

"Trip"

the road to get us a place to stay the night. Next thing we know, they have contacted the National Guard Army in the town of Scott's Bluff, and arranged for us to have showers and a place to sleep in the Armory. Since it's been a couple of days since a hot shower, how can we refuse. After being presented a short talk and slide show on the Oregon Trail, we left to walk a short section of the trail which travels along the bluff. Some of the kids are really interested, but none more than Jenny. Add this to all the places we'll be back to visit.

At the Armory we got cleaned up and ordered Dominos Pizza, before turning off the lights and sleeping under a roof for the first time since leaving Rockcastle.

Day 17, After getting up this morning we are greeted by our host, First Sergeant Mike Macsuta. This unit has the only officially recognized re-enactment unit in the National Guard. He takes all of us out to the motor pool and gives us a short class on the Napoleon Cannon from the Civil War which his outfit rebuilt and show around the country. Complete with uniforms and equipment from the early 1880s, to include the mules which pull the cannon.

A short time after starting out today, we stop at Chimney Rock National Monument. It's early to the visitors center is not open yet. Some of the kids, and Jenny of course, really like it. But most of us are disappointed. I thought it would be a lot bigger.

Next stop, Cabelas. The largest sporting goods store I've ever seen. I think some of the boys could stay here all day, but we've got to get down the road. The last point of interest scheduled is an original Pony Express Station we stop at in Gothenburg, Nebraska.

We stop at Mormon Island State Park just outside of Grand Island, Nebraska, to spend the night. The kids celebrate Adrian Isaacs' 15th birthday with cake, but most of them end up wearing the cake instead of eating it. Afterwards they play in the lake till most of them look like prunes. The only trouble is the catfish which keep biting them.

Day 18, Long day today. We stop for the night in Scott Air Force Base, Illinois, where we set up in the Fancamp. Nice place, but hot, humid and noisy from the trucks on the highway.

Day 19, Last day of the trip. I can't believe Jenny and I don't want it to end. For the last couple of days we've both been considering stuffing a couple of the kids in the storage compartments or mailing them home by UPS. Now, we don't want the trip to end. Even though there were one or two tense moments, nobody will ever believe how good this entire group has been. The places we've seen and the things we have all learned could never be done in a classroom. I hope the kids realize what a unique opportunity they have been given by the Rockcastle County School System and the community which supported this trip so completely.

Upon arriving at RCHS we were met by Mr. Cash and a huge crowd of parents, family members and friends of the returning students. Our daughter, Tami looked lost as she stepped off the bus with all her friends receiving hugs all around, so Jenny and I hugged her too and welcomed her home.

All the students home safe. Every educational goal exceeded. It couldn't have been a better or more successful trip.

The Corps of Discovery '98 would like to express our deepest appreciation to the following individuals and businesses in and out of the county, for without their support whether it was donations of food or equipment or encouragement and prayers this trip would not have been a success. We Thank You!

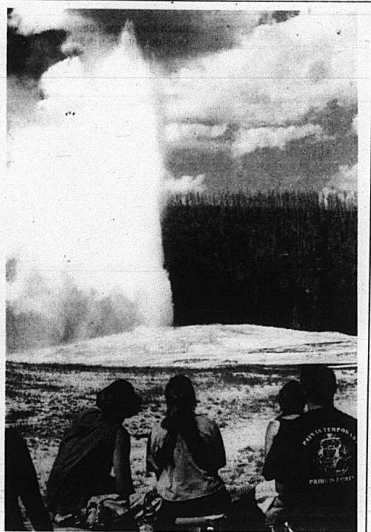

Mr. Ronnie Cash, Mr. Larry Hammond, Rockcastle County Board of Education, The Parents & Families of the Corps of Discovery, Les & Betty Taylor, Mrs. Iris Young, Mr. Glen Vanwinkle, Mrs. Polly Abney, Ms. Dawn Quigley, Mrs. Jean Albright, Pepsi Cola Bottling Co., Tom's Chips, Taylor Produce, Save-A-Lot of Mt. Vernon, Mr. Terry Lawson, Save-A-Lot of Stanford, Wal-Mart of Berea, Rite-Aid and the Churches of our community.

The Family Room

By Dr. Don Whitehead

You Know You've Past Forty When...

Sometimes age creeps up on us. While we are oblivious to what is happening, we can pass the age of forty and never notice. To save you from this fate, here are some surefire ways to tell if you are forty or older. You know you've past forty when...

- the only thing you take out on Saturday night is the trash.
- you go to parties where the main topic of conversation are cholesterol and constipation.
- you find yourself sounding like your father (or mother).
- your children frequently ask, "Are you feeling O.K., Dad?"
- you can see more of your scalp now than when you were a newborn.
- you can see more of your stomach now than you could ten years ago.
- the choice between going out and staying home and napping on the couch becomes more and more difficult.
- you attend your class reunion and everyone looks to be over forty.
- your political views become more and more like your parents' were.
- you wish that you had started saving for retirement when you were 15.
- you don't care as much as you once did about what other people think of how you dress, walk, talk or spend your time.
- you realize that your parents did the best they could.
- you realize that your parents were not perfect.
- your spouses' imperfections don't bother you nearly as much as they once did.
- your own imperfections are easier to take as well.
- you begin to yearn for more of a balance between work and play in your life.
- you tell stories that begin "Back when I was a kid..."
- people leave the room when you start one of those stories.
- your eyes, ears and memory all begin to go at once.
- you point out to nearly everyone (whether they want to know or not) the buildings that were not there twenty years ago.
- a nap on the couch becomes the highlight of your week.
- you frequently do not answer the phone because it might be someone wanting you to do something.
- you realize that almost all major league baseball players are younger than you are.
- the headlines in the paper are the same ones that were there twenty years ago. Only the names have changed.
- when you and your spouse argue over what year something happened. "I know it was 1964. Your memory is failing!"
- when life becomes less about doing and more about being.

Happy 40th Birthday!

Brodhead man injured in wreck

Joe Mink, 24, of Brodhead was injured when his Dodge Shadow flipped at least three times Wednesday morning on Hwy. 1505 at Brindle Ridge.

Rockcastle County Deputy Sheriff Darrell Doan said Mink was thrown from the car after he lost control near Happy Jack Church. Mink was treated at Rockcastle Hospital for head trauma.

Items stolen

Sherry Asher, 42, of Level Green reported to police that someone entered her barn during the day Monday and stole $1,400 worth of saddles.

Chris Jones, 27, of Rt. 3 Mt. Vernon, reported that someone stole aluminum coils, a floor light and a disc grinder from a building site on Roy McCollum Road Tuesday. The items were valued at $400.

Donnie Edwards, 45, of Hwy. 70, reported that someone entered his home through a window last Thursday and stole a handgun and holster.

Coy Taylor, 42, of Hwy. 70, reported that a welder was stolen from his barn on Hwy. 70 during the day Tuesday.

The Rockcastle County Sheriff's office is investigating the thefts.

Truck stolen from Burr man

Some thefts are more courteous than others.

At least that is what Terry Norton, 42, of Hwy. 25 Loop Burr found out last week.

It seems that someone left a 1991 GMC Jimmy in front of his house around 5 a.m. Thursday morning. The vehicle was even running when they left it.

But, it was stolen from Laurel County and the thefts also made off with Norton's 1993 GMC Pickup. Norton's pick-up was later recovered in Laurel County. It had been partially stripped.

Livingston man dies in wreck

Rockcastle County Coroner Bill Dowell, Deputy Sheriff Charles Gray, Livingston firefighter John Kubh and Mt. Vernon firefighter Brian Hansel prepare to remove the body of Eddie Lewis, 48, of Livingston, who was apparently killed in a single-car accident sometime in the last few days. The wreckage of Lewis' car was found Tuesday afternoon off Hwy. 490 by a Sand Hill man.

Wreckage found off Hwy. 490 Tuesday

A Livingston man was found dead Tuesday afternoon in a wooded area along Hwy. 490.

Rockcastle County Deputy Sheriff Darrell Doan said that Eddie Lewis, 48, was discovered around 2 p.m. by Ronnie Johnson of Sand Hill.

Doan said that Johnson was riding a motorbike in the area when something fell off his bike and he stopped to fix it.

Doan said that when Johnson stopped he spotted Lewis' car over an embankment about 40 feet from the roadway.

Doan said that Lewis apparently lost control of his 1994 Oldsmobile as he traveled toward Livingston at an apparent high rate of speed.

The deputy Sheriff said that family members said they had not seen Lewis since Sunday and that the wreckage could have been there since then.

Rockcastle County Coroner Bill Dowell ordered an autopsy on Lewis' body, but said that he did not think Lewis had been dead over 24 hours when the wreckage was found.

Funeral services for Lewis will be held Friday at the Pine Hill Holiness Church at 2 p.m. Burial will follow in the Lear Cemetery in Jackson County. A complete obituary will appear in next week's Signal.

Circuit Clerk Denver Miller set to retire

Vanzant, Lovell to run in fall

Rockcastle County Circuit Court Clerk Denver Miller is retiring after 16 years in that capacity. Miller's last day on the job will be Friday.

Miller, 62, was elected to the office in 1981, 1987 and 1993. His current term runs through the year 2000.

