist desperately trying to find something cold to write about in July. The other two were from regular people with way too much time on their hands.

I'm far too busy trying to keep the air conditioner working and the weeds out of my bean patch to take notice of woolly worms. Winter is still five months away and near the bottom of stuff I have to worry about.

But July has been strangely pleasant now that I think about it. Here on Fairview Ridge we've had a couple of nights when the temperature got down into the fifties and a blanket actually felt good at night. We've also had several day-time highs in the seventies and that comes close to qualifying for the proverbial "cold day in July" that most of us have heard our parents utter.

As in, "it'll be a cold day in July before you'll see me spending more than $10.00 on a pair of tennis shoes."

I heard that one at least once a week when I was growing up and Converse low-cuts were all the rage except they cost more than twenty bucks. Of course nowadays my kids want Nikes that cost nearly $200.00 and I tell them dead seriously that even if I hit a fifty million dollar Power Ball, hell would have to freeze over hard enough to skate on before I'd pay that much for a pair of sneakers.

But we're off the point again which is one of the things we love most about this column. The point frequently goes away immediately after the first paragraph.

I've had former English teachers from my college and high school days call me up to let me know that if I'd handed in the particular piece they'd just finished reading as a homework assignment, they would have written a big fat "F" on top of the paper.

Anyway, the point, as I recall had, something to do with strange things. The scroll mechanism on my computer has a glitch in it and it's a real pain in the kalootoo to go back and read what I've already written without printing it out. Your local paper does not pay me enough to get very serious about journalistic integrity, and as long as I don't get the editors in court, they don't care much about what kind of grades old teachers might give the column as long as it takes up space.

Here's another strange thing for you though, since we're already on the subject.

Loretta and our oldest daughter, Carol, who three and a half years ago had the audacity to turn us into grandparents, had a yard sale over the weekend. It's strange only because both Loretta and Carol have nearly everything they ever owned stashed away in huge stacks of boxes in the attics and garages of just about everybody they know.

Loretta and I hooked up over fifteen years ago and she has stuff boxed up that has not seen the light of day since we've been together.

Anyway, when I got Loretta, she brought three kids into the equation. Carol is the oldest, now her late twenties, and like her mother, probably has her pair of training pants boxed up somewhere.

The light at the end of this tunnel, however, is that they were more than willing to part with just about everything that Grandpa's favorite girl, Amber, has accumulated during her time on earth. Over the last 3 and a half years my grandbaby had amassed a wardrobe that consisted of at least one outfit for every week of her life along with assorted strollers, changing beds, car seats, cribs, squeeze toys and lots of other stuff you'd associate with babies. All of it on the block.

Our other two kids are in New Jersey on vacation with their grandparents and Loretta had tons of teenager stuff on the market. (Anybody that will go to New Jersey for vacation ought to come home to an empty room).

But most amazing to me was the fact that boxes of yard sale treasures they had accumulated at other yard sales over the years were selling like hot-cakes too.

Clocks and radios that didn't work when they were previously purchased off another lawn were being snatched right up. Cups and saucers, chipped dishes and Avon bottles.

If I could only get them to go to the attic and break out some of the good stuff, we might be able to get Loretta a decent car before winter sets. But that's still five months away and I really don't need to be worrying about it.

Report to Kentucky

SENATOR WENDELL FORD

U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510

PLAYING OUR CARDS RIGHT

Kentucky's Henry Clay was known for his great oratory and legislative skills, but apparently he was a bit of a card shark as well.

According to one story, a prim aristocratic woman once asked Henry Clay's wife, "Isn't it a pity your husband gambles so much?" Lucretia Clay replied, "Oh, I don't know. He usually wins."

Unfortunately the same can't be said for Congress' card playing on the budget lately: government shutdowns, state and local officials unable to make long-term plans, wasteful spending, and repetitive votes. With a hand like that I'm sure many Kentuckians wish Congress would just "fold em."

It's true that when it comes to making the hard decisions on deficit reduction, Congress and the country have to play with the hand they've been dealt. But we can change our strategy.

I believe that new strategy should be a two-year budget. I've been an advocate of the two-year budget since 1981 and just recently, I went before a Senate Governmental Affairs Subcommittee to promote the change in budget tactics.

Switching to a two-year budget cycle won't make the hard decisions necessary for real deficit reduction. But it will serve as a much needed management tool for work on the federal budget and deficit reduction. With last year's government shutdown and repeated missed deadlines, it's an idea whose time has clearly come.

