Annual Little World's Fair going on now

A lot of little kids, some middle sized kids and even some grown up kids, attended Kid's Day at the Little World's Fair on Tuesday. Rides on the midway were only 25c from noon to 4 p.m. Above, Eldon Simpson, of Brodhead, enjoyed the merry go round. At right, brothers Jacob and Ryan Bullock, are all smiles as they get their tickets for the Tornado from aunt Nikki McKinney. The fair runs through Saturday night, with admission $8.00. The midway opens at 6 p.m. nightly. This year's fair is being sponsored by the Brodhead Volunteer Fire Department.

20 visitors at court meeting; variety of concerns discussed

About 20 visitors were present at Tuesday's regular meeting of the Rockcastle County Fiscal Court with various problems concerning a noise and sight nuisance in the Snyder area, a request to close a county road to county maintenance and a concern by a resident of the Sweetwater Road (former Oscar Isaacs Road).

Luke Mullins and Jerry Blair, representing several residents of the Snyder area of the county, told the court that a small business in the area was causing "noise pollution" with their air skimmer that removes paint from cars.

Mullins said the business operates 24 hours a day and some Sundays and that the owner had tried to muffle the noise somewhat. "It did help some," Mullins said but went on to say that it was still a nuisance. Mullins pointed out that Madison County had an ordinance in place to deal with problems such as this and that Rockcastle needed one.

"We're not trying to run anybody out of business, we just want the environment to be as safe and clean as it can be," Mullins said.

County Judge/Executive Buzz Carloftis, noting that the county's nuisance ordinance dealt primarily with animals and littering, asked County Attorney Billy Reynolds to research the matter and said, "if we don't have something that

Beginning date for Roundstone set back again

By: Richard Anderkin

The Rockcastle County Board of Education approved the amended school calendar for Roundstone Elementary School at their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday night.

Roundstone's over 273 students will not report for the 2006-07 school year until Monday, August 21st.

Rockcastle County School Superintendent Larry Hammond told board members that workers, who have been totally overhauling the heating and cooling system at the school over the summer, simply were not completely finished with the project.

"They think they can be ready for us to have school and we think they can too," the superintendent said.

The Superintendent said that workers would begin working second shift on Wednesday night so that staff at the school could begin getting rooms ready for students on the 21st.

"Many areas of the school are ready and the rest of work will be completed by the 21st," Hammond said.

The superintendent said the eight school days missed at Roundstone will be made up in 20 minutes a day of extended instructional time. "It will take 18 days to make up one day of school, for a total of 144 extended instructional time at the school," Hammond said. "The make up instructional time at Roundstone will not affect the bus routes or the schedule at Roundstone," he added.

The new heating and cooling system has a price tag of just over $1 million dollars. Construction on the new $2 million gymnasium could begin as early as this Fall, according to Hammond.

The other 2,700 students in the school district attended their first day of school on Wednesday.

The board also approved the tax rate for the next school year. Finance officer Richard Bray presented the board with a packet showing the rates for real estate, tangible property, motor vehicles and utilities. The rates on real estate, motor vehicles and utilities all stayed the same.

The rate for real estate stayed at 39.9 cents per $100 assessed value, 47.7 cents on motor vehicles and three percent on utilities. The only increase was a four tenths of a cent on tangible property making the rate 43.3 cents.

Bray suggested to the board that they do what they have historically done in the past and take the compensating rate set forth by the state department and not the across the board 4% increase allowed by law. "First, the four percent increase would require a public hearing and it would also generate less money for the school system," Bray said. The board unanimously approved the tax rates.

The local money is only about ten percent of the local board's $25 million dollar budget, which does include monies for current building projects.

Bray said $19.5 million was budgeted for the general fund, $3 million for state and federal grant programs, $1.1 million in the capital outlay fund, which is used for building and renovation projects and $1.3 million for the food service program.

Of the $19.5 million in the general fund, Bray said $16 million is spent on salaries and $1.5 million is budgeted for transportation costs. Of that $1.5, Bray has $325,000 budgeted for fuel. The school year ending in 2003, the board spent $108,000 on fuel; in 2004, $125,000 was spent; in 2005, $175,000 was spent and last year $232,000 was spent on fuel used by the local system.

The board also amended a building and grounds form for the new Area Technology Center, which will be built next to the Rockcastle County High School and connected by a corridor.

Mt. Vernon Fire Chief Garry Hansel, shown far right, and other members of the fire department and rescue squad are shown preparing to remove the body of Jessy Earl Sampson, 23, of Burnside, who was killed in a two car collision on Hwy. 461 Monday afternoon around 4:40 p.m. According to authorities, Sampson, apparently pulled his Honda Prelude into the path of a Cadillac driven by Edward Abney, 70, of Somerset as he was attempting to pass. Sampson's fiance, a 21-year-old originally from New Jersey, was critically injured and was flown to U.K. Medical Center, as was Abney. Both were in critical but stable condition on Wednesday. The couple were enroute to Columbus, Ohio to see the young lady's mother when the wreck occurred. Sampson and his fiance, both in the U.S. Navy stationed on the USS Dwight D. Eisenhower, were planning on being married after their tours of duty were completed, according to Public Affairs officer for the fire department Steve Griffin, who is shown in the center of the photo.

Rockcastle Memories

By David J. Griffin

Remember the rhymes of the Burma-Shave signs from long ago? Nearly everyone that rode in a car from the 1930's to the 1960's can relate to the clever signs that were placed alongside of the highway advertising Burma-Shave shaving cream. They were found on two-lane roads throughout America. The signs were in groups of five, placed about 100 feet apart. Each sign had one line of a four-line poem, followed by the obligatory fifth sign bearing the name of the then-popular shaving cream.

Remember sonny
That rabbit's foot
Didn't save the bunny

In 1925, Allen Odell gave the idea to his father, Clinton, about using small, wooden roadside signs to advertise their brushless shaving cream. Clinton was skeptical but gave his son $200 to try the idea. Sales of the product soared in the areas where the signs were found.

Drinking drivers—
Nothing worse
They put the quart

In the beginning, the signs were purely advertisements but as the years passed they became safety tips and just good plain fun. At the height of popularity there were approximately 7,000 of the signs across the United States. Using recycled lumber, the first signs were placed on Route 35 just outside of Minneapolis, Minnesota. Within weeks, drug stores in the area sold out of the product. The next year, $25,000 was allocated for the addition of signs into several states. Orders poured in, and more signs were erected. We were amused by the clever form of advertising.