Jennifer Chandler, a spokesman for the Administrative Office Courts, which oversees the clerk's operations in the state said Wednesday that Chief Circuit Judge Dan Venters would appoint Teresa Vanzant to fill Miller's term until the November General Election.

But before that can officially happen, Vanzant, who is chief deputy in Miller's office and his daughter, will have to pass the official test for circuit clerk. That test will be given to Vanzant on Monday in Louisville.

Vanzant, a republican, will then serve until the November 3rd general election.

Chandler said that Vanzant, 36, of Orlando, will probably face Demo-

Few candidates file as deadline nears for election

With the filing deadline for the fall general election just 12 days away, little interest has been shown in the cities of Mt. Vernon and Brodhead and only two candidates have filed for school board.

However in the county's smallest town, interest in who holds office is at an all-time high.

In Livingston, three candidates have filed for Mayor and four for council.

Incumbent Mayor Sandra Tyree, 33, who was appointed this Spring by the council to fill the unexpired term of Ed Lille, has opposition from J.C. "Raymond" Griffin, 51, and Elmon "Dean" Jones, 43.

Incumbent council members, Aleda Bond, 54, Todd Mink, 74 and Katha Carpenter, 56, have filed for re-election. Paul Owens, 63, has also filed.

In Mt. Vernon, only incumbent council member Wayne Bullock, 41 has filed for a council seat.

Incumbent Mayor Gary R. Cromer, 51, has filed for re-election and faces opposition from councilmember Karen King, 45.

No one has filed for any city office in Brodhead as of yet.

In division three school board, incumbent board chairman Dr. Billy George Griffith, 51, of Mt. Vernon, has filed for re-election. No one else has filed. Division three school board consists of the precincts of North Mt. Vernon, West Mt. Vernon, and Bullock.

In division four school board, incumbent Martin Vanzant, 57, of Orlando has filed re-election. No one else has filed. Division four school board consists of Orlando and Clifton.

Clements to address local school personnel district day

On August 5, 1998, Dr. Zacharie Clements will address the Rockcastle County Schools at the RCHS Auditorium. As guest speaker for dinner day, Dr. Clements will share from his experiences how humble roots and difficult beginnings can be overcome with a dream, hard work, sense of humor, and supportive people.

Zach began life as an orphan raised by immigrant Italian grandparents in difficult social-economic circumstances. The road to his future was littered with obstacles: poor performance in his early schooling, trouble with the law, and the lure of easy money from the rackets that flourished openly in his neighborhood. But Zach's own indomitable drive to succeed was bolstered by the love of his devoted grandmother, the old-world values of his grandfather and the dedicated efforts of his public school teachers and administrators. They started him on his way to becoming a premier platform personality, educator and author.

Currently president of Inner Management, Inc., Zach Clements has been on the speaking circuit for more than 25 years, sharing platforms with innumerable celebrities including Bob Hope, Henry Kissinger, Mike Wallace, President Gerald Ford, Jesse Jackson, Pierre Elliot Trudeau, and Barbara Walters. His vivid, inspirational portraits of life have brought audiences to laughter, tears, and renewal, time and time again. Once you have heard this gifted person, it is easy to understand why the New York Times described him as a "blend of philosopher John Dewey, evangelist Billy Graham and comedian Bill Cosby."

According to Larry B. Hammond, Superintendent of Schools, "by working together as educators, parents, and community members, we can provide every Rockcastle County student a dream and the potential to realize their dreams."

First day for students is August 12th

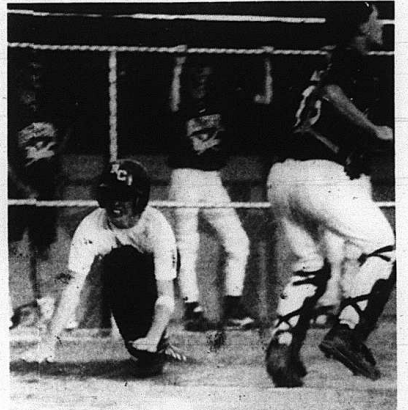

Dr. Zacharie Clements will speak to school personnel district day.

Road closed for work on bridge

The Merritt Cemetery Road at Wildie will be closed at 8 a.m. Thursday morning for work on the low water bridge.

The road will be closed until further notice, according to the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet.

Center fielder Billy Hackworth slides head first into home to score one of the nine runs for the 14- and 15-year-old Rockcastle All-Stars in their 9 to 8 victory Saturday. The All-Stars have advanced to the championship game of the state tournament but must defeat Louisville Valley twice to claim the championship. See other photos and story on pg. A14.

HERESAY

Precious souls, children of an evil age, greetings and genitrics from the sunny Dell of Wabd, where yours truly is caught up with thoughts about suffering, which can be physical, mental, or both. And with the help of a fellow philosopher named Christian, I like to use the space allotted me today to talk about the Law of Pathei Mathos, which, according to Aeschylus, was laid down by Zeus. The Greek tragedian said Zeus taught men to read and declared that wisdom came alone through suffering.

Pumpkin. Said Charlie, "In all the world there is nothing more upsetting than the clobbering of a cherished belief."

Think with me, beloved, about our pain, better yet, our common agonies, our "agonies of insight." They are not strangers to any of us travelers here below.

■ the agony of discovering you are not one but many people, created in the images of those who have mattered most to you.

■ the agony of having your childhood faith crumble at the moment you needed it most to sustain you.

■ the agony of doubting what you knew was right, and wondering if what you know is wrong could just be right.

■ the agony of watching your children enter new worlds you cannot enter, and cannot accept, yet cannot completely condemn.

■ the agony of listening to your children condemn much if not all you after Linus lost his faith in the Great believe in and tried to teach them.

■ the agony of feeling like a traitor to your parents when you find you must abandon their cherished beliefs because, for you, they are not true.

■ the agony of having to unlearn and relearn what you learned because what you were taught is no longer true.

■ the agony of hating others who made you what you are, yet knowing in your honest moments that they could not have done otherwise.

■ the agony of being concerned when others are not.

A-mercy! And bless Bess! I'd best leave off agonizing. That's about all one man of woman can stand at six o'clock in the morning, a cup of coffee notwithstanding.

So, ponder, ponder, and ponder some more, beloved. I've gotten in deep this morning. But sometimes "the deep" has truths that do not surface in the heat-of-day tasks that leave little time for "pondering."

See you next week, the Almighty (not Zeus) willing.

Down on Laurel County's Woods Creek Lake fights off the early morning mist for more than an hour if you're sitting on Ed Maggard's little boat waddling your toes wiggling down in the lukewarm water. Twiddling your thumbs and waiting for just one more catfish to nibble the chunk of liver and gizzards you've cast two hundred feet out into the cold and farther depths.

Before, you pray, the sun comes up, as the night starts to turn from black to gray, one more fish will bite and maybe this time it's going to be the grandpa of the teasers who has given you heck all night and eaten most of your bait. Catfish on Woods Creek Lake grow up on chicken parts stolen from fools like me and Ed Maggard.

Ed's dock is sheltered by a big cucumber tree, also known as a wahoo or Swiss magnolia, depending on who you talk to. Call it what you will, but the leaves are nearly the size of umbrellas and, at dawn, in mid-July, the dew they accumulate overnight tends to drop by the cups full—heavy enough to knock your cap off. Which is mysterious to me because they're the perfect place to b under when a rain storms in. There's no better tent known to man. But they leak like a ninnow net in the morning.

Ed has been asleep since about 2 a.m. in the same camper with his younger brother Dave and grand nephew Paul. Dave's son, my best friend, Dave #2 has been asleep in another camper where the latter's son, Travis, and I would also be were it not for snoring that would wake the dead and the audible/nauseating passing of gas that a corpse could not endure.

Travis and I tried going to be but it was like trying to sleep with a chainsaw running full blast without a muffler that was powered by onion juice, pinto beans and sweet potatoes my buddy had consumed earlier in the evening. Dave #2 had also eaten some habanera peppers that were burning him from his mouth to the other extremity of his digestive plumbing and he was groaning loudly. Burning at both ends. If we'd lit a match in the little camper, more than a dozen upscale homes scattered around the lake in either direction would now be splinters and the fires still wouldn't be out.

So Travis and I went fishing off the dock. A way from the odor and the noise.

Travis is ten-years-old and probably needed his sleep. But neither of us had much choice. If we were going to get any rest we decided that we had to get away from the snoring and groaning his dad was putting out if the camper. And that meant heading for the woods and copperheads or to Ed's little dock. We chose the latter.

On the way down to the lake from Paint Lick, we'd bought three or four pints of chicken livers, which, as of 2 a.m., had not yielded a single bite for yours truly nor from upwards of a dozen other Maggard cousins sharing the bait and Ed's premises with us—but (lucky them) camped out of hearing and smelling distance of our immediate party.

Anyway, Travis and I, because we had almost no other place to go nor anything else to do, baited up at the dock and the fish started biting.

We lost at least a dozen catfish because we didn't really know what we were doing before we put the first one in the basket. We'd hook them in the lip and they'd flip off when we got them up on the dock. Some biggins!

Finally, when we started letting them run about half a mile down the lake long enough the swallow the hook, we caught four or five good keepers in the 16 to 18 inch range and we were feeling pretty good about ourselves.

Then it started getting daylight. An owl hooded in the distance and we hooked back. I'm pretty good at calling owls. In a few minutes the owl flew into a hemlock right on top of us and hooded like a fog horn that rattled the planks on the dock. Lord have mercy!