Under a two-year budget, one session of Congress would be reserved specifically for oversight and authorizations, providing Congress with the time to enact responsible spending proposals before the adoption of a budget resolution and appropriations bill. Cutting down on the number of repetitive votes, but also save money by allowing recipients of federal funds -- from government agencies to state and local governments to private organizations -- to better plan and manage their funds.

A two-year budget also provides Congress with an opportunity to review spending decisions and to allow the executive branch to conduct compliance reviews.

Too often we hear that once a Federal program is created, it will be funded indefinitely. The two-year budget provides Congress with the time to review existing programs and determine whether they should be modified, expanded or repealed.

That kind of oversight can help prevent another Savings and Loan crisis, can target instances of waste and abuse, and in the end, save tax dollars.

Perhaps most important, the two-year budget is a tested idea. When I went before the very first joint hearings on budget reform in 1981, the two-year budget was a new notion here in Washington. But it was already standard practice in 22 states, including Kentucky.

When I was governor, two-year budgeting helped us to lay out a master plan for the entire state. And that master plan enabled agencies, local governments and constituency groups to do long-term planning. That planning led to greater efficiency, overall cost savings and equally important, peace of mind about future funding.

So while a two-year budget won't give us a new financial hand to play with, it could be just the new strategy Congress needs to play those cards right.

Renfro Valley's Appalachian Harvest Festival is October 4-6

Even with modern conveniences and labor-saving devices, life today can be hectic, strenuous and hurried. Imagine running a household where nearly everything worn, eaten and used was made with your own two hands. Most of us are far removed from that pioneering spirit that even imagining that lifestyle is impossible. And yet, it was this fiercely independent, amazingly creative, strikingly individualistic spirit that pioneered the advances of today. That is the spirit celebrated in Renfro Valley's Appalachian Harvest Festival.

Dream becomes reality as Brush Arbor construction begins

Nothing happens unless first a dream.
The purpose of Brush Arbor is a place to honor the memory of our pioneer ancestors.

Brush Arbor will be a peaceful and beautiful place where current and future generations can find a connection to those ancestors, but of whom they are descendants. It will be a place to gather... To fellowship... to renew old acquaintances and to make new ones. It will be a place of lodging, good home cooked southern meals, and reunions... a place for singing, picnics and worship. It will be a place where past and future generations can meet once again.

The vision of Brush Arbor began simply as the restacking and restoration of an old original log cabin built in the mid-1800's. The vision started over five years ago with the search of a genuine log home, built by our ancestors, on the land on which they toiled for their living.

The vision has now expanded to the creation of an entire pioneer village consisting of several old restored log cabins, shops, a general store, a school, a church, Blacksmith shop and an old fashioned boarding house.

Groundbreaking Ceremony Saturday, Aug. 10 Renfro Valley

We found an original log home. It was built in the mid-1800's in Jackson County, Kentucky. It's value and worth were enhanced because of living ancestors now in their 90's, who spent many happy and memorable hours in the old home as grandchildren. Liza Jane and Hazel have been able to furnish us with much of its history which will aid us greatly in its restoration.

Secondly, we searched for the appropriate land on which to rebuild it. We searched for over three years in Kentucky, Ohio and Tennessee for the land which would have woods, a stream, beautiful bottom land pasture, with hills for views. It had to be in the right spot. We found it. Renfro Valley is the place! We have fences... a pond, two springs, and even a waterfall, on 28 acres within walking distance of Renfro Valley...Country Music Capital!

God has answered our prayers and is continuing to provide the way and the means for this very personal project.

Brush Arbor, a place where memories meet. Memories of the past fondly recalled... and where new memories are made.

The Story of Brush Arbor
Simon Kenton led the first settlers down the Ohio River and into the rich cane fields of what the Indians called "Can-Tuc-Ke". Daniel Boone led the first settlers across the Appalachia Mountains through the Clayport Gap in the summer of 1773. Boone's group of settlers remained a short six months before hardship sent them back to the Carolinas. Three years later, Boone led another group through the gap and founded the first permanent settlement west of the mountains.

Simon Kenton remained in the Northern part of Kentucky, Southern Ohio and the Eastern Indiana territory, hunting, trapping and fighting Indians. Kenton made frequent trips to Central Kentucky to Booneboro and Harrodsburg to visit his life-long friend Daniel Boone. Historians write that on one of Kenton's trips, he saved Daniel Boone's life.