I can remember observing the witty jingles on US 25 (before the Interstate was built) when we visited my aunt and uncle in Lexington. My grandparents just loved the road-side commercials. Pop would announce, "Burma-Shave signs are coming up." Mommie would read them to everyone in the car. I can hear them giggle as the car passed the last sign.

The corporation would not allow any signs to be erected that were the least bit offensive. During WWII, homesick GI's placed Burma-Shave copies in many foreign countries. After the war, they were found in Germany, Italy, France, and England.

The company had a sign crew (with only eight trucks) who maintained all the signs. They changed the verses at least once a year and also replaced any broken signs. By the beginning of the 60's, the firm grew to $3 million in annual sales. The popularity of the unique ads grew as did the product they were selling.

Good old dogs never die until the person who last petted or tossed them a crumb forgets the occasion.

Really special old dogs live even longer than that.

Back in the mid-sixties my brother, Keeter, was as into coon hunting as a young, eastern Kentucky man can get when he traded into a redbone hound puppy about the size of a half-grown rat.

I don't remember what the deal was. Someone owed him five bucks, or maybe he just talked the owner of the pup's mother into putting the litter into a good home.

And he was a runt at first glance. Rib-counting skinny, wormy and, from the look on his face, justifiably concerned about his future when Keith brought him home. A lesser man than my brother would have tied a rock around his neck and drowned him in the creek.

But it's amazing what a good dose of worm medicine and an all-you-can eat, around-the-clock buffet of stale biscuits and corn bread, whole milk and left-over table fare will do for a starving pup's demeanor and physical appearance in less than a week.

In the meantime, Keeter had named him "George" because he was as skinny as George Caudill, our neighbor and long-time family friend who could and did eat like a horse but was always skin and bones.

Mr. Caudill took no offense that his namesake was a red-bone hound and was actually proud of the fact.

Because George, the dog, began to blossom into the prettiest and perhaps the most intelligent dog that I have ever known..

T.J.'s Journal

by: Tonya J. Cook

About this time of year, I as well as others, realize that summer is coming to a close. Fall is almost here, and winter to follow that. Children prepare to return to school. Fall activities are in the planning stages. The weather will soon begin to cool.

Along with all of this activity comes a tradition to the Mount Vernon area. It is known as the Brodhead Fair. It is probably a little over a hundred years old by now. It, at least in my memory, has always begun about the first week or so of August. I always thought it was somebody's idea of a cruel joke to put something as wonderful as the fair only a week before nasty old school opened. How could two adversely different activities coexist so closely together?

Even though my family lived in London, we never missed at least one day at the Brodhead Fair. My Grandpa Roscoe had been raised just outside of Mount Vernon in Wabd. His parents, Joe and Melvina Norton, would load up their kids in an old wagon and head for the fair. They usually entered various farm items such as vegetables, fruits, quilts, livestock, and canned goods to be judged. As they grew older and reached their teenage years and older, some of my aunts and uncles would ride some of my Grandpa Joe's fine walking horses in the horse show. All of Joe's brothers, uncles, and their families who lived around Wabd would go to the fair. There were so many of the Norton clan, they made up most of Wabd and a good-sized chunk of Rockcastle County. The fair is a family tradition that is being passed on through our generation.

Since we've been married, Stanley and I usually go to the fair at least one night. He grew up going to the fair, as well. It sure has changed a lot since we were children. There are new kinds of rides, and the venue of entertainment has changed quite a bit, too.

When we were kids, the main attraction, especially on Saturday night, was the championship horse show. People would bring their best horses from all over Kentucky and Tennessee to be shown. There was always the same gentleman who sat in the center of the arena by the grandstand, and played popular tunes on his electric organ. He would play, and the horses trotted around the track at whatever pace he played the music.

Those horses were so beautiful. I still remember one horse in particular whose name was Lemon-drop. It was about the color of light honey with a platinum-blond tail and mane. When it passed under the lights, it would really glisten. It was a crowd favorite, and won a blue ribbon and trophy. I really wish that they would incorporate another horse show into the fair again.

In more recent years, it's been updated rides and an entirely new venue to entertain spectators. The horses have given away to mud-slugs and truck pulls. I guess it's horsepower of a different sort. They have also incorporated a couple of beauty pageants as well, the Miss Rockcastle County and the Miss Teen Rockcastle County. This will be more to the liking of the female audience.

I will be one of the judges this year for both pageants. I thought that I would give it a try. Even us "old hags" need to get in on the pageant some kind of way. I certainly hope I do a good job. I know each contestant has put a lot of hard work and effort into the preparation for the competition. If it were possible, I'd like to see each girl win, and each one is a unique beauty in her own right.

When the pageant competi-

Kentucky Voting Rights

Discontent continues to emerge regarding Governor Fletcher's restoration of voting rights for convicted felons. Kentucky is one of 48 states in which voting rights are lost as the result of criminal conduct, and only one of three states where such rights are lost permanently absent the Governor's intervention. This prohibition is contained with the Kentucky Constitution.

Fletcher has thus far restored voting rights to 733 convicted felons as compared to 1,150 during Governor Patton's last year in office. Unlike former administrations, the Governor's office requires a supplemental application to be submitted which explains why the applicant's rights should be restored. Prosecutors have also been given an unusual degree of input into the decision making process.

In 2005, the Herald-Leader reported that the Democracy Resource Center of Lexington was upset with Governor Fletcher's imposition of additional obstacles to the restoration of voting rights for felons. Similar criticisms continue unabated.

Some groups claim that disenfranchisement statutes were originally intended to block African-Americans from voting.

Recent opponents suggest these provisions curtail voting by persons more likely to vote along Democratic party lines. The DRC claimed that over 140,000 Kentuckians were disenfranchised in the year 2000. Nationally, it is estimated that over four million potential voters are disenfranchised due to statutes similar to Kentucky's.

Despite the increasing criticism, no group has challenged the Fletcher administrations policies in court. A 2005 U.S. Court of Appeals decision addressing Florida's disenfranchisement provisions reaffirmed the authority of states to regulate such issues.

In that case, ex-felons filed the class action lawsuit against Florida Governor Jeb Bush. The plaintiffs claimed that Florida's felon disenfranchisement law violates the U.S. Constitution's equal protection clause and the federal Voting Rights Act ("VRA"). Both claims were rejected. Noting that the Fourteenth Amendment specifically provides for the denial of voting rights to those who participate in "rebellion, or other crime", the appeals court held that interpreting the VRA as the plaintiffs desired, called for a reading of the VRA which "would prohibit a practice that the Fourteenth Amendment permits Florida to maintain."

