Thinking About Cleaning Your Carpet! Some things to think about...
 What is the best way to clean my carpet, should I use the old technology of steam cleaning or the new technology of dry foam?
 Test results from Consumer Report, 2008.
Option 1: Steam Cleaning-How does it work?
 A. Steam Cleaners saturate your carpet and floor pad with hot (150° degree) soapy water containing lye and beach to help dissolve stains.
 B. After your carpet reaches its maximum saturation point the solution is then extracted by means of a commercial shop vacuum.
 The results: Removes less than 20% of the soil from the carpet driving the remainder down deeper into the carpet fibers. The lye/bleach solution used by steam cleaners to dissolve stains fades carpet colors. Drying time is 1 to 5 days depending on the carpet texture. As a result of the water saturation, carpet fibers harden and the floor pad remains damp, which promotes bacteria growth and mildewing, causing carpet threads to rot, shorting the life of your carpet. Carpet manufacturers recommend that you do not steam clean carpets.
Option 2: Dry Foam-How does it work?
 C. Carpet fibers are agitated with carpet combs to separate the fibers loosening dirt particles, which are then dry cleaned with an industrial strength vacuum.
 D. The carpet is then shampooed with horse hair brushes using Dry-Foam lather, a solution that contains six different cleaners and fabric softener, color brightener, deodorizer, disinfectant, crystalline agent, scotch guard, & degreaser. Does not contain lye or bleach.
 E. Carpet fibers are then groomed to fluff up worn walk areas to give a uniform look to the carpet.
 The results: Removes over 90% of carpet soil. Rejuvenates and brightens colors and patterns of carpets. Drying times is less than 2 hours. Floor pads remain dry-Fabric Softener makes carpets soft again-Promoting the life of the carpet.
 Carpet manufacturers recommend Dry Foam to clean Carpets.

BLUEBERRY PANCAKES

1 cup self-rising flour, sifted
2 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons melted butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup milk
1 egg, beaten
1 cup fresh or frozen blueberries

1 and 1/2 cups buttermilk
1 egg
1/3 cup instant Cream of Wheat, uncooked
1/3 cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 cup vegetable oil
1/2 teaspoon salt

Vegetable oil for frying
Mix flour and sugar in a large bowl. In a smaller bowl, combine the melted butter, vanilla, milk, and egg. Make a well in the center of the flour; pour in liquid ingredients. Mix until smooth.

Combine all ingredients; mix to batter consistency and allow to rest for about 10 minutes.

Lightly grease skillet or griddle over medium heat. Using a measuring cup, scoop the batter onto skillet. Sprinkle with a few blueberries. Cook for about a minute on first side or until the batter starts to bubble. Flip and brown other side. Serve hot with plenty of butter and syrup.

Heat griddle to medium high. When a drop of water will "bounce", spray griddle or skillet with a nonstick cooking spray. Using a 1/4-cup measuring cup, scoop the batter onto skillet. Watch for the bubbles to appear before turning pancake. Brown on both sides.

WHITE SUGAR SYRUP

1 cup sugar
1 cup cold water
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine sugar and cold water in a 2 quart saucepan. Bring to boil and boil for 10 minutes or until desired thickness. Remove from heat. Add the vanilla and butter. Stir until butter has melted. Syrup will be extremely hot. Use caution. Cool some before using. Remember: The cooler the syrup gets, the thicker it gets.

CREAM OF WHEAT PANCAKES

I came up with this recipe after eating pancakes by this name at a restaurant. These are very good, if not exactly like the ones that I tried to copy. The restaurant no longer serves this flavor of pancakes.

1 and 1/4 cups all-purpose flour

Arrested at the scene was Jarrad Rudolph Burdette, 27, of Berea.

According to state police reports, officers observed Burdette's vehicle pulled halfway off the roadway while they were patrolling in the area of Mt. Zion Church Road. When officers turned around to check on the suspicious vehicle, Burdette drove off at a high rate of speed.

Once officers were able to catch up to Burdette's vehicle and make the traffic stop, they noticed that Burdette had red, glassy eyes. Officers also noticed that Burdette appeared intoxicated while performing field sobriety tests.

Fiscal Court discusses new equipment for road dept.; raises for employees

At Tuesday's regular meeting of the fiscal court, County Judge/Executive Buzz Carloftis told the magistrates that he had been researching costs for a new/used covered tractor for the road department, a new mower and a skid loader (bobcat as it is commonly known).

Carloftis said he, and County Treasurer Joe Clontz had looked at a used John Deere 5083E, enclosed tractor with only 30 hours on it, offered for $35,000. The tractor costs $43-44,000 new, Carloftis said. However, Magistrates Gary Burdette and Bill McKinney expressed concern with the E series with Burdette saying the general feeling was the E or D series were "not worth having." No decision was made on that item.

Carloftis then told the court that he had also been looking at several brands of skid loaders, because "they are easier to move around than a backhoe." Carloftis said that, used, prices ranged from $26,000 to $29,000 with a new one being available for $34,700 at the state contract price. Several of the magistrates agreed to look at the machines and make a decision at a later date.

McKinney than commented that if the court were to buy a tractor, skid loader and mower, "there won't be any money left to work on roads." However, Carloftis disagreed, telling the magistrates that the road department currently has $945,692 in it, since receiving the county's share of the truck license distribution and the first installment of county road aid funds from the state. He also noted that the general fund's balance, which includes occupational tax revenue, was currently at $835,809.