The story of Brush Arbor in Renfro Valley begins here.
The year of 1700's was the middle. Kenton and Boone were leading those early settlers into the bluegrass region. Kentucky was at that time still a part of Virginia.

One section of the reconstructed log home, now known as Brush Arbor, was originally built in about 1840 by James Pennington. The original cabin was located on Maulden Road and between Branch City and the South-Center border of Jackson County and Clay County lines.

Research has shown that James Pennington and John L. Montgomery founded the original Baptist Church near the original log home in the year of 1845. James Pennington's name appears first on the original charter, and John L. Montgomery's signature appears second on the same document. Speculation has it that since John L. Montgomery and James Pennington were the first two charter members of Baptist Church, it stands to reason that not only were they friends, but that John L. Montgomery probably assisted James Pennington in the building of this original cabin.

Present family members of James Pennington have traced their heritage back as far as England to the 1500's.

Present descendants of John L. Montgomery, who are the restorers and re-builders of the James Pennington Cabin, now known as Brush Arbor, have traced their heritage as direct descendants of Mark Kenton, the father of Simon Kenton, Kentucky's original pioneer.

John L. Montgomery married Sarah Raines in the year 1823. Sarah Raines was the daughter of Martha Kenton, who was a sister of Simon Kenton.

John L. Montgomery had 11 children, one of which was Fred Montgomery. Fred Montgomery married Rachel Wilson in the year 1845. They had 12 children, the next to the youngest was Stella Montgomery, who married James Wilson Davis in the year 1920. Stella Montgomery Davis had four children, one of which was Charlotte Jane Davis.

Charlotte Jane Davis married Robert Hayes, who is a sixth generation descendant of Patrick and Amelia Hayes who arrived in this country from Ireland in the year of 1786, settling in Rock Hill, South Carolina.

Robert and Charlotte Jane Hayes had three sons, one of which is Jerry L. Hayes, who is the restorer and re-builder of the James Pennington Cabin, reconstructed on a 28 acre farm in Renfro Valley, Kentucky. The 28 acre farm was purchased in 1996 from Doug and Janice Mullins. Doug Mullins' great uncle was John Lair, the founder of the world famous Renfro Valley. The farm and reconstructed cabin are now called Brush Arbor.

Jerry L. Hayes is a 7th generation descendant of Patrick and Amelia Hayes on his father's side and is the 7th generation of Mark Kenton, the father of Kentucky's original pioneer, Simon Kenton, on his mother's side.

Although the Hayes genealogy does not have the notoriety of Simon Kenton and Daniel Boone, the Hayes family was the original family who settled what is now known as Jackson County, in the 1840's.

Recent stories in the Kentucky Explorer Magazine give a historical overview of Simon Kenton's years, but also about the "hanging" in Knox County, which resulted in Bobby Hayes, the 3rd generation of Patrick and Amelia Hayes from the Cumberland Gap area, to settle what is today known as Jackson County, the neighboring county of Renfro Valley.

Bobby Hayes' father, Alexander Hayes, who was the son of Patrick and Amelia Hayes, arrived and settled in Knox County, from Rock Hill, South Carolina, in the year 1812. Alexander Hayes built an L-shaped, two story log home in Artemus, Kentucky, at the exact place where Stinking Creek empties into the Cumberland River, near what is today known as Barbourville.

Alexander Hayes owned 1200 acres of prime and scenic land. In addition to farming, his two story log house served as a boarding place and tavern for early settlers coming through the Cumberland Gap; stage coaches and eventually Confederate and Union forces during the Civil War. Alexander Hayes, his wife, and several of their descendants are buried at the top of a mountain overlooking the site where his cabin once stood where Stinking Creek meets the Cumberland River.

The Alexander Hayes Family Cemetery existed virtually unknown for over 150 years until recently discovered by Wayne Hayes and a nephew, David Hayes in 1992. As a result of over 20 years of painstaking research, travel, court house visits, and correspondence, Wayne Hayes has documented over 6,000 descendants of Patrick and Amelia Hayes.

Beginning in June of 1997, many of the descendants of Simon Kenton, John L. Montgomery, James Pennington and Patrick and Amelia Hayes will hold their annual family reunions at the reconstructed log home now known as Brush Arbor, located at Renfro Valley.