The Court also determined that a historical review did not support the claim that such laws were adopted with a racially dis-

Many Ways to Protect Your Hearing

Presented by Dr. Tony Arvin

Hearing damage from noise is very insidious. The hearing loss takes place so gradually that a great deal of damage can be done before it is noticed and a person begins using protective measures. Protecting your hearing is a life-long process. Damage done in early life stays with you forever!

Even what is considered a mild hearing loss of 20 decibels makes it much more difficult to understand conversations, especially in a crowd.

Protecting your hearing merely takes a little care and common sense. Here are some ways to help protect your ears.

Several different kinds of ear protectors are available. The simplest ones are small sponge-like plugs that are compressed and inserted into the ear canal where they re-expand to fill the canal. There are several types of these simple plugs. They are inexpensive, easy to use, and disposable. Always keep some on hand.

Ear molds are another type of plug that are specially fitted for a person and work well to decrease the intensity of sound. They are most useful for low frequency noise. The molds are made from forms taken by an audiologist.

A third kind of protection for the ears is an earmuff. This covers the whole ear and is very protective, especially for high frequency noise. They are most useful around airplane traffic, chainsaws, and other machinery. Ear plugs and earmuffs used together give maximum protection.

Avoid excessive noise whenever possible, but when you can't, be sure to use some form of ear protection.

In 1966, the United States sent an unmanned spacecraft around the moon, photographing its surface. In just three short years, we would send astronauts to the surface. Those were heady times socially and politically. But our nation learned, and we grew as a country of leadership.

It's hard to believe that 1966 was 40 years ago. For many of us today, those were great years with fond memories. PBK Bank turned 60 in 1966 and we held true to the mission of our founders, just as we do today at age 100.

sign had disappeared from America's highways. Some can still be seen in museums across the country.

Generations of Americans grew up with Burma-Shave signs and still remember the amusing jingles. I miss seeing them on Kentucky's roadways. As a matter of fact, I detest traveling on interstate roads because I love to observe people, events, and cool advertisements that are posted on small roads all over the US. Give me back-road travel any time!

When Keeter brought him home he probably weighed three pounds. Half of that was in his ears which dangled to the ground.

He kept his head down, as a puppy, and my Mom said he did so, not because he was meek but because he was too weak to lift his ears.

But that soon changed. By the time he was six months old, he was as sleek as a well-trained athlete. His ears still dangled but his head was erect. His chest and legs were muscular and he was filling out.

Keeter started taking him to the woods at night with his buddies' big dogs and by the time he was a year old, he was leading the chase and the treeing of raccoons, way past midnight, across the dark ridges in the heads of, name your favorite holler, in Letcher, Knott or Perry Counties.

In the meantime, besides being a champion coon dog, he became the family pet. When Mom went to her vegetable garden he was only a step away. When Dad went to the barn, George was always on his heel.

Dad used to say that if George could carry a basket, he'd gather the eggs by himself and if he could shuck corn he'd feed our horse, Old Dock.

And he would pose like a high-dollar model.

There was an old, tall and elegant Norway Spruce in our front yard there in the head of Blair Branch. I could tap on the trunk of the tree and command George to “bark treed” and he would assail the tree as if there was a coon atop it while I shot a roll of film. All an act. He knew as well as I did that there was no coon in that tree.

As soon as I turned off the camera, he would shoot me a quizzical, “are we done now? look” and head back to the porch.

In his latter years, after Keeter and I moved off the holler, he was my Dad's constant companion. He rode Dad's truck and Dad used to swear that he could drive if he ever learned how to push the clutch in to change gears.

George went missing for several weeks and Dad searched high and low. He would not have been nearly as worried about me or Keeter or our younger brothers. Finally, one day, he was driving up a holler and he heard George barking excitedly.

Ole George was tied to a stake beside a makeshift doghouse. Dad got out of his truck and about that time a woman came to the door.

“I've come to get my dog,” he told her.

“That ain't your dog”, she said. “Elmer Adams would give a thousand dollars to get that dog back.”

“I am Elmer Adams,” Dad replied, “and it's going to cost you over a thousand dollars when I tell the law you stole my dog.”

Dad said she slammed the door and he unchained George and let him jump in the truck cab beside him. He never called the law.

“He wanted to drive home but I wouldn't let him,” Dad would later recall.

A year or so later George went missing again. Dad found him within half a mile of the house, lying dead in the woods. “Poisoned,” the vet said, “with antifreeze. You should have called the law the last time----”

And so I sit here remembering that wonderful long-eared almost-person, red bone hound named after George Caudill and it occurs to me that neither Ole George nor Mr. Caudill are dead at all because they are so alive in my memory.

criminary intent. A historical expert called as a witness on behalf of the felons acknowledged that no historian had ever contemplated that Florida's early disenfranchisement laws--enacted shortly after the civil war--were passed with discriminatory intent. Later revisions to the law also did not indicate racial motivation.

Like Florida, Kentucky has undergone numerous constitutional changes since the Civil War. The current Kentucky Constitution provides that “persons convicted in any court of competent jurisdiction of treason, or felony, or bribery in an election. . . .” shall not have the right to vote unless restored to their voting rights by pardon.

Should any group challenge Kentucky's felon disenfranchisement provisions, the Florida case is likely to be instructive. Courts will examine Kentucky's constitutional history in an effort to discern a racially discriminatory motivation. If such a history exists, our courts will confront whether Kentucky's felon disenfranchisement provision--though sanctioned by the Fourteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution--is nevertheless illegal.

Library News

Pam Chaliff and Kathy McKibben

With the Summer Reading Program over, we still have plenty of books being checked out at the library and on the bookmobile. You will also see individuals using the library for internet access as well as recreational reading, research and so on.

Time marches on and school has started! If you are not acquainted with your library. Let me share some of the benefits to having a library card! You have access to the World Wide Web, we have eight public computers. We have a Genealogy-Kentucky room which houses family history, and cemetery records. The Kentucky side of the room houses books written by Kentucky authors. We have a career room that houses career books, college materials; it also has many pamphlets on various subjects that effect the youth of the community. There are all kinds of books to read for pleasure or information. Magazines and up-to-date newspapers can always be found at your library. We have videos and audio books for check-out. Educators we have a laminating machine, and a die cut machine for your use, just remember to bring your paper or construction paper with you!

Every week on Tuesdays we have story hour for the preschoolers. We read, sing, play, do crafts and have a snack. All of this is free of charge, what it will cost you is simple, your time.