No action was taken on the matter until the magistrates have a chance to look

Numerous items approved by School Board for 2013-2014

By: Doug Ponder

Several items were discussed during the monthly school board meeting Tuesday night that dealt with policy, procedure and tax rate updates for the 2013-2014 school year.

Superintendent David Pensol presented a policy and procedure review packet to the board that included several different changes made by the Kentucky School Boards Association.

The majority of the KSBA changes came in the area of how school booster clubs should operate. He said booster clubs can either operate under the district as a school activity fund or they can operate as an independent organization. However, Pensol said if they choose to be independent organization the booster club would have to obtain their own tax ID number, provide their own financial report, own their own liability insurance, etc.

Pensol said that the KSBA changes came as a result of the misuse of funds by booster clubs in other districts and that they are trying to pull booster clubs "under the umbrella" of a school activity fund.

Finance Officer Melanie Lyons said that there has also been major changes by the KSBA about fundraisers. She said organizations now have more restrictions on what they can and cannot do.

"You can't set a certain limit that someone must sell or make for a fundraiser and you also can't force someone to do a fundraiser," Lyons said. "One student can no longer raise a large amount of money in a fundraiser and use it solely for themselves. If it is an organization fundraiser everything now goes into a large pot to be distributed evenly

Livingston mayor plans for Community Cafe

Livingston Mayor Jason Medley brought the city commissioners up-to-date Monday night on the progress of the Community Cafe.

Medley said the cafe is located in the former Livingston School's cafeteria in the basement. He said the area has been cleaned, wired, new window glass installed and drywall is in the process of being hung.

The mayor said plans are to hold community events in the room and to rent the room for local private events. He said work should be completed in another month. Plans are to hold the Livingston School Homecoming there in October, when a full day of activities are being planned for returning alumni.

Most of the expense for the project has been furnished by donations from alumni, Medley said, and volunteers have done the actual labor.

The mayor also reported on the sidewalk project for Main Street. He told the commissioners that the actual project should begin in the summer of 2014. Medley said that the project, which has been on the table for three or four years, will be primarily one of repairing existing sidewalks with, hopefully, new street lights because material costs have risen since the 80/20 transportation grant was awarded.

Medley also told the commissioners that implementation of the new ordinances had gone smoothly, primarily because of the way Police Chief Carl Swanigan has enforced them. "You see a lot more people stirring around," the mayor said, "because it is a safer place for people to walk now."

The town will be featured in Kentucky Living Magazine in their October issue, Medley said. The magazine has a circulation of 1.2 million readers.

"There are a lot of good things going on with a lot of community support," Medley said.

Street lights discussed at Brodhead Council meeting Monday

By: Doug Ponder

Lighting issues was the main topic at the monthly Brodhead Council meeting Monday night.

Mayor Walter Cash proposed to the council that the city put up five more standard street lights within city limits. He suggested that two street lights be placed along Lynn Circle Drive and that three more be placed inside the new Depot Park along the walking trails.

"I drove to Lynn Circle the other night and it was pitch black dark. If I lived on that road I would need a street light," Cash said. "We also need the three lights inside the park to help light it up more as well."

Clerk Becky Bussell said that Kentucky Utilities would install and maintain the five street lights. She also said that having five more street lights wouldn't make a huge difference on the city's monthly electric bill.

Councilman Mark Buras agreed with Cash and said that the street lights would be a great investment for the city, especially at the new Depot Park.

"The lights at the new park is a saving grace as far as vandalism is concerned," Buras said. "There hasn't

My friend, Roberta Webb, who raises pecans commercially on a ranch near Lubbock, Texas, thinks she has the solution to my black bird problem.

She said crows were once stealing as many as thirty pounds of nuts per crow from her pecan groves until she mounted several big plastic owls atop 20 foot sections of PVC pipe and placed them around the trees and now the crows won't come near because they're afraid the owls will get them.

I have two rows of late bodacious sweet corn just starting to tassel. I also have two big great-horned plastic owls in the mail and I've already been to Lowe's where I purchased two twelve-foot sections of two-inch PVC.

I figure that once I get my pipes in the ground, my owls will still be ten feet high and well above my sweet corn which only grows to about seven feet tall. The owls are supposed to be twenty-six inches tall and look very intimidating. Sunlight or the slightest breeze is supposed to make them move around and twist their heads and they're supposed to scare off black birds and rabbits as well, which would make them serve the ultimate dual purpose. I'd be hard put upon to tell you which I hate more, black birds or rabbits.

I forgot to ask Roberta if the owls kept squirrels out of her pecans because I would have thought squirrels to be more of a problem than crows to a nut grower.

Anyway, I figure that if the owls don't work in my corn patch, they'll give all the neighbors something to talk about and provide photo-ops for people who occasionally drive up Charlie Brown Road just so they can say they've been here.

In the meantime, I have discovered that I can't shoot a shotgun because Mr. Parkinson makes it wobble too much to aim and the couple of times I tried, I did almost as much damage to my sweet corn as the feathered vermin were doing. But I still managed to down three big starlings with one shot when about a hundred of them flew off in a swarm when they saw me coming. I couldn't have missed them if I'd been blind folded.