It is interesting to note that the architect and project manager of Brush Arbor, Bob Leytze, is married to the former Mabel Montgomery, the great granddaughter of John L. Montgomery and Sarah Raines, who is a direct descendant of Mark Kenton, Simon Kenton's father.

Emery Montgomery, also the great grandson of John L. Montgomery whom we feel had a hand in assisting in the construction of the original James A. Pennington log home, and also a direct descendant of the Kenton family, is going to oversee the actual re-construction of the original cabin.

School Has Started. Watch Out For Our Children.

BE ALERT TO VISUAL CUES: Watch for school zone signs, cross walks, school crossing guards, buses, and kids walking along the roadway. Around parked cars, watch for shadows and motion-signs that a child may be present.

SLOW DOWN: At only 20 mph, a car travels 41 feet between the time you see a child and actually stop. If you're sleepy or distracted, reaction time and stopping distances increase. Worn tires and wet pavement have a similar effect.

ALLOW YOURSELF TIME TO REACT: On two-lane streets, move as close to the center line as possible, allowing room for bicyclists and pedestrians. As mornings become darker this fall, drive with your headlights on so that you can see and also be seen.

USE YOUR HORN JUDICIOUSLY: A light touch is all that's really necessary, whereas a blast might scare a child.

USE CAUTION AROUND BUSES: Motorists are required to stop for loading/unloading buses and remain stopped as long as the bus has its red lights flashing and stop sign extended. However, drivers on multi-lane highways (more than 4 lanes) need not stop for loading/unloading school buses traveling in the OPPOSITE direction. Keep in mind that buses require extra room for turning at intersections.

BE PATIENT, PARTICULARLY ON THE WAY HOME: Risk of accidents is FOUR times greater in the afternoon - due to human psychology. Drivers are less alert and are irritable after a long day at the office. Kids, however, are excited to be out of school. As frustrating as it may be, keep your temper. Being two minutes late for dinner won't kill you or anyone else. Rushing just might.

"IT IS WRITTEN"

In Mt. 16:13-19 we read of a very important discussion that Jesus had with his disciples. Jesus asked, "Whom do men say that I the son of man am?" And the disciples answered, "Some say that thou art John the Baptist; some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets." Men had all kinds of responses and reactions about who Jesus was. But then Jesus asked the disciples, "But whom say ye that I am?" Simon Peter speaks up, (and no doubt the other disciples believed the same) "Thou art the Christ, the son of the Living God." In this confession, Peter is acknowledging the divinity of the Lord Jesus. Jesus responds that flesh and blood-human wisdom, had not revealed this great truth, but my Father which is in heaven had.

"And Jesus makes a bold promise in vs. 18, "And I say unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." When Jesus makes the promise to build his church, it would be built upon this rock. It was not Peter that the church was built upon (as our Catholic friends claim) but upon the truth of Peter's confession, "Thou art the Christ, the son of the Living God." If Jesus was a mere man who lived and died and remained in the grave, his promise would be empty, void and vain. The gates of hell, (hades N.A.S.), would not stop Jesus from building his church, for Jesus died and would not stop his plans to build his church. Jesus arose from the dead and began the establishment of his church in Ac. 2, the day of Pentecost, which was 50 days after his resurrection! The church did not begin in the days of John the Baptist, as a lady tried to tell me once. When Jesus promised to build his church here in Mt. 16:18, (which is the first time the words used in the Bible), John the Baptist was already dead, Herod had had him beheaded, Mt. 14:1-10, thus how could the church have been in existence in John's day? No the church we read about in the Bible began on the day of Pentecost in Ac. 2, any other time would be wrong. We invite you to learn more about the church that Jesus built, let us know if we can help.

Arbor Day

Old Brush Arbors by the side of the road.
Where the sinner could lay down his heavy load.
It was in those old Brush Arbors.
Troubled souls found peaceful harbors.
Old Brush Arbors by the side of the road.

Many times I have departed.
From the way of life I started.
In an arbor by the side of the road.
But each time the devil called me.
I remember what they taught me.
In Brush Arbors by the side of the road.

Old Brush Arbors by the side of the road.
Where the Mighty Light of God's Great Mercy glows,

There was prayin', shoutin', singin'.
In the countryside was ringin'.
In Brush Arbors by the side of the road.
In Old Brush Arbors by the side of the road.