The bookmobile is always out and about in the community. If you would like bookmobile service, please call and ask for Ms. Pam Chaliff @ 256-2388. The library also has a copy machine and fax machine that can be used for a small charge. We want to express appreciation for the outstanding support we received from all of the businesses during Summer Reading. A couple of businesses I unintentionally left off the list was Dairy Mart of Brodhead, and Arrezio's.

Plans are already in the works for programming and partnering with the schools once again. Want to be a part of the library's patronage? Come on down and fill out for a card, there is no fee. Make the connection, connect @ your library!

Dear Editor,

The Relay for Life survivor dinner was held at the Rockcastle Middle School on July 28. The guest entered the middle school with a balloon filled entrance hall and entered the cafeteria decorated in purple, pink and white. The received their survivor t-shirts from Makayla McFerron, Ashley Powell and Abby McClure. The dinner vegetables, rolls and salad were catered by the Southern Catering Service. The chicken was supplied by Kentucky Fried Chicken and the hams were donated by Emily Dyehouse and Shauna McFerron. Rockcastle Hospital cafeteria employees prepared the hams and donated the drinks. Cathy Wright prepared the cakes for the dinner. Brother Offutt lead the dinner with prayer and Janet Vaughn and Amber Thacker sang as the guest enjoyed their dinner.

The committee wishes to thank all of the above and the following for their time and contributions. Without these people and the support of the local businesses the dinner would have not been a success.

A special thanks to all who made the dinner possible: Pegs Food Mart, Godfathers Pizza, Pizza Hut, Jacks S&T Hardware, Cox Hardware, Hiatt's 5&10, Ivy Tincher, Rodney Weaver, Sparks Flowers and More, Hill Top Produce,

Rockcastle students attend FFA Camp

By Jerrica Poynter
Chapter Reporter

From July 10th- 15th you may have noticed a few familiar faces missing from Rockcastle. This may have been because 18 FFA students were spending their week in Hardinsburg, Kentucky at the one and only FFA Leadership Camp.

This week is probably the highlight of most FFA students' year. They spend the week canoeing, swimming, fishing, playing volleyball, basketball, softball, kickball, ping pong and so much more. Students choose two different Special Interest classes to attend based on how they want to improve themselves. They may take communications class to gain better speaking skills, college 101 to learn what to expect before reaching college or they make take tractor driving if they haven't had the opportunity to learn to drive one in the past.

Throughout the week they set their personal goals as well as the chapter's goals for the year and share ideas with other groups about what they have done to improve their chapter. At one point during the week our officers got the opportunity to preside a meeting in front of the entire camp!

While at camp, our chapter came home with a number of awards. Chris Hurst was selected from Rockcastle to run as an officer for camp council. After being interviewed, Chris was placed as the treasurer and participated daily in the flag raising and lowering as well as inspecting cabins.

This is an amazing accomplishment considering there were people for about 20 other chapters competing for a spot on camp council.

TJ Singleton competed in the FFA Quiz Contest where he won and went on to compete in the finals.

Zach Stevens, Ashley Cash, Hillary Proctor, Lewis Mink and Andrew Laswell were awarded Leadership awards which are given to students whose leadership skills stand out throughout the week of camp.

Chris Hurst dominated the mile Fun Run by winning 1st place out of about 260 participants. Dustin Reynolds also did awesome by coming in 2nd next to Chris.

Some students may be selected to be on an elite sports team for working hard and showing good sportsmanship. Ashley Cash was a member of the All-Star Volleyball team, TJ Singleton a member for the All-Star Softball team, and Dustin Reynolds a member of the All-Star Basketball team at camp.

The students were awarded their usual ribbon for maintaining a top notch cottage and keeping it clean throughout the week. They were thrilled to win 1st place in the camp's Chapter Volleyball tournament, they worked together to defeat several tough teams.

Camp was a great opportunity for everyone who attended. Not only did we get to meet new people and gain leadership skills, but we grew both personally and as a team. Thanks to all of those who helped make camp possible!

Whitaker meets President Bush at FFA State Presidents' Conference

Matthew Whitaker, vice president of the Kentucky State FFA Association, had the experience of a lifetime when he, and the state chapter president, Randy Adams, met with President George W. Bush at the FFA State Presidents' Conference (SPC) held in Washington, D.C., July 25-29.

Attendees of the conference represented all 50 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. All were united by common goals: to strengthen skills in leadership and citizenship, to discuss national FFA business and to explore the heritage of the nation's capital. The group attended the conference to prepare for their responsibilities as delegates and committee chairs for the 2006 National FFA Convention, to be held in Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 25-28.

Whitaker, 19, is the son of Harold Ray and Sandy Whitaker of Mt. Vernon.

RCHS students enjoy learning in Mexico

Ed's Note: Portion of this story was omitted from last week's Signal. This is the complete story.

Learning in not a 2x4, so it cannot be confined to two covers of a book or four walls of a classroom. Students from Rockcastle County High School found this out first hand when they set out to discover learning throughout the Yucatan Peninsula, on July the 10th thru the 17th, of this summer. Their trip took them through Cancun, Valladolid, Merida, and Playa del Carmen, where they got a glance at Mexican culture and art ranging from the Mayan Villages to shoreline beaches. Mr. Les Scalf, the Art teacher at the high school, led the group and the students who attended were Jessica Cummins, Nicole Shepherd, Catelyn Williams, and Genna Cummins. Genna Cummins was the other adult member on the trip. The group combined with students from Michigan to make an entire group of approx. 30.

The trip started out by flying into Cancun where they were able to enjoy the white sandy beaches. Education began right away as they learned how to exchange currency and the value of the peso dollar to the American dollar. With a 10.7 peso value for each American dollar, students found their money could go a long way. Right away the students were putting to use the Spanish language they had been studying all year as they were communicating with the locals to order from a menu, finding out bus fairs, or bargaining while shopping.

After a day in Cancun, the group left the touristy areas and boarded a bus where they would get a real taste of Mexican life. The first stop was the town of Valladolid, which fell under Spanish rule in 1543. "The hotels we stayed at were all great but the Quinta Regia hotel in Valladolid was particular beautiful with Mexican appeal and beautiful Caribbean colors", said Genna Cummins. While in the city, the students watched first hand Mayan artists and craftsmen and used the art of bargaining to negotiate what both the buyer and seller felt was a fair price. It didn't take long for the group to find out how spicy some of the Mexican traditional dishes can be as they ate at local restaurants. Nicole Shepherd mentioned, "Since I am a picky eater, it was fun to get over the fear of trying something new since it is a big part of experiencing the culture".