I used fishing line to hang the carcasses from my corn tassels but the flock came back and ate the rest of my first crop while they held a funeral for their buddies. Bumper Adams, from Letcher County told me that this had happened one time to Everett Banks when he tried the same tactic with a dead crow.

In other gardening news, we have eggplant, okra, bell peppers, cucumbers, Roma beans and tomatoes and such ready to pick but my garden is more akin to an everglade than something you'd try to grow veggies in and I've already ruined two

Al Capp's Shmoo

While watching a sitcom on CBS called The Big Bang Theory, I noted that the stars of the show were planning a visit to the International Comic-Con, which is held each year in San Diego, California. The regular members of the cast are portrayed as "geeks" who live across the hall from Penny, an aspiring young actress. All four of the geeky members of the cast love comic books and even wear costumes to the convention. All of the discussion about comic books reminded me of the days of my youth when I too read and collected comics.

Even though I read many comics when I was a young boy, I suppose my most favorite was Al Capp's Li'l Abner, which first appeared in a comic strip on August 31, 1948. It quickly became a postwar craze in the United States. Shortly thereafter it was published in comic book form. I collected them for years and kept them in a box under my bed. My favorite character found in Capp's comic books was the Shmoo.

A Shmoo is shaped like a plump bowling pin with legs. Its skin is totally smooth with the exception of eyebrows and sparse whiskers. They have no arms, nose, or ears. Its feet are short and round, and they are very dexterous.

On Sundays, I often had my grandfather, Pop, read the Li'l Abner comics to me because he also loved the satire that was layered into the strip. He likened the Shmoo to the government's welfare programs. The following is a description of Shmoos:

Shmoos reproduce asexually and are extremely prolific.

They require no sustenance other than air.

The small animals are delicious to eat – tasting like chicken, steak, or pork depending on how they are prepared.

They produce eggs, bottled milk, and butter.

Their pelts make great shoe leather.

They have no bones, therefore there is no waste.

Their eyes make excellent buttons.

Their whiskers make perfect toothpicks.

They are so gentle that they make ideal playmates for children.

In late August 1948, Li'l Abner first discovered the Shmoos when he ventured into a forbidden valley in his comic strip. He befriends the small, white creatures. An old man in the story explained to Abner, "Shmoos is the greatest menace to humankind th' world has evah known! It's because they's so good!" As soon as Abner discovered the value of the Shmoos, he remarked, "Wif these around, nobody won't nevah havta work no more!"

The sequence in Capp's comics was extremely popular, both as a commentary on the state of society and as a classic allegory of greed and corruption. However, the mythical tale ends on an ironic note. Shmoos are officially declared to be a menace and, therefore, are systematically hunted down and killed – because they were deemed "bad for business." In the comic, it is soon discovered that Li'l Abner has secretly saved two Shmoos, a "boy" and a "girl." It is believed that the remaining two were protected in order for them to re-appear later in the sequence if needed. The two remaining Shmoos are seen running towards the Valley of the Shmoos. Capp wrote, "The Shmoo metaphorically represented the limitless bounty of the earth in all its richness – in essence, Mother Nature herself."

The Shmoo phenomenon arose immediately, spontaneously, and solely from Al Capp's comic strip – and it appealed widely to Americans of all ages. Forty million people read the original 1948 Shmoo story, and Capp's already considerable readership then roughly doubled following the overwhelming success of the Shmoo.

One Christmas, my Aunt Ruth bought me a Shmoo

The fair has ended, the rides taken down and another year of the Little World's Fair is in the books. Thank you to each and every one that came to the fair and supported Brodhead Volunteer Fire Department. I know the weather this year was not the greatest but you can always expect rain the week of the fair. But it does seem like this year was the wettest in a long time. The fair has become a big fundraiser for us and we truly appreciate you for attending this year. We look forward to next year and hope to see everyone again.

Last week I asked, can a volunteer become IFSAC certified and if so how? The answer is definitely, yes. A volunteer can become IFSAC certified providing they can pass the skills test and written exams. Some fire schools throughout the

Have been regularly attending the Livingston City Commission meetings for some months now and I am exhausted. The enthusiasm for the many projects in progress burns bright in the city's young mayor, Jason Medley. Medley has gotten his commissioners, all elected on a write-in vote last November, to buy into his many ideas for projects to better the city.

Medley's pet project of them all, however, seems to be the renovation of the old Livingston school. The building is a classic example of its era that has been allowed to fall into ruin. However, Medley is not letting the fallen drywall, ruined floors, dirt everywhere deter him.

Mainly with the financial help of the school's alumni, and volunteer help from the community, he has managed to renovate one huge area of the school as a visitor center for tourists coming to the recently-named Kentucky Trail Town. His next project in the building involves a Community Cafe in the former lunchroom of the school. He envisions the space being used for community dinners, bridal and baby showers, etc. and plans to have the renovations done in time for this year's Livingston Alumni Banquet.

He, and the commissioners, with the help of a loan from the fiscal court, also recently purchased a building on Main Street which has to have extensive renovations but will eventually house city hall, with other areas used for trail head activities.

Perhaps one of the biggest boons to the commission's plans for their city was the acquisition of Carl Swanigan as the non-paid law enforcement for the city. Swanigan, a retired police officer from Ohio, manages to keep order in the city in a manner, to date, that is not off-putting. The city recently enacted a series of ordinances, concerning dog control, a curfew for minors, protection of the environment, nuisances in general and routine sidewalk maintenance. At their last meeting Medley said that, mainly due to the manner Swanigan uses to enforce the ordinances, their implementation was proceeding smoothly.