Harvest Festival

For three days, October 4 through 6, Renfro Valley shines the spotlight on the musicians, artists and craftspeople for whom making-do and making-it-yourself was a way of life. In a pleasant grove, surrounded by tree-covered foothills and bordered by clear country streams, visitors will witness and experience the skills necessary for life in rural Kentucky some fifty years ago.

Antique farm machinery, often relying as much on muscle as on mechanics, provides silent witness to the days of the family farm. Nearby, a multiplex of patiences in circles, pulling an authentic molasses mill. The mill is grinding cane stalks which are boiled in great cauldrons over open wood fires. As the sweet perfume of the boiling cane fills the air, molasses is being created. Molasses—lasses as it is known locally—which will line shelves and pantries of country kitchens, awaiting rebirth in breads and cakes, cookies and candies, and as a treasured topping to biscuits, pancakes and waffles.

Many of those southern-cooking staples will find their beginning in stone-ground cornmeal, ground fresh daily in Renfro Valley's Gristmill. The Gristmill, in keeping with the pioneer spirit celebrated in this annual festival, gets its power from a giant water wheel churning melodically in Renfro Valley's rustic Mill Pond. Demonstrations of pork-rinds cooked over an open fire, and displays of Kentucky-made food items (jams, jellies, herbs, sauces, etc.) provide an accurate view and fresh taste of early kitchen life. Rope making, broom making and wood-working will be on display. Hand-stitched quilts will be shown throughout the festival, and the art will be demonstrated on the grounds. Native American Art and beading, another traditional art, will also be demonstrated. Hats shaped by steam, a village cooper, pine needle weaving, spinning wool and a covered wagon train will be some of the other features.

Other examples of rural workmanship, created for practicality and now treasured for their artistry, are the furniture, candles and pottery being created on the festival grounds. Limber limbs of willow and oak are fashioned into chairs, porch swings, plant stands and baskets by craftspeople using decades-old techniques. Beeswax candles, once a necessity in pre-electric homes are now coveted items of country decor. Visitors to the Appalachian Harvest Festival will see these candles being made and learn the secrets of their colorful incandescence. Visitors will also see lumps of native Kentucky clay transformed into decorative and useful bowls, pitchers and candle sticks. In keeping with the spirit of the festival, the pottery will be turned on a wheel powered by foot pedals. Many of the skills demonstrated at Renfro Valley's Appalachian Harvest Festival were developed out of necessity. Those skills provided the foods and goods that rural Kentuckians depended upon in everyday life. It is the artistry and creativity which those skills are used that exemplifies the spirit of our hearty ancestors.

That spirit is celebrated no more heartily than from the wooden stage at the heart of the festival grounds. Throughout the harvest celebration, live music is performed from that stage. Country, bluegrass, mountain and gospel music—the kind of music heard in the living rooms and front porches of Kentucky homes—is joyously re-created by Renfro Valley entertainers and their special guests. It is fitting that this celebration is staged at Renfro Valley. For 57 years, Renfro Valley has celebrated wholesome family entertainment with music and laughter in its weekly live shows, concerts, special events and festivals.

Party platforms making comebacks in campaigns

Penny Miller noticed a change in American politics after November 8, 1994. Republicans were celebrating victories, and Democrats were surveying the wreckage of massive losses that cost them their 40-year congressional majority.

"The Democrats didn't think the Republican's 'Contract with America' was going to work. It turned out to be really successful in winning that Congress for the Republicans," said Miller, a political science professor at the University of Kentucky.

The Contract with America amounted to a political platform for congressional candidates, a new wrinkle in U.S. politics. This year, Miller said, congressional Democrats have already released "Families First," their version of the GOP's "Contract," signing a new emphasis on political platforms.

In fact, media pundits have been focusing on the platforms of the national Republican and Democratic parties since early summer, particularly on efforts by GOP moderates to soften wording of their party's long-held stance opposing legal abortion. Some media critics say the attention results from a need by political reporters to find interesting news in a political campaign where both major parties nominees have long been decided.

But Miller said the parties' platform debates have attained an importance beyond providing drama for the television cameras. "There's a real difference this time between the parties. The platforms are a blueprint for what the parties stand for," she said.

In that regard, the parties' platform are regaining a status they had first assumed when they were introduced into American politics.