While the students were led throughout the city and back streets to see Spanish and Mayan architecture, aged Catholic Cathedrals, and beautiful fountains and monuments, they seen the real condition that Mexican people live in and the modes of transportation used. "All those old punch bug Volkswagens found their way to Mexico because they are everywhere", said Catelyn Williams. While leaving the city, the group rode by fields of Agave plants that are used to make rope and other products that are a source of income for the population. Stopping outside the city, the students visited a Cenote (an underground spring) where they got the chance to swim inside a natural well found deep inside a subterranean cave while they viewed magnificent stalactites and stalagmites. Many of the rivers in the Yucatan flow underground so it is important to watch your step.

Day three of the trip led the group to the sacred Mayan city of Chichen Itza, which was mysteriously abandoned in the 7th century. This city was dedicated to Chac, the god of rain, since rain is a rarity in this region. The Mayans are a group of people who were taken over by the Spanish and were forced to give up their beliefs, symbols, traditions, and Gods and adapt to the Spanish way of life. This could explain why at least 85% of the country of Mexico is Catholic, since it is the religion brought over by the Spaniards. More of this Mayan history was revealed in the art as the tour continued into the city of Merida. At the Hall of History in the Government Palace, the artist Fernando Castro Pacheco painted scenes that depicted the Mayan civilization being forced to give up their traditional way of life. The scenes show priests burning Mayan symbols, Mayans forced to work on plantations, and the battles that occurred among the Mayans and Spanish soldiers.

Mexico has 31 states and one national federally. Merida, the capital of the Yucatan State, was a much larger city and is continuing to grow with a blend of modern and old architecture. The city continues to cling to it's past but the companies, industry, and business push expansion and growth. The students visited traditional craftsmen who specialized in hammock making. Then the group traveled to the ruins of Uxmal (meaning thrice built), where they were taught more of the Mayan original way of life. In Mayan history, there used to be a perilous ball court game played where players could not touch the ball with their hands or feet. After dark, the group watched a dazzling sound and light show as temples and pyramids were lit up with multicolored lighting.

The most enlightening portion of the trip came as the group traveled from Merida to Playa del Carmen. The students stopped at several Mayan villages where they were shown how Mayan huts were actually constructed, how to make tortillas out of corn, and got a look at beautiful traditional Mayan dresses. The women's dresses were white with very colorful flowers and the men's clothing was white pants and shirt, white sandals, and a white hat with a black band. This type of clothing was worn during some dances that were performed for the group. The students also rolled out and cooked their own tortillas. At one village, the students gave out toys and clothing to less fortunate Mayan kids. "This was a touching moment to see the kids with very little get things like shirts, pants, coloring books, and other things", said Jessica.

With a true taste of Mexican culture, inner cities, and the native foods, it was time for the group to enjoy a true taste of the Caribbean beach life. So, the group headed to Playa del Carmen for the final three days of their tour. The first day, the students were taken to Tulum and Xel-Ha for more exploration of ancient ruins, swimming, and snorkeling. "This was an excellent opportunity where students could actually mix learning with a lot of fun", said Mr. Scalf. Tulum was an ancient walled Mayan city that had been able to fend off attacks from the Spaniards until the 16th century. At Tulum the students swam at the beautiful beach just outside its fortified walls with many other tourists from all over the world. They seen a traditional rain dance and it actually started to rain right after it.

At Xel-Ha the students rented snorkeling gear for 10 dollars a day and jumped into the ocean to explore it for the first time. "I could not believe I was actually confident enough to go snorkeling in the ocean with huge fish and manta rays swimming around me. I can't wait to do it again", said Nicole. The students also had the option to rest in a hammock, swim with dolphins, or view some native tropical birds. However, most of the time the students kept their face under water snorkeling around the bay. Then, it was back to Playa del Carmen where the group walked along the cobblestone streets laced with shops on both sides as far as one could see. This was an excellent place to shop for souvenirs, practice your Spanish vocabulary, and eat some great Mexican food.

"This was definitely one of the best trips I have been a part of with the amount of things to learn and participate in", said Mr. Scalf. "We had an outstanding Mexican guide who was friendly and knowledgeable that helped to break down the language barriers between us and the locals". The students experienced culture from all social and economic environments. All of the students kept a journal that reflected upon lots of comparisons to life in America to what life in Mexico is like. Mr. Scalf added in conclusion, "I would really like to thank all the sponsors and supporters who helped us with this trip and most of all to the parents who allowed their children the opportunity to be a part of a world learning experience." Next summer Mr. Scalf will lead a group throughout Italy and the Greek Islands for 18 days in June. Some of the many highlights will include Milan, Venice, Florence, Rome, Bay of Naples, and a cruise through the Greek Islands. If you are interested in participating in this tour or helping to support the students going on this trip financially through a contribution, contact him at the high school.

Do you know? Dog Days of Summer

Summertime can be brutal sometimes. Especially true for some of the residents of eastern Kentucky where air conditioning is not available, summertime can turn deadly. Summer heat combined with high humidity can feel utterly unbearable. It is the dog days of summer.

We all know that the "dog days of summer" as the hottest and muggiest part of the season. A quick look in Webster defines "dog days" as: 1) the period between early July and early September when the hot sultry weather of summer usually occurs in the northern hemisphere. 2) a period of stagnation or inactivity.

But where does the term come from? Why do we call the hot, sultry days of summer "dog days?" The brightest of the stars in the constellation Canis Major (the big dog) is Sirius, which also happens to be the brightest star in the night sky of the summertime. In fact, it is so bright that the ancient Romans thought that the earth received heat from it. During late July Sirius is in conjunction with the sun, and the ancients believed that its heat added to the heat of the sun, creating a stretch of hot and sultry weather. They named this period of time, from 20 days before the conjunction to 20 days after, "dog days" after the Dog Star.

During an average year, 175 people succumb to the heat in the United States. In the disastrous heat wave of 1980, more than 1,250 people died. The heat wave of July 1995 caused 600 deaths in the Chicago inner city alone, which marked the greatest heat-related disaster in the United States. In Europe, the scorching summer of 2003 equates to devastation, as more than 50,000 people succumbed across the continent, with the majority, nearly 35,000 deaths in France. These are the direct casualties. No one can know how many more deaths are advanced by heat wave weather, as diseased or aging organs that surrender to the heat stress, but under better conditions would have continued to function.