As I said, all that enthusiasm is draining but also refreshing. In a county where the status quo seems to be accepted way more than it should be, it is always refreshing to see a community come together to achieve goals that have seemed unreachable.

pairs of sneakers trying to get a cabbage head. So last Saturday Loretta dragged my knee-high, rubber boots out of the basement, sprayed them full of raid and then vacuumed them out to make sure all the brown recluse spiders that might be hiding in the toes were dead and gone.

So I pulled them on and headed for the bell peppers which are about fifty feet out from any edge of the garden. I picked a five-gallon bucket full an assortment of all the stuff mentioned above and started back to the house when, all of a sudden, I discovered that I couldn't move either foot.

Six inches below the surface my garden is normally hard clay but it has rained so much over the last month or so that the stuff has softened up and now it's like quick sand. I set my bucket down in front of me and used my good arm to pull one foot out and then the other and I did this for like ten steps. It was either that or leave my boots stuck in the mud and I was wet with sweat when I finally made it to high ground.

It's too bad that Loretta didn't have a video camera handy because we missed a perfect opportunity to win

departments throughout the county or surrounding counties to gather up enough volunteer firefighters.

Over the past couple of weeks I have went over how to become a volunteer or paid firefighter. Now that you are in a department, what comes next? Generally you are issues gear. Gear that will protect you and can ultimately save your life. Let's start at the top and work our way down.

The helmet, originally, offered little to no protection from injuries to the head. The original purpose of the helmet was to shed water. Modern day helmets still help shed water but now provide protection from falling debris and can withstand high heat. Helmets are made from a combination of plastic and carbon fiber materials to give the helmet a hard outer shell. Inside the helmet is a nomex liner that extends past the ears of the firefighter to provide extra ear protection because getting the tips of your ears burned is not fun. I know, I have had mine burnt before. There is also an adjustable strap for your head and one for the chin. The exterior has reflective stickers or decals to be seen at night using a light. Also on the exterior of the helmet, is a shield. The shield is mounted to the front of the helmet and is usually made from leather. The shield tells you a lot about that firefighter. By looking at the shield you can tell what department the firefighter is with, the rank of the firefighter and some have their unit number. Brodhead's shield has Brodhead at the top and the rank at the bottom with the firefighter's unit number in the middle.

The color of the helmet is significant as well. The color signifies the rank of the firefighter of the department. Each department can vary but most seem to follow the same principle. A white helmet usually is the chief of the department. Also a white helmet can signify an assistant chief or major. Most other firefighters wear a black helmet with a front shield that signifies their rank from captain to a firefighter. Probationary firefighters generally wear an orange or yellow helmet letting firefighters know they are a new recruit. Other colors you may see are red or blue and they are used according to that particular fire department. Generally a blue helmet is a firefighter that is also an EMT or paramedic.

There are a variety of combinations a fire department can use with helmets to show rank. My volunteer department uses white, black and yellow helmets. A white helmet is used for the chief and assistant chief. A black helmet with a white front is a captain and one with red lettering is a lieutenant. A black helmet with white lettering is a firefighter. A yellow helmet for my department represents a probationary firefighter. As a new member, you will be issued a yellow helmet. Once your probationary period is over you will receive a black helmet. It is kind of a rite of passage in the fire service.

The evolution of the fire helmet has come a long way since the days of Benjamin Franklin as has the rest of our gear. Next week will continue with firefighter gear starting with the turnout coat. And now for this week's question, how many layers does the firefighter turnout coat have?

An encouraging word:

Hope Is A Transforming Power

By Howard Coop

As I looked out the window behind my desk, I saw a beautiful mountain scene, and I heard birds singing cheerfully in the nearby trees. It was, indeed, a beautiful morning. Everything seemed so pleasant. In the reverse of the moment, I recalled the words of a little girl named Pippa from Robert Browning's poem called Pippa Passes who declared: "All's right with the world."

Then, things changed abruptly. The door to my office opened, and a man entered. With a bedraggled look, he was sad and lonely. After slumping into a chair in front of my desk, he stared at the floor for a moment and sat silently. When he did speak, his first words were: "I had hoped..."

A short time earlier, the man's wife of many years had died, and he was feeling the burden of that loss. As I looked into his sad face, the first thing that came to my mind was a line from Robert Frost's poem, The Death of the Hired Man: With "nothing to look forward to with hope, so now and never any difference."

When one is hopeless, all is gone. The bottom drops out of life, and nothing matters any more. The man sitting in my office that beautiful morning was the epitome of hopelessness. Everything he said, and everything he did revealed it.

But hope, when properly grounded, is more than wistful thinking; it is a transforming power that can energize and enliven anyone. Even in the most difficult situations in one's life, hope can keep one going.

As that lonely man and I talked that beautiful morning, I remembered some significant words, many centuries old, that attest to the tremendous power of hope. When things were not going well for him, "Against all hope" another man "in hope believed and so he became..." Because he hoped, life, for him, was changed dramatically.

For anyone, hope is a transforming power that can change life.