Don Gross, also a UK political science professor, said national politics professor, said national politics

"Party Platform"

ticians introduced the first platform at the Democratic Party's 1840 convention. Actually, he said, political conventions themselves were fairly young when platforms were created.

"The first national political convention was held in 1831, when the Anti-Masons met in a saloon in Baltimore," Gross said.

The next year, a presidential election year, the Jacksonian Democrats convened their own national gathering in Baltimore, he said.

The conventions developed in the wake of concern by politicians that the selection of presidential candidates had been controlled by a wealthy and powerful elite. National conventions provided a means to increase participation in nominating the candidates, Gross said.

"Adding the platform was very much designed to facilitate the election of their candidate," Gross said. The platform originally spelled out the issues that the party—and the candidate—felt was the proper focus for the government.

But over the years, the platform took on an added dimension by providing a means to unite all party factions behind the nominee.

"The tradition has been for the winning candidate to be gracious to his rivals; Let them speak at the convention, and give them some say in writing a platform, as long as it doesn't hurt or embarrass the nominee," Gross said.

Sometimes, though, the tradition has been violated—with disastrous effects. "An example of what you don't do is 1980, when Sen. Edward Kennedy challenged President Carter for the Democratic nomination. Carter's people refused to give anything to Kennedy in the platform committee. It led to a very nasty floor fight," Gross said.

Carter then lost to Ronald Reagan in the fall election.

In the intervening 16 years, Gross said, "New strategies have changed platforms and how they're developed."

The Democrats and Republicans now hire highly paid consultants and organize "focus groups"—panels of Americans from different ethnic backgrounds and income levels—to identify issues that attract voter support.

Gross sees value in these techniques. "Parties ought to be mirrors of the public, because that's what democracy's all about," he said.

graphic factors were looked at as well.

Female athletes' scores on the competitiveness index and on the competitiveness, avoiding and accommodation scales of the Thomas-Kilmann Conflict Mode Instrument were nearly identified to male non-athletes. "The rather predictable male/female differences among non-athletes disappear when you compare male non-athletes to female athletes," Weiner said.

The researchers are quick to point out the results are not meant to encourage stereotyping of women and women athletes. "We're not saying that athletics masculinizes females," Remer said. "We just found that female athletes have some conflict resolution characteristics that are similar to males." Other results include:

—Male UK varsity athletes have a more competitive, authoritative

Female athletes more competitive than non-athletes

Female athletes are more competitive and use avoidance to settle conflicts less often than females who don't participate in sports, according to a study by University of Kentucky College of Education researchers.

Andrew Weiner, associate professor of educational and health promotion, and Rory Remer and Fred Danner, professors of educational and counseling psychology, asked 167 randomly selected UK students, about half of whom were varsity athletes from a variety of sports, to answer questions designed to determine their conflict resolution styles.

They classified the students by their self-reported styles on the Thomas-Kilmann Conflict Mode Instrument. Possible styles included competitiveness, accommodating, negotiating, avoiding and collaborating. Style was compared to scores on a competitiveness index. Democompetitive athletes, possibly because they compete against their teammates.

The study looked only at the phenomenon — not its causes. It also is limited in that it doesn't attempt to determine if people with those character traits choose sports, or if sports encourages the development of such traits, the researchers said.

"We observed certain interesting correlations, but as for causality, we can't say," Weiner said. "We can't conclude that athletics masculinizes females any more than we can say that more masculine females choose athletics."

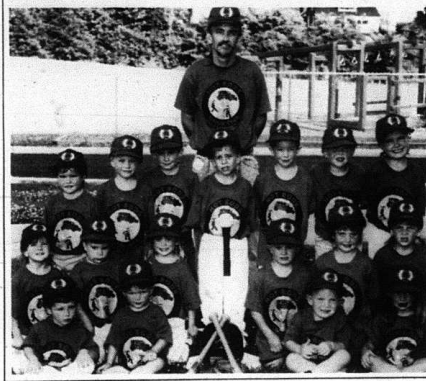

The results have provoked the researchers' interest in further study of the issue, and they are considering expanding their research to a national sample.

"Paving Ordinance"

ing to pick up money to take care of the streets.

Such an ordinance would have to go to the fiscal court for approval.

"I'm looking at it," the judge concluded, "it won't come up the next meeting. But it's something to think about."

"City Council"

was in a July issue of the Signal. Burdette has not been to the Broadhead and Livingston councils to discuss the ordinance.