I may have walked on water. Travis wanted to know if I'd messed my pants. For the record, I did not but I can't speak for my buddy Travis. He had to have some reason for asking and he kept tugging the seat of his shorts to make sure they weren't fitting too tight for the rest of the morning. Think what you will.

The fish stopped biting, but thick, rapidly rising mist, like steam in a deep kettle, started rising off the lake. Squirrels started squawking and more than a dozen birds began their morning songs on the far bank and in the trees above us. In a matter of minutes the fog was so dense that Travis and I looked like ghosts to each other even though we were sitting less than three feet apart.

"Do you reckon that Heaven is something like this," Travis asked because he was as awestricken as I was?

And I thought to myself "What a wonderful observation from one so young and how target."

Because I could not, nor could the best poet in the world, have better captured the moment.

Then we heard a door slam up on the hill behind us. My buddy Dave was out of bed ready to make coffee. "Dad's us. Let's go air the camper out," said Travis. "I'm kinda sleepy." That's when the big dew dropped off the cucumber tree, knocked my cap off and brought me back to reality.

"You're right Travis," I replied. "Let's get some rest while we can but please don't light a match in the camper."

And so we did. (Thank you, Uncle Ed, for a weekend I'll never forget. And thank you Aunt Carrie for the fried chicken, baked beans, potato salad and banana pudding that helped me survive it. If you folks decide to take up adopting in your old age, I'm available and I promise I'll be good.)

Our Readers Write

Dear Editor,
Referring to an article by Dr. Don Whitehead in the July 16 issue of the Signal, may I say a hearty Hallelujah! Every reader should attach a clipping of this article to the refrigerator door or bathroom mirror where it can be read frequently. And, hopefully, absorbed.

Dr. Whitehead quotes from a book, Timeless Healing by Dr. Herbert Benson, a Harvard Medical School professor, who reports on several control studies which prove that "faith in God is good for us, and this benefit is not exclusive to one denomination of theology."

Some of the beneficial effects Professor Benson cites are increased survival, greater well-being, reduced depression, anxiety and hostility, reduced alcohol, drug and nicotine use, lower blood pressure, greater marital satisfaction, and improved general health. With prayer and faith, the quality of life in cancer and heart disease patients showed marked improvement. Even the fear of dying greatly diminished.

One study of patients undergoing heart surgery found that "those who receive solace from their religious faith were ten times as likely to survive as those who did not." In another study of "four hundred patients on a coronary case unit half were assigned someone to pray for them, the other half were not. None of the patients knew which group they were in. Those patients for whom prayer was offered had significantly fewer episodes of congestive heart failure, fewer cardiac arrests, less pneumonia, and required fewer diuretics and antibiotics." All these studies showed that "no one kind of religion worked better than another in producing health."

Isn't it encouraging to note that God wasn't kidding when He claimed to be no respecter of persons?! But that's been my contention all along and I'm happy to find someone of Professor Benson's calibre who agrees with me. I've never been able to accept that one particular group or denomination makes up the whole "body of Christ," even when it's my own church making the statement or insinuation. And I'm quick to say so. Furthermore, I would be quick to change my affiliation if a less egotistical group could be found. The fact is, I'm looking!

Frankly, I've never seen a working "body" made up of only one component or substance. It takes many parts performing in unison. Isn't it wonderful how God figured this out when making the first living creature? One vital element complimented the other. Could the head stand without a neck? Could the heart circulate the blood without arteries and veins to direct the flow? Could an arm deny that the leg is a part of the body because it's the body as a whole? And what good would anything be without a brain? Aren't all elements of the system necessary to function properly? Well, of course!

It's the same with God's Church. It is made up of many important parts and He places each "in the body as He sees fit." That is why the researchers in Prof. Benson's book found the prayers all being answered on an equal basis without regard to church affiliation. It is the faith of each individual that's important, not the name over the door, whether instrumental music is used in worship service, when or how one group celebrates communion or baptizes converts, etc. These are choices that should be practiced freely without offensive criticism from others. I personally believe in the baptismal rite of total immersion. But I would have no qualms about joining in a prayer group with those who had been "sprinkled" and others who find comfort in praying the rosary. All appear to get satisfactory results, and our family can attest to that. Two years ago when our son faced almost certain death, we had prayer chains reporting in regularly from all these various churches. Even today we still get follow-up calls from some who knew the gravity of his illness and mingled their faith with ours during those long frightening months. It is with grateful hearts that we are now able to tell them all it's well. What mighty changes can be wrought when we join together in prayer!

Again, may I thank the Signal and Dr. Whitehead for a spiritual lift and a reminder that none of us is an island.

Sincerely,
Christine McKinney

Carloftises honored by Lexington Philharmonic's Benefactors Society

Mrs. Lucille Carloftis, Livingston, and son, Jon, landscape designer in Bucks County, PA and New York City, were recently honored by the Lexington Philharmonic Orchestra's Benefactors Society at Spindletop in Lexington as the orchestra's top volunteers for the 1997-98 season.

This past June 20, Mrs. Carloftis hosted the orchestra's benefactors at a seated dinner party for 130 persons at her home near Livingston, with most of the guests arriving from Versailles and Lexington.

The evening began with a harpist playing melodies on the lawn, and continued with a dinner for the benefactors that was prepared and served by Mrs. Carloftis' children and grandchildren. Immediately following dinner, a friend of Jon's entertained with cabaret songs.

Jon Carloftis, who went to school at Livingston, is now the nation's foremost photographed landscaper, and serves as a contributing editor to national architectural and landscape design magazines. Dinner guests toured some of Jon's work at his mother's house.

The evening wound up with a dance at the Riverside.

Among the Lexington orchestra's local supporters attending the dinner party were: Laura Durham, Juanita Stanley, Jessie Murray, Tammy Cox, Bud and Shirley Cox, James Lambert, William and Rena McClure and Charles and Bonnie Parsons.

This was the second time Lucille Carloftis had hosted a party for the orchestra's supporters - the first one having been held in Lexington.

The guest list was arranged by the Lexington Philharmonic, and the event held in Livingston was the largest of twenty dinner parties held this season for the orchestra.

Cards of Thanks

Thanks

I want to once again say thank you to two fine people of Rockcastle County. They are Marvin and Judy Owens of Marvin E. Owens Home for Funerals. I could say "thanks" to them every day and it could never be enough. Thanks Marvin for putting the extra dirt on my mother's grave. Faye Ledford's and for sowing the grass on it. You did an excellent job with getting her stone for me. It is perfect and beautiful. Your stones are beautiful. As you and Judy would say, that is all part of our service. You all are always there when I need to talk or need advice about something that may not be important to anyone else, but is to me. I miss mom so very much and time is only making my pain and grief worse, but I do have you and Judy to talk to. Nothing can

Adopted Safe School Policies as Adopted by the RCHS SBDM Tuesday, July 8, 1998

During the 1998 Kentucky General Assembly, Kentucky House Bill 330, "The Safe Schools Act," was voted into law. The below mentioned policies were presented to the Rockcastle County High School SBDM on July 8, 1998. These policies are now a part of the rules and regulations that students at RCHS must follow in order to align our school with the required legislation. The purpose behind the passing of such measures was to make RCHS a safe environment, which is conducive to learning.

(PLEASE NOTE: a violation of any one of these policies could result in the possibility of placement in In-School Suspension, a suspension from school, an expulsion from school, if decided by the Rockcastle County Board of Education).

- 1. "NQ Knife Policy." This includes any knife, regardless of the size of the blade, nor the purpose for which it is possessed. Any knife caught in a student's possession will be surrendered to the school for a time no shorter than ten of the academic year. But, if the knife falls into the category that it would be considered a "weapon," the proper authorities would be notified. Possessing a knife that is considered a "weapon" is a criminal act. This would be reason to seek an expulsion hearing from the Rockcastle County Board of Education. This action would occur for "any" weapon brought onto school grounds or district-sponsored transportation.
- 2. ONE accessible entry into school at start of school day. That access being the front doors by the front office. This proposal would allow for all doors, except for the front office area doors, to be locked at the start of the school day (8:10 a.m.). Students entering the building after the start of a school day must enter through the front doors as mentioned earlier, and sign in to receive permission to enter their respective classroom.
- 3. NOT allowing students to go to car once they enter the building.
- 4. All students, including athletes, will only be allowed to use gym bags, book bags and backpacks that are transparent or fishnet in nature. Oversized purses will not be allowed. The administration of RCHS has the right to deem what is, or is not, oversized. Please refer to the "Search and Seizure Policy" located within this handbook. All book bags, backpacks and gym bags that are brought into classrooms must be placed under the student provided desk immediately, and are not allowed to be removed until the end of class.
- 5. NO visitors allowed in hallway without being accompanied by a school official.
- Students must leave school grounds immediately following school, unless in a supervised status by a school official.
- No pre-announced fire alarms, tornado drills or bus drills.
- Threats to do bodily harm to students, faculty and staff will be met with severe consequences. This will be studied throughout the summer to determine what is a valid threat, and what is a suitable punishment for such a threat.
- Possession of any firearm shall be met with a severe punishment. That punishment will be determined after more study.
- Those students that are deemed a threat to the safety and well being of any student and/or bus driver/bus monitor, shall be removed from the bus for a time deemed necessary by the administration.
- NQ chains allowed in building. This includes the chains that are used for one's billfold.
- A more strict enforcement of the placement of prescriptions in the nurse's office. No drug, whether prescription or not, is allowed to be in the possession of a student. Prescription medication must be in the appropriate container, as given by the pharmacist. A violation of this could be disciplined the same as a violation of the school's drug and alcohol policies.
- A more strict enforcement of Kentucky Revised Statute in regards to beepers, pagers and cellular phones.
- All outside doors that enter directly into a classroom from outside, such as those in the Agriculture room, Art room, Library and Chorus room etc. are to remain locked at all times during the instructional day.
- All doors of classrooms that are left unattended must be locked at ALL times.
- At NO time should a student prop open, nor allow anyone, other than a faculty or staff member through a door that is locked from the outside.
- Students that ride the buses are required to come straight into the building upon exiting from the bus. At no time should any student exit the bus and walk around the building. Nor should they attempt to get into a car after exiting the bus.
- At NO time should a student leave the building without checking into the office with an administrator, then signing out. Failure to sign out could result in being charged with skipping school.
- Any student that is found to be a threat to the safety and welfare of others (students and/or bus drivers, or any outside agency absent from the bus) due to acts on the provided school buses, that student will face the possibility of removal from the provided bus transportation, for a term possibly as long as the remainder of the year.
- ALL students that either drive or ride in a personal vehicle is required to exit the vehicle immediately and enter the building. Loitering in the vehicles when entering upon school grounds is prohibited and grounds for disciplinary actions. Driving is a privilege. It can be taken away (in regards to driving on school property) if all policies are not obeyed. Any occupant of a vehicle that is found to have within that vehicle, a weapon, an illegal substance, or alcohol, is in violation of school district, and governmental policies and will face disciplinary actions accordingly.