The Family Room

Guest Columnist Amy Oakley

Although we may not realize it, there is a good chance that we have all known a victim of domestic violence at some point in our lives. They are our mothers and daughters; our sisters and friends. They are strangers we've seen mocked in public places by their husbands or boyfriends or neighbors who hide their bruises while they walk outside to check the mail. In many cases, they have hidden their pain so well that we as outsiders have no idea what is going on behind closed doors. In other cases, we have seen the pain and stayed silent, thinking what happens behind closed doors is none of our business.

It is time to make domestic violence our business.

Domestic violence is happening at an epidemic rate: studies show that one in every four women will be a victim. Another study shows that it will affect 1.3 women living in the United States this year alone. Yet we still view domestic violence as a private affair. It is important to realize that there is never just "one" victim of domestic violence. When a woman is victimized, it will affect everyone in her life in some way: her family, friends, and especially her children. Her performance at work may go down, and she might become less involved in groups or activities. Until she is able to move past the violent situation, all of these people will feel the effects of the violence.

So what can we do? First of all, we can take simple steps to help end violence in the communities we are a part of. Following are four ways to put an end to domestic violence.

1. Talk about it. If you know or think you know someone who might be experiencing domestic violence, talk to them. Let them know that they are not alone and that this is not their fault. Create an environment where it is safe and possible to talk about violence and how to move past violent situations.

2. Evaluate your own actions. Have you ever caught yourself behaving violently? How do you react when you see violence on television or in the movies? Think about these things. If you notice that you have a problem with violent behavior, talk to someone about it. Don't be ashamed to seek help.

3. Eliminate gender stereotypes. Many issues of domestic violence stem from the misconception that women must always be submissive and that men must always be in control in romantic relationships. This is not a healthy way to view a relationship. Relationships should be equal, and gender stereotypes should never be used as an excuse for domestic violence.

4. Raise awareness in your community. An educated and informed community is the first step toward a community that lives free of violence. Schedule a presentation by Family Life Abuse Center, or host your own event to discuss the prevention of domestic violence. Only when we stand together can we end this epidemic.

Family Life Abuse Center exists to help victims of domestic violence. We believe that only when we as a community stand together and show that we will not tolerate or accept abuse will we be able to stop it. To seek help for a domestic violence situation or to schedule an event to raise awareness and help prevent domestic violence, please call 1-800-755-5348.

Federal officials confirm gray wolf taken in Kentucky

Federal officials recently confirmed that an animal taken by a hunter near Munfordville in Hart County on March 16 is a gray wolf.

A DNA analysis performed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Wildlife Research Center in Colorado determined the 73-pound animal was a federally endangered gray wolf with a genetic makeup resembling wolves native to the Great Lakes Region. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service Forensics Laboratory in Oregon confirmed the finding.

How the wolf found its way to a Munfordville hay ridge at daybreak in March remains a mystery. Wolves have been gone from the state since the mid-1800s.

Great Lakes Region wolf biologists said the animal's dental characteristics - a large amount of plaque on its teeth - suggest it may have spent some time in captivity. A largely carnivorous diet requiring the crushing of bone as they eat produces much less plaque on the teeth of wild wolves.

Hart County resident James Troyer took the animal with a shot from 100 yards away while predator hunting on his family's farm. Troyer, 31, said he had taken a coyote off the property just two weeks earlier.

But when he approached the downed animal he noticed it was much larger. "I was like - wow - that thing was big!" he recalled. "It looked like a wolf, but who is going to believe I shot a wolf?"

Because a free-ranging wolf has not been seen in the state for more than a century, biologists were skeptical at first. However, wildlife officials were aware that a few radio-collared northern wolves have wandered as far south as Missouri in the past decade.

Wolves resemble coyotes, except they are much larger. From a distance, the size difference is difficult to determine.

Troyer convinced Kevin Raymond, a wildlife biologist for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, to look at the animal. Once Raymond saw the animal was twice the size of a coyote, he contacted furbearer biologist Laura Patton, who submitted samples to federal officials for DNA testing.

Because state and federal laws prohibit the possession, importation into Kentucky or hunting of gray wolves, federal officials took possession of the pelt.

Since this is the first free-ranging gray wolf documented in Kentucky's modern history, federal or state charges are not expected because there were no prior biological expectations for any hunter to encounter a wolf.

to everyone in that organization.”

The new KSBA policy states “All fundraising activities, including the proposal of funds, must be approved by the board.” However, Pensol suggested that the board change it to “District wide” instead of “all.”

Pensol said this change would cause “very few” fundraising proposals to be presented to the board for approval as there are very few district wide fundraisers. He said individual school wide fundraisers would have to be approved by the school’s site-based council and school’s principal.

“This way the board wouldn’t be having a conversation every month about cheerleaders selling candy bars or something like that,” Pensol said. “We’re wanting to cut down on the amount of fundraisers you all look at because we don’t need to spend time on stuff like that. That is why I purpose to pass it on to the school site-based councils and principals for approval instead of having everything board approved.”

Pensol went on to purpose that the board omit the part under the attendance requirements that stated “beginning in 2015-2016 school year, students between ages 6 and 18 shall enroll and be in regular attendance in schools. He said that they should keep the current clause of “students between 6 and 16 shall enroll and be in regular attendance.”

Pensol said this attendance requirements section refers to the state-wide pressure to raise the drop-out age from 16 to 18. The new mandate was voluntary until adopted by fifty-five percent of the districts in the state. Ninety-six school districts adopted the law in July making it mandatory for every school district by the 2017-2018 school year.