The city agreed to re-bid a sewer project that originally had two bidders and came in well over the estimated cost of the project.

The area involved includes Jeri-Lane and Rockcastle County High School, the new Industrial Park and some homes on Hunter Street.

The two bids were for $1,051,901 and $1,454,553.

Officials from Nesbitt Engineering of Lexington came to the council to discuss the city's proposed $4.5 million water plant renovation and upgrading.

Under the plan, the plant, which now produces 1.7 million gallons of water a day, will produce 4 million gallons a day when completed.

The project calls for more distribution lines and a 400,000 gallon water tank in North Mt. Vernon.

Paul Nesbitt told the council they would reuse all the facilities at the plant in one form or another, and replace obsolete equipment.

He said the engineers would visit the council from time to time to update the project. Booker and Associates, a Lexington firm, informed the council it has applied to the Appalachian Regional Commission for the $10,000 available for a study of revitalization of Mt. Vernon and would present a package to the city to look at and discuss, including community activities.

July 15 was the deadline to apply for the funds, so Booker compiled and made the application. However, it would eventually be up to the council to decide which projects would be included.

The Mt. Vernon Police Department report July was read by Assistant Chief Eddie Delaney and showed:

Citations issued 71; total charges, 142; DUI arrests, 19; calls for service, 409; accidents, 19; other agency assists; 91; motorists assists; 5; criminal cases opened, 12.

The Mt. Vernon Volunteer Fire Department made 20 runs in July.

Break-in

Thieves broke into Bradley's Barber Shop on School Street in Mt. Vernon last week.

According to Assistant Chief Eddie Delaney the thieves broke out a back window then broke through an interior wall.

Numerous hair care products were taken as well as a barber's clippers and scissors.

Everyone can do something for those who can do nothing but wait for our help.

The Kentucky Animal Control Association, Kentucky veterinarians and several Kentucky Kennel Clubs have joined forces to introduce legislation to The General Assembly to create The Animal Control and Care Fund in the State Treasury. This fund would be supported by a surtax of 1.75% on all cat and dog food sold in Kentucky. The purpose would be to develop and sustain animal control and care, programs in all counties of the Commonwealth.

U.S. SENATOR FOR KENTUCKY

Mitch McConnell

PREPARING OUR STUDENTS FOR THE FUTURE

I began my career as a summer intern for the legendary U.S. Senator John Sherman Cooper nearly three decades ago. This experience not only contributed to my future political aspirations, but also gave me a firsthand look at the federal legislative process. Many Kentucky college students are interested in politics and are looking for the same opportunity to experience the day to day work of Congress. Now here's your chance! I am offering an opportunity to college students from Kentucky through an internship program in my Washington, D.C. and state offices.

Three kinds of internships are available in my Washington office: legislative, press, and administrative. Legislative interns assist staff members in drafting responses to constituent requests, researching legislation, and tracking bills through the congressional process. Press interns work with the press office in writing and distributing press releases, maintaining media records, and assisting at press conferences and interviews. An administrative intern's responsibilities include drafting brochures, writing letters, and greeting constituents.

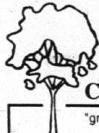

While my Washington interns have substantial responsibilities within the office, they are also given the opportunity to attend speeches, seminars, and workshops to further enhance their knowledge of the federal government. Recent interns attended speeches by other U.S. Senators, including Majority Leader Bob Dole, and Kentuckians currently working in Washington. White House tours, Pentagon briefings, and tours of the FBI Building and State Department are also scheduled for interns, and they are encouraged to attend committee hearings and visit the Senate Gallery.

In our state offices, interns assist the staffs of my Louisville, Lexington, Bowling Green, Paducah, Fort Wright, and London offices. In this capacity, students become familiar with the responsibilities of field representatives, answer constituent requests, assist in casework and perform administrative tasks. The state internships provide students with a different perspective of the legislative process, and allow them to work more closely with my constituents.

To apply for an internship, students must be in college and live in Kentucky. Four month internships are offered in the fall and spring; summer internships are completed in two six-week terms. Students in all academic programs are encouraged to apply.

The opportunity to serve as an intern for the U.S. Senate allows students to apply the knowledge gained and skills learned in the classroom to the workplace. I look forward to welcoming new students to my office each semester, and hope the students across the state will continue to take advantage of this learning experience.

For more information, call or write the Intern Coordinator at 361A Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C. 20510, (202) 224-2541.