DRESS CODE

Dress code requirements apply to all students (male and female) and are to be followed during school hours. exemptions will be the requirements for P.E. classes. Those guidelines shall be set by the teacher. In order for the student to exit the P.E. gym/weightroom, he or she must ALL requirements of the RCHS dress code. Failure to do so will result in the same disciplinary measures as a violation in the regular classroom. The following requirements were adopted by the SBDM of RCHS in July of 1998.

- Shoes will be worn at all times.
- Shorts (even those worn with leggings, etc.), skirts, dresses and skorts must be no shorter than three (3) inches above the top of the knee.
- No halter tops/dresses or off-the-shoulder clothing is permitted. Also, sleeveless shirts and blouses are permissible as long as they are not revealing.
- Students (girls and boys) are not permitted to wear sunglasses, hats, caps, nor bandannas.
- No muscle/tank top shirts are permitted.
- No clothing shall be permitted which promotes alcohol or drugs or which bears offensive language, pictures, signs or offensive insinuations. Examples include, but are not limited to, "Big Johnson," "Co-ed Naked," "Hooters," and numerous other brand names.
- All clothing must be properly buttoned, snapped or otherwise fastened.
- See through clothing, bare midriffs and clothing containing holes which show bare skin above the knees are prohibited, as is any article of clothing considered indecent and/or distracting. ALL SHIRTS AND BLOUSES ARE REQUIRED TO BE OF LENGTH THAT COULD BE TUCKED IN.
- All clothing must be "form-fitting." Clothing that is excessively baggy will not be tolerated.
- All pants and shorts must be worn on the waist. The waist is considered the area above the hip bones. At NO time will any undergarments that are normally worn under the pants/shorts be seen. NO SAGGING!!
- All dress code requirements must be met while on field trips. A field trip is an extension of the school.
- Coaches/sponsors shall use discretion for school practices (e.g. no sportsbras worn without a shirt over them).

Lockland teen battling leukemia - can use financial help; Subway will match funds

Reprinted from Valley Courier of Cincinnati, Ohio.
Birthdays are supposed to be a day of celebrating, especially when a young person reaches that age they all anxiously await, their 18th birthday.

But for Christian Phelps, a 1998 Lockland High School graduate and resident of Arlington, it was the day she was diagnosed as having leukemia. As one can imagine, this came as quite a shock to Chrissy and her family, since she has always been a very active and healthy person, participating in various school activities such as volleyball, track, and cheerleading while excelling in academics, making the A and B honor roll.

Through this recent ordeal, Chrissy has remained optimistic and upbeat; as anyone who knows her can attest, this has always been her personality, which is why she was voted a homecoming queen candidate by her classmates all four years of high school.

When asked by the organization "Make a Wish Foundation" what she would ask for, she said her education was the most important thing to her, and knowing there would be days while taking chemotherapy and spinal taps and other medical treatments, she would not be able to attend her classes at UC.

She asked for a computer so she could be able to keep up with her class work. The organization did not guarantee her a computer, but said it would put her on a list. As of writing this letter, Chrissy is in Children's Hospital, hoping to come home soon and continue her treatments as an outpatient.

As one can imagine, besides the emotional stress on the family, there is a financial burden. In a case like this, they can be astronomical, even without counting everyday expenses and days of work that must be missed. A donation jar has been placed at Chrissy's employment, Subway, on Springfield Pike in Wyoming. They have been very supportive of Chrissy and have pledged to match every dollar donated. Chrissy lives at home with her dad, Greg Phelps, and her stepmother, Tami Phelps, along with her three brothers, Craig and twins Justin and Johnathan. Cards and donations can be sent to Christina Phelps, 623 Blanche Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio 45215.

Christina is the granddaughter of James T. and Jonett Phelps of Rt. 1 Mt. Vernon. Since the printing of this article, Chrissy has returned home and is having chemotherapy three times a week. We all wish her a speedy recovery and our prayers are with her.

Fairview News

A cheery hello to everyone. Another dark cloudy Monday morning but it is good to be alive. So let's all just thank God and do the best we can in this world. We all have our troubles, trials and sorrows, but we must go on. We must not pray to live a good life, be good to others and love one another. This world needs love and more love.

Our worship service was well attended at Fairview over the weekend. Sunday School attendance for the second Sunday straight was 151. We have so many toddlers, babies and small children in attendance and we thank God for each one. Children need to be brought up in the House of the Lord.

Dorothy Lambert and Mary Lou Reynolds of Augusta, Ga. spent last week with Dorothy's relatives here. Dorothy is well known here, loved by many friends and relatives. I missed seeing her this time but talked to her on the phone. She is a very sweet lady.

Hubert and I had a nice visit with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Hale one day last week. They both were very well. We always enjoy seeing and talking with them. (They are very good people).

County Attorney explains truancy laws

Back-to-school can be a time of conflicting emotions for students. Some children can't wait to get back into the swing of school, friends and school functions. Other kids feel an overwhelming dread when August appears on the calendar.

In either case, Kentucky law requires all children under the age of 16 to attend school regularly, according to Rockcastle County Attorney Jeff Burdette.

"The majority of parents, and their children, acknowledge the value of education," Burdette said. "Unfortunately, there are some parents, though, who feel school is unnecessary. Others simply don't care. In other instances, the parents aren't the problem, the children are. The parents try to impart the value of education, but the children will not give school an honest chance."

All public schools in Kentucky have attendance policies, and the state has laws against truancy.

"All children enrolled in school are required to attend regularly until age 16, when students can apply for early withdrawal with the parents' permission," Burdette said. Those who violate Kentucky laws for attending school must undergo a long process to remedy the problem.

After a child has violated local district attendance or tardy policies, most school systems will conduct their own investigations into the cause of truancy, according to Burdette.

Loretta Powell with the Rockcastle County Board of Education monitors and oversees local attendance and tardy policies. If the problem cannot be remedied, then a court-designated worker is contacted, and a petition for truancy is issued. That means the parents and the truancy child must appear in court.

Burdette or a representative from his office is present during these court proceedings to ask questions of school representatives, the truancy child and the family.

"In most cases, the family and student are given a stern warning for the first offense, and the case is reviewed 15 to 30 days later to see if the student has returned to school," Burdette said. Recent court cases include charges for educational neglect that are filed against parents who fail to exercise their parental control over children who do not attend school pursuant to the law.

Parents could be fined $100 for their children's truancy offense and up to $250 for subsequent offenses. After the third offense, the child is considered an habitual truant, and the parents can be charged with a Class B misdemeanor. If the problem continues, the child can be placed in foster care, and the parents can be sent to jail for up to six months.

"Truancy is a problem in many areas of Kentucky, however, in Rockcastle County we have relatively low truancy rates," Burdette said. "We all have a responsibility to see that our children are prepared for the future."

"It Is Written"

We conclude our investigations of the work of the church. We have noticed that the work of the church is threefold: evangelism, edification, and benevolence toward needy saints. These are the only three things that the church is authorized to be involved in.

The work of the church is not to provide social and recreational activities for the saints, such as dining rooms, kitchens, sports, gymnasiums, family life centers, etc. This is the work of individuals and the home. It would be iniquity or lawlessness for the church to presume to do this work. Paul said in I Cor. 11:22&24, "What? have ye not houses to eat and to drink in? or despise ye the church of God, and shame them that have not? What shall I say to you? shall I praise you in this? I praise you not... And if any man hunger, let him eat at home; that ye come not together unto condemnation. And the rest will I set in order when I come." It is not the work of the church to be involved in politics, form a political action committee. It is not the work of the church to be in business, money making schemes. The church is to be funded by free will offerings of Christians to do the work of the Lord, I Cor. 16:1-2. The work of the church is not secular education: not kindergarten, nor elementary, nor high school, or college. The work of the church is not to be some sort of Red Cross to seek to relieve all mankind, in benevolence. The kingdom of God is spiritual in its focus, Romans 14:17, "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost." Let us let the church be the church, and do only the work God has assigned it.