Pensol said they have been contacted by the governor’s office and the department of education office about the issue but he still says he doesn’t agree with the proposal.

“I think it is important that we don’t do it or I wouldn’t be making a big deal about it,” Pensol said. “I think we need the ability to work with families and students like we have been doing.”

Pensol said that by being against the proposal doesn’t mean that he wants anyone to drop out of school but that it means that Rockcastle County Schools is professional enough to look for the best decision for the family, student and school system.

“We have some examples of some kids who dropped out that did really well. Some dropped out and went to work, some got a GED and some even went to college later on,” Pensol said. “We have some examples of situations where the student dropping out was a real positive thing.”

Pensol went on to say that they put “on paper” what the school district’s position is on Kentucky Senate bill 97 which raises the dropout age from 16 to 18. In the position paper, Pensol said that he “wants the district to work with students, families and school staff to meet the needs of all students so they will choose to stay in school rather than attend because they are mandated.”

Pensol said that he went around to all the schools in the county and talked to the faculty about the issue. He said that he received overwhelming support but that he did receive “a little bit” of feedback about what would happen if families from other counties move their children to Rockcastle County so they could drop out of school.

Pensol said he was doubtful that would happen but he assured the board that they could change any of the policies after two school board meetings with a first and second reading.

The board unanimously approved the policy and procedure updates.

Lyons also presented the tax rate summary for the 2013-2014 school year. She suggested the board approve the compensating tax rate, meaning that school taxes on real estate and property would not be raised.

She said the school district is in the position to take the compensating tax rate instead of the 4% increase because they have made conservative efforts to make cuts and managing finances.

“By taking this rate it makes the community happy,” Lyons said. “We want to do an excellent job in managing what we have and only consider raising taxes after we have done everything we can possibly do.”

The board unanimously adopted the 2013-2014 school year tax rate summary.

In the last item of business, Pensol asked the board to give him authority to work out the details, with high school administration and seniors, before the senior trip is presented to the board for approval.

Pensol said that way the trip isn’t presented in a board meeting with the board disagreeing about the trip. He also said that this way there will be nothing in the Signal stating that “we all disagree” which alludes to the fact that “the superintendent and the board doesn’t support kids because we don’t support the trip.”

The request came after Pensol said he believed he didn’t properly handle last year’s high school senior trip. He said there was a lot of miscommunication and the planning didn’t go as smoothly as it should have.

“I got stacks of letters from students and parents after the trip who thought I was against it or who wanted to convince me it was a good trip,” Pensol said. “I was always for the trip, I just wanted everyone to go. I hated to set something up that I knew all of the kids wouldn’t get to participate in.”

Pensol said he would like to approve the trip before it is presented to the board. He said that way everyone involved with the trip would have to work with him and “not go around him to the board.”

“Don’t get me wrong, there is not a problem. I am just trying to head off a problem before it happens again,” Pensol said. “I don’t want to come back to a meeting again and two of you be for it, three against it and me somewhere in the middle saying I don’t know if I recommend it or not.”

Pensol said they need to know something soon so they can start organizing fundraising for the trip. He said that he needed to get the board to approve his proposal so details could be worked out by December and seniors and high school administration can meet with the Site-Based council to approve their fundraisers.

Pensol once again reminded the board that all he was proposing was for the board to allow him to set some parameters for the high school senior trip and if they meet those parameters then the board will vote on it for approval. The board agreed unanimously to Pensol’s proposal.

The court also discussed a pay raise for the 47 hourly wage county employees.

Clontz told the court that the additional cost for 50c an hour to $1.50 an hour would range from $61,750 to $185,250 a year.

No action on that item was taken either, with the court opting to first find out the rate of increase for health insurance for employees, expected shortly.

In other action, the court discussed awarding a contract for the concrete work for the new Climax Fire Dept. The court has received two quotes, one for $16,800 labor and the other for $18,500. The first, from Darren Chasteen of Berea, was for a total of $37,475 with Chasteen supplying the concrete. Chasteen told Clontz that he could buy the concrete cheaper than the court could, even with the court not having to pay sales tax. However, Chasteen’s quote was not clear if installing the drains in the floor of the fire station was included.

The second quote was from New Idea Const. of Richmond and was for a total of $39,750, including providing the concrete and installation of the floor drains.

According to records, a Contractor Agreement for $18,500 to do the concrete work was signed with the company by Carloftis following the fiscal court meeting.

The council voted unanimously to have Kentucky Utilities install two street lights on Lynn Circle Drive and three street lights in the Depot Park along the walking trails.

Brodhead resident and RCHS JROTC Instructor Keith Graves was also in attendance at the meeting after recently being sworn in as a councilman.

Graves was appointed by Governor Steve Beshear to former councilman Boone Saylor’s seat which had been vacant since January when Saylor didn’t show up to be sworn in after being elected in the 2012 fall general election. KRS 33 A. 040 states that if a legislative body doesn’t fill a vacant seat within thirty days that the governor has to fill the vacancy.

Graves said he is honored to be a councilmember for Brodhead and that he looks forward to working with the council in the future.

“I love Brodhead! It’s the place where I raised my family and it will always be home to me,” Graves said. “I look forward to the future and I want to work with the rest of the council and Mayor Cash to see that great things happen for this town and the people of this town.”