Considering this tragic death toll, the National Weather Service (NWS) has stepped up its efforts to alert more effectively the general public and appropriate authorities to the hazards of heat waves - those prolonged excessive heat/humidity episodes. The NWS will issue Heat Advisories and Warnings to advise people that extreme heat is expected. Based on the latest research findings, the weather service has devised the "Heat Index" HI. The HI, given in degrees F, is an accurate measure of how hot it really feels when relative humidity (RH) is added to the actual air temperature.

For eastern Kentucky, a heat advisory will be issued for a HI reading if 105 or higher for at least 3 hours or more, with a minimum HI around 75 degrees during a 24-hour period. An Excessive Heat Warning will be issued for a HI of 110 or higher for 3 hours or longer, with a minimum HI of 75 during a 24-hour period.

But it does not have to reach the warning or advisory stage for heat to take a toll on people outdoors, especially when working. Heat is a killer. Heat kills by taxing the human body beyond its abilities, where in a normal year, about 175 Americans succumb to the demands of summer heat.

Know These Heat Disorder Symptoms

SUNBURN: Redness and pain. In severe cases swelling of skin, blisters, fever, and headaches. First Aid: Ointments for mild cases if blisters appear and do not break. If breaking occurs, apply dry sterile dressing. A physician should see serious, or extensive cases.

HEAT CRAMPS: Painful spasms usually in muscles of legs and abdomen possible. Heavy sweating. First Aid: Firm pressure on cramping muscles, or gentle massage to relieve spasm. Give sips of water. If nausea occurs, discontinue use.

HEAT EXHAUSTION: Heavy sweating, weakness, skin cold, pale and clammy. Pulse thready. A normal body temperature is possible. Fainting and vomiting is likely. First Aid: Get victim out of sun. Lie down and loosen clothing. Apply cool, wet cloths. Fan or move victim to air-conditioned room. Sips of water should be given. If nausea occurs, discontinue use. If vomiting continues, seek immediate medical attention.

HEAT STROKE (or sunstroke): High body temperature (106° F. or higher). Hot dry skin. There will be a rapid and strong pulse. Possible unconsciousness. First Aid: HEAT STROKE IS A SEVERE MEDICAL EMERGENCY. SUMMON EMERGENCY MEDICAL ASSISTANCE OR GET THE VICTIM TO A HOSPITAL IMMEDIATELY. DELAY CAN BE FATAL. Move the victim to a cooler environment. Reduce body temperature with cold bath or sponging. Use extreme caution. Remove clothing, use fans and air conditioners. If temperature rises again, repeat process. Do not give fluids.

The Family Room

By: Dr. Roy Don Whitehead

Each year the Annie Casey Foundation of Baltimore, Maryland ranks each state according to how well they take care of their children. The Kids Count ranking is based on ten different statistics, including infant mortality rates, poverty and teen dropout rates. Unfortunately, Kentucky ranks 42 for the years 2003-2004. Forty-one states do a better job taking care of the children than we do. That is not good news.

A closer look at the individual rankings indicates where we need to improve. Kentucky has a higher percentage of low birth weight babies than the national average (8.7% as compared to 7.9% nationally). Since 2000, Kentucky's percentage of low birth weight babies has increased from 8.2% to the current 8.7%. Better prenatal care, including education, is needed. Our infant mortality rate is the same as the national average (6.9 babies die for every 1,000 births). Even this is too many.

In Kentucky 10% of teens are high school dropouts, as compared to 8% nationally. Locally we fare even worse. According to the 2000 census for example, in Pulaski County 65.6% of adults are high school graduates while the figure for Kentucky is 74.1% and for the country the same figure is 80.4%. In McCreary County only 52.6% of adults have completed high school.

Education is the key to better jobs and higher wages because an educated work force attracts high quality employers to the area. Encouraging our children to stay in school until they acquire the skills to provide for their families is a key goal for Kentucky.

According to the Kids Count survey, 38% of Kentucky's children live in families where no parent has full time, year round employment. This means lower income and fewer educational opportunities. Twenty-five percent of Kentucky's children live in poverty while the national figure is only 18%.

A look at the 2000 Census reveals even more poverty. For example McCreary County reported 36.7% of its families with children had incomes below poverty level.

Kentucky's death rate for children also lags behind the national average.

According to the Kids Count survey, Kentucky had 25 child deaths per 100,000 children in 2003 while the nation had only 21. Kentucky had 75 teen deaths per 100,000 teenagers, while the nation had only 66. For teenagers, alcohol and drug education are essential to bring down the number of teen fatalities.

It is obvious that we Kentuckians need to do better by our children. Health insurance for all children and for their mothers can help to lower the infant mortality and children's death rates. No child in our state should be without insurance, and mothers need to be insured so that they can be healthy and take care of their children.

Education is the key to improving income levels. Support for education has to come from the home and the schools. Children of parents who take an interest in their education do better in school and stay in school longer.

These are the children who will be prepared to do the complex jobs that our state hopes to attract in the future.

According to the Kids Count survey, our national ranking is getting worse.

In 2000/2001 our state ranked 36th among the 50 states. By the most recent survey we had sunk to 42nd place. This is not a race we can afford to lose. We can, should and will do better.

The second annual Miss Rockcastle County Pageant was held at the Little World's Fair in Brodhead on Monday night. Local death investigated

A former Rockcastle County resident was buried Sunday afternoon in the Fairview Cemetery at Conway, after he died mysteriously Friday morning at the Lake Cumberland Regional Medical Center in Somerset.

Boyd "Jason" McFerron, 27, was pronounced dead at the hospital by Pulaski County Coroner Richard New at around 5 a.m.

New said McFerron was transferred by ambulance to the hospital after complaining of severe stomach pains, from a house on Boat Dock Road.

McFerron was admitted to the intensive care unit where he died.

New said that an autopsy performed on Friday revealed nothing, such as a heart attack or stroke, that may have killed McFerron.

"We will not have results of the toxicology tests for several weeks but we have had several calls concerning McFerron's death," the coroner said.

"The state's lab in Kentucky would not do the toxicology test, which was sent out of state for analysis, by a poison control lab," New said.

"The circumstances around this death are questionable at best," New said.

Along with New, the Pulaski County Sheriff's Department is also conducting an investigation into the death.

A complete obituary can be found on Page A-3.

"We all know there will be many changes throughout the construction process, but this is the final proposed plan to finance this project and let the bids," Bray said.