Play Louisville Valley for championship

14-and-15-year-old All-Stars advance to finals of state

The Rockcastle County 14-15-year-old all-stars will finish no worse than second in the Kentucky State Tournament being held in Catlettsburg this week.

The 14-15 year old team has already won three of four games in the journey downing Grayson and Richmond twice.

Their only loss was to a powerful

Louisville Valley team, who they will face again in the championship game on Wednesday night. If the all-stars win on Wednesday they must then play Valley again on Thursday to see who will advance to the national tournament.

In Rockcastle's first win over Grayson, Brandon Bishop pitched a five-inning complete-game shutout and John Bray drove in Rockcastle's first runs with a two run double to help Rockcastle to an 11-0 victory. Bishop gave up only two hits in the game.

Other 14-15's getting hits in the blow-out were: Shea Taylor, Derrick Bussett, Greg Harper, Chris Parsons, Brad McNew and Billy Hackworth.

On Sunday Rockcastle beat Richmond 9-8.

Pitcher Greg Harper threw the ball extremely well through six innings, but after being hit in the face with a line drive in the top of the sixth, the righthander struggled some in the seventh.

Harper gave up a couple of walks and the Rocket defense, which had turned two double plays in the game, one with bases loaded, made some unforced errors.

Chris Parsons came in to get the last out of the inning to give Rockcastle the win after they had let Richmond close the gap from 9-2.

New video helps tobacco farmers communicate with migrant laborers

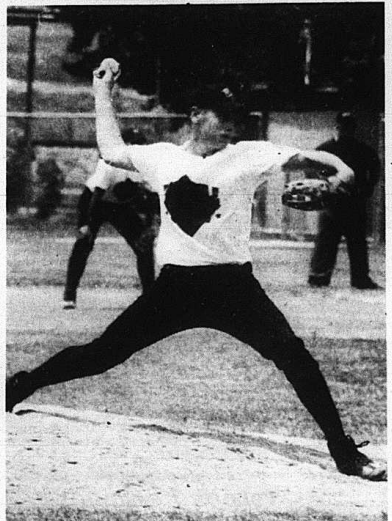

Migrant laborers have become an important part of Kentucky's burley tobacco production system and while most producers report excellent work from the laborers some say they feel inadequate about communicating with the migrants on how to harvest the crop.

A new video, narrated in Spanish, shows migrant workers every aspect of the tobacco harvesting process, from cutting through housing.

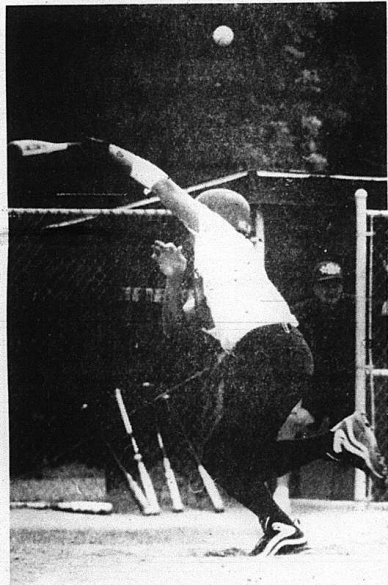

The video, produced by the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, allows farmers to show the video in a step-by-step process to migrants who will be completing harvest and housing for them.

The video, available from the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture Distribution Services, cost $25.20, which includes taxes and shipping and handling charges. For a copy of the video, contact them at Room 19, Scovell Hall, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Kentucky, 40546. Make checks or money orders payable to The University of Kentucky.

Greg Harper was the winning pitcher in Sunday's 9 to 8 win over Richmond. Harper has also hit the ball extremely well in the tournament. Harper was scheduled to pitch in the championship game Wednesday night.

Second baseman Billy Haddix took one for the team Sunday when he was hit by a pitch during the All-Stars 9 to 8 win over Richmond.

Brandon Bishop picked up the All-Stars first win with a five inning shut-out over Grayson. The All-Stars scored 11 runs in the rout.

On Monday night, Rockcastle was totally dominated by the Louisville team, losing 10-0. Rockcastle's Greg Harper and Derrick Bussett managed the only hits for Rockcastle in the five inning affair.

But on Tuesday night Rockcastle advanced to the championship game with a 14-4 five inning win over Richmond.

Rockcastle fell behind in the first inning Tuesday night 1-0, but catcher Brad McNew evened things when he hit one out to center field.

There were no runs in the third inning, but in the fourth inning Rockcastle broke the game open with eleven runs, when all nine starters scored at least once in the inning.

Chris Parsons opened with a single, followed by McNew's second hit of the game, a double. Josh Hale then hit a triple to the right field corner scoring both runners. Hale then scored on center fielder's Billy Hackworth's single. Brandon McIntosh singled and Brandon Bishop walked to load the bases. Hackworth then scored on a wild pitch. Shea Taylor singled home McIntosh before Derrick Bussett walked to again load the bases. Greg Harper continued the rout of Richmond, singling home Bishop, Parsons, batting for the second time in the inning drew a walk, which scored Taylor and then McNew walked, scoring Bussett. Hale then hit the ball deep to short scoring both Parsons and McNew. In the inning Josh Hale picked up four RBI's, in helping Rockcastle take an 11-1 lead.

Richmond got three runs in the bottom of the inning, but Rockcastle got three more in the top half, which would prove to be the final score.

In the fifth inning Bussett hit a one out triple and was knocked in by Harper with a single. Harper later scored on a wild pitch and John Bray made a great defensive play in the bottom of the fifth to help pitcher Chris Parsons for the third run of the inning.

Brandon Bishop seal his second victory of the tournament.

Celebrates 90th Birthday

Mrs. Lela Mae Turner was honored on her 90th birthday, July 21st, by the Pine Hill Baptist Church Ladies Prayer Partners, of which she is a member.

Approximately 50 people attended the celebration, including her brother Evans Hilton, her sister Lorene Patton, nieces Rose Sharon Hunt and Debra Lambert and great nephews Joseph and John Lambert.

The program for the evening included a reading of Proverbs 31:10-31 by Laverne Henton. Teresa Parrett read a poem about Mrs. Turner, written by her niece Brenda Lambert. Darlene Martin presented Mrs. Turner with a dozen pink roses from her fellow Prayer Partners, and a plaque from the church. She also received many cards and gifts.

Mrs. Turner's brother, Evans Hilton, gave a history of Pine Hill and thanked everyone for their thoughtfulness. Doris Cash presented Bro. Wayne Henson a $90 check for the church, in honor of Mr. Turner, from her niece, Barbara and Billy Hiatt. Mrs. Sally Morris led the group in prayer.

After a few comments and blessing by Bro. Wayne, everyone enjoyed a delicious potluck meal. Sheila Falin led the group in singing "Happy Birthday" and Patsy Falin assisted Mrs. Turner in cutting her birthday cake.

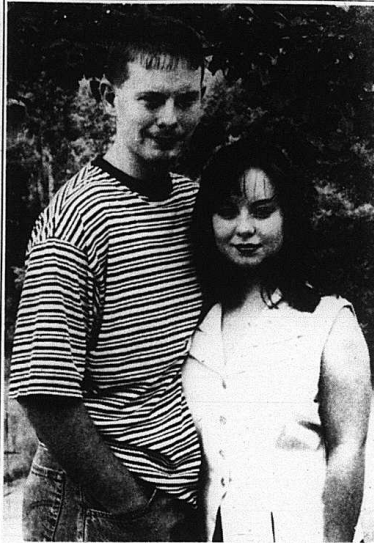

Mrs. Turner was born July 21, 1908 at Pine Hill to J.W. and Nellie Dolan Hilton. She is the widow of Earl Turner and is a lifelong member of the Pine Hill Baptist Church, where she served as church clerk, Sunday School teacher and pianist.

Mrs. Turner was also the guest of honor on Saturday, July 18th when her brother, Evans Hilton, and sister, Lorne Patton, hosted a party for several members of her family.

During the celebration held at her home on School Street, Mrs. Turner received numerous gifts and the group enjoyed Italian Cream Cake and punch.

Those attending in addition to the hosts were Clarence Patton, Christine Krueger, Denver Hoskins, Ruby Hilton, Buck and Jean Dewberry, Bill and Barbara Hiatt, Sue Cromer, Nell Doris Millard, Gene and Rose Sharon Hunt, Jim and Brenda Lambert, Kathy Hilton, Willie Hiatt, Leanne Hiatt, Angela Hunt, and Keith Lucey.

whose parents exercise or participate in vigorous recreational activities tend to be more active themselves. Make physical activity a routine part of your family's lifestyle for 20-30 minutes at least three times a week. To maintain your children's interest and participation, choose a variety of fun activities such as hiking, nature walks, camping or canoeing trips, swimming or bicycling.

In addition to helping children manage weight, regular physical activity increases strength and coordination, reduces stress, and builds self-confidence, according to the American Dietetic Association.