UNITE to unveil mobile drug prevention classroom

A mobile drug education classroom and a recovery "Hope Wall" will be unveiled by Operation UNITE during a ceremony held Friday, August 16, in Manchester.

Helping to announce the major education and treatment initiatives will be U.S. Fifth District Congressman Harold "Hal" Rogers, Kentucky First Lady Jane Beshear, Eastern Kentucky University President Dr. Michael T. Benson, Kentucky Senate President Robert Stivers and People (PAR) CEO Mike Barry.

The program, which is free and open to the public, begins at 1 p.m. at EKU's Manchester Campus, 50 University Drive.

"In UNITE's 10th year anniversary, it's time to celebrate the lives that have been saved through treatment and recovery efforts by unveiling stories of hope and encouragement for those still battling addiction. And as a leader in the war on the drugs, I applaud UNITE's effort to expand its educational outreach statewide, offering a new tool that takes UNITE on road," Rogers stated. "Together, we are making a difference!"

"From its inception, UNITE has operated under the belief that the most effective way to deal with our drug problem is to focus equally on law enforcement, treatment and education," said Dan Smoot, UNITE president/CEO. "This model has been cited for its effectiveness on the national level."

Taking a holistic approach to substance abuse among youth, who are often the unintended victims of drug use, is important, stated Beshear, who sits on the board for Recovery Kentucky, which provides housing and recovery services at centers across the state.

"Our efforts to battle substance abuse and misuse in Kentucky need to be as varied and wide-ranging as the problems and causes of drug abuse itself," Beshear noted. "Recovery Kentucky and UNITE are modern programs that use peer and community support, treatment and education as tools to help in prevention and aid victims successfully get clean and stay clean. UNITE's mobile classroom is a unique way to teach our children real-life instances of drug mistreatment, and we hope that it will go toward preventing future abuse and misuse."

"This state-of-the-art mobile classroom is one-of-a-kind," Smoot noted. "Education about substance abuse and prevention is so important, especially at an early age. Just think if we never had to worry about making arrests or providing treatment."

UNITE's "On The Move" education trailer will feature an interactive drug prevention program tailored to elementary, middle and high school students. In addition, youth will participate in three interactive training modules that focus on the consequences of distraction and impairment from alcohol and other drugs.

Use of the mobile education classroom will begin this September in Rockcastle and Pike counties.

Another component of the "On The Move" initiative will be development of two community education kits for use by anti-drug community groups and organizations. The first kit, "Life With A Record," will be released later this fall.

The trailer is being funded through a $150,000 per year Rural Health Outreach grant awarded through the U.S. Health Resources and Services Administration.

The "Hope Wall" will honor 150 individuals who have been recovering from an addiction for at least one year.

"At UNITE's first two National Rx Drug Abuse Summits we were struck by the power and emotion of a wall featuring images of individuals who had lost their lives because of drugs," Smoot said. "It is important to never forget the tragic toll of addiction, but it is equally important to offer a message of hope to those currently caught in the grips of addiction."

"Sobriety is worth celebrating," Smoot continued. "This wall will provide encouragement for those battling this horrible disease to seek help and realize there is a hope for a brighter future."

The movable wall will travel to various events throughout southern and eastern Kentucky. Additional photos of those in recovery will be periodically rotated.

For more information about the "Hope Wall" contact UNITE Treatment Director Amy Yates at 606-330-1400 or ayates@centertech.com.

Kentucky Teen Institute

Three RCHS Student YMCA Club members attend conference in Louisville

Submitted by:
Shelby Ponder,
Chelsea Fleming

This past June, Rockcastle County High School's Student YMCA Club was fortunate enough to send three students, Chelsea Fleming, Shelby Ponder, and Rachel Blair, to a program called Kentucky Teen Institute. This conference, focused on health issues affecting our communities, was five days long and held on the University of Louisville's campus. At KTI, our team chose to design a service project that will bring more awareness to Type 2 Diabetes, a disease that plagues our county.

The Kentucky Teen Institute provided an incredible experience for all three of us that we will cherish forever. KTI included a multitude of activities, guest speakers, advocacy trainings, and created bonds that will last a lifetime. We had the opportunity of playing football with U of L's football team, and meeting some of the most influential health leaders in the state of Kentucky. The purpose of the conference was to create a year-long community service plan to educate our community about health issues they may face and ways to prevent further troubles.

Our foremost goal is to get a farm-to-school program implemented in our school district. Not only will this movement drastically reduce costs and pollution, it will significantly improve the health of the current generation and those to come. In addition to these great benefits, our county's once thriving farming economy would be revived due to all produce being grown by our local farmers. We are very excited to see our finished product, and are very hopeful that the community will get involved and share our passion for helping each other.

The Rockcastle County Kiwanis Club's 17th Annual Charity Golf Scramble was held on Saturday, August 10th at the Cedar Rapids Country Club. Local businesses and individuals sponsored the event which raised over $1,500 for charitable causes in the community. Special thanks to everyone who worked or participated in the event and especially to our sponsors! Without local community support, Kiwanis would not be able to contribute to so many worthwhile projects making Rockcastle County a better place to live and work. Livingston Leap now 5K

This year's Livingston Leap will see some changes that runners and walkers are going to appreciate. For one, because some of last year's Leap participants said the 2-miler was a bit too short, this year's race has been extended to 5K, or 3.1 miles, for both the run and the walk.