The proposed plan for the new state of the art learning center came in at a price tag of $9.5 million dollars.

Bray said bids on the Technology Center should be let sometime in late September or early October, with construction beginning sometime this Fall.

The finance officer said he has already received a check from the state for $8 million and, next July, he will receive another $1.5 from the state to round out the monies for the total project. This amount also includes new equipment and furnishings. $414,000 has been set aside for contingencies, should any overruns on the project occur.

"The state is taking care of selling the bonds on the project, which they will be obligated to pay back out of the state's new construction budget," Bray said.

The board also got a report from Jenny Sweet and Mary Ann Childress on the school systems' Job Quest program.

Sweet and Childress told the board that Job Quest, which is a program funded from the Federal Workforce Development Act, has helped over 170 students since its implementation in 2001.

This year, Job Quest has 19 students, who will co-op during third and fourth block at the high school, hopefully in a job they are interested in. "We try to put students in jobs they want to learn more about in a field they might want to continue in after high school," Childress told the board.

Mrs. Childress is coordinator for the program and Mrs. Sweet is program supervisor.

"This is an absolutely wonderful program, it helps us to help students who may fall through the cracks," she said.

The Cumberland Valley Area Development District is also involved in the program and has asked Mrs. Childress to give some training to other schools as to how the program is supposed to work.

"It seems to be working for us and speaks well for Mrs. Childress that other districts want her help to learn how to make it work for them," Hammond said.

Eligibility for the program is based upon income. This year only seniors are eligible.

The board also discussed the overcrowding at the Rockcastle County High School for this school year.

The Rockcastle County High School has an enrollment this year of over 960, the most ever in the school's history.

RCHS principal Jennifer Mattingly told the board that she had managed to create two additional classrooms for students and teachers, but that she still had four teachers who have to float, because they do not have a classroom.

One of the additional classrooms came in the business department where Mrs. Mattingly had a temporary wall put into a large classroom, making room for a science class in the other room.

Mrs. Connie Riddle retired this year, leaving only Mrs. Polly Abney teaching business.

Mrs. Abney was at the meeting to discuss the situation saying she did not think she had room to do her job as it should be because of the reduced space.

However, at the end of a somewhat lengthy discussion, no action was taken and the matter was dropped.

"A decision like that is really one of the principal and SBDM council," Hammond told the board.

"I think it will be better for the students," Mattingly said. Hammond agreed with her, although board members Angie Stallsworth and Dr. Catina Hasty asked several questions about the new arrangements at the high school.

School Superintendent Hammond also presented his final personnel actions for the 2006-07 school year which began on Wednesday.

His actions: included the re-hiring of Paula Davis as kindergarten teacher at MVES, Pamela Anderson as Learning and Behavioral Disorder teacher at MVES, Ruth Allen as assistant principal at RCHS, Lee Anne Coy, as a Functional, Mentally Disorder teacher at MVES, Kaci Mink, as first grade teacher at MVES, Johnna Ward as Music, Arts and Humanities teacher at RCHS, Jaime Garner, Learning Behavioral Disorder teacher at MVES and Nathan McGee as social studies teacher at RCHS.

UNITE Meeting

The August meeting for the Rockcastle UNITE Coalition has been changed from August 9th to August 16th. The meeting will be held at the Kastle Inn Restaurant at 12 noon on Wednesday, August 16, 2006. One of the main items to be discussed is the first annual "Operation UNITE Football Bowl Game" to be held on Friday, September 1st (Rockcastle Co. versus Harrison County). Anyone who would like to assist in planning the UNITE Bowl Game is encouraged to attend the August 16th meeting.

fits then we will create one."

Mullins also brought up a recycling operation along U.S. 25. "U.S. 25 has been designated a scenic highway," Mullins said and there are huge piles of junk along the road right beside the highway. Mullins questioned that the business should be required to hide the junk behind a fence. And, he pointed out that some pieces of jagged steel have been found on the road that have been lost from trucks hauling the material into the yard, "and this could be dangerous," Mullins told the court.

Reynolds immediately looked up the state law dealing with this type of business and told Mullins and Blair that as he understood the law, the business needed to be fenced or covered by foliage if it was within 1000 yards of the highway as this business is and that the penalty is $100 to $1000 a day and each day could constitute a new offense.

Denny Smith of Cincinnati, Ohio was before the court to ask that 528 feet of county road off Chestnut Ridge Road be closed to county maintenance. Smith said the 528 feet went only to a house on property he owned (the Clarence Kirby place). Smith said he wanted the county to quit maintaining the road so that he could put up a gate to keep people off the property, noting that a central air conditioning unit and water heater had already been stolen before they could be installed.

Smith said that he, unaware that the road was a county road, had put up a gate at the bridge but had taken it down when told that the road was a county road by another landowner in the area.

However, Smith did put up a gate on the backside of his property but, according to an adjoining property owner, Louise Spall, this gate blocks access to the back of her property. Mrs. Spall also pointed out that there was a cemetery being blocked by the gate.

After much discussion, the court declined to take any action, saying instead, on the advice of Reynolds, that this was a matter to be resolved between the parties or, failing that, in a court action.

Denver O'Neal, of Sweetwater Road (formerly Oscar Isaacs Road) told the court about some problems being encountered since the county widened the road. O'Neal said there was a land slide caused, in his opinion by trees taken out at the time, survey pins were missing and that the fence attached to the trees that were taken out had not been replaced. O'Neal told the court that rocks were needed to stop the bank from washing out.

Carloftis told Mr. O'Neal that the court certainly did not "want to do anything to damage your property," but said that when he visited the area on Monday that the ditch line was clear. However, Carloftis went on to say that the court would "look to see if there is anything we can do to alleviate any problems we (the county) might have caused you."

The court also decided to authorize County Attorney Billy Reynolds to issue a warrant for Sylvester Kirby for obstructing a highway or other public passage, a Class B Misdemeanor.

Kirby has reportedly put a gate across the Rash Branch Road, the former Effie Kirby Road, a county road off Chestnut Ridge Road, blocking public access and has refused to remove the gate after two requests by the magistrate for the area, William Denny. Denny told the court that his last request of Kirby to remove the gate brought the comment "sue me" along with his refusal to comply.

Reynolds said that a condition of Kirby's bond would be removal of the gate.