Another reason weight management is important is that obesity as a common problem for American children. One in four American children is overweight. Obesity increases the risk of chronic health problems such as heart problems, such as heart disease, diabetes, high blood pressure and some types of cancer in children as well as adults.

Here are tips to help children develop healthy eating habits:

Plan regular meals and snacks. Discourage eating between meals and snacks.

Teach children to eat slowly and pay attention to eating. This helps them to realize when they are full and prevents over eating.

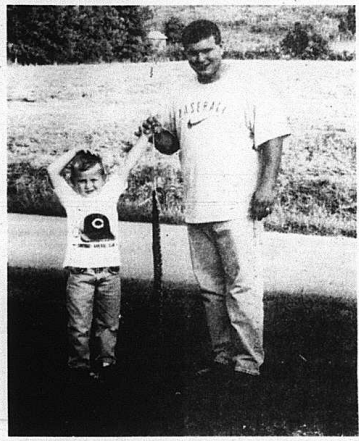

Keep a variety of healthy low calorie foods on hand. Fruits, vegetables, whole grain crackers or bread, and other high fiber foods are good choices. However, don't remove all high-calorie, high fat foods from your children's diets as this may cause them to go overboard on "special" snacks.

For more nutrition information, call the Extension Office at 256-2403.

Helping Children Maintain a Healthy Weight

By: Hazel Jackson County Extension Agent
for Home Economics

The combination of healthy food choices and regular physical activity—not a hamburger and French fries—will help children and teenagers lose weight and keep it off. And by setting an example parents can help their children achieve this goal.

The focus of growing children's weight management should be to eat an adequate amount of a variety of foods and increase physical activity. Young children shouldn't restrict calories to achieve a healthy weight because this practice can retard or stunt growth as well as impair learning.

Setting a good example of healthy eating habits and regular physical activity is one of the best ways for parents to help children make weight management a lifetime habit. Use the Food Guide Pyramid as the foundation for meals and snacks to add variety to the diet and give children the nutrients needed for growth and development.

To increase variety in your children's diets, gradually offer new foods at mealtime. While children might not like them at first, research shows that repeated exposure to new foods increases acceptance of them.

Parental example also will help children make regular physical activity a lifetime habit. Children

Library finishes Summer Reading Program

Winners of the Reading Groups

By Betty Lindblom

The Rockcastle Co. Public Library has just finished their summer reading program and it was a huge success. There wasn't as many children signed up but the ones that were signed up read more books than before.

As usual I have people to thank. First is always McDonald's. They are always so willing to help with any community function. Ronald McDonald was a winner with the children as always. I also would like to thank Godfather's Pizza for their help. And last but not least was the staff: Pearl Rash, Lisa Mason and Carolyn Jones. Every book that was taken out had to be checked out in and then put away. I really couldn't have done it without them.

This year we had a castle building contest. The entrants were Melinda Coffey, Dustin and Courtney Vanwinkle, Brittany Bradley, Keena and Jessica Lawrence, Heather and Jessica Spires, Dylan Bell, and Michael Stevens. The winners were: first - Keena and Jessica Lawrence, second - Dustin and Courtney Vanwinkle and third - Dylan Bell. I'm glad I wasn't judging them as all were all so creative.

In our reading groups the winners are: The Library Division (children of library employees) first - Anthony Mason and second - Derick Rash. Ages up to 6: first - Jasin Johnson, second - Rachel Johnson and third - Courtney Vanwinkle. 7-9: first - Heather Spires, second - Dustin Vanwinkle and third - Jessica Lawrence. 10-12: first - Beth Coleman, second - Anna Guilfoiland and third - Shane Fredrick. Every child that enrolled was a winner for their read which opens up such visions for the children.

I am going to close this column with a personal note. As you know I have left the library. This has been very hard on me. Over the years I have watched the children grow up and have become friends with a lot of parents. The parents and children surprised me with a little party and it got very teary eyed for a while. I especially want to thank Mary Vanwinkle for my cake and beautiful quilt. All the parents and babysitters have made my job so pleasurable. I will sorely miss them and the children.

A look back at Rockcastle County

Reprinted from the 1992 Rockcastle History Book which was published by the Rockcastle County Historical Society.

Rockcastle's Underground Wilderness

"Boys, them hills is all hollow!" Asked by us if I knew of any caves nearby, Ott Miller of Dry Fork included the whole countryside before him with a gesture of his arm. Under his chair on the front porch, an orange tabby cat yawned and stretched; out in the yard a beagle dog sat and studied the strangers. The little white house was nestled in a narrow valley, flanked by tree-covered ridges that peaked five hundred feet above the gravel road.

That was in 1969. I was seventeen years old, then, and lived in Lexington. For the past four years, to my mother's dismay, I had shown an unnatural hankering to crawl around in dark holes underground. Nearly every weekend I would be out exploring one of Kentucky's six caves. It was this habit that finally led me to Rockcastle County, to sit with Ott on his front porch and hear tales of his younger days when he, too, had a yen to poke into those dark old holes.

There are many places in Kentucky where caves are found. Nearly half of the state's land area is underlain by limestone rock or near the surface. A peculiar property of limestone is that it will dissolve in rainwater, for rainwater is very slightly acidic. This is a very slow process, so slow that process cannot be measured in terms of human lifespans. Over a period of many, many centuries the rainwater that filters down through the soil into the bedrock will enlarge with cracks and crevices will become large enough that people can walk or crawl into them, and these will call caves. These larger openings, however, are only the most visible part of a vast network of underground conduits through which groundwater flows in cave country. Tiny cracks direct water in large fissures, into still larger ones, to finally mingle in cave streams that ultimately discharge from the hill-sides and along the creek and river banks.

Rockcastle County is divided into two parts by a physical feature of the landscape that geographers and geologists call the Cumberland Escarpment. This is an area of transition, from the mountains of the Eastern Coalfield to the gentle rolling plains of the Bluegrass. Along this north-east-south-west escarpment (which my dictionary calls a "steep slope") are long ridges separated by narrow valleys. At a casual glance, it doesn't look much like cave country. There are not hundreds of big sinkholes dotting the countryside like so many moon craters, such as can be seen in the Mammoth Cave region and in southern Indiana. There are not huge rivers roaring out of the ground, or swallowed whole, like those in Missouri. But Rockcastle County is cave country, indeed, and famous through the Eastern United States for the number and variety of its underground chambers.

Along the edge of the escarpment, sandwiched in the ridges, between the sandstone caprocks and the shales and siltstones of the ridge foundations, are thick beds of limestone. Where the water runs off the sandstone and filters through the soil and the vertical crevices hidden beneath the soil, huge cave systems have developed in this limestone. Almost every little valley has a spring at its mouth, some small, some large; and hidden away under ground behind each spring is a cave system. Not all have openings that a person can go into. Some are blocked by rock rubble and boulders, or are deeply below water. But surely as the spring exists, there is some sort of cave behind it.

These springs are found low, down near the valley bottoms. Higher on the ridges can be seen dark openings, where water once flowed but now has south lower levels. Some of these cave mouths were once springs, centuries ago before the creeks had cut down so far. Some of the openings were made as the valley lowered and the person inside of a cave passage. If a person explores one of these high and dry caves far enough, and deep enough, sooner or later they will come onto an underground stream, gurgling away in the dark as it works its way down to the outside and sunlight.

Long before white settlers came to Kentucky and Rockcastle County, caves here and elsewhere through the state were used by the pre-historic peoples whose land this was. Some caves, particularly well-sited, dry and comfortable, were used as homes by these people, and their artifacts have been found in the earth of cave entrances. Some caves were used as burial chambers, where the bodies of loved ones were laid to rest with tools, weapons, food and ornaments to aid them in their next life. Such Indian graves have often been found in caves of the Cumberland Escarpment.

Dr. Thomas Walker is the first person to leave a record of his travels through the Rockcastle region. In 1750, Walker wrote in his diary of finding alum-tasting rocks in a large rock-shelter or cave that possibly was located somewhere on Crooked Creek in the eastern part of the present county. These "alum rocks" may have contained saltpeter, a mineral that occurs naturally in the earth of dry, sheltered locations. The many saltpeter caves of Rockcastle County were destined to play an important role in the history of the state and nation.

Saltpeter was the main ingredient in gunpowder, and so the mining of saltpeter and the manufacture of black powder became important industries in Kentucky through the period 1790-1814. During this time, many persons explored caves along the Cumberland Escarpment, searching for rich deposits of saltpeter that might be profitably mined.

Cave exploration in the early days, just as in our own time, was frequently done for sport, to see what passages might be hidden behind the dark cave mouth. The first recorded visitation to a Rockcastle cave occurred in 1798, when John Baker made torches and led his family through a large cave on Crooked Creek - and promptly became lost in the dark when the torches burned out. This story has a happy ending, fortunately, for although the Baker family wandered in the dark for several days (as reported), they eventually found their way back to daylight. This same cave soon became the largest saltpeter mine in the state, and is known today as Great Saltpetre Cave.

Those who live in the eastern portion of Rockcastle County have often explored the caves near their homes. It is quite common to see on the walls, written in soot, the names of several generations of a single family, often representing more than a century of explorations. The older men of the area will talk with enthusiasm of the caves they had explored in days past when their limbs were spryer, and recall the stories of these same caves heard from their fathers and grandfathers. And, while the old men are remembering the past, almost surely a son or grandson will put in tales of their own adventures underground.