The race, which will be held Aug. 31 at 8 a.m., will still start at the trailhead at the intersection of Hwy. 25 and Hwy. 490. After crossing the bridge, participants will turn right, staying on Hwy. 490, same as they always have. But this year they'll turn around at the 1.55-mile mark instead of the 1-mile mark.

Another change: Until now registration has been at the fire department, a few of blocks away from the trailhead. But this year it will be more conveniently located at the new Livingston Trail Town Visitors' Center, across the street from the starting line.

Mayor Jason Medley is embracing the Leap. He'll participate in the 5K and do the first-ever Mayor's Challenge, and has recruited safety support to help with traffic control.

"Our goal is to create a community that promotes fitness and good health," Medley said. "Events like the Livingston Leap are great motivators as we stride toward that goal. We want to welcome all the participants and we hope they'll stick around and visit for a while." The Leap is always held on Livingston Homecoming weekend, so there is a lot going on. A pancake breakfast will be held until 10 a.m., and the parade starts at 11 a.m. Plenty of booths and vendors also will be set up on Main Street.

Livingston has made progress toward becoming an increasingly active community in recent months. Among the town's new features, trails have been marked for walking, running and riding, and the town has been designated a "Trail Town" by the Governor's office. Trail maps are available at the Visitor's Center. Livingston Leap 5K participants are encouraged to explore what Livingston has to offer after the race.

For more information about Livingston, go to www.livingstonky.com.

Chelsea Fleming, Shelby Ponder, and Rachel Blair recently attended a program called Kentucky Teen Institute in Louisville. The conference, focused on health issues affecting our communities.

Fall Plantings: Always Plan Ahead

It's always a good idea to have a plan and to work your plan when it comes to landscaping, or many other things we humans do. Planning ahead for major fall landscaping should be done in advance.

Now, it's true, most landscape firms work all year if they have customers wanting them to complete new projects or renewal chores. And, if a landscaper tries to squeeze everyone into spring or fall slots, he starves the other times during the year. Truth is, a professional can succeed in doing landscape projects at any time except when the soil is frozen. Fall remains an ideal time if you have a choice when it comes to planting trees and larger shrubs (small plants should be planted in spring in most cases).

The reason fall planting works so well is because the ground remains warm even though the air is cold and the leaves have turned and blown away. The roots get to grow without the burden of supporting top growth.

Thinking about planting projects well in advance also allows for considering the right plant for the right spot.

Hasty decisions, or shopping and finding a pretty plant you can't resist taking home with you, are apt to result in changing your mind and doing the planting job over before too long. It's always smart to have a landscape or garden plan. Then, you work on carrying out the plan as time, finances and plant availability will allow. It is really sweet to see an organized yard or garden with maturing trees and shrubs that were placed with forethought to what they would look like after a number of years go by.

Most landscapers are less busy in fall than in spring, so that is another reason to landscape in fall.

But, again, all seasons except when it's frozen will work for the landscape professional or gardener with a green thumb.

Making a landscape plan, even a simple little hand drawing, forces a homeowner or a landscaper to begin thinking about the right plants to create the desired look for a long time to come (for, after all, if landscaping is going to pay for itself or even add more value to the home than the cost of the landscaping, indeed it has to be done in an organized fashion.) And, it goes without saying, you need to water or otherwise take care of your new landscape investment. Perhaps keep weeds down, mulch often, change the stake or the angle of a new tree, there are chores even in a 'low-maintenance' landscape. (A no maintenance landscape is bare soil, rocks, or cactus or Astroturf!)

Today's column is written with your landscaping success in mind, and planning before you start shopping or digging is a wise thing to do. Then, as days grow shorter and temperatures drop, you can get on with the fall landscape project you have been dreaming of.

The Flying Dutchman: The Phantom Ship Part III

This week we will take a third and final look into the Flying Dutchman. It is said to be a ship by some and the nickname of the phantom ship's captain by others. In either case, the ghost-ship and crew are said to sail the seas of the world, never to reach port due to a curse.

Many have seen the ship through the centuries and they are supposedly cursed, too. There are several facets to the history of the ship and they vary according to who it is that is recalling the sordid history.

Many say that the origins of the Flying Dutchman are real but almost none agree as to what the exact event was. In almost all of the various stories, the captain's name is a Dutch name such as "Van-" something or other.

One origin recalls that the would-be ghost-ship sank off the coast of the Cape of Good Hope. With the survivors, the captain even considered founding a settlement on shore. They met their fate due to the captain being deep in thought and didn't see the approaching storm. They sailed into a very fierce storm and battled it for hours to no avail. The ship began to sink. Captain "Van-" uttered, "I will round this Cape even if I have to keep sailing until doomsday."

Some say that when a strong storm forms off the coast of the Cape of Good Hope, you can look into the eye of the storm and see the Flying Dutchman. They also say that the one who sees the ship will meet a terrible death.

Another variation states that the ship's fate was sealed when the captain cursed at the devil. The devil, in return, cursed him and the ship to sail for eternity. However, the devil did give him a loophole, so to speak. If he could find the true love of a woman, the curse would be broken. He returns to land every seven years in search of such a woman. Wagner's opera, Der Fliegende Hollander, is loosely based on the legend.

Hopefully, you have enjoyed the study of the famous ship and crew. Happy sailing!