The court also set the tax rate for real property in the county at 7.6%. The court decided this year to take the 4% increase of the tax rate which will only amount to a little over 50c additional on each taxpayer's bill but will garner the county about $8,000 in additional tax revenue -- an amount that will help with rising expenses of the county. Carloftis pointed out that in the last six years, the county's cost of property, liability and workmen's compensation insurance has doubled to almost $200,000 a year, not including the county's expense for health insurance. "Most counties take this small increase every year, as a matter of course," Carloftis said and "if we don't take it at least once every several years, we lose the chance to do it and then could only increase tax revenue by a vote of taxpayers."

In other business, the court declared several pieces of machinery and vehicles from the road department as surplus property and will sell them at public auction at a later date; approved a $100 month contribution for utilities at the Livingston Senior Citizens Center; approved an increase, required by the state, in support for the Property Valuation Administrator of $256 for a total of $19,590 per year; approved a payment of $2,073, required by the state for Defense of the Indigent fund; increased the reimbursement for mileage for county employees from 32c to 43c per mile; authorized Reynolds to draw up a lease between the County and the Fairground board; approved $100 to send two campers to the Kentucky Sheriff's Boys & Girls Ranch and had the first reading for an ordinance dealing with the renaming of roads in the county and the specifics for marking the roads and numbers.

The court will be in special session next Thursday for the second reading of the ordinance and other business.

MVES receives $4,700 from PRIDE Grant

Mt. Vernon Elementary School has been awarded a PRIDE Environmental Education Grant in the amount of $4,700. The funds will be used to enhance the school's outdoor classroom and buy supplies for environmental education, including microscopes and books. The grant will benefit 120 students in the first year, according to the school's grant application.

"By pursuing the grants, these schools, teachers and community groups have shown their dedication to educating our children to be goods stewards of the world around them," said Karen Deaton, who is PRIDE's education director and executive director of Riverwoods, the PRIDE environmental education center that is being developed.

"Environmental education creates life-long lessons," Deaton continued. "These grant awards will help expose children to nature in fun ways, like testing water quality in a local stream. When students are excited about learning, they carry that knowledge into the future. If they learn now to appreciate and care for the environment, this region will be cleaner for their children."

Schools and nonprofit organizations apply for PRIDE Environmental Education Grants, which are worth up to $5,000 each. The grants are used for projects that help young people understand the importance of a clean environment, personal responsibility and community pride. Grant recipients must match the one-year grants with a monetary or in-kind contributions worth 25 percent of the grant amount.

PRIDE awarded 112 grants this year, totaling $502,922. Since 1997, PRIDE has invested $3,350,963 in environmental education grants. They have been used to start 32 school-wide recycling projects and build 343 outdoor classrooms, 98 greenhouses, and 57 nature trails.

Eastern Kentucky PRIDE (Personal Responsibility In a Desirable Environment) serves 38 counties in southern and eastern Kentucky. PRIDE is a nonprofit organization that promotes environmental education and encourages citizens to clean up the region's waterways and hill-sides.

New Wave Communications is new cable TV provider

On August 1, 2006, NewWave Communications formally assumed responsibility from Charter Communications for providing cable television service in this area.

This acquisition, which has been months in the making, means that, starting in August, cable customers will begin noticing that all correspondence for their cable television will reflect the NewWave name, logo, billing address, etc.

NewWave Communications, a communications services company, is family owned, family oriented and has been involved in the cable industry since its inception. According to James Gleason, CEO of NewWave Communications, "This acquisition is very exciting for us. For the past 25 years, we have focused our efforts on serving smaller and mid-sized communities just like our home town, Sikeston, Missouri. We think people who choose to live in small towns should have the same access to technology as people who live in bigger cities."

Not only does New Wave Communications offer Digital Cable Television, but in most areas they also offer High Speed Internet and Local and Long Distance Telephone Service. In addition to these products, NewWave Communications will soon be introducing new products like High Definition Television and Digital Video Reorders (DVRs). "Our goal is to deliver world class service to our customers and we're committed to continual improvement to achieve this goal", said Gleason.

Mr. Gleason also noted that NewWave takes a local approach to business and looks forward to being a real part of these new communities. "We invite our new customers to stop by our local office or call anytime....and we hope that they will consider us their neighbors....because we are."

NewWave Communications, headquartered in Sikeston, Missouri serves over 90,000 customers in the Midwest and Southeast United States.

"What Saith The Scriptures"

In Acts 17:11 we read about some noble people, "These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so." Now what made these folks noble was not that they were related to some royal family; but their disposition and attitude that they manifested toward the word of God. These were people that were not afraid to open their Bibles and search the scriptures. Their attitude was that they wanted to do what is right. They lived by the motto: Truth has nothing to fear from an open investigation. I sometimes tell people that I am studying with, in which we disagree, that the study is a win-win proposition for me. For if what they have to say is the truth, and they help me, I am a winner. Or, if what I am affirming is the truth, and it helps them, I am a winner; so you see it is a win-win situation. Let us be as the wise man said, "Buy the truth, and sell it not; also wisdom, and instruction, and understanding." Pr.23:23. Do you have this noble spirit? Do you get mad if your beliefs are challenged to be scriptural? Are you willing to open your Bible and examine what is taught by other people? Is your goal to know the truth and do what is right? Or is your mind closed with prejudice, bigotry and unwilling to look into the word of truth? The Lord is looking for noble people!

... These funds are used strictly for emergency situations created as a result of the hurricane: relocation for battered survivors for safety and development of violence-free homes (airfare, bus tickets, gasoline, lodging, and food expense for travel, security deposits for housing, utilities, and rent); basic needs (food, diapers, baby formula, clothing; and miscellaneous items such as medical needs, prescriptions, car repairs), and other immediate needs. . . ."

"A survivor shared that prior to Katrina her boyfriend returned home upset. He verbally abused her for not having food prepared. He beat her and dragged her out of the bath tub in front of the kids. He threw her up against the wall and continued to beat her until her daughter called the police. She relocated to a safe shelter because of the abuse. She was denied financial assistance from FEMA because she was living at a shelter at the time of the hurricane. As a result of the hurricane, she lost her job, interrupted her semester of college, lost her deposit on a rental home, and her vehicle was vandalized."

"Another example is of a woman and family evacuated to one of the public shelters. Her husband became physically and verbally abusive towards her at the shelter. Authorities became involved and relocated the woman to a domestic violence shelter. Her teenage child was left behind temporarily until staff at the public shelter transported the child to safety with his mother. Both mother and child relocated out of state for safety precautions. . . ."

"On behalf of these women and children, the domestic violence programs and advocates, we send thanks to you for all your assistance and support. Your kindness, thoughtfulness, and generosity was, and continues to be, greatly appreciated."