The numerous springs have long been important to the inhabitants of the region as water supplies. Mount Vernon was founded on the site of a spring, as have been many communities throughout the cave regions of Kentucky. The valleys of eastern Rockcastle County show a settlement pattern that has been strongly influenced by the location of springs. Near the mouth of nearly every little valley is a homestead, and these locations are not by chance. Just behind the house, one almost always finds a good spring, which is used by the residents for all the needs of the household. Along the roadside are also many good springs, and many persons who are not so fortunate as to live by a spring will stop to fill jugs and bottles for their drinking water at home.

Spring water has always been regarded as providing the very best drinking water. This is not always the case in fact, for groundwater in caves of the region is usually fairly close to the surface and liable to contamination by pesticides, livestock, coal mining operations and particularly from the dumping of trash in sinkholes that lead directly into the groundwater supplies.

After World War II, when the United States embarked on a massive road-building campaign through the rural regions of the nation, knowledge of the many large caves of Rockcastle County became available to outsiders. At about the same time, cave exploration was established as a recreational activity and a scientific pursuit. In 1939, an organization had been founded in the District of Columbia which soon became known as the National Speleological Society (NSS). This organization has always been dedicated to the exploration, study and conservation of caves. Within a few years, local chapters (known as "grotsos") were established in cities across the nation as more and more people became interested in exploring caves. Members of these local grotsos, as well as many people who were not part of any organized group, visited the caves in their regions and often traveled hundreds of miles to areas known to have many large caves. Thus began a minor tourist industry in Rockcastle County.

At first there were only a few, but by the 1970's it was common to see several carloads of cave explorers on Rockcastle County back roads. While many of the "cavers," as they call themselves, come from Berea, Richmond, and Lexington, a large number also travel from much further away, driving from Ohio, Virginia, and even Michigan. Just to spend a weekend exploring caves. Although in any large group of people there may be some "bad apples," most cave owners have been cave explorers to be well-mannered and considerate of their property. Fortunately, considering the large number of persons that have been through area caves, there have been very few serious accidents. Every few years, some people will climb a rope down into a deep hole without having done some serious thinking as to how they might get out again. Organized caving groups such as the grotsos of the NSS teach safe caving techniques such as wearing hard hats for head protection, carrying three separate light sources, and the special techniques necessary to explore deep holes. These organizations stress to their members that importance of courtesy to the landowners and protection of the caves. Most of the incidents that have occurred in caves in the county have involved persons who had not had such training and were unaware of the hazards.

One notable exception to this was the well-publicized 1983 entrapment of a group of out-of-state cavers in a cave near Barnett Valley. This group failed to use good judgment, by entering a cave whose entrance was prone to flood shut at a time of threatening weather. No lives were lost, but the incident attracted national publicity and incurred needless expense to state and local agencies.

Several functions have been held over the last few years that have focused upon Rockcastle's caves. The national convention of the NSS was held in Frankfort, in 1985, for the first time in this state in more than twenty years, and one of the biggest attractions was the caves of the county. Two years later, a smaller convention was held in Renfro Valley, with over five hundred cave explorers attending from as far away as Florida and Alaska. In 1989, the Great Saltpetre Cave property was purchased by a private historical foundation and is currently managed by interested members of the Lexington and Cincinnati chapters of NSS. Every spring, an open house is held at the cave, to which the public of the county is invited for free tours.

The many caves of the county are a valuable natural resource. They represent an underground wilderness unique in its diversity, from rushing underground streams with strangely sculptured rocks to vast echoing chambers more than a hundred feet high, from passages bristling with stalactites to life forms found nowhere else on earth. Sadly, much of the splendor of Rockcastle's subterranean wilderness had declined in recent years. Thoughtless persons armed with cans of spray paint have defaced formerly pristine passageways, spread beer cans in their wake, and broken away delicate stalactites that may not be regrown in a thousand years. In caves that only two decades ago harbored colonies of valuable insect-eating bats numbering in tens of thousands, now only pitiful remnants, mere dozens, may be found. Garbage and sewage dumped into sinkholes fouls the underground waters.

I first became acquainted with the caves of the county back in 1969, and as the years went by I discovered that there was no other place that held as much interest for me. I came to love the land and made many good friends among the residents. I sat again on Ott Miller's porch a few weeks ago and reflected upon the changes I had seen through nearly a quarter-century of walking the roads and hills of the county. The passage of time brings change. Better roads, more industry, modern schools, a higher standard of living, arrived along with the less attractive consequences of "progress" such as increased pollution, fewer trees, more crime. The caves of Rockcastle County are a priceless part of our heritage. They have existed for untold ages, yet they will not last forever without care on the part of those who visit them. It is sad to think that future generations may be denied the wonder of our underground worlds - in the name of progress.

HEART DISEASE: THE BEATING FACTS

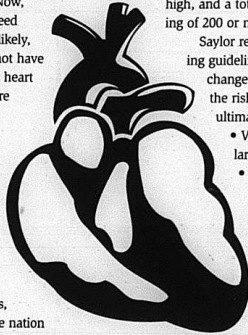

Your heart is always beating, whether you are thinking about it or not. Place a small amount of pressure on the inside of your wrist. Do you feel your pulse? Now, concentrate and try to speed up your heart rate. Most likely, it didn't work. You may not have the ability to control your heart rate, but you do have more control than you realize. Through preventive measures, you can increase the chances that your heart will keep beating properly for years to come.

Heart disease is the nation's No. 1 killer. And, according to the National Center for Health Statistics, Kentucky ranks fifth in the nation for coronary heart disease related deaths.

"Heart disease can lead to many problems," said Dr. Karen Saylor, a physician at Rockcastle Hospital and Respiratory Care Center (RHRCC). "However, the most common outcome is a heart attack."

Heart attacks take about 490,000 lives each year, according to the American Heart Association. A heart attack occurs when a part of the heart is blocked. The blockage is caused when the arteries, the pathways in and out of the heart, become clogged from a slow buildup of fat, cells and cholesterol called plaque. Blood that tries to flow through the clogged arteries can build and form a clot. This clot then can block all blood going to and from that section of the heart, shutting it down.

"This is why it is extremely important to control your cholesterol levels and blood pressure when trying to prevent heart disease," Saylor said. "A blood pressure reading of 140 over 90 is considered high, and a total blood cholesterol reading of 200 or more is high."

Saylor recommended the following guidelines when trying to change your lifestyle to reduce the risk of heart disease and, ultimately, heart attacks.

- Visit your doctor for regular checkups.
- If you smoke, quit.
- Treat high blood pressure if you have it.
- Consult with your physician to determine a treatment plan.
- Maintain a diet that is low in salt, cholesterol and fat.

The American Heart

Association recommends that you limit your daily cholesterol intake to less than 300 milligrams.

- Start exercising and stick to it.
- Consult with your doctor to determine a normal, healthy weight for you and achieve it.
- Control your blood sugar if you have diabetes.
- Add more fruits and vegetables to your diet.
- Always follow your doctor's recommendations when taking medicine.

When dealing with heart disease, it is important to remember to consult with your family physician to obtain your personal cholesterol, blood pressure and sugar levels, and to create a prevention plan specific to your needs.

If you would like to find out more information on heart disease, consult with your physician or call the American Heart Association at 1-800-242-8721 or visit its website at www.amhrt.org.

HEALTHY TIPS

Grilling out is a summertime tradition. However, there are precautions you should consider before serving your meal.

Jill Stevens, registered dietitian at Rockcastle Hospital and Respiratory Care Center, recommends the following guidelines.

- Always wash your hands thoroughly before and after handling raw meat, fish or poultry.
- Use a meat thermometer to ensure that foods are cooked.
155 degrees - hamburgers
155 degrees - pork
165 degrees - chicken
- If you don't have a thermometer, make sure there is no pink left in your meat or red in the poultry joints.
- Use clean plates and utensils for the cooked food. Do not reuse items that were used in preparation, so that you avoid contaminating food.

PRADER-WILLI SYNDROME: A GENETIC EATING DISORDER

Putting a lock on the refrigerator doors. Hiding the cookie jar. Locking the pantry. Most dieters have thought about or done some of these things on one fat diet or another. But what if you had to lock up your food to keep your child from continuously eating to the point of extreme obesity or possibly death?

According to the Prader-Willi Association, one out of every 12,000 to 15,000 people suffer from Prader-Willi Syndrome (PWS), and their families struggle daily to keep food out of their reach. These children suffer from a non-inherited, genetic disorder that affects both males and females. The syndrome has many symptoms, the most common being obesity. Eighty to 90 percent of people with PWS suffer from hyperphagia, an excessive appetite.

"The excessive appetite is the largest health concern," said Dr. Kimberly Cornelius, a physician at Rockcastle Hospital and Respiratory Care Center. "If the appetite is not controlled, the obesity can lead to diabetes, heart disease, strokes, high blood pressure and cholesterol, and lung problems. However, appetite suppressants have been unsuccessful, leaving behavior modification as the only solution."

Besides an obsession with food, people with PWS usually suffer from all or some of the following:

- Low muscle tone;
- Below average height with small hands and feet;
- Incomplete sexual development;
- Varying degrees of mental retardation;
- Behavior problems, ranging from stubbornness to violent temper tantrums;
- Speech and language disorders;
- High threshold for pain;

- Obsessive/compulsive behaviors; and
- Infants have unexplained weak muscles, which often leads to poor sucking or feeding abilities.

"To determine if someone is suffering from Prader-Willi, an analysis can be taken of the chromosome make-up of the patient's blood," Cornelius said. "A normal chain of DNA has chromosomes from each parent working together to create the genetic make-up of the person. However in PWS patients, studies show that chromosome 15 is altered in some way."

The alteration can appear in three different ways. In most cases the entire chromosome from the father is missing. In the remaining cases, the critical genes on the chromosome from the father are lost, or there are two chromosomes from the mother present.

"Even though there is not a cure for Prader-Willi, people suffering from it can live a normal life span if their diet is controlled," Cornelius said.

It's no secret that Rockcastle Hospital and Respiratory Care Center (RHRCC) has advanced as a leading healthcare provider in the area. And no one recognizes this more than Dr. Alan Graham, general surgeon at RHRCC. A graduate of Thomas Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, Pa., and a native of Lowell, Mich., Graham brings experience to the hospital from medical mission work in Thailand, as well as various American hospitals. From these experiences, he says that RHRCC has no problem exceeding other healthcare establishments of its size.

In fact, he says the new clinic is the best he has worked in and is a model of the 21st century. "Rockcastle Hospital and Respiratory Care Center is a rapidly growing and improving healthcare system," Graham said. "It's great to be part of that growth."

Part Two

Corps of Discovery '98 travels west for 19 days

Day 12.
After breakfast, we traveled back through Custer where we did laundry and took showers in a campground. While there, we received word that my brother had a heart attack and was going to require by-pass surgery. After quickly trans-loading equipment from my parents vehicle to the bus they left for the three day trip back to Tennessee. We continued on to Devil's Tower National Monument in Wyoming.

We arrived fairly late and decided to establish camp, eat and get a good nights rest before going to the visitors center and walking around the tower. Our campsite was located about half a mile from the base so we had a perfect view. We can see several groups of climbers on the face of the tower. Several team members swear they will come back and climb the tower some day. It rains off and on during the evening, but not hard enough to worry about.

Day 13.

After breakfast we went to the visitors center and took a short walk around the base of the tower. The kids as usual went too fast and missed what we thought were many unusual and beautiful views. At one spot Jenny and I stopped to watch a group of climbers. The slow, patient movements were really amazing to watch. It was so quiet that we could actually hear them breathing hard after completing a difficult section of the climb.

You've got to admire those people who test themselves in a difficult sport like that. Who knows, maybe the climbers will inspire some of our kids to take up what is so obviously a self-rewarding past time.

After meeting the kids again we traveled to Devil's Tower Trading Post where we dressed in old-time clothes and took a group of several individual photos. Then we returned to camp where we had to resolve a serious problem. We had a stow-away on our trip.

A Purple Dinosaur had illegally accompanied the group on our journey. A trial was held, complete with a judge, bailiff, prosecutor, defense attorney and jury. The Dinosaur was eventually found not guilty, but was hung from a convenient cotton-wood tree by an unruly mob anyway (must have been the Western influence.) Poor Barney! However, the true criminal was found guilty of contributing to the delinquency of a stuffed purple dinosaur, and sentenced to five minutes of grass drills. The sentence was carried out immediately. Other campground residents didn't know quiet how to take these proceedings, but wisely did not interfere with the pursuit of justice.

That night a group meeting was held, where it was decided to continue on to Yellowstone National Park. This had always been an option, approved by Mr. Cash and parents of all the members of the team. Afterwards we completely reorganized the bus (again), and attended an interpretive talk by one of the park rangers about the importance of preserving and protecting our national parks.

Day 14.

Got an early start today and headed towards Little Bighorn National Battlefield. This is July 4th and holiday traffic is terrible here in Montana. About four miles to the front I can see a car coming our way, and there's at least two cars a couple of miles back behind us. We don't have fireworks, so we decide we'll just cook out today to celebrate the holiday.

When we arrived at Little Bighorn, we find that we can't take the bus across the narrow road which connects Little Bighorn to the site of the Reno-Bentzen Battle. Instead we attend two separate classes covering the weapons and equipment used during the battle, and the tactics used by both sides. Boy, did Hollywood ever get this battle wrong. Standing there looking over the battlefield and seeing the individual markers showing where each individual soldier died, makes you realize that for many of the soldiers who died here the battle must have been lonely and desperate. Only at the top of the hill, where about thirty or so soldiers died together in the last moments does it seem as though there was any mutual support. Most of the other markers of over 200 soldiers are spread over the hillside in small groups of alone.

After leaving the Little Bighorn we headed West through the Big Horn National Forest. As we climbed higher, we found a beautiful place to pull over and take some photos and the girls picked wildflowers. I'll definitely be back here soon. Further up the mountain we start seeing large patches of snow. Without saying anything, I stop the bus, set the brake and shut it down. I tried to make it to the snow before the kids, but they beat me to it. We had a great snowball fight on the 4th of July in Wyoming!!!

Today, we made what I believe to be our only mistake. I wanted to stay at a particular campground I had stayed in a few years ago. In the gathering darkness, I drove right by it. As it became completely dark, we drove on, expecting the campground just a little further down the road. The terrain changed from open grasslands to hills, then woods fairly quickly. As we changed our plans, we started to check out each campground that we passed. I refused to try getting the bus into any of them in the dark. Finally I found one that looked like I could get the bus into, and took a flashlight to walk the route. Seems as though they were having problems with bears. No tent camping was allowed in the area. So we turned around and went back the way we came a pretty good distance till we were out of "Grizzly bear country." We ended up at the campground where I originally wanted to stay. We didn't even set up tents. The boys and I slept under the shelter halves on the ground. They liked that so much they kept bugging me to let them do that again the rest of the trip.

Day 15.

After breakfast I drove into Yellowstone National Park. You just have to see this place to believe it. It seems as though every turn in the road brings you to more beautiful and interesting places. We walked around hot springs where the water was so clear and blue it looked like the sky. Steam rolled across the top of the water, and some of the kids stuck their fingers in the water only to find the temperature was just below the boiling point. The water actually was boiling in some of the pools. In other pools, minerals had deposited bright red and yellow formations around the area.

We stopped at the visitors center to watch Old Faithful erupt. While we were waiting a couple of the kids thought they saw someone that looked a lot like one of their friends from Rockcastle. When they called his name and waved, it actually was him. After meeting back at the bus we were approached by Mr. and Mrs. Cleis Brown and their son, Matt. We talked awhile before both groups continued their trip. Talk about a small world.

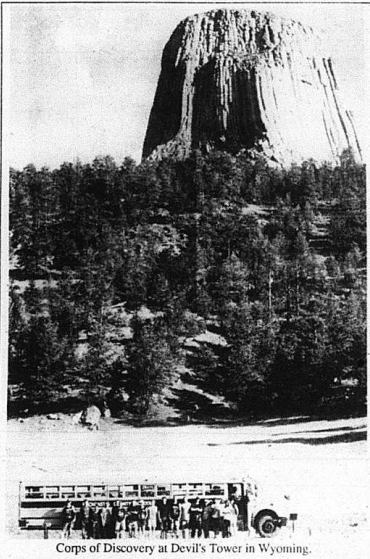

We continued our trip around the "small" loop and departed Yellowstone. To see this place properly would require at least a full week. The purpose of the trip though was only to expose the students to the West by visiting as many points of interest as we could in a limited time. With our visit to Yellowstone, we have reached the Western limit of our travels and must now begin the long trip back home. I don't know about the kids, but I have mixed feelings about heading home. My family is with me so I don't feel the need to return to see them. I do on the other hand want to stay out here and explore this area at a more leisurely pace. But funds are running low and we head on home. We don't get far though, we end up back at the camp we stayed in last night.

The next day we travel across some of the most desolate country we've seen yet. It definitely can use some water. Almost nobody lives out here, and we see very little of the land used for any purposes.

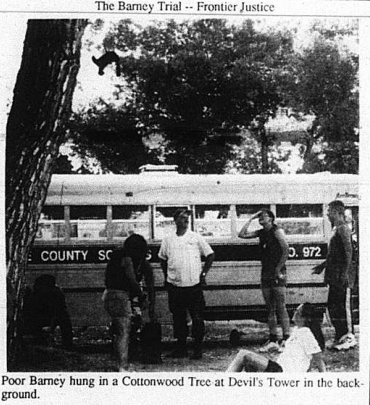

We did travel through one place that was absolutely beautiful and fascinating. After passing through Thermopis, Wyoming we begin traveling South up the Bighorn River, which runs North. When we reach Wind River Canyon we start descending into the canyon which is beautiful. That's when I notice the river is running uphill. Not only is it running uphill, it's really running fast, with rapids I wouldn't want to run with a canoe. We actually stopped and tried to figure this out since it was bothering me so bad. Even though the road was climbing slowly, the cliffs on either side of the road were getting higher and higher, giving you the impression that you were driving down a steep hill into the bottom of the canyon. This was the weirdest sensation I have ever felt. Even after figuring it out, I still felt we were going down hill.

By pushing hard and steady, we actually made it into Nebraska today. In fact we managed to make it to Scott's Bluff National Monument, which is one of our goals to visit. The rangers are exceptionally friendly. Since they are closing the visitors center in about an hour, they offer to help us call the campground just down
